Attention was called to use of lithographic copies of Union Label Bulletin being used as an advertisement and publishing unfair firms. A committee was appointed to investigate the matter.

The Organization Committee made a partial report of the investigation of delinquent unions.

NAVY-YARD ITEMS.

Wm. H. Henze, subinspector of ordnance, has been ordered to Pittsburg temporarily previous to permanent assignment to Cleveland, Ohio. Columbia Lodge will miss him, as he was not only a faithful attendant, but one of its principal debaters. Good luck attend you, Billie.

Dr. Warren Ferris, the eye specialist of the Yard, received a blow the other day that placed him under the care of Dr. Kamp. While passing through the shop on an errand of mercy, his head accidentally came in contact with an iron shaft, felling him to the floor. No serious trouble is anticipated however.

Wm. H. O'Donnell, one of the trustees of Columbia Lodge, has gone to his New York home where he will make several speeches for the Union. Billie is an eloquent speaker and always commands large audiences, as he speaks in two languages, French and German. Hope you will pick the winner, or the boys will have the laugh on you when you return.

Julian F. Beall one of our jolly boys, of East Gun Carriage Shop, is visiting his old home, Mattoon, Ill., for the purpose of casting his vote for the next President, incidentally, but with a more serious intention. I don't think I should state what it is, but the boys will be on hand when he returns with an addition to the population of Washington. I expect to have the honor of acting scribe in a future notice of the happy event.

Ducks are plentiful on the river now or there are several classes of the Ananias variety in the Yard. Various reports reach me of hundreds being slaughtered. Master Mechanic Charley Smithson and his bosom friend, Joe Moore, went out on the river last Saturday and returned with fifty "grey mallard ducks," so they informed me. A strange coincidence is connected with the report. The same evening a colored gentleman of Giesboro reported to the police that two men from the Navy Yard had killed all his ducks (and the color was grey). Of course there was no connection with the ducks killed and the ducks that disappeared. It was was only a coincidence. There is one strange part of the affair, however; there are no grey mallard ducks on the river at this time of the year, and when they do come they never light near Giesboro. Next.

RICHES.

A friend of mine, rated by Bradstreet as a millionaire, recently asked me why I did not reduce my living expenses, that I might save more money. "Do as I did in my earlier life. Take a herring and a piece of corn bread for your lunch. Save your money and get rich." This was his advice. I am going to give him some in a different shape.

I pity the man who wears out his energies in the accumulation of riches, which, when amassed, he will have lost the capacity to enjoy. He finds himself, at the end of his labors, a guest at his own feast, without an appetite for its dainties. The wine of life is wasted, and nothing remains but the lees. The warm sympathies of his heart have been choked by the inexorable spirit of avarice, and they can not be resuscitated. The fountain head of his enthusiasm is sealed; he looks at all things in nature and in art with the eye of calculation; hard matter of fact is the only pabulum his mind can feed on; the elastic spring of impulse, the poetry of existence is gone.

Are wealth and position an equivalent for these losses? Is not this millionaire who has acquired wealth at such a cost a miserable bankrupt. Alone he sits in the evening of life with no companion to cheer his waning hours, except his money bags. The habits formed in early life are now fastened so securely that he can not escape. Would I exchange with him? Exchange a happy home, surrounded by all the environments of contentment, for the palace of the misanthropist. My answer is no.

I have a decided opinion relative to two classes of men. There is little to chose on the score of wisdom between the individual who recklessly squanders his money as he goes along in folly and extravagance, and the false economist who denies himself the wholesome enjoyments of life in order to swell the treasure which in the hardening process of scaping up he had become too mean to enjoy and too selfish to give away. The only rational way to live is to mix labor with enjoyment, a streak of fat and a streak of lean, a pleasant mixture of exertion, thankfulness, love sunshine, and repose. The man who slaves for riches makes a poor return to that God who created him for a better and nobler purpose.

Not all the pomp of rituals, nor the savor
  Of guns and epics, can the unseen one please
As if his ear could bend with childish favor
  To the poor flattery of the organ keys.
Not such the service the benignant Father
  Requireth at His earthly children's hands,
Not the poor offering of vain rites, but rather
  The simple duty man from man demands.
For he whom Jesus loved has truly spoken
  The holier worship which He deigns to bless
Restores the lost, and binds the spirit broken,
  And feeds the widow, and the fatherless.
Oh, brother man, fold to thy heart thy brother,
  Where pity dwells, the peace of God is there,
To worship rightly is to love each other,
  Each smile a hymn, each kindly deed a prayer.
Follow with reverent steps the great example
  Of Him whose holy work was doing good,
So shall the wide earth seem our Father's temple,
  Each loving life a psalm of gratitude.

WHY OUR WAGE SHOULD INCREASE.

No one, of course, knows better than the average wage-earner that the wages of labor have not moved upward during the last six years as rapidly as the cost of living. The worker for daily wages has not, however, felt the full loss of the increased prices. He has, perhaps, been able to demand an advance sufficient to make up for a part of the rise in prices, or to work more hours per day or more days per week in order to sustain the customary standard of living of his family. The complete effect of the change in prices has been felt only by those whose incomes are stationary. This class includes some wage workers, clerks, many professional men, and nearly all those whose incomes are derived from investments. The steady advance of the last six years in the cost of nearly every item of necessary family supplies has been a severe blow to every member of this large class, and has been the cause of many sacrifices and privations. On account of it some have had to live less comfortably, others have had to abandon their customary annual periods of rest and recreation, while still others have been unable to lay aside the usual fund for a rainy day, or have actually been forced to withdraw all or part of that already saved. That the drain upon any fixed income has not been exaggerated is evident when actual price comparisons are shown. Dun's Review, which has established a reputation for the accuracy of its price statistics and estimates, declares that the total yearly food supply of an individual cost $34.72 in 1897, and that the same quantities and quality now cost $48 83, a rise of 39.20 per cent. In other words, for every dollar which the average head of a family had to spend in 1897 for food he now has to spend $1.39. For a family of six persons the rise thus indicated in the cost of food for such a family now being on an average $289 98 as compared with $208.32 in 1897. Of course prices vary in different parts of the country and even at the same prices families have different total expenditures depending upon their taste, frugality and ability. These are average figures, however, and probably represent with fairness hundreds of thousands of families whose income has failed to keep pace with the increased cost. But it is not alone for food that the expenditure must now be greater than in 1897. Nearly all prices have moved upward. In 1897, the clothing of an average individual cost $13 81 and that now it cost $16.51 requiring an expenditure of $1.20 when $1 would suffice in 1897. For a family of six persons the increase amounts to $16.20 per year. For other articles of necessary supply the expenditures per individual in 1897 was $23.93; it is now $32.35. Thus the average annual cost of the absolutely necessary supplies for a single individual has risen from $72 46 in 1897 to $97.19 at the present time, and the head of a family must spend for these articles $1.32, when he had to spend $1 in 1897. The difference on the supplies of the family of six amounts to $148.38 per year, undoubtedly a great hardship to those whose incomes are no larger than they were before. When we seek for the cause of this disproportionate advance in prices we find it in fact that so many producers are enabled by the Dingley tariff bill to charge more for their goods in this country than they do when the same goods are shipped to our Canadian brothers, or to Europe. Tax-fed monopoly and avaricious trusts, fostered by this tariff, have placed this burden upon all American homes. When will we become wise, when will we lift the heavy burden that is now crushing us to the earth. When will we awaken to the fact that the wage-earner is a power greater than the trusts. The opportunity presents itself every two years. If we would but use the grey matter in our heads and vote for those whose interests are identified with our interests. Will we ever awaken from the lethargy that seems to dull our very existence, or be contented with that shop-worn expression, "let well enough alone." Is it not time we were up and doing. This means you, brother; not some one else, but you.

The Great Siberian Railroad.

It is difficult for the American to comprehend the immensity of this great line. The Canadian Pacific Railroad, from Montreal to the Pacific seaboard, a distance of 2,990 miles, is the longest continuous line on the American continent, and upon its completion was announced to be the greatest achievment of modern times, and yet it covers considerable less than half the distance from Warsaw to Port Arthur. The project for our own Union Pacific scarcely fifty years ago was denounced in Congress as a wild proposition, entirely impracticable, and yet, with its connecting lines, the distance from Chicago to San Francisco is only 2,357 miles, or about one-third of the Russian line.

In comparing these lines, however, we must take into consideration that the Siberian and Manchurian lines cross no great mountain-ranges. The Urals and the Khingan and Kirin ranges are scarcely more difficult to cross than the Blue Ridge Mountains of the eastern states. However, many formidable difficulties of a different nature were encountered in both Siberia and Manchuria. In the first place there was the exploration of half of Asia, much of which had never been traversed by a white man—no trifling task in itself. In the construction, there were great swamps to drain, vast areas in western Siberia, where the ground, at first appearance firm and unbroken, almost in a night swallowed up miles of rail, and where brick eng ne-houses and heavy water-tanks a month after their construction sank into the lower strata of mire.

The Russian government provides for its employes, down to the lowest-paid Chinese workmen, if they are considered as permanent servants, substantial homes, often built of brick or stone. It drains the town site or fills it in if required, arranges for the establishment of an inn, retail stores, doctors and hospitals, erects churches and school-houses and establishes technical schools for employes, makes country roads and bridges, provides rural mail facilities, deepens and improves navigable streams and places in commission steamers that may be converted into feeders, develops mines, and, in fact, does everything requisite for the welfare and progress of the country. In addition to this, there is in Manchuria the necessity of constructing barracks at all important stations and the maintenance of more than twenty thousand guards, who are distributed along the line for purposes of defense. These are problems with which the American railway man has not to contend.—J. W. Davidson in Century.

Concerning The Scab.

There is a vast difference between the "scab" and the mere non-unionist. Non-unionists are those workers who drudge along like "dumb driven cattle," taking no part in the great industrial struggles that are being waged around them, while "scabs" are those who take an active part in the fight against the workers of their own trade. In nearly every case the "scab" is like the horse in the burning stable who not only refuses to come out, but kicks and bites the brave fireman who goes to his rescue. It is for this reason that the strike breaker has been called a moral criminal. When a body of workers are being treated with gross injustice, when their employer contemptuously refuses even to arbitrate and when they choose to be strikers rather than slave, the men who take their places are morally and socially guilty of a criminal act.

To say that it is legal to be a strike breaker in such a case only proves the moral deficiencies of the law. It is also legal to be a monopolist, to be a Wall street plunger, to be a lobbyist for the trust, to be a promoter of the wheat corners; but to class the "scab" in with these gentlemen is not to make him any the less a moral criminal. Our ideas about what is right and what is wrong are changing. Morality, like everything else, evolves. We are beginning to understand that the crimes against individuals are not as great as those against large bodies of men. The social criminal injures all of us, himself included. He tries to scuttle the ship in which he is a passenger. His success means social failure, and his failure means social success. These facts may not be clearly seen by the ethical teacher and the professors of political economy, but the trades unions, which have again and again been the pioneers of social reform, understand them perfectly and act accordingly —Coast Seaman's Journal.

Going to a Fire in China.

From the Chicago News.

"I was in Peking," said an American tourist, "when a fire broke out a few doors below the house in which I was lodging, and at the first alarm I rushed out and into the burning structure to see what could be saved. I was at once arrested, and later on discovered the Chinese way of fighting a fire.

"A policeman first required an affidavit of the head of the household to the effect that he did not deliberately set the blaze, and for this purpose took him before an official half a mile away. A second was stationed to see that no one removed any furniture until the papers had been made out.

"After a lapse of forty minutes the firemen arrived. They looked at the burning house and decided that it was on fire. After much argument it was further agreed that it would be a waste of water to try to put out the flames. Two members, who erected a ladder and climbed part way up, were duly reproved for too much zeal, and after the name, age, and habits of the owner had been taken the fire department retired in good order.

"As the flames were unhindered the house burned to the ground, and when the owner returned he was beaten by his neighbors for endangering their property. I was held in durance vile for two hours and then fined 40 cents."

Wealth of The United States.

The real wealth of the United States is better appreciated in reading of the enormous holdings of gold in the treasury, and in comparing them with the riches of other governments. In comparisons of this kind the United States ranks first above all other countries, standing preeminently as the richest government on earth. In gold, in stock, in circulation and in official holdings, our country surpasses every other nation. The stock of Great Britain is $528,000,000, so that ours is double. The increase in five years here has been $378,000,000. In that period Great Britain has added $90,000,000, France has added $137,000,000, Germany $95,000,000, Austria-Hungary $55,000,000, while Russia has added only $10,400,000 to her stock. In several other countries there has been a reduction.

Death of F. M. Detweiler.

Frederick M. Detweiler, one of the oldest members of the printing fraternity, died Wednesday, November 9, at his late residence, 504 I street north west.

Mr. Detweiler was in his seventy-fifth year and had been a resident of Washington for half a century. With the father of John H. Judd he established the firm of Judd & Detweiler, a firm that has always carried itself successfully, Mr. Detweiler being the business manager.

Mr. Detweiler leaves a widow, three sons and four daughters, and a number of grandchildren.

As an employer he was thoughtful and kind to those in his employ, and displayed an element of fairness in all his dealings with those he came in contact with in a business capacity.

The members of Judd & Detweiler chapel passed suitable resolutions of respect and sympathy on the death of their late employer, attesting the esteem in which he was held in by all his employes.

Right to Organize.

The report of the committee on the relations of capital and labor at the Protestant Episcopal convention in Boston, made on October 19, indicates that there are those among the clergy who are disposed to consider fairly the rights of workingmen and little children. It says:

"In the face of a prejudice and a hostility for which there are serious reasons, we are convinced that the organization of labor is essential to the well-being of the working people. Its purpose is to maintain such a standard of wages, hours and conditions as shall afford every man an opportunity to grow in mind and in heart. Without organization the standard can not be maintained in the midst of our present commercial conditions.

"The employment of children in factories and mills depresses wages, destroys homes and depreciates the human stock. Whatever interferes with the proper nurture and education of a child contradicts the best interests of the nation. We call, then, on Christian employers and on Christian parents to endeavor to secure such betterment of the local and general laws as shall make the labor of children impossible in this Christian country."

Lighting a Room.

It pays to know how to light a room well. Nothing shows up the blemishes of age in a woman more harshly than too bright a light or one badly placed. Each needs to be shaded with a color, moreover, and high hung lights should never be used. All should be placed in the walls, not in the ceilings.

Five feet six inches is the height interior decorators call proper for the lights in a house of ordinary size. This brings them to the level of most person's faces and prevents a flood of searching light from above. Side lights give the shadows a chance to play, and a little shadow is a good thing for even the prettiest feminine face.

Chandeliers are badly out of fashion, and we are trying to forget them. Lights nowadays must look as little like the fixtures that they are a part of as possible. Wall lights are kept as close to the wall as they can be placed. One form is an electric light bulb hidden behind an opaque glass shell.

Not all women can get rid of chandeliers and brackets, but for these there are several kinds of small shades that can be made and used on electric lights to soften their brilliancy. Some of the shades can be adapted to gaslight, while less piercing, is by no means the best illuminant for the face. In fact, everything but the glare of candles shows too cruelly the wrinkles, blemishes and defects of color which mar the good looks of most women of thirty years and older.

Light that is softened by a shade of silk or paper is nearly as mellow as that of candles. It makes a woman look years younger, as any one may see who seats herself before a wall mirror and views herself under both lights,—New York Telegarm.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

There are always many who remember our former fellow-employes who have gone out into the world in professional and business life, and any news regarding them never fails to be interesting. One of these is J. E. Martinson, who worked in the G. P. O. from 1894 to 1898, during which time he took a course of law at Georgetown University and graduated. Previous to coming here Mr. Martinson had worked all over the United States as a printer He is now practicing law in Seattle, Wash., with a remunerative clientele, and with fair prospects of acquiring fame and fortune.

* * * *

But not all who break out of the G. P. O. and into business make a "go" of it—at least not on the "go off." Ex-President Joe Johnson tells a story which he says was told him by Joseph W. Borden, an employing printer of Spokane, Wash., for whom Johnson was then working, illustrative of the fact that there are failures. Mr. Borden, who worked in the G. P. O. for a number of years himself, said that he and Samuel W. Edmunds, at that time as well as now an employe of the G. P. O., went to Kansas a dozen years ago and located in a new town, with a shingle nailed up indicating that they were lawyers. They had been there probably three months when they awoke one morning to the fact that they were the only persons left in the town, the rest of the people having picked up their belongings and gone to another town on a railroad which had passed by leaving them high and dry. In previous moments of discouragement they had rallied each other on being quitters and had agreed on a small forfeit from the first to suggest giving up, but when they awoke in their loneliness that morning they were too unanimous to make any demands on each other. Borden went further West and is now on the highway to fortune, but Sam, who had a lot of little mouths to look after, hiked back to Washington, and he might have done a whole lot worse.

I am further grieved that Brother McPike speaks so lightly of my grief. When I want anything bad enough to furnish plans and specifications, I really want it, and while the sample I furnished is by no means up to the standard of what I want, I thought it might serve to prod my friend into showing what can really be done by an able mind with the suggested material. In continuation of that line of urging, I submit other specimens—infantile, I admit, but merely to indicate what I want. I found it easier to draw my plans after the fashion of what are called "limericks," but I feel sure that McPike can do them in hexameters and diameters if he will, not to mention dactyllics and bucolics. Please, good Mr. McPike.

SPIKES, BY MICK SPIKE.

By dint of the deepest of thought
From the depths I this fact have brought:
The poor little zero,
Much greater than Nero,
Can transform Con into Connaught.

The last of the digits is fine,
And made with a single curved line;
'Tis not only graceful
But em'nently p'aceful,
With pow'r to make a bee benign.

I hope that he will see the importance of this to literature, to which we are both so devoted. As he observed from my former effort and this, I have worked from both ends toward the middle, in order to leave unbotched and unmessed the greater number of the figures, so that I will not suffer so much by contrast, though I am even willing to undergo that in the interest of good literature.

* * * *

Speaking of poetry—no, I believe I wasn't speaking of poetry; but if I had been—I have often felt called upon to wonder why parties—no particular parties are in my mind, I will state, lest I cause heartburnings—who cannot write even a word of intelligible or intelligent prose should think they can write poetry and have no hesitancy in hurling it at an unoffending constituency. Poetry is a thundering sight harder to write than prose, for all one needs to write the latter is an idea and sufficient knowledge of English to set it to words, whereas to write poetry one must not only have ideas, but must be able to fit those ideas into language with a certain number of "feet" or syllables to a line, and with those syllables so disposed that the accent or rhythm will fall in the right places, in addition to having final words of sufficiently similar sound to rhyme. I thus go into the mechanical construction of a poem so definitely because it is manifest that not every one knows these things. It is often the case that when an idea is so feeble-minded that its author is ashamed to write it in prose he imagines its imbecility will be pardoned or perhaps unnoticed if he writes it in what he thinks to be the similitude of poetry. I think I have done that myself, though my friends have been very frank in telling me that I cannot write poetry. I justify myself in my widely separated efforts on the score that those who read my poetry will thereafter be better reconciled to my prose and thankful that my flights of poesy are so rare. How natural it is for a fellow to turn to talking about himself! It is other people's outrages on the muse that really disturb me and drive me into this melancholy state of mind, and especially some of the splay-footed specimens that find their way into this otherwise great paper. Now plead guilty by resenting this, durn ye!

A letter from Percy B. S. Thayer, of the Boston Herald, incloses a clipping as follows:

Charles T. Scott, one of the best known members of the I. T. U., has just been appointed New England organizer by President Lynch. Mr. Scott is a native of Pittsburg, Pa., his father, M. T. Scott, being one of the best known printers of his day. He resided in Cleveland for a number of years, was president of Cleveland Typographical Union for two years, and also represented that union at the Cincinnati convention. Since coming to Boston he has been employed on the Boston Post. He served as reading clerk at the St. Louis convention of the I. T. U. this year. Mr. Scott will at once take up active work throughout New England.

I knew Mr. Scott's father, Mike Scott, at Cleveland in 1870—at least I have no doubt it was the same M. T. Scott, and a fine fellow he was. Mr. Thayer, who was pushed by his friends for the same position, says of Mr. Scott: "He is a nice fellow and I am glad he has the position. He has all the qualifications for the job."

I tender my acknowledgments for the complimentary and graceful references of "Rough Writer" to members of my family and myself in last week's paper. I am so constituted that I can bear the honors unblushingly that come from the efforts of others.

* * * *

I have often wondered where the ideas of syllabication come from that seem to inhabit some compositors' minds—this in sorrow, not in anger. From the divisions which they make, November must sound like "Novevember" to them; favorable, "faveorable;" Columbia, "Col-umbia;" plumber, "plum-ber;" dissolution, "dissol-yution;" purpose, "purp-ose," and so on ad nauseam. Of course the correct divisions of words is a little thing; but the world is made up of little things. We were once little things ourselves.

Maj. John D. Russell, of the Proof Division, recently made a visit to T. J. Mattingly, "Uncle Joe," at Oxen Hill, Md., who resigned from the office a year or so ago, and found the old gentleman in the best of health and enjoying life. Mr. Mattingly was employed in the G. P. O. from the time of the establishment of the Congressional Record, having been the foreman of its predecessor, the Congressional Globe, which suspended publication on the establishment of the Record. I don't suppose that anybody knows just how old "Uncle Joe" is, but that he was at least 21 years old in 1849 is evidenced by the fact that he joined the Columbia Typographical Society in that year, for it admitted none below that age. I hope that he may live as many more years as he has lived, if he wants to.

Benning Races.

The autumn meeting at Benning will begin on Thursday, November 17, and will close Saturday, December 3.

From present indications stable room will be at a premium when the meeting opens, and the overflow of thoroughbreds will have to be cared for outside the track.

The races over the jumps are very popular here, and there will be eight races of that sort during the meeting.

The card for Thanksgiving Day will have two steeplechases, the Washington Cup race and four other races.

The best horses in the East will be at this meeting, which will a marked advance over all previous ones.

The Woman's Auxiliary.

A well attended meeting of this organization was held Monday night, presided over by Miss Laura B. Gordon. The routine business was transacted. One new member was received. Mr. Gosch, representing the Buffers and Polishers Union, was granted five minutes time to display articles for kitchen use—knives, cleaver, etc.—each article bearing the union label.

A committee from the striking mill-operatives of Fall River, Mass., were granted a few minutes to state the situation and needs there. After their withdrawal Mrs. E. H. Thomas made a motion that the Auxiliary appropriate five dollars for their relief, which went through unanimously.

An entertainment was provided, consisting of solos by Misses Helen Benzler, Mildred Thompson, and Gladys Wilkinson, and Master Raymond Lense. A rising vote of thanks was extended these little people.

The nominations for local officers were next in order. For president, Mrs. Lizzie K. Webb and Mrs. Fannie T. Hyler; for vice-president, Mrs. C. L Nace; for secretary, Mrs. Lillie K. Thomas; for treasurer, Mrs. Henrietta M. Bowen; for chaplain, Mrs. Sam'l. M. White; for sergeant-at-arms, Mrs. F. C. Roberts.

The election will be held at the meeting in December. Members of the Auxiliary are requested to bear in mind that the regular night for the meeting is the first Monday in each month, and we hope for a large attendance at each meeting.

An Increase in Wages.

The newspaper printers of Keokuk, Iowa, have secured the signatures of all employers to a new wage agreement which provides for an increase of $1 per week. Some time ago the union submitted a new scale calling for an increase of $2. The employers refused to grant the increase, and a representative of the International Union was sent in to effect a settlement. A conference was had and a settlement on the basis of $1 increase effected. The cordial relations existing between the employers and employes have not been disturbed and the settlement of the differences is a triumph for business methods in arranging wage agreements. The Typographical Union has an enviable record in the matter of avoiding trouble over wage scales, and still bettering their condition.

Lead in Idaho.

Idaho is the largest producer of lead ores of any State or Territory in the United States. In 1903 there were mined in Idaho, and mainly from the great Coeur d'Alene district, a total of 887,000 short tons of lead ore, with a value exceeding $8,250,000. Utah was second in lead production, having smelted from lead ores 57,000 short tons and Colorado is third with about 51,000 tons of refined lead. The nonargentiferous districts, including Missouri, Kansas, Wisconsin, Illinois and Iowa, produced 77,000 short tons of metallic lead from galena ores during 1903.

THE TRADES UNIONIST and FARM AND FIRESIDE
BOTH One Year $1.00

FARM AND FIRESIDE is issued twice a month, twenty-four numbers a year, and has from 20 to 30 large pages each issue; it is profusely illustrated with half-tones. It is the best farm and home journal in America. Thousands of dollars are expended annually for expert advice for the farmer, dairyman, stockraiser, poultryman, fruit-grower and gardener. It has departments for the good housewife, fashion pages, pattern pages, good stories, puzzles; it furnishes a lawyer and a doctor, wit and humor columns, and a young people's department.

OUR PROPOSITION

Every new cash subscriber to THE TRADES UNIONIST will be given a subscription to FARM AND FIRESIDE one year FREE.

Every old yearly subscriber who pays his subscription to THE TRADES UNIONIST to January 1, 1905, will be given a year's subscription to this valuable farm paper.

Accept this offer to-day, before you neglect it.

This is an opportunity to secure FARM AND FIRESIDE one year FREE by merely paying your subscription in advance. If you are already paid ahead, send $1.00 and your time will be advanced another year.

If you do not want FARM AND FIRESIDE for yourself we will send it to any other address you may desire.

Address THE TRADES UNIONIST
441 G Street N. W., Washington, D. C.

N. B.—By the terms of our contract with the publishers we can only make this offer until December 31, 1904, so subscribe before that date.

A Word to the Nonunionist.

If you are a nonunionist and also a botch not able to do good work or a fair quantity of it each day, you are just a real scab. We have nothing to say to you until you fit yourself for unionism by learning your trade right. If you are a nonunionist and a fairly competent workman, we want to ask you if you ever give thought to the fact that your wages, lower almost always than those of the union workman in the same trade, are kept as high as they are by the efforts of the unions. If the union scale is lowered, down go your wages still lower, for the union scale is the sole standard by which the scab master determines just how far he can go in cutting down the wages of his nonunion men. The honorable employer of union labor has no such power and does not want it, but if the scab employers could destroy the unions, and thus get power to dictate wages where would labor be? It would be left. Why not, then, join the union and make it stronger to help you?—Labor Monitor.

Many a young man who imagines he is lovesick is only bilious.

THE UNION LABEL.

Mr. Joseph M. McGinnis was for unions all the way;
He favored larger wages and a somewhat shorter day.
A walkout always pleased him, though he didn't have a cent,
And when the delegate said "Strike!" McGinnis always went.
He did the shopping for his wife, because he liked to know
That naught but union articles were purchased with his dough.

"Has it got the union label?"
McGinnis used to say;
"Has it got the union label?
Show it to me if you're able;
If it hasn't got the label
Take the blooming thing away!"

Now Joseph M. McGinnis was a man of good repute,
Who went to church on Sunday in his union tailored suit.
Like many other union men he lived a blameless life,
And when he died the neighbors said: "the blow will kill his wife."
He reached the pearly gates on time, as upright spirits do;
"Welcome!" was Peter's greeting, "I have a harp for you!"

"Has it got the union label?"
McGinnis had to say;
"Has it got the union label?
Show it to me if you're able;
If it hasn't got the label
Take the blooming thing away!"

AROUND THE PRINTERIES.

First Division.

One solitary transfer, slug 1, alley 1, Division 1, to War Branch. James B. Huss, a temporary and brother of Lon.

Oscar Nelson, Slug 40, has been down in the Sixth working on the machines.

Say, did you get a "bill-take" the other day? What did you do with it? Spell or put in figures?

Yes, even the temporary comps. went home and voted. O, I tell you, who wouldn't be an American citizen? Greatest people this side of the divide.

Well, well. In our brief, inexperienced life, we have heard of the lead man, the pi man, the general utility man and the latest addition is the "string" man, exclusively Sergeant-Waller's job. He is located away down in the plate-vault and is the centre around which all the string (or properly speaking, page cord) revolves.

We are pleased to record the transfer, and presumably ultimate promotion, of Joe Benner. The young gentleman has been in charge of one of the "gold" elevators at the main entrance on the North Capitol street front ever since they have been in operation. Always courteous and attentive to the exacting duties, we are not surprised, but we miss his cordial greeting. He now signs the Fifth Division pay-roll.

One convenience we had in the old building is much missed in our new home. We refer to the mail boxes. Of course we are surrounded by different environments, and you could not drive a nail anywhere, even if you wished to. All the same we miss the boxes, and if there are any letters to mail, guess the males will have to mail them in the United States mail boxes on the street.

Say, do you ever wish away down in your boots that you were back in the old building? How we do miss the girls going out at 3 or 4 o'clock p. m. As far as our observation goes, don't know whether there are any in the building. Mostly working for a living now with our nose in the space box.

Latest advices from Sibley Hospital report P. A. O'Brien slowly recovering from the typhoid fever. His apron interests are being looked after by his brother. Strange, but true, that both of the gentlemen who so promptly and cheerfully keep us supplied weekly with clean "bibs" should be victims of the same terrible disease.

While hammering away on solid doc. during the closing hours of last week, we noted the following changes on the panorama before us. Let's see how near we guessed 'em:

That Haworth, Butler, Small, Perry, Bellinger, Steele, Latham and Lytle went up New York State.

That Honest John (O'Neill,) Montgomery, Nelson, Auracher, Williams, McEvoy, Clark and Purdy to New York City.

That Jimmie Wallace went to Cincinnati.

That Secretary Lillard is in charge of Jake Lesher's "bunch" while he was on leave. A good selection—we mean Lil, not the "bunch."

That Billy Lentz and Charley Howle went to Columbus.

That Coles and Haskins went to North Carolinia.

That Frank Morgan was IT on election day.

That Ed. Geyer broke away early in the game.

That Billy Skeen went over to Lan-cas-ter, Pa.

That Ed. Wild (night postmaster) went up to Martinsburg, W. Va.

That Geo. Sehorn moved up two points and Whitey one.

That thirteen of us got away on Monday night—did you?

That Bell, of Virginia, began his leave on Tuesday.

That the voters began to return on election night.

That E. D. King, in the veteran's class, went to Indiana.

Also the President of Central Labor Union to Ohio—can't spell the name of the town.

That Chas. Garrette went to the City of Brotherly Love, and—

The District man stayed right here and earned or will sign for his $4 per.

That W. F. Crump went to Richmond and

That the popular distributor of THE TRADES UNIONIST, F. H. Berger went to Cleveland, Ohio.

That the two Carlisle Indians, Bentz and Leeds, went up to save the State, and took Templar with them.

That the chief engineer of the "cage" took a hasty run to West Virginia, and his assistant to New York.

That all the subs on the preferred jobs will be "hasbeens" in a few short hours.

That Macklin and Zimmerman, representatives of "Pietown" and "High town"—York and Altoona, got away Saturday night.

That Wm. Leavitt took a spin over to Rhode Island, and Jim Mathers went out of the United States, i. e., over to New Jersey.

That everybody will return in a few days.

ROUGH WRITER.

Second Division.

On Tuesday, election day, there were only 71 left in this room out of 146 Most of them evidently had gone home to vote.

THE IDEAL YOUNG WOMAN.—Rev. E. B. Bagby will preach on this subject next Sunday night at Ninth and D street northeast.

Col. C. C. Semmes, an ex-confederate soldier and Maj. A. T. Maupin ex-Federal soldier, were both detailed to the slug rack Monday. It was a peaceful and inspiring sight to see the two white-headed veterans chatting and working amicably together. Both are "Chesterfields" in politeness and both are native Virginians.

E. E. Richards, of Texas, was a most accommodating time-keeper and postmaster for a few days, in the absence of Mr. Heslet, who went home to vote.

A. M. Butler says his 17-year old son, Ollie, who has been going to college in Ohio, is touring this year with Robert Downing. Mr. Butler says his son has always evinced rare aptitude for the stage.

Col. W. H. Sweeney presided at the desk for a few days with great dignity and ease of manner. His courteous manner to all makes every one his friend.

Our loquacious Bill Harris presides with a great deal of pomp over the various positions which fall to him in the absence of the voters.

Why not organize a Toronto Club. Commence in December and pay in $1 each pay day. This would net enough by that time to pay for a round trip ticket and probably a berth. There is such a club in St. Louis now.

In some of the Colonial historical copy set up in this room lately the statement was made that the gentlemen who was prosecuting the slave "made a lengthy, strengthy and depthy argument."

"Prof." G. W. Harvel has just returned from a tour of the Southeastern States. His wife accompanied him. They camped out with their show until cool weather. They have both improved in health very much.

E. J. Newcomb, formerly secretary of this chapel, has resigned and gone into the real estate business. He was so well pleased with his home on Congress Heights that he wants every one he knows to have opportunity of locating there.

Information Wanted.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

In the contribution of Rough Writer, of the First Division, G. P. O., last week your correspondent credits the statement that "cleanliness is next to Godliness" to "The Good Book." Will the correspondent kindly instruct a brother whose early education in literature was neglected, and specify the good book in which this quotation is to be discovered? And while on the subject, will the correspondent kindly specify the page of the good book in which he finds it, for the guidance of others?

POSEY.

Pointed Paragraphs.

From the Chicago News.

Vice is always punished—on the stage.

Even a peaceful man is ever ready to strike a bargain.

A man's conscience is continually reminding him of his neighbor's sinfulness.

It's all right for a man to talk himself up, providing he doesn't run others down.

Some men refuse to wear glasses because they are blind to their own interests.

In order to join the great silent majority a man must either die or get married.

After a man leads a woman to the altar she is willing to retaliate by taking the lead.

The best way to keep people from getting onto your curves is to be perfectly straight.

It is bootless for a man to have an aim in life unless he has the ammunition to back it up.

Once upon a time they tried to shut a woman up in a lunatic asylum—but she kept right on talking.

An actress may not be an angel herself, but she doesn't object to having one hovering around at times.

There are periods in almost any man's career when he would rather have a lie told about him than the truth.

Happiness may be better than wealth, but the average man would like to try a large dose of each simultaneously.

A woman is so selfish that she isn't even willing to let other people share the pleasure she derives from abusing her husband.

The man who is in the hands of his physician is up against it almost as hard as the political candidate who is in the hands of his friends.

Trade Union Progress.

The impatient and surface observers of trade union effort and our movement often say: "Why don't the unions do this thing or that thing? Why don't they ever learn anything, and why don't they profit by the lessons of the past?" As a matter of fact, trade unions are further advanced in the science of government and trade unions are better qualified for self government than any other organization or any other body of citizens.

Nations and the mass of citizens never learn anything in leaps and jumps. The upward and onward march of the masses is slow and evolutionary. The mass learn by experience in all walks of life and in all nations, and not by deductions taken from the past. The members of trades unions have made greater mental and physical progress by virtue of our association with our fellow men in our unions than the unorganized mass has on the other hand. To organize and keep our unions alive and make them do what we expect of them require thought and study, both of which lead to greater intelligence.

One trouble is that the unthinking public exacts a greater standard of intelligence and morality from the unions and unionists than they do from any other organization, regardless of what it may be. While trade unionists are human beings drawn from the great body of humanity, we are by association and the effort to maintain our unions compelled to think and study, which makes us more reliant, self controlled and better equipped for the struggle of life.

Labor Notes.

A movement is on foot to organize a trade council at Minneapolis, Minn.

Philadelphia alone produces 75 per cent of the glazed kid in the United States.

The wages of the common laborer in Ireland are now nearly double those of 12 years ago.

Employees of the Michigan Central Railroad, at St. Thomas, Canada, have decided in favor of a pension fund.

The Boston, Mass., Central Labor Union is actively engaged in trying to stamp out the pardon system in the Hub.

The headquarters of the Federated Metal Trades' Association has been removed from Washington, D. C., to Pittsburg.

The strike of the livery drivers in Chicago, which has been in progress for some time, has been settled and the men are back at work.

In 1896 Michigan had 2,572 factories, employing 101,653 people at a daily rate of $1.23 In 1903 these figures had increased to 6,996 factories, at a daily rate of $1.75.

Exclusive of agricultural workers, there are now over 6,000,000 laboring men in the United States. Nearly 2,000,000 of the number are members of organized labor.

Three meals, two pints of porter and 84 cents a day is the demand of farm laborers in the midland counties of Ireland, and they have gone on strike to enforce the demand.

Peabody, Mass., is the great sheepskin tanning center of the country. It has about $2,000,000 invested in the business and about 2,000 hands employed.

At Detroit the National Master Horseshoers' Protective Association has decided to meet the journeymen's proposal for arbitration committee to act with the journeymen.

Stationery engineers are said to have declared their attention to withdraw from the American Federation Federation of Labor if the Brewery Workers' Union is given jurisdiction over engineers in breweries.

An organization of manufacturers to oppose the demands of organized labor has been effected at Battle Creek, Mich., by a meeting of the largest manufacturers of the city. It now looks as if the latter would not accede to any union demands.

The Fall River Strike.

The cotton manufacturers at Fall River, Mass., have agreed to open up their plants to such operatives as desire to resume work under the proposed reduction of 12½ per cent.

The manufacturers have rejected a proposition from the operatives to return to work pending arbitration of the wage scale, and will endeavor to start up with a force sufficient to break the strike.

The reduction is insisted on by the manufacturers on account of the high price of cotton.

Slept on Table Cloth.

"The strictest economy I ever saw practiced," said the old stager in the New York Times, "was down in Virginia early in the war, where I was stationed as sutler—on the losing side.

"One of the captains and myself stayed over night with an old rebel planter and right royally he treated us, as far as he was able. You know how a southerner is—he gives up his pride last of all, and this man was no exception. He put us in the only spare room, had a bed made for us in a hurry and left us to sleep the sleep of the righteous.

"But about 6 in the morning we were awakened by a tremendous thumping at the door. I jumped up and called out:

"'What's the matter?'

"We recognized old Aunt Sukey's voice when she replied:

"'Ain't you gemmen gwine to get up so Ah kin set de table?'

"'Why, go ahead and set the table, auntie,' I said. 'We'll be up in time for breakfast.'

"'Clar to goodness, how Ah gwine set de table widout no table cloth? You all done got every sheet in de house.'

"Aunt Sukey got her sheet" concluded the old-timer, "and most of my appetite went with it."

The Simplon Tunnel.

The Simplon Tunnel is rapidly approaching completion. Its total length will be a little over 12 miles, of which six or more have been penetrated on the north or Brigue side, and four or more on the south or Italian side, and it is expected that the two sections will be joined together in the coming May or June, and not long after trains will be running regularly through. The organization of the work is of high efficiency. No sickness exists among the men. The use of the Brandt drill immediately suppresses all dust, and there has not been a single case of miner's phthisis, though some 3,000 men have been at work for five years. The completion of the tunnel is to be especially celebrated by an exposition of land transportation at Milan next year.—Train Dispatchers' Bulletin.

The mayor of Council Bluffs (Iowa), recently inaugurated a clean-up crusade among the factories and workshops in that city. His action in this respect brought forth the following from the Britt Tribune:

Council Bluffs has a mayor who ought to be obliged to diet the rest of his days on bean soup and eat it out of a jug with a gimlet. He notified a newspaper of that town to clean its front windows. The editor obeyed the order, and then got more than even by calling upon the mayor to clean the streets. The stuff from the window sills had filled the streets with debris, and it took the entire city force hours to gather it up and put it away. The brilliant light has now made six of the newspaper's compositors blind and melted all of the rollers of the press; besides that, no one could find the office for three days, it was so changed. The sun's rays exploded the office towel, and the ink on the towel catching fire melted the type in the office and it ran out of the second story window unto the street car track and soldered the switch solid, so that a man starting for Lake Manawa to swim went to Omaha and was run in by the police.

Minimum and Uniform Scales.

"Notwithstanding some employes may receive above this scale, no employe has a right to demand more than it calls for, no matter in what capacity he may be employed"—Washington scale of prices.

"Nothing herein shall be construed to prevent superior workmen securing higher wages than provided by this scale."—Denver scale of prices.

These two excerpts illustrate opposites in ideas of wage scales. In Washington the result is a dead level of pay for all at the minimum, the supposed best men having the preference in steady work, while the men not so highly gifted take what they can get. In Denver the best men are paid more than the scale, and even the ordinary workers have steady positions at the minimum scale. Custom and practice generally favors the Denver plan.

A uniform scale is very detrimental to union progress. Employers do not favor it. Especially is it so when the matter stands as it does here. In effect the union says the best man is not worth more than the scale. Anyone of common sense, and especially an employer, knows that if the best is only worth a certain price, the poorer quality is certainly less valuable. Naturally objection is made to paying the same price for all grades of workers. The union should say the poorest worker in the ranks is worth the scale; superior workers are worth more and should receive it, but none can work for less than the prescribed amount. Then these better men will reap the benefit of their superiority.

The principle is recognized in the Government Office, and by the Civil Service Commission. All know that experience is the most valuable teacher in the profession of typography. So in grading applicants for positions the length of time at work at the business cuts quite a figure in the marking. Once in the office this same quality counts and affects advancement materially. In other professions the same principle governs. The doctor, lawyer, editor, or dentist of longest experience is generally a most valuable member of his profession and draws pay accordingly.

It may be objected that the better workman may do no more than the less experienced, and therefore should not get a cent more pay. That reminds me of a story.

A young darkey had a minor surgical operation performed and was charged $5 Afterwards, in speaking to the doctor's aged servant, the young darkey said:

"Say, Uncle, Marsa Doctah charged awful high fo' dat little cuttin! I'd do it fer a dollah."

"Dat's jes' like you, fool niggah. What you know 'bout cuttin', anyhow? Would you know where ter begin and where ter stop? Would you use a razzer, jer saw, er ax, I'd like ter know."

"I dun know."

"Well, dat's jes it. De doctah only cha'ged you a dollah for de cuttin' an' fo' dollahs for de know how."

It's the same with the experienced man. He has the "know how," and ought to be paid for it. Under the Washington plan he can not make the charge, but under the Denver plan he can realize in cash for his superiority.

Employers may not like this sort of talk. However, if people in other professions can charge fancy fees and exact high salaries for the efficiency gained by superior ability and training, it stands to reason the better workers in printing are entitled to the same.

WILLIS L. HALL.

Wages up and Down.

Suppose wages were cut in half in all lines. The people could only buy half as much as they buy to-day. That would cause one-half the manufactures to remain unsold. This overstock would cause the factories to close down half the time and thereby reduce the already low wages one-half, and the operation would continue to repeat itself. On the other hand, if wages increased more would be spent; therefore more would be manufactured, thereby making more work. This is allowing that prices remained the same in both cases. As an argument this is logically perfect. In practice wages go down and the prices remain stationary, and when wages go up prices go down.—Leader.

Labor Day.

In concluding a special Labor Day address on the eve of that day, in his church at Cincinnati, Ohio, Herbert S. Bigelow said: "Labor day! Will it always be a day when men pour forth from mine and factory, stunted and suppressed, parade their numbers, break the monotony of their toil with an hour's pleasure, and then return as passive as before? Will it ever be a day when labor, feeling the sting of injustice, but not knowing the cause, will arise in its blind might to strike the innocent and guilty? May it not yet be a day when unjust laws will be repealed and the toilers, grown wise at last, will come to lay the foundation of a state which will decree labor and leisure for all and have no place for drudge or drone?—*I. Vaughn Class Concert.

The annual concert of the Vaughn Class, which takes place in the Sunday School House of Calvary Baptist Church, corner of Eighth and H streets northwest, on Friday, November 18, at 8 p. m., will present what is considered to be the best program ever offered by this popular organization. The Vaughn Class has the reputation of giving the best entertainments of the musical season, and the excellent attractions offered for the approaching event will fully sustain that reputation. Among those who will take part are the following: Mrs. Thomas C. Noyes, soprano, who will sing two numbers; Miss Elisabeth Antoinette Stuart, contralto; Mr. John A. Finnegan, tenor; Mr. Leroy Oldham, reader, of Baltimore, whose work has won him high praise; the Nordica Mandolin and Banjo Club; the ever popular George O'Connor, in comic songs; and the Orchestral Player, an instrument that will be heard for the first time in this city in concert work.

Tickets can be obtained from George G. Seibold or any member of the class, a number of whom work in the Government Printing Office; also at the door on the evening of the concert.

DENVER, COLO., November 10, 1904.

C. E. WINSLOW,

3206 Wisconsin Ave., Washington, D. C.

Your central body failed to comply with Executive Council direction as decided by Boston convention and contained in my letter of September 28, 1904. Time limit, November 1, having expired, your charter stands revoked. Executive Council further decides your charter will be restored upon compliance of your central body with decision.

SAMUEL GOMPERS,
President American Fedration of Labor.

It was moved that the telegram be placed on file.

Amended that matter lay over until unfinished business.

Amendment to amendment that matter lay over until after convention of American Federation of Labor.

It was moved as a substttute for the whole that this Central Labor Union comply with the mandates of the American Federation of Labor under protest, and that protest be forwarded to convention of American Federation of Labor now in session in San Francisco.

A vote being taken on the substitute, it was lost—ayes 22, nays 46.

The amendment to the amendment was carried—ayes 42, nays 28.

Bills amounting to $1 75 were read and ordered paid.

CALL OF UNIONS.

Sheet Metal Workers presented the following resolution:

WHEREAS: Frank K. Raymond, president of the Business Men's Association of Washington, D. C., is a candidate for appointment as Chairman of the Inaugural Committee, and

WHEREAS: Mr. Raymond, aside from being one of the most popular and influential business men of the National Capital, is at the same time a devout friend of organized labor, one who has shown an interest in, and sympathy for the great objects of the movement here and elsewhere, cooperating with the Central Labor Union time after time in making its annual Labor Day celebration a success; and

WHEREAS: It is fitting and proper that the various Trades organizations of the District of Columbia federated in this Central Body, exhibit their appreciation for the kindly acts of Mr. Raymond toward them, and to testify to his great business sagacity, integrity, and administrative ability, therefore be it

Resolved, By the Central Labor Union of the District of Columbia that we heartily and unequivocably endorse the candidacy of Mr. Frank K. Raymond and commend him most highly to the kind and favorably consideration of Hon. George B. Cortelyou, Chairman of tne National Rebublican Committee; and be it further

Resolved, That a Committee of three be appointed by the President to call upon Chairman Cortelyou at the earliest moment possible to present him with a copy of these resolutions and urge the appointment of our friend, Frank K. Raymond.

Adopted this 14th day of November, A. D. 1904.

Attest:
CHAS. W. WINSLOW,
Secretary.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Special committee on investigation of Union Label Card containing advertisement of P. Grogan, now on unfair list, reported that the publisher would endeavor to have the P. Grogan ad. removed from the card. On motion the committee were directed to request the removal of the Grogan ad. from the card.

The Committee to which was referred the investigation of use of nonunion cooperage by National Capital Brewing Co. reported on the matter, and the secretary was directed to notify the National Capital Brewing Co. to comply with the terms of their agreement with Brewery Workers Union, No. 118, and Masters Brewers Association agreement with the Central Labor Union.

Council of Allied Building Trades reported through Secretary Ratigan, that at its last meeting delegate Daly, of Sheet Metal Workers, was elected chairman, and delegate Allison of Steam Fitters, was elected vice-chairman.

Committee on Kernan case reported progress, and was continued.

The chair appointed delegates McCarthy and Winslow to serve in conjunction with himself to present resolutions indorsing Frank K. Raymond for chairman of Inaugural Committee to Mr. Cortelyou.

Any of our readers who failed thus far to attend the dedicatory entertainment given at the new Pythian Temple during the week has missed a treat.

A program replete with good features was prepared by the committee in charge, the talent being recognized as the best in the city.

Friday night the well known local artists, Chandlee, Mahoney, and Israel, will give a chalk talk, making local hits with the pencil that will be fully appreciated.

Saturday night Barry Bulkley will deliver an illustrated lecture on the Yellowstone Park, showing 150 views.

At the conclusion of each night's stage entertainment dancing is the order for the rest of the evening. Refreshments are served in the basement.

INDORSE FRANK K. RAYMOND

Columbia Typographical Union, 101, Honors One of Its Members.

FOR INAUGURAL COMMITTEE

Unanimous Indorsement of Frank K. Raymond for Chairman of Inaugural Committee—His Record as a Union Man and a Progressive Business Man—Consistent in Every Respect.

At the meeting of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, last Sunday, a resolution was passed unanimously indorsing Frank K. Raymond for chairman of the Inaugural Committee, to have charge of the social arrangements and ceremonies connected with the inauguration of President Theodore Roosevelt on the 4th of March next. There were but two speeches made, and they briefly voiced the reasons why the members of Columbia Union would like to see Mr. Raymond attain to this position of honor.

Frank K. Raymond.

Frank K. Raymond is a member of Columbia Typographical Union—formerly on the active list; now an honorary member, an honor accorded him by the unanimous vote of the Union. When he first came to this city, a dozen or fifteen years ago, he secured employment in the Government Printing Office, depositing his union card. But he did not long remain "at the case," his business instincts and aptitude leading him to resign after a service of about a year, during which time he demonstrated that he was not only a printer but one of the most rapid of the many thousands who have come to this city from every part of the country.

His early years were spent in Ohio, where he served his apprenticeship in Bellefontaine, joining the union at Dayton after its completion, there being no union in Bellefontaine at that time. He afterward went to Cincinnati, where he "held cases" on the Enquirer, and later worked in various cities. He returned to Ohio and for a number of years was engaged in business in Cambridge, from which place he came to this city in 1889, though he had worked here before during his "tourist" days. As he was born in 1856, he is still on the sunny side of fifty in years, and far to the eastward of that age in activity, both mental and bodily.

After embarking in business on leaving the Government Printing Office, as resident manager of a large insurance company, his innate business capacity began to show itself, though he was known as a wide-awake, hustling, active man before that. He at once began to show an ability to manage large affairs, and the field of his activities was as wide as the city and its interests. As an insurance man a writer in the Washington Capital wrote of him in 1900:

Mr. Raymond is an insurance man with a conscience. I don't mention this thing as altogether out of the ordinary, but because it is worth at least more than passing notice. He believes, and practices his belief, that in presenting the subject of life insurance it is not only right but best to make every statement correspond with the facts. And this in no small degree has won for him the confidence and friendship of all those with whom he has had dealings. And another thing—he never disparages other insurance companies. He has a good company—the Union Central—at his back, and relies upon his own wit and intelligence to properly present its various forms of policies in order to do business. He has been general agent of the Central Union for only the past eight years, but he has earned the reputation of being one of its most productive agents. I confess I was a bit surprised to learn he was from Ohio. It startled me. The idea of an Ohio man in Washington and not holding down a fat Government job.

But "a fat Government job" is not to the taste of men like Frank K. Raymond. There is not the opportunity for the display of the virile individuality of such a man as he. A Government job meant to him only the means of looking the field over.

An enthusiastic Mason, his friends pushed him some years ago for the position of Potentate of the Mystic Shrine, an office in this order, which is devoted to deeds of charity and the providing of entertainment of its members—a sort of Masonic playground—demanding the highest order of executive ability, and as such he "set a pace" that few men have ever equaled and none exceeded.

After the close of the Spanish-American war his was the brain that conceived the idea of a Peace Jubilee to properly celebrate the victory over Spain at the capital of the nation. That three-days' celebration was the fruition of his idea, and the $54,000 raised to carry it out was the result of his work, used in making the celebration the grand success which all remember it was, demonstrating his administrative ability not only in carrying through the great project, but in raising the funds with which to do it.

The Business Men's Association of this city recognized his superlative ability by electing him its president, and under his lead it has developed into one of the most powerful institutions in providing for the welfare of the city. In whatever is for the interest of the business men and the citizens of Washington that association is seen "at the head of the procession," under his capable command.

Always an enthusiastic Republican and never failing to go to his old home in Ohio to cast his vote, he put forth his efforts in this city by taking a prominent part in organizing the Old Boys' Union Marching Club, which made numerous incursions into Maryland to terrify the theretofore "unterrified," and he was also the organizer of the Roosevelt and Fairbanks League, which did such effective service during the late campaign, having been elected its president by acclamation.

As a business man he has remained steadfast as a union man, the principles of unionism having been deeply rooted in his make-up. On many occasions his intervention has been the means of clearing up misunderstandings between antagonistic forces of capital and labor, both sides having implicit confidence in his honesty and integrity, his suggestions therefore having weight and securing hearings and explanations that otherwise would not have been granted or offered.

But it is not because he is a printer and a union man alone that the printers and organized labor of Washington desire to express their preference for him as chairman of the Inauguration Committee. It is because, in addition to being a union printer, he is a "man of affairs"—a man of such fine organizing, administrative, and executive ability that under his management the inauguration of the President of this great Republic, chosen with an almost unparalleled unanimity, will be of such an entirely successful and satisfactory character that if the union printers of this city, alluding to the grand success of the inauguration celebration and ceremonies, shall say, "This was the work of a union printer and a member of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101," who shall say that their pride was not justifiable?

COLUMBIA UNION MEETING.

Consideration of Committee on Laws Report at Special Meeting.

Columbia Typographical Union met in special meeting last Sunday to further consider report of Laws Committee on revision and codification of the laws of the Union.

On motion, the rules were suspended and the following resolution was adopted:

WHEREAS Frank K. Raymond, a prominent business man of this city, is a candidate for the chairmanship of the Inaugural Committee;

WHEREAS Mr. Raymond, who was a former active, and is now an honorary member of Columbia Union, No. 101, has, on numerous occasions, evidenced his friendliness to organized labor, and Columbia Union in particular; therefore be it

Resolved, That Columbia Typographical Union indorses his candidacy and commends him to the favorable consideration of those in whom is vested their power of appointment.

It was ordered that a copy of the resolution be forwarded to Hon. George B. Cortelyou, Chairman of the Republican National Committee.

A motion to appoint a committee of three to present the resolutions to Mr. Cortelyou was adopted, and the chair appointed Dan. C. Vaughan, John B. Dickman, and Charles H. Ennis.

Mr. F. C. Roberts took the floor on a question of personal privilege and explained his position regarding the introduction of a resolution relative to the advent of machines in the Government Printing Office.

By request of Chairman Ennis, of Laws Committee, Hugh Everett was appointed to serve as secretary to the committee for this day's session of the Union.

The Union took up the report of the Laws Committee.

Sec. 2, Article IV, Constitution, which had been omitted from the printed slips, and which reads as follows:

Sec. 2. The term of office of President, Vice President, Secretary, Treasurer, Auditors, Doorkeeper, and Sergeant-at-Arms shall be one year, and of the elective Trustees three years, one to be elected each year—was adopted as read.

Sec. 3, Article IV, was adopted, after adding the Memorial Committee, which was omitted in the printed slip.

Articles V, VI, and VII were adopted as read.

Sec. 1, Article VIII, was adopted as reported by the committee. The committee amended the old law by providing for a secret ballot of nine-tenths of the members present and voting on all appropriations over $25.

The committee reporting a substitute for the old law providing for all questions affecting the scale of prices being conducted in committee of the whole, the substitute was defeated and the present law was readopted.

Article X, relating to consideration of amendments, was further amended to give publicity to members of adoption within ten days after the law has been amended.

The By-Laws were then taken up for consideration.

Article I was adopted as read.

Sec. 1, Article II, was adopted.

An amendment being made to strike out the word "three" in Sec. 2, Article II, wherever it appears and insert "two," was taken up for consideration.

The effect of the amendment would be to give two delegates to members employed by Government and two delegates to those in private employ.

In this connection Sergeant-at-Arms Bates introduced the following:

Resolved, That it is the sense of the Union that there shall be no distinction between the Down Town and the G. P. O., but that the four candidates receiving the largest vote shall be our delegates.

After further discussion, the report of the committee, which reported the present law, was adopted.

Section 3, after amendment, was adopted.

Section 4 was adopted as read.

After minor changes in sections 5, 6, and 7 they were adopted.

Sections 8 to 16 were adopted as read.

Section 16 was amended to provide for another election, in case of a tie vote, within ten days after the regular election.

Sections 17 to 21, inclusive, were adopted after making minor changes.

On motion, further consideration of the report was deferred until 3.30 p. m. next Sunday.

A. F. OF L. CONVENTION.

Twenty-fourth Annual Session at San Francisco, Cal.

Over 400 delegates, representing 2,000,000 members, were present at the opening of the A. F. of L. Convention at Lyric Hall, San Francisco, Cal., on Monday.

President Gompers delivered his annual address, which was well received. Speaking of the future he said:

The immediate future is pregnant with good or ill for the people of our country. It devolves upon the organized labor movement to determine by its course the form which it shall assume. The constant improvement in machinery, the division, subdivision, and specification of labor, the wonderful development in industry, and the concentration of wealth, give to the wealth possessors such extraordinary power, which, when coupled with the cunning and greed for gain, unless intelligently and comprehensively met by a well-organized labor movement, will tend to the deterioration of our race, the destruction of our achievements, and the dissipation of all our hopes.

On the other hand, if we are faithful to the history and traditions of the struggling masses in the past; if we shall prove true to the interests and welfare of the hosts of labor of our day, the power calculated to injure will be diverted to the common weal, and thus open up vistas of larger opportunities and a broader conception of human rights and ennobling aspirations.

President Gompers then referred to the recently organized Citizens' Alliance organization in the following words:

In many cities employers, antagonistic to labor have formed themselves into so called Citizens' Alliances, and have undertaken to propagate the policy of the destruction of organized labor, their first effort being directed to what they are pleased to term the "open shop," and to attack the union shop under the false assertion that it is a "closed shop." In my last report I had occasion to give this subject considerable attention. Since then some have pretended that the entering into an agreement of an employer with a union, by which exclusively union men are to be employed by him, is in violation of law; that it denies the right of employment to workmen who are not members of the union.

Employers have the right to make contracts for labor. This right carries with it also the same rights of the workmen. It therefore follows that if the workers have the right to sell their labor as they see fit they have also the right not to sell it to employers unless it be through the collective bargain of the union shop.

The iniquitous policy of the so-called Citizens' Alliances has had its fullest fruition in Colorado. In that State it has not only of itself had full sway, but it has been aided in the execution in its edicts by the executive with the full power of the military. Indeed, the Citizens' Alliance had but the simple declaration to make as to its wishes and what in its judgment constituted the law, to have the governor of the State order the troops to the most convenient point to execute what was accepted as a decree. Civil government has been set at naught and constitutional and natural rights and guarantees trampled under foot.

We have not, can not, and will not condone crime or unlawful conduct. We love liberty and justice; we revere the institutions, the history, and the traditions of our republic; the blush of shame surmounts our faces, and our sense of honor and dignity rises in protest against so foul a blot that recreant public officer, creature, and puppet of sordid greed should have so besmirched and defiled the proud record and honored name of a sovereign State.

At the second day's session First Vice-President Duncan read the report of the Executive Council in which the decree was made revoking the charters of the central bodies of Chicago, Indianapolis, and Washington for failure to comply with instructions of the Boston convention.

A decision was arrived at in the Executive Council recommending that the dispute between the Brewery Workers Union and Stationary Firemen be referred to an arbitration committee.

The Executive Council has ordered the central body at New Orleans to cease boycotting a union labor paper in that city or have its charter rerevoked.

The third day's session was marked with a strong fight on report of the committee on credentials on seating of John Mangan, Chicago, as delegate from Chicago Gardeners Union. Mr. Mangan has led the fight for recognition of the steam fitters in the A. F. of L., and is really at San Francisco for the purpose of getting the floor in its interests. He is a good debater, is well informed on his subject, and will make a good impression in his fight before the convention against amalgamation of the steam fitters and the plumbers. Mr. Mangan was seated by a very close vote.

Colorado in Luck.

The State of Colorado has had more than its share of turmoil and disorder during the past year, due solely to incompetency or else a total disregard of law and the citizens on the one hand and brutal greed and selfishness on the part of a portion of the residents occupying the position of employers.

Whether this counterfeit of a man occupying the office of governor is financially interested in the mines or not makes but little difference, but that he prostituted his high office for the benefit of the dollar there is no mistake.

Citizens were beaten, imprisoned in pens fit only for cattle, and many were deported, carried into the desert of an adjoining State, to die for want of food and water. That was no concern of his.

A man who wantonly sacrifices human life is unfit to associate with decent, iberty-loving citizens of any State.

Late returns from the recent election are exceedingly gratifying to the American workingman, for the mighty governor has been dethroned—defeated at the polls.

Upon the heels of the above news comes the announcement that the tin soldier who commanded the State troops during the recent reign of terror which so sorely afflicted the people of Cripple Creek and brought shame and ignominy upon the State, intends to leave the State of Colorado. A wise conclusion, for should he remain a purged and rehabilitated judiciary might find sufficient law to detain him in a variegated uniform for some years to come. In the language of the street, "get what is coming to him." From this announcement to leave the State there can be but one deduction: "The brave mighty soldier is a rank quitter."

The Recent Election.

As trades unionists we should feel highly gratified at the result in Massachusetts, where the union labor vote aided materially in the election of DOUGLAS, an employer of union labor. This may not be conceded by some close observers in the political field, but it can not be claimed that the issue made by the Democratic gubernatorial candidate for reciprocity treaty relations with Canada was wholly responsible for his election, when it is considered that one of the candidates for Congress in that State on the Republican ticket made reciprocity an issue and was defeated. So much for Massachusetts.

In Colorado PEABODY was defeated for reelection for governor because his administration has been one of strife and extravagance in aiding the mining corporations in their effort to destroy the unions in that State. The defeat of PEABODY is more in the nature of a rebuke from the fair-minded citizen who refuses to indorse measures of suppression of free speech and the sanctity of the home than an as indorsement of the attitude of the Western Federation of Miners in their struggle with the mine operators of Colorado. While the miners have transgressed the laws, and in many instances were punished for it, the measures adopted by PEABODY through military intervention were not in keeping with a free State, and the rebuke at the polls in failing to indorse the attitude of the State administration is in keeping with law and order and good citizenship.

In looking over the result of the Congressional election we have no reason for feeling satisfied. Take the list of men in Congress who have been friendly to measures that appeal to organized labor—men who have been indorsed by resolution and otherwise before election, but who failed to receive that support that was due them on election day. LIVERNASH and WYNN, of California, and HUGHES, of New Jersey, are examples.

What is there in store for any champion of the cause of labor in the halls of Congress who must take his chance on election day with an electorate thot shows indifference for past favors? Can we expect him to give his attention to measures that concern labor's interest when he fails to receive that support at the polls?

If we are to accomplish anything in the way of legislation before Congress we must have friends there, and that means that we must indorse their candidacy when they show a disposition to be fair on questions that vitally affect our interests.

LOVE IN AN AUTO.

My auto stands beside the curb,
Come spin therein with me
Where city sounds shall not disturb Reposeful reverie.

(Chug-chug!) With animating speed
Past city blocks we flash,
And hurry by the fastest steed
That feels a driver's lash.

Ah, now we've reached the limit where,
As faster still we go,
(We missed that coal cart by a hair)
Bucolic breezes blow.

And as we leave the city street
And whirl through bosky dells
I seem to hear the voices sweet
Of joyful wedding bells.

Yet there is sadness in their chime,
For you, unyielding still——
Had I not seen that rock in time
There would have been a spill.

Oh, let your heart be free from fear
And banish cold reserve;
You're frightened. Can't you trust me, dear?
(That was a nasty curve).

With love all nature is agog
And whispers of my vow;
Then why with coldness —— Drat that hog!
(Chug-chug!) I've ditched a cow.

With kindly looks dispel love's night,
Oh, brighten love's young dream;
With tender glances which—— Hold tight!
There comes a six-ox team.

(Kerzip!) By jove, it's raining hair
And horns and hoofs and hides;
Yet like the love I'd fain declare
Our auto gently glides.

My heart is breaking, and love's wraith
But mocks my hopeless mood——
Jove! there's a log-chain in our path,
Planted by yokels rude.

(Chug-chug!) Good bye, love. (Zip! Kerboom!)
* * * * * * *
Thank Heaven, you are not hurt,
And visions bright my soul illume,
Though sprawling in the dirt.

For your dear eyes the truth impart,
Your love no more I'll beg,
And you will mend my broken heart
While doctors set my leg.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

The story was told long years ago—from a Welsh source, of course—that some scientists once agreed on an experiment to determine what was the original language of the human family. Taking two newly born children, they had them brought up together under such conditions that they never heard a word spoken except their own attempts to communicate with each other. The experiment was carried out until the children were about 16 years old, when the scientists assembled, had the subjects brought before them, and listened attentively to them as they spoke to each other, which they readily did after a little time. But though they were all linguists, none of the scientists could understand the children's speech and could make nothing out of it, until the old charwoman of the building in which the experiment was made pronounced it not only Welsh, but the purest of Welsh, establishing beyond a doubt that that language was the original one of the human species—the one which would be spoken by all of us had we been taught no other. I have always been inclined to doubt the truth of that story, or at least refuse to accept the conclusions which the scientists drew from the experiment. But since I have been reading proof on linotype machine work and see how naturally the operators drop into Welsh when they get confused, I have no doubt of the correctness of the theory—in fact, there is no room left for doubt, for operators do this who I know cannot speak or read a word of Welsh.

Jakey Dwight told me this story, and from personal knowledge of the character of one of the parties I believe it fully:

A young fellow dropped into a saloon which he is in the habit of frequenting—this was on Saturday preceding the national election—and said to the proprietor:

"Goodby, Johnny; I'm off for Pittsburg."

Johnny reached up to one of the high shelves behind the bar and took down a big, long-necked, black bottle, saying:

"Goodby, Bill, and good luck to you. Take this with you to ease the wearisomeness of the journey."

"I'd like to, Johnny," said Bill, "but my bunkmate in the Pullman is a Y. M. C. A. man and he wouldn't like it."

His traveling companion was Charlie Graff.

That organized labor is beginning to look after its own interests at the polls was never better evidenced than at the recent election. In the anthracite districts of Pennsylvania the majorities for President Roosevelt were phenomenal, as a return for his intervention two years ago, during the great strike, resulting in the appointment of a commission which gave them the greater part of what they were contending for; and that the same view was held by workingmen everywhere is the only way of accounting for the President's receiving the greatest popular vote ever given. In Massachusetts the trades unionists supported for Governor William L. Douglas, the shoemaker, who from the bench had grown to be a millionaire manufacturer, carrying during all the years his union card, against Governor Bates, who had vetoed the eight-hour bill after it passed the Legislature, electing him notwithstanding that otherwise the State went overwhelmingly Republican, voting for Roosevelt and Douglas. In Colorado the trades unionists defeated Governor Peabody, whose crimes in his exalted position made civilization sick, electing a Democrat, Alva Adams, though the State was carried by Roosevelt and the rest of the Republican ticket. In Brooklyn Senator Pat McCarren, an enemy of organized labor, was placed in command during the Democratic end of the campaign, and the result was that that reliably Democratic old borough gave Roosevelt 1,500 majority, in doing which the workingmen testified their admiration for the President and their contempt and hatred for McCarren. General Birney, in a letter to the Post a year or so ago, said that the vote of organized labor could well be treated as a "negligible quantity." Can it, indeed?

A friend of mine came in to see me the other day and asked me to rip the stuffing out of a certain union barber shop which acts as agent for what he called a "scab" laundry. As none of the laundries are union laundries in the sense of employing union hands, so far as I am informed, there being no Laundry Workers' Union in this city of which I am aware, it is hard to discriminate, and though I wouldn't like to patronize one myself which is published as notoriously unfair, I don't feel like punching the heads of those who keep their faces clean in a union barber shop which is used as an agency by such a laundry. But still if I were the barber I wouldn't do that way. This is the best I can do.

Two or three weeks ago Johnny Huston and Harry McElfresh went fishing, and after several hours of patient waiting McElfresh caught a 7-pound rockfish. He had never caught a fish before and was much excited, but by the scientific assistance of Huston, who has always caught fish (Huston is my immediate boss), it was safely landed. Though they fished for several hours longer they never got another bite. The next day, at the office, McElfresh, who was naturally much elated, told of his extraordinary catch, among others to Charlie Gardner, with much circumstantiality. Gardner is an awful doubter naturally and frequently pinches himself to see if he is really living. Having greater faith in McElfresh than almost anybody else, and never having been told a fish story by Mac. before, he wanted to believe it, but was afraid to. He went to Huston.

"Did McElfresh really catch a 7-pound rockfish yesterday?" he asked.

Huston was feeling a little devilish.

"A 7-pound rockfish!" he snorted. "Did McElfresh say he caught a 7-pound rockfish?"

"Yes, he certainly did."

"Well, Mac. is a banged liar. We never got a bite all day."

Poor Gardner went away sorrowfully. All day and for several days, whenever he could get anybody to listen to him, he asked:

"What does a man want to lie that way for?"

Of course nobody could tell him, or would if he could. But finally somebody did tell him that Mac. really caught the fish and that Huston was only having fun with him. Now he has lost faith in everybody and doesn't believe there is such a thing as a 7-pound rockfish.

I am naturally an impatient man and nothing annoys me so much as to have to wait for anything. Perhaps if I contain myself my good friend McPike will respond to my piteous appeals and set the figures to verse, as he so charmingly did the letters. I will try to wait, but in the meantime submit one more sample, not of what is needed, but as a rough plan:

A figure of very great weight
The boys love to make when they skate—
It makes the small "swell,"
Though not very well,
The greatest "I'm it" imitate.

I have no doubt that my importunities bore Mr. McPike, but he owes something to Literature and must put aside his own comfort where the welfare of the whole race is concerned.

I am told that the committee having in charge the memorial service of Columbia Union are mapping out interesting and impressive exercises for Sunday, December 4, the date which has been set. Philip S. Steele, as the chairman, is working hard to that end, and he is a man whose good taste and ability are guaranties of success. Wiley H. Davis, whose singing at the service a year ago is well remembered, is looking after the vocal end, with able assistants in the musical line in S. J. Gompers, E. S. ("Pucky") Wild, and Prof. Henry W. Weber. The number of our dead is too great to permit of individual eulogies, in all probability, but it will be none the less a ceremony of sad remembrance. If it is not already the intention, I suggest the propriety of sending special invitations to the families of all the deceased.

The funeral of the late Mr. Frederick M. Detweiler, the latest surviving partner of the original firm of Judd & Detweiler, Mr. John G. Judd having died some eight years ago, took place last Saturday, William N. Brockwell attending as the representative of Columbia Union. Mr. Detweiler was a resident of this city for over fifty years, coming here from Philadelphia owing to a strike in that city, and worked here for many years as a journeyman before becoming a proprietor. His reminiscences of printers and printing were most interesting, and I had the pleasure of an interview with him a couple of years ago, in which he gave much of the history of the early days of the Government Printing Office. He was a fine old gentleman and well beloved by the employes who had worked so long for the firm.

"Jno. W. Armstrong, representing Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, No. 3, New York City," is the way his card reads, but when he flourished in this city twenty-five or more years ago, he was known as "Citizen Armstrong." Mr. Armstrong paid a visit to the big printing office and his old friends on Tuesday, giving evidence that time has dealt gently with him. For nearly ten years he has been the agent of the Electrical Workers, and any man who remains that long in one employ must give satisfaction. He was always active in trade union matters and is a hard and faithful worker in the cause. He left for Pittsburg on Tuesday evening.

BOTH One Year $1.00

FARM AND FIRESIDE is issued twice a month, twenty-four numbers a year, and has from 20 to 30 large pages each issue; it is profusely illustrated with half-tones. It is the best farm and home journal in America. Thousands of dollars are expended annually for expert advice for the farmer, dairyman, stockraiser, poultryman, fruit-grower and gardener. It has departments for the good housewife, fashion pages, pattern pages, good stories, puzzles; it furnishes a lawyer and a doctor, wit and humor columns, and a young people's department.

OUR PROPOSITION

Every new cash subscriber to THE TRADES UNIONIST will be given a subscription to FARM AND FIRESIDE one year FREE.

Every old yearly subscriber who pays his subscription to THE TRADES UNIONIST to January 1, 1905, will be given a year's subscription to this valuable farm paper.

Accept this offer to-day, before you neglect it.

This is an opportunity to secure FARM AND FIRESIDE one year FREE by merely paying your subscription in advance. If you are already paid ahead, send $1.00 and your time will be advanced another year.

If you do not want FARM AND FIRESIDE for yourself we will send it to any other address you may desire.

Address THE TRADES UNIONIST
441 G Street N. W., Washington, D. C.

N. B.—By the terms of our contract with the publishers we can only make this offer until December 31, 1904, so subscribe before that date.

GOSSIP FROM THE G. P. O.

First Division.

Geo. H. Ball, of ring alley, has had an extension of leave.

4-10-40. Oscar Nelson is on the sick list. A bright, genial companion.

A number were absent on Tuesday, looking for the Times' black arrow.

Our heartfelt sympathy goes out to our fellow-compositor, Abner C. Proctor.

How many minutes does it take you to walk down and out? 2—and avoid the crush.

Sunday's first snow storm occasioned many of the comps. to report for duty on Monday.

In another week we will all be back in office and counting the days until Thanksgiving.

V. V. V. has returned greatly improved in all respects. We refer to Mr. Voler V. Viles. Glad hand.

Yes he did. Our "Parson" Robinson visited his Illinois home and voted at the late Presidential election.

On Tuesday morning Lentz and Howell, of Ohio, Ferrier, of Indiana, Nelson, of New York, and Van de Bogert returned.

"Off again, on again." Quit work at half-past four and resume at sixty minutes after four. Time enough for a quick lunch and a smoke.

One more farmer—Jno. D. Mets, has been transferred to Agriculture Division. A fine genial companion and good printer. Sorry to lose him.

The friends of Harry E. Faust, formerly of this division, will be glad to know that he has improved very much. Present address, DuBois, Pa.

To listen to those funny reports that Bentz brings from the Indian town up in Pennsylvania about our venerable time-keeper would make the Indian in front of a cigar store envious. Brethren be charitable to each other.

Among the more recent returners were H. S. Gunn, E. P. Bennett (not the disbursing officer,) B. L. Fowler and Jimmy Weaver, the last named more robust than ever and as pleasant and cheerful as you can imagine.

We understand that James D. Bridger, M. D., medical referee for the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, and located at Memphis, Tenn., is prospering. "Dick" has hosts of friends who will be pleased to hear this.

Do you belong to either of the relief associations in the G. P. O.? Any good reason why you don't? The outlay is so infinitesimally small compared to the benefits derived that we wonder why any man in comparatively good health should not be a member.

A. W. Bowen, foreman, returned on Wednesday. Everybody was delighted and many were the pleasant expressions on every side. The fifteen days' outing must have done Mr. Bowen a wonderful lot of good, judging from his appearance. And now for a busy season of several months.

The quartette from alley 11 that were doing "stunts" up at State Division during 'lection week, returned Monday. No place like the the old First, eh, boys? O, I tell you, not a day passes that we do not hear the remark: "I wish I belonged in the First." Why don't you "knockers" give us favorable consideration.

Say, brother, do you ever forget to pay the "lunch lady?" Why not pay your little bill, make it easy for her and don't compel her to chase after you at the risk of losing her poorly paid job. Of all the mean, despicable creatures, the "lunch fiend" is at the foot of the class, and if known, should not only be despised but lose his job.

What's your guess on reorganization of the "greatest force on earth"—night? Wish it was made up and off. For the last 60 days the "know-all's" have been guessing the date and they have been landing that particular date precisely as accurate as they "play the horses." You know how many runners win the day before—not the day of.

Second Division.

Mr. D. P. Sullivan is a lately appointed temporary in this room.

Arthur Jacobs and David Eccles returned Monday from a detail to one of the branches.

Foreman Shanks returned from a visit to his Kentucky home, in Richmond, last Thursday.

On last Friday morning a bouncing boy arrived at the home of Mr. Frank Bates much to the father's delight.

Mr. Heslet's penetrating voice was heard again Monday, he having returned from a flying trip to Nebraska.

Wm. G. O'Connell and Titus Ellis returned to work Monday after exercising their franchise and taking in the World's Fair.

Remember that betting at the race track is 90 per cent against you. You only get an even break on 10 cents out of every dollar.

There is one store in town that is thoroughly union, anyhow—clerks, goods, and all. That is Governor Douglas' shoe store on the avenue.

The "Ideal Home" is a sermon which every one should hear. If you have no home now you may have one some day, or perhaps you see some homes which would be ideal if they knew how. Hear Rev. E. B. Bagby, Ninth and D northeast, next Sunday night.

D. J. KAUFMAN, 1005-7 Pa. Ave.

A certain compositor, this room, says one of the ring men set a take with turned d's Monday because the p's were short. He was lucky to get away with it.

I respectfully suggest that the national president of the National Union use his influence to have the union label on the National Union printing—receipts, etc.

What a boon to compositors it would be if the proof room would adopt a few simple rules on punctuation, so that the "whims" of readers of opposite views could be "rung," or "ringed."

A postal to a friend from Harry E. Faust, dated DuBois, Pa., Nov. 7, says he is getting along very well, and no kick coming except the length of time between pay days. He sends regards to all the boys.

How magnanimous 'twould be for the newspaper chapels to stand back this next year and let some job man represent the down town printers as delegate. Those patient long suffering men certainly deserve recognition occasionally.

C. W. Irey, of the Doc. Proof Room, returned Monday from a visit to his home in Kansas City and to the World's Fair. He says they charge for everything but air at the Fair. Only a few swallows of water cost a penny. A silver half dollar only will admit you. No change is made.

Specification Notes.

Spess worked sixteen hours overtime lately. It is a strenuous life, this Spess life.

This division gave $17.75 to the widow of the late Mr. Sprague. For charity the Spess, is hard to beat.

Wm. J. C. O'Brien, of this division, is spending a few days of his leave at his old home, "Lost Creek," a suburb of Pottsville, Pa.

Former employes of Judd & Detweiler, but now working in this division, sent a floral tribute upon the death of Mr. Detweiler last week.

All of the voters are back now and "the paper" will come out on time, which will do away with the overtime work necessary of late.

Proofreader Hering was called to Philadelphia the other day very suddenly by the dangerous illness of his mother. She has since gotten better and Mr. Hering has returned. His is nearly eighty years old.

Samuel Gompers brought back as a souvenir from New York a complimentary pass for the subway which gave he and two friends a free ride before it was opened to the public. It is said that Sam got the "subway eye" while there. A great many Washingtonians have had the "Black-arrow eye" lately.

Old timers of this division will remember Roy Meek, who gave up his work here about three years ago to run a corner grocery on the hill. A year or so later he moved back to his home State—Arkansas, and has engaged in the manufacture of brick, he owning a half interest in a brick-making machine. The writer saw he and his wife at the Exposition in September and he said he was doing better brick-making than printing. His old friends here will be glad to know of his deserved success.

We learned last week of how a Washington inventor was fleeced by a Philadelphia patent attorney. This Washington man invented two processes of some sort—I have forgotten now—and he applied to this Philadelphia lawyer to have the same patented. The case was taken up by the lawyer and he divided up the two processes until he made seventeen patents out of them. All were granted. By means of the proper writing of the specifications the matter in these patents might have been claimed in at least two patents. It's all in being able to juggle language.

The Nonpariel Mining and Developing Co. are pleased to announce that a railroad survey has been made by Rockafeller across their claims and down the Salmon River west to Takoma, Wash. Idaho papers say the road is sure of construction. This will help the Printer group, should it be built. Nearly 4,000 pounds of provisions have lately been taken in for the winter's development work. Things are moving lively wtth the company now. They report the opening up of a large quantity of $22 ore in the long tunnel. It is probable that the stock may be taken from the market soon, as some big deals are pending now.

RICHARD W. BURKHART.

Official Gazette.

Luke J. Bennett has been seriously ill for some time, and his friends hope to see him back to work soon. He is at present at Wytheville, Va., and at last report his condition was slightly improved over what it had been.

Not much doing in the way of gossip in the Gazette division these days. Everybody seems to have a mind fixed mainly to the machine. Mr. Smith, the instructor, is very much pleased with the progress made by the keyboard operators.

The Lime Kiln Club has secured a dining table which is several square feet larger than the old one, and they do not "pi" each other's lunch with elbows as frequently as of yore. As a consequence they are not so ill-natured and cross-grained as they used to be when in session.

A great improvement has been made by partitioning off the casters from the rest of the room, and two large fans have been placed in the windows of the caster room. The commedians of the Spess division used to jar on our sensibilities by asking how things were coming along in the "burnt district."

Harry O'Donnell is usually level-headed, but he became confused a short time back. The stork visited his house in November and he felt called upon to notify various relatives in distant States. He dated all of his letters October instead of November. And now the aforesaid relatives want to know why the "mean thing waited 'till baby was a month old before notifying them."

Scott Young directed my attention to a window pane in this division that it might be well to preserve as a relic when the old building is demolished. The following names were scratched upon it: Danenhower, Naylor, Rempp, Talbot, Luff, Mohun, Edelin, Doyle, Rice, Flagge, Baker, Axe, Moulden, Scaggs, Randolph, McLeod, Parks, Bailey, Lackey, and Shomo. These names were placed there as far back as 1876, at least, and most of the men were apprentice boys at the time. Mr. W. W. Maloney became reminiscent when the matter was referred to him, and he informed me that he was an apprentice under Mr. Wendell when the office was turned over to the Government, and that it did not seem such a long time ago.

H. J. REDFIELD.

Bindery Notes.

W. C. Connor has taken up his music for the winter and is boosting the clever compositions of Harry Von Tilzer.

The Minnesota boys had hardly time to light when they were moved to pastures new and there are several sad hearts in consequence.

The army of Benedicts that have descended upon us since election day is really bewildering. Among others may be mentioned Johnny McLane, Andy Bergeson, Bill Holt and Pete Polk.

Bill Brady is lonesome these days. His friend McEnaney is laid up sick, while Bill Holt has married. It is rumored that Bill will, in self-defense, have to give up single blessedness himself.

Major Fredericks is congratulating himself upon the increased majority in Philadelphia. Recently one of the Cowboys who was going on his leave wished to remember the Major and had a nicely wrapped bottle presented to the latter. When he arrived at home he opened it and was greatly disappointed to find it contained only aqua pura.

A committee of the officers of the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders met in Washington during the week. Among them were President Glockling, Secretary Dougherty, Treasurer Espey and Jas. L. Fitzgerald, Wm. H. Kelly and Jacob G. Hales members of the Executive Council. Secretary Dougherty will issue the International Bookbinder in the future.

"PIKES" BY McPIKE.

I am far from knowing awl the is*shoes* that entered into the late gubernatorial contest in Massachusetts, but I am shoer that Douglas, the shoe man, waxed hot in the upper tier, pegged away at his opponent, wetting him right and left, and that, too, for the sole purpose of keeping him at the "heel of the hunt," while he himself hastened on to the goal of victory, meanwhile keeping instep with the music of leather tongues and toes—song and dance—of innumerable bluchers, gaiters, and slippers. The governor-elect is evidently neither a calf nor a kid, but if he is not the possessor of an alligator hide, I confess my inability to classify him correctly.

BLOOMER'S IN BLOOM—M'PIKE IS IN GLOOM.

The charm has been broken—
We're sorry to know it—
Br'er Bloomer has spoken—
McPike is no poet.

Sad, indeed, is Mac's plight
At this very minute,
Now that Bloomer's limelight
Has shown he's not in it.

Still he's glad to relate—
He does it with pleasure—
That Br'er Bloomer is great
On rhythmial measure.

He can put one and naught
In figurative riddle,
And, with poetic thought,
Can rhyme to the middle.

He writes prose, many yards,
And fills up the papers,
He makes many old pards
Cut mighty queer capers.

But all prose to the past,
He's mounted Pegasus,
And henceforth will be cast
Rare rhymes to the masses.

And, in due course of time,
Every knight of the road
Will be tagged with a rhyme,
Or dished up in an ode.

For surely Br'er Bloomer,
On his favorite theme,
Will embalm ev'ry rumor
In a poetic dream;

Provided that rumor
Has to do with a chum
Who's traveled with Bloomer,
Whether gleesome or glum.

Its Charter Revoked.

The Central Labor Union, by its action on Monday night, in postponing action on the request of the American Federation of Labor to expel the Steam Fitters for failing to affiliate with the United Association of Plumbers, leaves it without a charter.

As it is understood the Steam Fitters will withdraw their delegates after the convention of the American Federation of Labor completes its work if their application for admission to the American Federation of Labor is again refused, there is no doubt but that the question will adjust itself without further trouble.

It is a singular fact, however, that the organizations interested in seeing the Steam Fitters expelled from the Central Labor Union are working strenuously to organize a Structural Alliance organization in this city, which is expected eventually will clash with the American Federation of Labor, as the new organization is to be conducted on industrialist lines, a feature as yet in an indeterminate stage in the American Federation of Labor.

BOOMER-ANG.

Years ago a lion's skin
Had a jackass hid within;
Up and down the streets he ran
Frightening both beast and man.

To encounter him none dared,
For he had them all well scared;
'Till at last he tried to roar,
Then he frightened them no more.

Like the ass, in this regard,
So are you, my old friend, Pard;
You should stick to witticism,
Never venturing criticism.

Fairly good at writing prose,
(Telling jokes that each one knows;)
Don't essay at any time
Criticising others rhyme.

Had the jackass been content
To keep quiet as he went,
Kept his lips from braying closed,
Lion still he might have posed.

As to prose—a good repeater,
You are ignorant of meter;
You will find out to your cost
You have now your prestige lost.

NAVY-YARD ITEMS.

Henry B. Turner, 25 years of age, was killed in the yard one day last week. He was driving a two-horse sand wagon, which, passing over an obstruction, jostled him off his seat, falling directly under the wheels crushing him to death.

Mr. Frank M. Weller, the official photographer, representing the Niles-Bement Pond Co., of New York, machine builders, has spent several days in the Yard taking views of guns, gun carriages, and other scenes, for the new catalogue now in preparation, which will show the large machines which the Government has purchased from this firm, in operation. No doubt this catalogue will be interesting to all lovers of machinery, as the proofs show perfect pictures.

WAGE COMMITTEE.

Last week the wage committee representing the employes of the Yard held a conference with Secretary of the Navy Morton relative to an increase of wages, owing to the great increase in cost of living.

Since last July, when the wage board recommended to the Department that no increase be granted, there has been a contention on the part of the wage committee that justice had not been meted out to the employes.

Secretary Morton and Assistant Secretary Darling both accepted the report of the wage board.

From their decision the wage committee appealed to President Roosevelt, who, after hearing the committee, saw the equity of their appeal, but owing to the changing of Secretary Moody nothing was done.

As soon as Mr. Morton became Secretary the case was reopened and the President referred the matter to him for action. He has given his decision, and supports the wage board in their recommendation.

The matter will now rest until December, when the board of naval officers will convene to establish the rate of pay for the first six months in the next year. The greatest trouble the wage committee anticipates is that the wage board will not accept as data the schedule of wages paid in this city by other Government departments and private firms, but will take their data from Baltimore and Philadelphia, where the cost of living is fully 25 per cent cheaper than in this city.

Strong efforts will be made to influence the President to insist that home data be accepted in lieu of cities so far from this zone. Failing in this, every effort will be exerted by Columbia Lodge to push to its passage the bill now pending in Congress to amend the present law and establish a rate placing the mechanics in the Yard on equality with the other Government departments.

It is to be hoped that the new board, however, will see the justice of the committee's claim and recommend an increase in wage in proportion to the increase of living.

No comparison can be drawn between the work done by Uncle Sam's gun builders and that done by outside corporations. By the simple mistake of the one-thousandth part of an inch the whole mechanism of a gun may be changed, whereas in outside shops, particularly in engine construction, no attention is paid to such measurements. There it is quantity and not quality; here it is both.

It has taken the Government many years to collect such an experienced set of men as are now employed in the Yard, and that they are discriminated against by regulating their pay by that paid by employers in such cities as Baltimore and Philadelphia is unfair.

It is an established fact that can not be contradicted, when men from other cities, rated first class mechanics in their locality, are called to the gun building shops their knowledge is so different that it requires a long time before they become perfect in gun manufacture. This is a great loss to the Government.

Would it not be better, in justice to the men who have given years of study to perfect themselves in the art of gun manufacture the benefits of all doubt and pay them such wage as is commensurate with their ability? The men would then be contented and the Government the gainer.

The wage committee will present such an argument in their next appeal to the board and it is to be hoped that it will not be made in vain.

THE GUN BUILDER.

Our Navy has many gallant tars,
Admiral Dewey and Admiral Schley,
Who spiked the guns on the Spanish ships
In the battle just gone by.

Congress has voted them all its thanks,
On the pages of time it will ever remain;
Their records as emblems of Yankee grit
In defense of the gallant "Old Maine."

These grand old heroes won their fight,
While shot and shell were fiercely flying,
Let us pause a moment hear poor Phillip's words:
"Don't hurrah, boys; the poor devils are dying."

So while we give credit to the boys on the sea
For victories noble and grand,
Let us not forget our sailor boys
Whose duties are on the land.

Let us praise the men who designed the guns
That sank the Spanish fleet;
For talent and brain and mechanical skill
Is there no reward; shall we not greet

Them also as heroes, just the same as those
Who handled the guns with a will;
Due credit is due them, though modest their claim—
Captain Pendleton and Admiral O'Niel.

Many others have I in my mind
As thought upon thought my fancy runs,
It is the boys who wear the overalls
Who build such terrible guns.

Heroes they are just the same as the sailors,
They earn their bread by mechanical skill;
Justice they ask, with no special favors
Just an increase of pay, they will work with a will.

We will build such guns that will compel
All nations to respect "Old Glory";
We will work night and day, with a will and a way
To build guns to knock old "Spanish Mori."

So treat well the boys in overalls,
Though horny and hard be their hands;
Their brain and brawn should meet some reward
As we bore the tubes and shrink on the bands—

That build up this edifice destructive, but grand,
That wins our battle, on sea and on land;
That makes heroes of sailor and admiral too,
'Tis the brain of the mechanic skilful and true.

So an increase we ask; Uncle Sam he is able
To divide with the boys so faithful and true,
Is it not justice for the years we have labored?
We think so, Mr. Secretary, how is it with you?

Then we will all unite in saying:

May our pleasures be yours as we meet on the level,
May we act by the plumb and part on the square;
May the blessings of Heaven ever attend you
Is Columbia's best wishes, and the gun builder's prayer.

ELECTION AFTERMATH.

The boys are returning, some jubilant, others disheartened, but all primed as to the cause—how and why it happened.

One thing is plain to me: That the wage-earner, the man with the hammer, and the man with the hoe, were responsible for Parker's defeat. Organized labor throughout the country flocked to the standard of the President, notably the "American Sons of Labor," the largest and most powerful political labor organization in this country, with its immense vote of more than one-half of a million membership.

The President owes much to organized labor, and it should be one of his aims in the next four years to see that the efforts exerted in his behalf are reciprocated. Never in my recollection of the affairs in the Navy Yard has there been such an unanimous expression of good will toward any President as that expressed by the union men of the Yard for President Roosevelt. He has won their respect by the plain, unassuming democratic manner in which he has received the several committees representing the wishes of the men in the Yard.

Columbia Lodge has no politics within her borders, and yet she has spoken in no unmistakable terms. The verdict is given. We look forward for good results in many things which will necessarily come before the President relative to increase of wages and other matters that will benefit the gun builders and other branches of industry in the Yard.

TIM TICKLE.

Textile Workers' Strike.

The cotton mill operators at Fall River, Mass., attempted to start the mills in that city, which have been practically closed for three months on account of a posted reduction in wages.

The result was practically a failure, as but a small percentage reported for work. The representatives of the Textile Workers Union are jubilant, as it shows conclusively that the men are out to stay until the reduction asked for is withdrawn.

What is to be commended equally with the firmness displayed by the workers not to return under present conditions is the fact that the best of order prevailed on the occasion of the opening of the mills, no interference being shown to any operators desiring to return to work.

The manufacturers claim the reduction notices will not be taken down and the workers declare they will not accept a reduction, and it is a stubborn contest, with the odds in favor of the textile workers.

United States Leads in Petroleum.

United States Geological Survey statistics place the worlds production of petroleum in 1902 at 185,151,089 barrels. Of this the United States and Russia produced 91.44 per cent.

For years Russia has led in point of production, but an increase of 19,377,722 barrels in the United States in 1902 and a decrease of 4,628,515,515 barrels in Russia put the United States at the head of the list.

More than double the quantity of the higher grades of refined products is obtained from the average crude petroleum produced in the United States than from Russian oil. The United States produced nearly 2.6 barrels of refined products in 1902 for every barrel produced by the rest of the world.

An exchange says that "e" is the most unfortunate letter in the English alphabet, because it is never in cash and always in debt, and is never out of danger, and the Danville Labor Herald adds: "Our exchange forgets that the aforesaid letter is never in war, but always in peace. It is the beginning of existence, the commencement of ease, and the end of trouble. Without it there would be no meat, no life, no gospel, no Jesus, no heaven, no earth, and no delinquent members."

The 8th of November will long be remembered. To be sure there were days of unbelief, of doubt, and great anxiety leading up to it as at the flood in Noah's time, when came ominous signs of a deluge, which finally proved a great surprise and especially to those who had argued themselves into believing that the flood mentioned was to be no more than an April shower. These were they who laughed and made fun of Noah when he set to work building his ark and laid in a supply of things necessary for the rainy season. Noah believed the storm was coming, had the good sense to prepare for it, and he and his sons were saved, although for many days and nights they were obliged to remain indoors and temporarily suffered inconveniences which kept up till the waters subsided. Some people claim to see a comparison with the first flood and that of November 8, and see in Mr. Bryan the figure of Noah, with Hearst, Watson, and Debs representing the sons—Shem, Ham, and Japheth as survivors, while Hill, Cleveland, Parker et al. are classed with those who laughed and defied the storm and were swallowed by the flood. Just where this modern ark will finally rest is a matter for conjecture. Noah of Nebraska wants it, and Shem, Ham, and Japheth each are claiming it.

Steam Fitters Expelled By Resolution, With Profound Regret.

VIOLATION OF EIGHT-HOUR LAW

Grievance Committee Reports on Case of M. F. Dorsey—Organization Committee Reports on Delinquent Unions—Several Unions Dropped For Delinquency—Resolution Expelling Steam Fitters.

The regular weekly meeting of the Central Labor Union was called to order at 8.15 p. m. on Monday, President Dickman in the chair.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

The Grievance Committee reported that all attempts having failed in settling the differences between Bartenders League and M. F. Dorsey, 1213 Seventh street northwest, they recommended that he be placed on the unfair list. The report of the committee was concurred in.

CREDENTIALS.

Sheet Metal Workers, No. 102: Chas. Nairn, vice R. G. M. Ross.

Retail Clerks Union, No. 262: T. P. Carroll, vice Sanger.

Interior Marble and Slate Cutters, No. 5: Wm. Swannick, F. Brooks, D. McGuire.

Bills amounting to $4.75 were read and ordered paid.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Amalgamated Society of Carpenters, Branch No. 2, stating that they appointed a committee to represent them in the conference called for purpose of reorganizing the Building Trades Section.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

The Organization Committee made its report on delinquent unions and recommended that the following unions be dropped: Cab and Carriage Drivers Union, No. 468; Coal and Ice Wagon Drivers; Meat Luggers, and Telephone Operators. The report of the committee was adopted and the recommendation concurred in.

On motion, the organizers were directed to endeavor to reorganize the Telephone Operators.

The Legislative Committee reported on the violation of the eight-hour law, and stated that they had secured evidence in the case, and, on motion, the committee was instructed to institute proceedings against violators of the law.

Attention was called to the meeting of the Building Trades, to be held on Tuesday evening, November 22, for the purpose of a reorganization the building trades connected with the Central Labor Union.

A motion was made and carried to reconsider the action of a previous meeting relative to a communication from Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, as to the status of the Central Labor Union.

The following resolution was then offered, which was adopted:

Resolved, That in accordance with instructions received from the American Federation of Labor that we expel the Steam Fitters organization from this central body, with profound regret, in order to maintain the trade union movement of the District, and keep it intact.

Death of Howard W. Morrison.

Howard W. Morrison, an employe of the Law Reporter Printing Co., and a member of Columbia Typographical Union, was found dead on Sunday morning at his home, Laurel, Md.

Mr. Morrison had returned to his home at a late hour on Saturday night and was evidently seriously ill, his death occuring from heart failure.

The funeral took place from his late residence at 10.30 a. m. on Tuesday.

Stag Party Postponed.

Encaustic Tile Layers' Union, No. 2, have postponed the stag party that was to be held Friday, November 25, at Typographical Temple. The date has been changed to Friday, December 16. This party is to be held to aid members of Tile Layers' Union in New York City, who have been out on strike for some time.

How to Be Thankful.

WILLIAM TIPTON TALBOTT

Be thankful if a day well spent
Even in lowliest work
Has taught how best to meet the cares
That in life's pathway lurk.

Be thankful for the friendship tried
You think no storm can shake;
Be thankful for the enemies
That you have failed to make.

Be thankful if, as years go by,
With higher aims you live,
And in stern duty's service find
That you have thanks to give.

Be thankful if your heart still feels
Some thrill of youthful joy;
If manhood has not left behind
The simple-minded boy.

Be thankful for the kindly deeds
That give you pleasure still—
For kindly thoughts that in your breast
No frost of time can kill.

If with such thankfulness as this
Your soul you can't uplift,
And only feel the overfed,
Cold thankfulness of thrift--

Why, then, be thankful you have time
To profit by this verse;
In short, give thanks you're not so bad
That you can not be worse.

Subscriber: "Why didn't you put in that item about Pete Polk's escape from his father-in-law?"

Correspondent: "I sent it in, but the editor, evidently feared it would offend and blue-penciled it."

Subscriber: "Oh, pshaw, I believe that editor would cut out a reference to a naked eye."

Smith Fuel.

A new fuel has been invented by Jacob Smith, a glass worker, and it has passed a satisfactory test. Speaking of this article, a writer in the Philadelphia Record says: "It is said to possess more heat units per pound than either coal or wood; it can be manufactured and sold at a profit for half the cost of coal and it does not smoke except when a strong draft is used. Its success as a fuel for domestic uses was determined several weeks ago, when not until this week it was used beneath an engine boiler was its value for manufacturing demonstrated. The fuel is made largely from the refuse of the pulp mills, of which there are a number about Muncie. Each mill turns out thousands of refuse annually. The refuse, a combination of soda and lime, is mixed with crude oil, and the finished product resembles putty. It may be cut with a spade and thrown into a furnace or beneath a boiler. No kindling is necessary, for a match touched to it will light readily, the material burning with an intense heat. There are no clinkers, and the ashes remaining after the fire has burned down may be made into a new compound, for which Mr. Smith has another use. A bushel basketful of the fuel beneath a 16-horse power engine, at a local factory, kept steam up for eight hours. It is manufactured as a plasterer makes his mortar. The government patent office has called it the 'Smith fuel.'"

A Good Record.

A wonderful record for promptitude and attendance is that of J. C. Lotz, who works in the revenue department of the government. Speaking of Mr. Lotz's fine record the Kansas City Journal says: "Forty-two years of service without ever having been late to his work is the record of J. C. Lotz, the oldest employe of the internal revenue department at Washington. Although over 80 years of age, Mr. Lotz is at his desk every morning promptly at 9 o'clock and the years he has spent in the work make him one of the most valuable employes in the Bureau. He has been continuously in the accounting department and during the years he has served has seen more than $7,000,000,000 pass through the office. He has the exact figures, which he has kept for many years."

COLUMBIA UNION MEETING

Memorial Day Exercises Will Be Held on Sunday, December 4.

CONSIDERATION OF NEW LAWS

Upholsterers Ask Consideration of Woodward & Lothrop Case—Secret Committee Discharged—Textile Workers' Committee Given an Audience—Proposed Assessment For Cummings Memorial.

The regular monthly meeting of Columbia Typographical Union was called to order at 2:30 p. m. on Sunday, President Berg in the chair.

The minutes of the last regular and adjourned meeting were read and approved.

The traveling cards received since last meeting were read and accepted.

The Committee on Nominations, having favorably considered the applications of Thomas Fealy for full membership and Curtis C. DeNeane for apprentice membership, they were duly elected and obligated.

The committee asked for further time in case of Percy C. Howell and William S. Macdonald, which was granted.

Bills aggregating $80.05 for printing aud supplies were ordered paid.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Upholsterers' Union, No, 58, asking indorsement of action of Central Labor Union in placing Woodward & Lothrop on the unfair list. Referred to Grievance Committee, to report at next meeting.

From Central Labor Union, presenting report of Executive Committee on reorganization of Building Trades Section. Placed on file.

From Frank K. Raymond, thanking the Union for its indorsement of his candidacy for chairman of the Inaugural Committee. Placed on file.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. Stelle, from Relief Committee, reported a small balance on hand, and, on motion, $100 was appropriated for use of the committee.

An inquiry was made as to the Secret Committee, and a motion being made to request the committee to report at next regular meeting, was lost. A motion to discharge the committee was adopted.

Mr. Steele, from Memorial Day Committee, reported that the Memorial Day Committee had perfected arrangements for ceremony on Sunday, December 4.

Mr. Dickman, from Central Labor Union, reported that the reports in the public press concerning the Central Labor Union was not in accordance with facts, and that the charter of the organization has never been in jeopardy.

OFFICERS' REPORTS.

The president reported three deaths since last meeting, and announced the local Committee on Label and Text-Books as follows: J. Monroe Kreiter, chairman; J. H. Broderick, and H. W. Templar.

The secretary reported the transfer of C. O. LaHatte, C. W. Seaman, and Frank D. King from active to passive roll, and J. H. Whalen from apprentice to full membership.

TEXTILE WORKERS.

Mr. Roberts stated that a committee from Textile Workers, of Fall River, Mass., who have been on strike since last July against reduction in wages, were in waiting outside, and moved that five minutes be allowed the committee to address the Union. Carried.

The committee representing the Textile Workers, Messrs. Rignol and Richardson, were introduced and addressed the Union, asking aid for the strikers.

A motion being made to levy an assessment for that purpose, a point of order was made and sustained that it required notice to membership.

On motion the chair was directed to appoint a committee of twenty-five members to take up a subscription for the Textile Workers, the committee to report to the secretary within next two weeks.

CUMMINGS MEMORIAL.

Mr. Kidd gave notice that at the next meeting he would move an assessment of 50 cents on each member to further assist in the erection of the proposed Cummings memorial at the Union Printers' Home, and asked that said notice be printed in the call.

REVISION OF LAWS.

The Union then took up further consideration of Committee on Codification and Revision of the Laws.

Sec. 1, Article III, By-Laws, was adopted as read.

An attempt to amend Sec. 2, Article III, was defeated, and the section adopted as reported.

Secs. 3, 4, and 5 were adopted as read.

Article IV was adopted as read.

Article V, Secs. 1, and 2, were adopted as read.

Article VI, Sec. 3, paragraphs 1 and 2, were adopted as read.

After a minor change in paragraph 3, Section 3, Article VI, it was adopted.

An amendment to paragraph 4 was submitted, but on a point of order being raised that the section was in conformity with I. T. U. law the amendment was ruled out and the section adopted as reported.

A motion to strike out the whole paragraph was defeated.

The Union adjourned to meet Sunday, December 11, for the further consideration of the report.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

I note in your issue of November 10 Mr. Hall's comparison of two sections in the Washington and Denver scale of prices, which he claims prevents a superior workman from getting above the scale. Many men in the Washington news offices get above the scale, and that section was inserted at the time the last scale was adopted to prevent the constant bickerings arising from the transfer of employes from one department to the other where certain men got over the scale. The office claimed that where an inferior man was put in the place of one it considered superior and to whom it was paying above the scale, it should not be compelled to pay the inferior man anything but the scale. The union, in line with the expression of its I. T. U. officers, wisely decided that a flat scale was just, and all that any union man was entitled to ask it to enforce. If he were a man of superior ability the office could recognize that fact if it chose, and pay him more money, and if it did not do so he had the privilege to go where that ability would be recognized, if he did not consider the pay commensurate with it. There is not a line in the Washington scale that can be construed so as to prevent a foreman from recognizing superior ability if he desires to do so. The Washington scale was made on the basis of "equal rights to all, and special privileges to none," and that is all any union man has the right to expect. As an individual he has a right under that scale to get as much more as his ability can command, but that is for the foreman to measure, and not the union. In New York the writer worked in a proofroom where the wages were $29 a week, but as a sub he only received $27. On appeal to the foreman he was told he was only entitled to the scale, and that subs on machines where regulars got $30 a week were also entitled to only $27; that the office reserved the right to pay only the scale to subs, notwithstanding it paid some of the regulars above. And this position was sustained by the officers of the union, and that is practically what the section referred to does. My friend Hall is unhappy in citing the Denver scale as against the one in Washington. We have a flat scale of $23 and $26 for 7 hours and 40 minutes, as against the same scale in Washington for 7 hours. We think it's a pretty good scale, but hardly the equal of Washington. It is true nearly all men get $25 for day work and $30 for night work, and it is also true that there are fewer "minimum" workers in Denver than in any city in the country. A machine operator who sets about 50,000 or above gets the extra money, and if he does not do it he will soon find he is not wanted. The standard of competency fixed by the union is, I think, 38,000, but there are none of these operators working on machines in Denver. The office gets for its bonus lines cast at less than 5 cents a thousand. If the 50,000 man puts on a sub who sets 38,000 the sub will get only the scale and will probably get fired. If a man is put on in the proofroom or the ad room he gets only the scale, notwithstanding the man he is working for gets more—that is, if the office does not choose to recognize the superiority he may claim for himself. While paying an advance to 90 per cent of the news men the publishers flatly refused to consider a raise to the current wages, reserving the right to at any time reduce to $26 and $23, with the consequence that the tension of the workers on the machines is kept up to race horse speed to earn what in Washington is given for an average week's work. The bonus is the sword of Damocles held over the heads of the machine operators. I believe if it had never been given we would be getting the same wages now paid the swifts for a fair day's work. It has been a bar to an increase in the scale and will be so long as it is in vogue. The union does not recognize the payment of this bonus in its scale of prices and distinctly says no man shall set a stipulated amount for extra money, but just the same, if you don't set a long string you don't get the extra money, and if you can only set what the standard of competency calls for, you "needn't come around." For the 38,000 the office pays a fair wage; for the balance it pays about 5 cents a thousand. That is probably why employers do not favor a flat scale, but prefer, by the payment of a few dollars, to cut out the minimum worker altogether. Like brother Hall, the writer has "counted a few ties" in this country, and in every scale of prices one can pick to him what may seem flaws. But taken as a whole the Washington news scale stands out as the best one in the I. T. U. It is one of the few unions that have the 7-hour day, and unlike many unions it did not legislate in favor of the machine operator, the proofreader, the ad man, the make-up the machinist or the foreman. It put them all on a level, and that is all any union has a right to do. The question of individual superiority is one to be settled between the man who does the hiring and the man hired. It is one which the union should not and does not interfere with. The efforts of the printers in Denver have made a flat scale under which I am a beneficiary; they have gotten a minimum wage for all composing room workers, and if I can not get more than that they are in no way bound to aid me to do so. But I think every one of us here would shout for joy if we could trade our scale of prices, with the bonus thrown in, for the flat scale of Washington, and so would nine-tenths of the other unions in the I. T. U.

W. E SHIELDS.

To Better Mankind.

Education along union lines is the crying need of the present day. The masses must be educated as to the best method of conducting their affairs for the betterment of all mankind, says Freight and Baggageman. Unionism in the fullest sense of the word stands for the uplifting of mankind and not for the tearing down and demoralization of things social and industrial or financial.

Not only does the recruit to the army of unionism need education along these lines, but many of the older ones as well. Those outside the union need it also, as the average person outside the union is inclined to believe that no good can possibly come from the banding together of the working classes.

Much good could be accomplished if the employe and employer were in closer touch with each other on matters pertaining to unionism, and this can only be accomplished by education. That the need of such an education is becoming universal and that the long sought for means through which it may be obtained is now at hand are strongly evinced by the several able publications that are now established throughout the length and breadth of our land with an eye single to the enlightening of mankind on the subject of unionism and the duty man owes to man.—Labor Champion.

Only Eight-Hour Union Office in Town

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 24, 1904.

THE short work-day is politically economic.

LATE Candidate PARKER may at least rejoice that he is not pestered with fool advice.

MR. WATSON doesn't seem disposed to let anybody else get in the middle of the road.

THE grumpy individual who is always glad when the holidays are over is about due for his annual kill-joy stunt.

THE Anti-Saloon League has commenced a vigorous winter campaign against the bowl evil.

DAVE HILL'S enemies like to think that he has retired from peanut politics and crawled into the shell.

HAVING stood pat this fall, the country is in a position to stand a lot of patter when Congress meets.

ALFRED has had an inning. RUDYARD should now dash him off a few stanzas of war doggeral on the Dogger Bank episode, lest we forget.

THE enthusiast is right who speaks about "the vast riches in corn." It is not much of a tin-horn piker who fails to own the earth under its influence.

WHAT with Japs, maps, saps, and innumerable fatal mishaps in the far East, it is no wonder that editorial sapience fails to do justice to the subject.

MAYBE Commissioner WARE'S resignation was not caused by cold feet, but his poetical feet will probably have a better chance to warm up out of office.

HENRY G. DAVIS is said to be in fine health and taking vigorous excercise. Perhaps he is in training with a view to the Presidential nomination next time.

A RECENT interesting editorial in the Washington Post is headed "What Irrigation Means." It sometimes means an unquenchable Sahara thirst the day after.

IT is to be hoped that HENRY WATTERSON will return from his trip abroad with a vocabulary enriched for a red-hot campaign against degenerate possessors of great riches.

THE Chimmie Fadden serial, now running in the Washington Star's Saturday edition, is about as "bum" an effort as has recently emanated from the Tenderloin school of literature.

Slowly but surely grind the wheels of fate.
Even now anticipating nineteen hundred eight,
The Presidential Bee is on the wing,
Buzzing round many a blushing statesman's pate.

ALL the signs point to a hard winter. Prime Minister TISZA of Austria-Hungary was hooted and snowballed the other day, and the Rosemont roses are still covered by a seventeen-foot drift.

THE English government is somewhat concerned over the growth of the German navy. Inasmuch as the Kaiser insists that his great military establishment is the outgrowth of a desire for peace, it would seem that John Bull is either unnecessarily alarmed or offensively churlish.

IT'S a poor tariff that won't work both ways. The rich lumbermen of Michigan are log-rolling to defeat Senator BURROWS for re-election because he helped place a duty on lumber, thereby interfering with the Canadian trade and driving many of the largest saw mills across the border.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

Render therefore unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's.—Matt. xxii: 21.

This is not to be a sermon, notwithstanding it starts off as though it were to be. My one sermon did not start off that way. I want to talk a little while this morning on the beauty of paying debts—not from a moral standpoint alone or especially, but as a good business proposition. In no other city in the world is there so great an amount of credit given to the stipend-drawing ("wage-earning" is so vulgar in many minds, and we are not all salaried people) classes as in this, and that fact in itself encourages thriftlessness and so much of dishonesty as is contained in withholding from others that which is rightfully theirs.

A man with a Government job, or even a fairly good private job, can buy anything, from a pin to a piano on credit, and the ease with which he can do so often tempts him to buy pins and pianos when he can scarcely meet his legitimate expenses, and in paying for them he occasionally neglects to pay for his bread and bacon, until he has a considerable amount against him for both classes of commodities. These are facts within the knowledge of everybody.

It is also easy to borrow money, on a more or less reasonable interest considering the class of security, until one has established a reputation the wrong way, and when you find a man who has held a situation for a year or more who can not readily borrow from $50 to $100 out of hand on his mere promise to pay it is because he has failed in the past to keep such promises.

Most of us are improvident and do not accumulate anything.

The habit of accumulation is born in one if possessed at all; it cannot be acquired. Next to having the ready money for emergencies is having credit to borrow money, and those who have occasion to do so should think of their credit as their capital, not necessarily from any conscientious motives, as I said before, but as a good business proposition, and so should take care of their obligations scrupulously, so that they can make others in other occasions of need.

Of course there are all sorts of circumstances and conditions to be taken into consideration. Some men are not permitted by their wives to have sufficient control of their finances to make good on their obligations. They are to be pitied as well as despised, awakening mixed feelings in us. I never was a money lender (the boot has always been on the other leg,) but if I were, among the questions I would ask the new borrower would be, "Do you take your envelope home to your wife? If so, I would prefer to make the loan to her." The great evil of the debtmaking business is the making of more debts than one can take care of at one pay day, which some meet by saying, "As I haven't enough to pay all my debts to-day, I won't pay any," which weakens his credit without benefiting him at all, when small payments to each creditor would have given them all faith and made the future easier for him.

I was in a little eating mill the other day, when the proprietor asked me:

"Do you know So-and-so at your place?"

"Yes."

"Seen him lately?"

"Yes, see him every day."

"Well, he ate with me for two weeks, until pay day came, but I haven't seen him since."

"That told the tale, and much as we may deprecate the telling of people's indebtedness to strangers, we have necessarily a contempt for the man who won't pay for what he eats, especially after having panhandled credit for it.

I remember a friend showing me a pitiful note he had received from a fellow-employe saying that he was sick and without money, and asking if he wouldn't go to a dozen of his friends and ask them to lend him $5 each—the gross sum would see him through. The friend, not feeling like asking people to make such large individual contributions of charity—for that was what it amounted to—wouldn't. The sick man would have had no trouble in borrowing any reasonable sum on his own name except for the fact that it was known that he absolutely would not pay his debts; in fact, that he was not good for even a drink of whisky in Swampoodle, the utmost depths of poverty of credit.

It is the custom to damn the "Shylock"—the man who lends his money for gain—but I have never had a Shylock offer me money yet. I have always had to seek him, and have found him extremely useful and convenient. I would always rather pay interest on money than borrow it from a friend and so put myself under obligation and him at the possible risk of losing it; for there is always a certain element of risk even with persons as honest as I am.

There is a cheerful class of borrowers who want a dollar until pay day and who then either forget it or make the conditions of its return hard on the lender. I saw one of this class get a hunch not long ago which he will not forget. Rushing up to his creditor just before whistle time, he said:

"I believe I owe you a dollar; have you got change for a twenty?"

"No, —— ——— you, I haven't got change for a twenty, but you will have the next time you borrow a dollar from me."

"Wait a minute; maybe I've got a dollar; yes, I have; I didn't know I had it," lied the borrower, shamefacedly.

It is part of my creed that there is no virtue in doing or refraining from doing a thing from hope of reward or fear of punishment. If we do not do good because it is good and avoid evil because it is evil, without any regard for future effect on ourselves, then we are but whited sepulchres and time-servers. This is why I am not recommending debt-paying as a moral virtue, but merely as a business proposition.

* * * *

I have stirred up the "poets." I meant to, though the miserable drivel with which they respond shows that I have worked no reformation. In the case of Brother McPike I will only say that, adhering to what I have heretofore said, I prefer his poetry to his prose, after the shoemaking specimen he gave us last week, which is about on a par with the idiocy occasionally indulged in of constructing a story out of the titles of stories, a song of the titles of songs, etc. I have no doubt Mr. McPike thinks that he is harmless, but he is not; no one is blameless for the results he produces. As for my friend T. A. R., did he think for a moment that he could hide his identity in initials? There is but one "Dusty Rhodes." After I did the best I could with his six or eight lines of twaddle two or three weeks ago by printing it as a puzzle, he shows his ingratitude. A friend tried to make me believe that "Dusty" got Joe Babcock to write that short-line rot with which he assaulted me last week, but it is not up to Joe's standard by forty rods. And now a word or two for our Navy-Yard bard, "Tim Tickle." Because we commended his writings while he stuck to the full-line, end-even sort, he has got chesty and seems to think he can perpetrate any sort of a monstrosity without a call-down. That slobber last week about "the boys who wear the overalls who build such terrible guns" was sure fierce—fiercer than the guns the overalls build. Cut it out, "Tim." You know better. You know poetry when you see it even if you don't see much. There are but two poets worthy of the name whose work appears in THE TRADES UNIONIST—William Tipton Talbott and I—and I often think of striking Talbott off the list. And now the whole measly breed can cut loose on me if they want to. All I ask is that the editors will give them the space to prove my allegations against them.

* * * *

I always believe everything everybody tells me, but some things set me to wondering how they are figured out. For instance, when the manager of a concern that does a great deal of printing for the A. F. of L. tells its head that he is willing to put his office on an eight-hour basis if that great association will pay him for its work on an eight-hour basis and then tells me that THE TRADES UNIONIST is doing work for the A. F. of L. on a scale below the regular prices, the latter being an eight-hour office, I wonder how they do it, for I know THE TRADES UNIONIST is a prosperous concern and making money on its work. It isn't a matter that I feel any interest in further than that as the problem worries me I would like to take others into my confidence and get some of their sympathy.

* * * *

The Little Willie Slug-30-put-on-a clean-apron-last-week correspondents we always have with us; and I have only just figured out why they send in such abominable slush. Don't tell me that thereby the calibers of their minds are to be estimated, for nobody has such a mind after psssing the age of 5 years. It is because they underestimate the minds of the readers of THE TRADES UNIONIST; they think that they like to read such flapdoodle; that somebody will mistake it for news. Much of it averages below school-teachers' correspondence in the hog-range press. It is done, I believe, from what the correspondents mistake for thoughtfulness—fear that if they write what is really in them it will go over the heads of their readers. In this their fears are unfounded. I have tested the matter for myself and have found that weighty matter is what is wanted. Even my profoundest articles are not above the understanding and appreciation of the readers of THE TRADES UNIONIST—except my jokes. I know a number of the correspondents, and I am satisfied that I have found the proper solution; that it is with difficulty that they restrain themselves from profound dissertations on matters dear to the hearts of all of us thinking men, finding relief in the statement that "Nonpareil cap I's were short on Tuesday." (Cap I's are short every day in my cases! There I said it first!) Deep thought is suppressed only in order to save readers from distressful attempts to understand it, and they are handed out, "Slug 45 had a dandy take on Monday—eh, George?" The holiest emotions, from the same mistaken kindness, are made to give way to "A new tin cup was received in our Division on Friday, the result of having a foreman who looks out for the comfort of the men." Gentlemen, you are reasoning from mistaken premises; your conclusions are drawn mistakenly. Many of our readers know almost as much as we do, and what they do not know they are capable of understanding as we tell them. I know how you feel about it; I was that way myself at first, and I felt my way for a long time, trying them each week with something a little harder, my confidence increasing with the seeming growth of their intelligence until now I do not hesitate to (occasionally) say real meaty, juicy things. Of course I do not go to the greatest lengths of which I am capable (I always try to be reasonable) and above what they or anybody else (ourselves excepted) could be expected to understand, but I have got beyond treating them as though they were still in the kindergarten. Have faith in me and try it, and I guarantee that the result will be both surprising and pleasing to you.

A. F. BLOOMER.

Capital and Labor.

Sitting in the Waldorf cafe, we were discussing some deep problems of the day, trying to photograph them, as it were, on the brain. The question of capital and labor came up.

"Can you tell me, Colonel, what is the difference between capital and labor?" was asked of a retired officer of the engineer corps, U. S. A.

"I flatter myself that I can, sir," said the Colonel. "Some time before my old and very dear friend, William H. Vanderbilt, died, he was run down by an unruly team at Fleetwood Park. His injuries did not amount to a scratch, sir, but they caused a panic in Wall street, and the newspapers published from two to four columns about it. At the same instant a brick mason fell from the top of a wall he was building and broke his neck. One-twentieth of a column answered for him. That, sir, is the difference between capital and labor."—Exchange.

THE ANIMATED CARVING KNIFE.

It was a Gentle Carving Knife
Who sang with tuneful tears
A song that stirred the sea of life
Down through the coming years.

He held the Turkey in his clasp;
Then with a tuneful clang,
He warbled in a giblet gasp,
And this is what he sang:

In the town of Pumpkinpie one day somehow,
The White Meat and the Dark Meat had a row,
Which was hard upon the Turkey
Who don't like discussions quirky;
And that is why we find the White Meat now
On the Wishbone of the Turkey,
While we find the Meat that's murky
To the Drumstick fastened tight, as all allow.

—ADAM BUGG.

The United States Leads.

Seventy-five per cent of all the earth's cotton crop is grown in the United States, and many Americans will be surprised to know that nearly two thirds of our cotton crop is exported. Cotton manufacturers in other parts of the world are watching with real alarm the increased domestic consumption of cotton. In ten years the increase has amounted to nearly fifty per cent—from 2,300,000 bales in 1893 to 3,900,000 bales in 1903. If America had no cotton to export there would be widespread calamity in the spinning and weaving districts of England, France and Germany. As a preventive of such possible disaster, the European nations are paying great attention to the development of new cotton producing areas in India, Egypt, Western Africa, Madagascar, and Turkestan.

JUST EVERY-DAY LIFE.

That little sermonette of mine on the marriage proposition awakened a bit of discussion. An eminent church member and class leader tells me of his experience and I most heartily commend the action of his selection. When his sweetheart realized there was an engagement in prospect she invited him to visit a number of her relatives in as many States. In other words, she said "This is the stock from which I came." He was at liberty to take it or leave it, just as he felt disposed.

Some have greatness thrust upon them;
Others great when life begins;
Other's greatness never locates—
They are simply called but-in's.

GOSSIP FROM THE G. P. O.

First Division.

From Minneapolis came Geo. E. Plummer with a broad smile.

Which is the poorest and least efficient service in the grand structure we occupy?

Well, where were you when the lights went out? How we did wish for a tallow dip.

George P. Dowell, who prints across the divide, in Lesher's bunch, has been sick this week.

Geo. W. Robinson, pressman, i. e., imposer in Col. Leavitt's subdivision, reported on time.

Jones—not the one that paid the freight—but F. O., showed up smiling at the expiration of leave.

Edward Coleman, of alley 14, is one of the recent returners. Reports a delightful trip to his home city, Danville, Ill. Glad to see you.

The last notification by the timekeeper sounded something like this: "Off at 4.30, back at 5, work till 9 p. m., walk to the elevator."

Glad to learn that a number of the readers of the only eight-hour labor journal in this city contemplate joining some one of the relief associations.

E. F. Geyer, detailed to clerical employment in Capt. Bonney's division, showed up bright and cheerful at the expiration of his leave.

This week it is Tom Dailey's assistant, W. J. Delano, who is detained from office by sickness. Citizen Scott, of Anacostia, D. C., is assisting at the press.

The last leave-returner was Maloy—not the youth that stood on the burning deck—but Frank, who hails from Pennsylvania, a few miles beyond Philadelphia.

Holy smoke, didn't old Progenity strike this division this week? How many "takes" did you catch on Tuesday. We don't like to say, but we had enough to get up our average.

What is the best and most accentuated heart-to-heart talk we have? Why E. J. Wilber when he calls your name and hands you your pay-envelope. You can't call to often, Ed. Always welcome.

The division, as is customary on the eve of Thanksgiving, contributed liberally to the paper passed around by Chairman Nachman for "sweet charity's sake"—that our less fortunate brethren might be reminded of the glad season.

The "funny man" up at the other end of the room says the wire screen was placed around the bill-presses to prevent the wind or (hot) air from disarranging the paper for Kelley. We will wager a red apple that Burnside originated that report.

Referring to the reorganization of the night force, all guesses are off since Thanksgiving. We just know dead sure when it will resume. We don't print dates, for the reason that everybody on Wall street in the First Division knows, even the lunch and the fruit lady.

What's the matter with Comrade Smith—we mean D. He seems to have a "move-on" since his return. Jack Burnside says that he (Smith) was making "rear-end" speeches in Tom Taggart's State. That guess don't go. But don't you know that he is one of the most active old men in this cheerful division.

Say, didn't you feel pleased on Monday morning when Clerk Berger (who, incidentally, will add your name to the large list of THE TRADES UNIONIST subscribers, with real pleasure) interrogated you as to whether you wished to go on Night Force? We did. Not the first time that we have been asked that question, and would you believe it we always get—left. How about it. "If at first you don't succeed," etc.

Imposer Wetmore is pleased since he had the large table with chase racks added to his jurisdiction. Isn't that a fine table that Chief Bundy of the carpenter force located in our room during the week. I'll tell you what our foreman just knows what he wants for the betterment of the service to the slightest detail, and then he gets it. Might say we are better prepared than ever to execute all kinds of printing all hours of the twenty-four and at the usual prices.

ROUGH WRITER.

Oysters in every style at R. A. Driscoll's North Capitol and G street. Overholt whisky, 10c.

Third Division.

L. J. Bennett, who has been sick for three months past, came back to work last Friday morning and was assigned to frame 109.

The Colorado trades unions throughout the State have appointed a special Thanksgiving service on account of the defeat of Governor Peabody.

Brother Heritage (I forget his initials) was transferred to the Fourth on the 16th inst., and went to work on the Surgeon-General's catalogue.

It was worth a dollar to see General Delahunty lead the grand march Monday noon and night. It surely overshadowed any cake walk I ever saw.

Wonder if the fellow who shouts Wah-hoo! when he sneezes belongs in Wahoo, Nebraska. If he does, will he please tell us if that is where they make Wahoo root beer.

The El Paso Herald says: "The Isthmians want a double line of booze-oriums and joints all along the canal line." They might get their ideas up by walking around the G. P. O.

Arthur P. Ferl, who came to this division from Manila, P. I., where he was employed in the Government Printing Office, has resigned and gone into the newspaper business.

Margaret A. Evans was transferred to the Spess at her own request on the 3d inst. Miss Evans won her way with us from the beginning, and left many new friends behind her when she went away. She has our most cordial wishes for her happiness and prosperity.

W. V. Parshall, formerly maker-up in the old Second, who left for the West in the summer of 1903, is now running a job printing office in Detroit, Mich., and is doing well at it, according to Maker-up Winchester, of the Fifth Division, who saw him while on his voting leave. Mr. Parshall sent his regards to his old friends in the G. P. O. Here's ours to him.

R. J. Mears writes to me as follows:

DEAR BROTHER BELCHER: Wish you would convey to the boys of the Third Division the sincere thanks of Mrs. Mears and myself for their thoughtful acts and expressions of sympathy for us during our recent bereavement. The loss of an only son is indeed a deep affliction, but such spontaneous acts of kindness as came from my fellow-workmen have done much to ease the heartaches, I assure you.

In a letter received by E. P. Meritt from Charles W. Herzinger, our former associate, now of Grangeville, Idaho, Mr. Herzinger says he has been very busy campaigning since his departure from Washington, having made 110 speeches in the various cities and towns throughout the state. At the close of his letter, which was written just before election, he remarked, "We will land Teddy in the White House all right." It sure looks that way, Charles.

The chapel met last Friday noon and passed the following resolutions:

WHEREAS, Death, with its blighting touch, has removed from the walks of life the father of our friend and fellow-workman, Henry T. McConvey; therefore be it

Resolved, That this chapel, assembled for that purpose, extend its deepest sympathy and fraternal condolence to the sorrowing son in this dark hour of trial and grief. Be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be furnished the family of Mr. McConvey, and also published in THE TRADES UNIONIST.

The room is fast resuming its wonted aspect, as about all the "trusties" are back in their places. Saltzman, Soult, and Kitzmiller have resumed business at the bank and on the presses; Davis is once more looking after the slugs, and Assistant Foreman Sherman is in "his customary attitude" at the desk. The only persistent absentee is Goldstein, who was due last Monday, and concerning whose whereabouts and intentions there seems to be a mystery. I suppose I should have mentioned Messrs. Lawson and Lenhart; but our foreman and time-keeper are nearly always with us.

Pard Julian recently returned from Nebraska, where he went to vote and to forget all about that jolt he got when the car left the track, tumbled over on its side, and nearly broke his shoulder. While away, Pard went shooting jack rabbits, and performed some remarkable stunts with a shot gun. He is reported to have said that with an old-fashioned single-barrel muzzle-loading shot gun, he shot 386 jack rabbits in eighteen minutes. When a bystander innocently inquired if the number slain was not 387, Pard is reported to have answered, "No!" in a very emphatic manner. According to my informant, he then said, "I wouldn't lie for one jack rabbit." Nobody who knows Mr. Julian believes for a moment that he would lie for one jack rabbit or any number of jack rabbits. In this connection, however, it is interesting to note that J. C. Morgan, formerly in the Third, but now in the Spess, is reported to have said that Pard wouldn't know a jack rabbit if he should meet one in the road. It would seem to be a case of shot guns and coffee for two. And if Pard is as deadly with men as he is reported to have been with jack rabbits, our friend from the Spess will soon be no more.

The Washington Credit Association, originated and officered by employes of this division, was organized on the 16th instant. The aim of the Association is to issue trade-orders to its members and their friends, which will be received in place of cash at many of the leading stores in all lines of business, the storekeepers on their part giving a discount on all goods so purchased. Those who procure trade-orders from the Association may pay either cash or installments, as may be agreed; in the latter case there is no interest charged, as the discount on the goods purchased pays the Association for its trouble. It can be readily seen that such an Association, properly managed, would be a source of much profit to its shareholders. The Washington Credit Association is capitalized at $2,500, which is divided into 500 shares of the par value of $5 each. These shares will advance to a premium December 16, and are selling radidly to thoughtful people who want a gilt-edge investment. The officers are: R. M. Cheshire, President, T. Frank Hall, Vice-President; Cliff. D. Scott, Secretary-Treasurer; Directors: F. O. Sanders, J. W. Belcher, W. I. Bateman, and the President and Vice-President ex officio; Auditors: W. M. Camp, A. H. McKnight, Lee Smith.

Chairman Piehoff is still in a dangerous condition, frequent hemorrhages of late having precipitated the relapse that was feared. Though now resting quietly, there is not much hope of his recovery; indeed, there is reason to believe that he will not be able to go to his home in South Carolina, as planned by his family, unless especially favorable conditions should intervene. It is gratifying evidence of the esteem in which Mr. Piehoff is held by his brother printers in the G. P. O., that the subscription in his behalf now in course of collection will rank among the largest ever taken. A pleasant incident occurred last Saturday night, when a number of Mr. Piehoff's friends quietly resolved themselves into a committee to see if some arrangement could not be made with Mayer & Co., dealers in furniture, with whom Mr. Piehoff had an account. The committee, consisting of Messrs. McKnight, Jordan, Halpenny, and Kinsolving, called on Mr. Mayer, and upon informing him of the condition of affairs, the generous merchant consented to make a reduction in his bill from $29 to $10. It is safe to say that Mayer & Co. will never regret their generosity. Their kind action in this case will be an "ad" more potent with us than a half-page of illustrations and display lines. Such men deserve and should achieve success in business. Let us show our appreciation of their kindness by making them a call.

Specification Notes.

W. B. Myers has returned from his vacation at St. Louis.

Miss Allie Trefts is back at work after a spell of illness.

W. L. "Windy" Evans is an apprentice on the Merg. keyboard.

Chas. Kelly is back from Michigan, While home he took two degrees in Masonry.

C. B. Yater and James O. Macallister were transfered from this division last week.

Forty-nine of this division went down for night work. This is about one-third of the entire force.

Our force is getting in some extra time of late. All were caught on the make-up Tuesday night at call of time.

There are a number of persons on this force who do not like to get their name in print. If you see dashes used in the future for names it is one of them.

Jim Brooke left his case at noon yesterday and went to a hospital. It is reported that he is threatned with paralysis. It is hoped that his ailment is not serious.

A lady of this force, Slug 120, is the possessor of a fine lot of Mexican opals of different sizes and colors, all cut, but unmounted. If anyone desires a jem for a Christmas present they can get them of her as she will sell them. They were sent to her by a friend in the opal industry.

Charles Huddleson, of Company H, Eighth U. S. Infantry, now stationed at Governor's Island, N. Y., came over last Friday with his company to help unveil the Frederick statue here, was a caller at the G. P. O. Mr. Huddleson was employed as compositor in the old Fourth Division about three years ago. He at that time resigned to play baseball in a Southern League, and after a short career at baseball and Western journalism he again joined the army. He was fortunate enough to meet a younger brother in the army here whom he had not seen for some time.

Library Branch.

Hugh Reid had a trip to Wisconsin and has just returned.

Charles S. Forsyth has charge of the blue pencil on the reviser's desk, and is kept busy all the day.

H. V. Bisbee and A. J. McMillan have just returned from their biennial trip to Michigan. They report the crops in fine condition.

R. A. Nelgner, F. C. Crews, and H. V. Bisbee are operators of more or less efficiency, according as accents predominate more or less.

Chas. A. McMullen has charge of the head machine. He is getting to be a lightning change artist, and can set more different kinds of type to the minute than any man on the force.

Wm. H. Murphey and S. L. Battles are redeeming the time in their medical studies. They hope to graduate next year, and thus the advent of machines have no terrors for them.

Wm. R. Bolten is reading in Mr. Bradley's place, and A. J. Ward is copy holder pending his decision on a good place to locate as a practicing attorney, he having graduated in the law this year.

J. R. Bradley, our proof reader, has taken a trip to Europe for the benefit of his health. He is expected back about the 1st of December, and we all hope his health will be much improved on his return.

S. C. Koons took a course as machinist at the factory in Brooklyn, and has been second in command up to the present time. He is thoroughly qualified to receive the the mantle of Mr. Livingston when he lays it down.

There has been very little said about the Merganthalers in the Congressional Library in all the discussion about machines in the G. P. O. The machines were installed here in September, and when the necessary sorts for this complicated work were secured the change from hand to machine composition was mode without a hitch, and without materially interfering with the regular output of work. The machines have been in charge of Mr. Samuel A. Livingston, as machinist, and Mr. Leo S. Smith as expert operator, and under their direction the force have been well instructed and the machines kept to the highest point of perfection. When it is known that library work includes every language from South Africa to Greenland, and from Adam's time down to the late election, it may be dimly perceived what a task is put upon the machines here, and on the men who run them, as well as those having direct charge of them. But Mr. Livingston never loses his patience whether the trouble is merely the stopping of the distributor or a "squirt" of hot metal. And Mr. Smith is as willing to show us as though we were all from Missouri. The Library force will be loth to part with them when they finally turn the machines over to successors.

The Cost of Moving Crops.

It costs an enormous sum to move the crops of this country. An estimate just made for the present year shows that the railroads will receive over $450,000,000 in payment of freight charges on the year's agricultural products. This is about 8 per cent of the total crop valuation. The total number of cars which would be required to move the year's crop, if it were all shipped by rail, would be over 13,000,000. Hay would require the largest number, and cattle and corn would be tied for a second place. Inasmuch as a large part of the crop is not moved by railroads, but is consumed at home, the total number of cars needed to move at one time that part of the crop as is actually moved would be about 5,500,000.

NAVY-YARD ITEMS.

Owing to lack of work many laborers, carpenters, and painters have been discharged until spring. This discharge was caused by the contractors failing to supply material used in the construction of the new shops. It is very unfortunate at this season of the year, with living expenses so great, that mechanics should be furloughed on account of another's negligence.

The first of the series of hops to be held in the Yard during the season was given Thursday evening. Mrs. Higginson, wife of the commandant, received on behalf of the ladies of the Yard, and after the dance entertained the officers and their wives at her home. These dances will be held weekly every Thursday until April next.

The following are the dates on which the ladies of the Yard will receive at the usual winter hops. They will be given each Thursday from 4 to 6 p. m..

Mrs. F. J. Higginson, Nov. 10, 1904-Feb. 16, 1905.
Mrs. E. C. Pendleton, Nov. 17, 1904-Feb. 23, 1905.

Prince Fushima, of Japan, accompanied by his suite, has paid us a visit. Before embarking on the Sylph for Mount Vernon they carefully inspected the great guns now being constructed in Uncle Sam's workshop. Nothing but praises for the gun builders, as the Prince cast his eyes over the great machines that were turning out the vehicles of death and destruction. He only reiterated what is said by all foreign representatives when visiting the gun factory,: "It is grand—magnificent—such guns; such mechanics."

FRANK K. RAYMOND INDORSED.

Columbia Lodge, No. 174, I. A. of M., at its regular meeting Wednesday night, passed resolutions indorsing Mr. Frank K. Raymond for chairman of the inaugural committee.

After routine business the Lodge instituted a new departure, and resolved itself into a debating society. The subject was:

"Resolved that Trades Unionism pays the Government employes."

Brother E. C. Ford, in an eloquent address, advocated the affirmative. while Brother E. L. Adams voiced the negative.

The Lodge paid a feeling tribute to Brother Adams by casting a majority vote in his favor, and he was awarded the prize (a box of cigars to be opened in the Lodge).

A just tribute, a hearty applause, was given to Brother Ford, who is better known as "The Old Man Eloquent," for the praise he bestowed upon union men and union principles. His was an easy task, whereas Brother Adams had to defend something that he knew was radically wrong, which made his success so much greater.

THE NEW NAVY YARD.

If Captain Thomas Tongay, the first commandant of the Navy Yard, could revisit his old stamping ground, he would be as much surprised as the Burgomaster of New Amsterdam What a change from the year 1800 to the present time. At that time there was employed one hundred and seventy-five workmen, including the boys who turned the grind stones and those who picked oakum.

Machinists there were none.

Blacksmiths received $1.70 per day, while painters received $1.25.

In 1806 machinists were first employed. Every piece of machinery was fitted with hammer, chisel, and file. To-day how different. It is planed, turned and polished by the most improved methods.

To do a piece of work one hundred years ago it would require six men twenty-four hours to do what one man can now do in four hours. The shops were wooden structures, with dirt floors. These shops were lighted by candles. The apprentices were bound by written agreements, and if they spoiled a piece of work they were punished by being sent to the foundry sheds to clean castings.

Prior to 1840 if a large casting was successfully made the men were given a holiday. A mechanic was not allowed to wear a white shirt while at work. This special privilege was only allowed naval officers and superintendents.

What a change and revolution in machinery has occurred. To-day mechanics come and leave the Yard dressed in the height of fashion, showing conclusively the great advancement made by the craft not only in skill, but in general appearance.

But to return to our history, in which we find that the Secretary of the Navy selected Captain Tongay as the first commandant, owing to his being acquainted with the system in vogue in the ship yards of England.

During the year 1802 the following frigates were constructed: The United States, General Greene, The Essex, the Congress, the President, and the Boston. In 1805 the Constitution, the Chesapeake, and the Constellation.

In 1812 a great blow was struck. The Secretary, fearing that the British troops would capture the Yard, ordered the torch applied, entailing a loss to the Government of $417,745.

With the burning of the Navy Yard, the Capitol, Arsenal, Treasury, War Office, President's house, and also the Eastern Branch bridge, met the same fate.

Looking over the records we find in 1819 the machine shops closed one half day to pack piston rod. In those days the cylinder piston was packed with hemp and 12 pounds was the steam pressure; another half day lost on account of fly-wheel becoming loose on shaft; man-of-war launched, a whole day holiday, and so on. But the records do not show whether the men were paid or not for their time lost.

The foremen of the different departments acted as apothecaries and prescribed for their workmen.

For fever and ague, most prevalent at that time, the dose was:

Pulverized snake root	60 grains
Red bark	1 ounce
Salt of wormwood	30 grains

Mixed with 1 gill of black molasses.

Ye Gods! What a dose.

From 1820 to 1832, very little work was done at the Yard, the only frigate built being the Columbia. From that time down to the civil war little work was given the employes. During that time, however, a foundry was built for the purpose of producing cast-iron guns.

In 1861 the workmen in the Yard applied to the commandant for an increase of wage, and extra allowance for overtime. The request was refused.

In 1863, the work in the Yard being very pressing, and on account of the great increase in cost of living, the men sent the following note to the Secretary:

> We, the workmen of the Navy Yard, joiners, plumbers, blacksmiths, machinists, painters, boiler makers, and other craftsmen, do pledge ourselves to sustain each other in endeavoring to obtain the old system of working hours, after sunrise until sunset, and also an advance in wages of 25 per cent. After using all honorable means, we will strike, and not work until our grievances are adjusted. An answer is asked by Monday, the 13th instant, 1863, before sunset.

The answer being favorable, no strike occurred.

In 1864, another increase in wage was asked, but was rejected.

In 1865 the rebellion showing a decline, and as the news came that Richmond had fallen, orders were given to illuminate the building. The first and most momentous question was asked: "How many candles have we got?"

The men were joyful but the spirit of fun was changed to gloom by the death of President Lincoln.

Soon after the close of the war the greater part of the men were discharged and nothing of interest happened until 1878, when the Yard again became busy.

On October 28, 1881, a serious explosion of rockets took place, and George Lawrence was killed and Marion Thompson and George Gates were seriously injured.

Decoration Day was observed for the first time and the men received pay for it.

In 1885, Hon. Wm. C. Whitney, Secretary of the Navy, issued an order abolishing several departments in the Yard, and practically turned it over to the ordnance department, for the purpose of manufacturing guns, mounts, etc. From that time until the present, many improvements have been made in the Yard in the way of building new shops and converting the old ones into modern ones, discarding old machinery and tools and establishing up-to-date methods of producing the highest type of work done anywhere in the world. Many representatives of large private establishments, such as Carnegie's, Bethlehem, Midvale, and also some representatives from large European plants have expressed themselves as being highly pleased with the character of work, methods, etc, and all are free to admit that the Naval Gun Factory of to day is equal if not superior to any gun factory on earth.

It is the means of saving the Government millions of dollars in manufacturing these guns and mounts owing to who—the greatest mechanics under the sun—"the gun builders of the Naval Gun Factory," working under the jurisdiction of Columbia Lodge, No. 174, I. A. of M, who work in accord with not only the Navy Department, but the naval officers in charge of the Yard.

"PIKES" BY McPIKE.

Despite the repeated efforts of Brother Bloomer to dam it up, the stream of "rhythmical rot" still continues to flow down the old Pike, as witness the following:

BILLY BEDDOW'S BRIDAL BELLS.

From out of the West, like the famed Lochinvar—
From the land of Dakotas, distance quite far—
Has lately returned our friend, Billy Beddow,
Who of the ring alleys is ringleader, you know;
And he came not alone that long, weary ride,
Having brought with him a fair, bonny young bride,
Who will share in his pleasures, ambitions, and cares,
Cheer up his home life and darn what he tears;
Make glad his fond heart and comb smooth his few hairs;
Be his loving companion in mundane affairs.
And now that they're wed, we gladly join with their friends
In wishing them all joys that their union portends;
May Billy find home ever peaceful, serene,
With his fond, loving bride as helpmate and queen;
May their lives, thus united, be happy and long,
Cheered now and then by a sweet lullaby song.

Thoughts for Thanksgiving Day.

Thanksgiving morning in the grand mansion. On every hand are the evidences of great wealth—costly paintings, rare tapestries, velvet carpets, Louis Quinze furniture. Sitting dejectedly before the fire in the open grate is the owner of it all, moody, silent and alone.

Rich viands await him, but he has no appetite. The great corridors are silent, for the happy laughter of children is never heard therein. Trained servants answer his every beck and nod, but their ministrations are measured by their monthly wage.

In a lovely boudoir up the polished stairway sits a wife whose every thought is on fashion's follies. She sits and dreams of society's conquests, of rout and ball and cotillion. The man below is but a machine whose wheels and cogs and cams and levers move but for the purpose of grinding out money.

Thanksgiving in the cottage. On every hand are the evidences of comfort secured through honest toil and sweat. A few pictures upon the walls, neat curtains, ingrain carpets, simple furniture. Sitting before the cheery blaze of the stove is a man, happiness shining upon his face, for it is a day of rest whereon he may sit amidst his loved ones and listen to the prattle of happy childhood.

Singing away in the plain but spotlessly clean kitchen is the wife, joyfully preparing the mid-day Thanksgiving feast, her little flock gathering around her and watching with kindling eyes the preparations for the coming festival. Ever and anon loving glances are directed at the stalwart man in the next room whose broad shoulders have bent to the task of giving shelter and food to his dear oues.

Not uncommon pictures, these. And yet have you ever asked yourself which is the prettiest? O, ye who toil! Think ye ever of the blessings of health and strength and loved ones ever near? Would you trade them off for the mansion grand, the tapestries, the velvet carpets, the magnificent paintings and the cares of the man in the mansion?

And yet if he only knew it the brooding and lonely man in the mansion has cause for great thanksgiving. How thankful he might be, if he would, that he has the opportunity to make hundreds thankful that he lives, has a heart, and feels for the sorrows of others.

The man who gives thanks only for what he has gained in a material way is too selfish. The man who gives thanks because he has been permitted to bestow upon others that which gives rise to thankfulness in their hearts knows what true reason for thankfulness is.

Have you no cause for thanksgiving? Look at your two stout arms, and then look at the unfortunate cripple. Look at your healthy little ones and then think of the thousands of puny babies scattered all over the country. Listen to the happy laughter of your children, and then think of the homes where childish laughter has been stilled by the icy hand of death.

Then, giving thanks for your blessings, start right out and try to give cause for thankfulness to those who have less cause for it than yourself. That is the best possible way to observe Thanksgiving day.—Will M. Maupin, in Commoner.

THE TRADES UNIONIST.

OFFICIAL ORGAN CENTRAL LABOR UNION, WASHINGTON BRANCH, AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

Vol. IX. No. 25 WASHINGTON, D. C., THURSDAY, DECEMBER 1, 1904. Price, 3 Cents.

THE CENTRAL LABOR UNION

Academy of Music Unfair on Account of Its Nonunion Orchestra.

L. A. DOWNEY SIGNS CONTRACT

Credentials Received from a New Organization—National Cooperage Co. Product No Longer in Favor Here—Grievance Committee Makes Report.

The regular weekly meeting of the Central Labor Union was called to order at 8.10 p. m. on Monday, Vice-President Crown in the chair.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

CREDENTIALS.

Credentials were received from a new organization known as Furniture Finishers, No. 1053, affiliated with the Brotherhood of Painters, and presented the names of John Campbell, Edward Mackay, and George Reynolds. The credentials were received and delegates seated.

Bills amounting to $6.80 were read and ordered paid.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Upholsterers' Union, No. 104, Baltimore, Md., asking assistance in aid of selling label goods in this city that are made in Baltimore. Referred to Allied Label League.

From National Capital Brewing Co., inclosing copy of communication sent Cincinnati Cooperage Co., stating that they will be compelled to cease buying goods from the Cincinnati Cooperage Co. until such time as they unionize their plant, and advising them to do so. The secretary was directed to acknowledge receipt of letter and place it on file.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

The Grievance Committee submitted contract signed by L. A. Downey, merchant tailor, 433 Eleventh street northwest, and on request of delegates from Tailors Union the contract was referred to that union with instructions to report at next meeting of this body.

The Grievance Committee also reported progress in case of Stationary Firemen and the Newspaper Publisher's Association.

The committee further reported that they had been unable to obtain an interview with the manager of the Academy of Music, and recommended that that theater be placed on the unfair list. Agreed to.

CALL OF UNIONS.

Brewery Workers asked that action on communication from National Capital Brewing Co. be reconsidered. The request was granted, and a motion to refer the matter to the Brewery Workers was lost. After much discussion a motion prevailed to direct the secretary to acknowledge receipt of the same and place on file. The motion was agreed to.

The Musicians called attention to Kernan Theater still being on unfair list.

Kuppenheimer Clothing Unfair.

The following communication has been sent to all unions by the Chicago Federation of Labor, through E. N. Nockels, sercetary:

To Organized Labor:

On the request of Local Union, No. 61, United Garment Workers of America, we take this opportunity to notify you to the effect that the B. Kuppenheimer & Co., 246 South Franklin street, Chicago, Ill., manufacturers of ready-made clothing for men, have locked out all our members and are now employing scab labor. They have refused even to give us an interview in the matter. We therefore appeal to your honorable body to assist us in our struggle, as the said firm is antagonistic to organized labor. Our body has placed them on the unfair list and we trust that your organization will pass a resolution to the effect that none of your members buy any clothing whatsoever from B. Kuppenheimer & Co., of Chicago, and that your local will please appoint a committee to call on all retail clothing dealers in your town and request them not to handle any clothing of B. Kuppenheimer & Co., until such time as they have adjusted their difficulty with Local No. 61, United Garment Workers of America.

Secretary.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS SERVICE.

Foreman R. A. McLean Suitably Remembered on the Occasion.

Mr. R. A. McLean, foreman of the Star composing room, has rounded out twenty-five years as printers' executive, and the event was fittingly celebrated Wednesday evening by a musicale, reception and smoker in the rooms of the Star Club. The occasion was made a dual one, with Mr. J. Whit Herron, the Star's business manager, as the other "blushing bride." It has also been twenty-five years since Mr. Herron joined the Star forces, and as both gentlemen have been such potent factors in the development of the Star's progress and influence this testimonial of the esteem of their lieutenants and co-laborers proved an auspicious event. The reception was a purely home affair, there being one hundred and fifty-odd Star employes present.

The reception was held under the auspices of the Evening Star Club, one of the most unique and wholesome features of newspaperdom. Guy V. Collins was the presiding officer, and after a humorous dissertation on art by Will H. Chandlee at the expense of his fellow-worker, Felix Mahony, William J. Gallagher, on behalf of the Star Chapel, presented Mr. McLean with a handsome diamond stud. Mr. Gallagher's address, which was well received, follows:

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen:

I have been selected by the committee having the affair in charge for this pleasant task, not on account of my ability to make a speech, for I never before made an address of any kind, but because of my long association with the special guests of the evening.

The gentlemen whom we honor tonight are well known to every one here. They are deserving of all the praise we might bestow on them, and we can say this much of them, and we all know it to be true, that The Evening Star Company would have a hard task to find two men who would look so well after its interests as have Mr. McLean and Mr. Herron in the years that they have been at the head of their respective departments.

I have known both of them over twenty-five years; but, of course, I know our foreman best on account of being more closely associated with him. I will not sing his praises too loudly. But one thing I have admired in him was the fact that he always helped the man who seemed the least liked by his fellow-men. He saw something in that kind of a man that no one else could discern.

In the twenty-five years I have worked under him I have never heard him use profanity, and that's saying a great deal for the foreman of a print shop. I have never known him to speak ill of any man.

We can truthfully say of him, what the London coster said of his "Old Dutch:"

"We've been together nigh onto thirty years,
And it don't seem a day too much."

Mr. McLean, on behalf of all the men of of the composing room, I present to you this token of our affection and esteem.

May you live to celebrate the golden anniversary of your foremanship, and may God guide you and yours in the years to come.

Mr. McLean responded in an interesting vein, testifying to the hearty cooperation he had received from fellow-craftsmen in all these years, and indulged in reminiscences.

Mr. Herron was next remembered with an expansive leather chair, bearing the good will and esteem of the business office force. Mr. Fleming Newbold, the assistant business manager, made the presentation.

On behalf of the Evening Star Company, Mr. Rudolph Kauffmann, managing editor, toasted Mr. McLean for his unswerving fidelity in the discharge of duty, and assuring him, among other things, that he is held in the utmost esteem by his employers. A purse of $250 in gold made a substantial climax to the many hearty expressions of good will. Mr. S. H. Kauffmann, the president of the company, was prevented from making the presentation, as intended, through an indisposition.

In an able address Mr. Theodore W. Noyes, associate-editor of the Star, pointed out the many characteristics of Mr. Herron that had endeared him to fellow-workers and the citizens of Washington alike, and closed with the presentation of a purse of $250 in gold, and at the same time assuring both guests of the evening that the company would celebrate their golden anniversary with diamonds.

A fine musical program followed, extending from the classic interpretation of Chopin selections on the piano by S. M. Fabian to the ludicrous negro melody of George O'Connor. Chase's Theater Orchestra, under the direction of President Wm. J. Kerngood of the Musicians' local, rounded out the evening happily.

Mr. McLean, as is well known, is the second foreman in the history of the Star, he having succeeded his father, Wm. R. McLean, twenty-five years ago. The son entered the composing room of the Star in 1863 as an apprentice, and on going out of his "time" was said to be the fastest compositor on the Star. Owing to the ill health of his father, Mr. McLean discharged for months the duties of foreman, and on the demise of the foreman in 1879 the Star announced in its news columns the death, and in a closing paragraph stated that the deceased would be succeeded by his son. This was the first intimation the present foreman had of of the matter, and he has discharged that trust with characteristic zeal ever since.

Mr. Crosby S. Noyes was also present during the festivities and enjoyed the program throughout.

Bindery Notes.

George Baldenecker is preparing an article for The Bookbinder a la Spaeth.

The International Bookbinder, under its new management, made its first appearance this week and is a splendid number, reflecting great credit upon Secretary Dougherty.

It was very noticeable in the early part of the week with what haste Jim Fogerty finished his lunch and hurried out into the street. Can it be that the black arrow also had attractions for him

The leap year dance of the young ladies of the Bindery was a great success. All married men were barred. It is now up to the Bachelors to give the girls a chance before the close of the year.

The election of officers in No. 4 takes place next Tuesday, and there is no opposition save in the office of secretary. It will cost the union about $30 to ascertain which they want—Stockman or Hardy. Too big a price, in the estimation of many.

There was considerable comment because of the absence of Jack Hembly from the full dress affair the other night. Jack has the reputation of being the Beau Brummel of the Bindery and his absence from such a function was sure to be noticed.

W. H. Crenshaw, of the Old Dominion State, promised to bring Walter Roche a sample jug of the good old corn made in his town, when he returned from a recent visit and Walter has been smacking his lips ever since "Crenny's" return, but there's nothing doing.

"Wee Willie" Welsh, whose name has not appeared in these columns since he worked in the Union Building, is again entitled to that distinction. He was seen Monday during lunch time hunting for the black arrow on Massachusetts avenue. He was wearing his glasses, too, which is unusual for him on the street.

The "King of the West," Ben Spellbring, is appearing in a new role as the manager of the Bookbinders Ministrels, which will give a performance at National Rifles Hall, January 20, 1905. Ben will be leading man, Professor McCarthy will do wonderful stunts with his fiddle, while the "Prince" and the "Count" will bring forward a new sketch entitled "The Bughouse Twins."

George P. Davis, a young bookbinder twenty-four years of age, died Thanksgiving Day at Saranac Lake. His home was in Baltimore and he had been employed in the Government Printing Office but nine months, though in that brief time he had made many friends by his quiet and unassuming manner. He was unmarried, though he left a widowed mother, three brothers and two sisters. He was buried from Baltimore Tuesday last.

THE A. F. OF L. CONVENTION

The Twenty-fourth Annual Convention Concludes Its Labors.

THE OLD OFFICERS RE-ELECTED

President Gompers and Secretary Morrison Practically Re-elected Unanimously—The Session a Busy One—Next Convention to be Held at Pittsburg, Pa.

President Samuel Gompers and Secretary Frank Morrison were re-elected practically unanimously, but one vote (Berger, of Milwaukee) being recorded against the election of Mr. Gompers. The only office that caused any contest was that of eighth vice president, Harry Sherman, of this city, general secretary of the Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, being one of the contestants against the present incumbent, William Spencer, but Mr. Spencer was re-elected.

Samuel Gompers

One of the most exciting incidents of the convention occurred on the seventh day, when action on Resolution No. 103 was under discussion.

The resolution was introduced by Victor L. Berger, of Milwaukee, representing the International Typographical Union. It was similar to the other resolutions that have been introduced in past conventions and act as bombs on trades unionists. The committee having the resolution in charge, on reporting it, recommended that a portion of it be stricken out, and the discussion that followed brought out Delegate Max Hays, of the Internationl

Frank Morrison

Typographical Union, in a prepared address on Socialism that breathed defiance to all who did not agree with the cult of Socialism.

Delegate Foster, of the International Typographical Union, took issue with Delegate Hays, claiming that it was not in order to discuss political questions on the floor of the convention and pointing out the fallacies of Socialism.

The discussion took a wide range and was finally closed by adopting the report of the committee.

The Special Committee on President's Address, to whom was referred that portion calling attention to the proposed institution of the eight-hour day by the International Typographical Union, reported an indorsement of the movement and that moral and financial aid be extended when the period for enforcement arrives. The report of the committee was adopted.

Several questions of trade jurisdiction were considered by the convention, notably the one between the Brewery Workers and Stationary Firemen. The question affecting these two Internationals was referred to arbitration.

COURTESIES EXTENDED.

November 20 a committee of about 25 of San Francisco Typographical Union escorted a like number of printer delegates to the national convention of the American Federation of Labor, including representatives from Texas to Boston, to Mount Tamalpais.

A steamer ride of seven miles was had to the toy city of Sausalito, from whence the crookedest railroad in the world took them to the point of destination, 3,000 feet above the surrounding ocean water. The sun at most times shown brightly, but there were times when clouds broke on the crags near the sight-seers.

Two hours were spent at the banquet table, where brief talks were made by President Lynch, Frank Morrison and others.

Max Hays said the organization of labor was primarily due to the wandering printer of times that were gone, who left his home place with a card and a mission to organize the workers. Where that printer stopped for a respite from travel he looked around with the thought of getting printers together, and if there were none he organized the railroad worker and the woodchopper. The seed thus sown were never entirely obliterated by defeat, but scattered and multiplied with every recurring opportunity.

THE GAY DECEIVER.

The Trifler With the Fair Sex Should be Barred in Good Society.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

I've got another kick coming, and, fearing that an expectant and curious world will think I've got a sore leg and can't kick as of yore, I'm going to loosen up and turn it loose through your columns, if you'll let me use the valuable space. I always say valuable space when I want to use some, other times I say—well what's the use of telling you what I say. You know.

Anyhow, I started to kick and the subject is: The young man who courts and runs away. The youth may live to court another day, as has been said by some one about the discreet warrior. But he ought to be barred. Not the warrior or the fellow who said that about him, but the youth who courts, etc.

It's mighty pleasant to have some place to go evenings, where there's laughter and conversation, and these nights a nice warm fire, which costs the old man $7.50 per, and in the summer, a nice, cool cast-iron porch to loaf on, and the girl likes to have some one to loaf on it, and to sit before the fire and tell her how she is the fairest and nicest, etc. You know how it was yourself when you were young and slender and had hair on top of your head.

But as I started to remark. This isn't fair to the girl. She may say she don't want to be an old married woman, but wants to stay single and enjoy her freedom and all, but—Mr. Editor, did you ever see a fellow with four clubs and a spade try to make the other fellows believe he had caught? That's what she's doing. They all do. They are the greatest four-flushers in the world.

Any fellow who has grown up so that he wears long trousers and a mustache ought to have acquired gumption nuf (excuse Latin) to know that if he don't want the goods he ought not to hang around the counter and keep others who might want to buy away.

And then, another thing. Any $3 a week princess in a department store can tell you that it is not lying on the counters and shelves that causes goods to become soiled and shop-worn, but handling, being looked over and cast aside while the "piller" looks at something else.

Things have changed a good deal Mr. Editor since you and I were young. In those days there were horse cars on the avenue, the Monument was a deserted chimney in a wilderness of mud. John Chamberlin kept the best eatin' joint in town and our own Teddy wasn't even heard of. But they did things better in those days. They had more time. But the boys didn't lose any time in securing partners for life's quadrille. At least that was my experience, and also the experience of many of those who hate me well enough to call themselves my friends. The fashions in courting appear to have changed as well as the fashions in women's clothes as the years have rolled by. I am a plain man and my wife is a plain woman, plainer than I am considerably, but for heaven's sake don't let her know that I said so. And by the way, Mr. Editor, don't let that bull-headed comp. put my name to this kick, because she reads THE TRADES UNIONIST as closely as I do, and more closely than your proofreader appears to do, for she finds every error. And the weather is too cold for me to sleep in the wood shed.

But to return to my kick. Boys when you are courting, and acquiring experience in the different brands of hot-air and face powder, always bear in mind that the feminine end of the sketch has some rights that a mere man is bound to respect.

Don't keep her sitting up with you until the milk man and the paper boy have made their rounds, burning up the old man's coal, doubling his gas bill, and wearing out his upholstery and patience unless you intend to relieve him of the support of the girl. And don't hesitate to let the family know what your intentions are. And tell the girl first. The fashions haven't changed in that respect.

And make your arrangements to marry early in the spring. And fix to have a home of your own. The girl may not know very much about keeping house, but she can learn. And it is better for her to practice on you during the time when the glamor of love's young dream throws its beatific halo about all the acts of the angel who has consented to make you happy than later, when the bloom has worn off the peach.

I know how it is myself, and guess you do, too, Mr. Editor. Would you eat in silence or even pretend to enjoy eating, at this day, such horrible meals as our young wives fed us before they found out that a man's heart and his stomach are closely related.

And don't spend so much money on the object of your affections before marriage that you can't get away from the money sharks after marriage long enough to buy a pair of shoes for her.

Live within your income, and don't be afraid or ashamed to let it be known that you are doing so. And for the sake of heaven and your own peace don't ever refer to any other woman as a fine looker, or a "peach" where your better half can hear of it. Be kind and considerate to your wife, and save her happiness and girlishness as long as possible. If you don't think this is good advice ask some old married man. Any old married man. And if he don't tell you that he wishes he had it all to go over again, so that he might correct a few of the mistakes he made in his ignorance you may call me a Parryite and I won't resent it. Of course, if you press him to enumerate a few of the mistakes he made so that you may avoid them and keep worrying him long enough, he may, if he's a sound old cynic and a grumbler and carper, and of a disagreeable disposition anyway, like some people whose names I will mention in these letters if they aren't more careful, he will tell you that the first and basic mistake of all was in getting married. He will say that it was like taking a marble or small snow-ball and rolling it in the snow until it accumulated more and more snow until it was as big as a house. The small troubles breed large ones like that. But don't be deterred by his miserable cynicism. Look around you and observe the number of widowers there are in comparison to the number of ex-widowers. I am not going to quote statistics. Have none to quote. I only say to you: Look around. You'll find a good many more ex's than widowers in the original package. They know a good thing, those old birds. And send invitations to the Editors of THE TRADES UNIONIST and the

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

A friend sent me the following the other day, which is a further argument in favor of debt-paying as a sound business proposition.

Apropos of what you said in your remarks in THE TRADES UNIONIST last week, I desire to cite a couple of instances, the two being within my personal knowledge.

A certain person possessed of the drink and panhandling habit approached one of the employes of the G. P. O. and asked for the loan of one dollar, giving as a reason for making the request that his boy needed a pair of shoes and could not go to school without them. The panhandler was drunk at the time. It was refused him in the belief that he was lying. Had he been a man of known integrity and character, though he was in his cups, I am sure his request would have been granted, for the man approached is a cheerful giver in every instance to a meritorious cause.

The second instance is this: An enployе of the G. P. O. lost a member of his family by death. He was in straitened circumstances, as was well known by a fellow-employe who had some money. Knowing personally of the correct habits, integrity, good character, and needy condition of the man, he went to him without solicitation and offered to assist him with the means at his command, and without a note, without security of any sort except his knowledge of the man, counted out to him several hundred dollars. His money was returned in satisfactory time with the profuse thanks of the beneficiary.

Your communication strikes the right note, and while you disclaim its being a sermon, yet I make bold to say that it is a sermon and a splendid one.

No, brother, it was not a sermon, for sermons argue for the conditions of affairs for high moral purposes, which I distinctly disclaimed, only urging personal probity for business reasons. Business men look on their credit as so much capital, to be preserved intact as any other capital, and we are all to a certain extent business men. It must be a humiliating thing to a man earning $4 a day not to have credit equal to the value of one poor day's pay, and he can only get in that condition by having demonstrated that he is not to be trusted and that his word is worthless. For that matter, it is humiliating to think that a man cannot at any time put his hand on a few dollars without resorting to his credit, though there are plenty whom you might turn upside down on any day except pay day without being able to shake fifty cents out of them, and they are not all drinking men either.

I am satisfied from the naturalness with which rhyming lines come from my friend McPike that he was born that way and the habit is inherent. In earliest childhood "he lisped in numbers, for the numbers came," as was said—I think by himself—of some great poet; and I am free to admit that as a rule his work is better than most of the tribe—not so liable to be splay-footed and knock-kneed. I really did not have McPike in my mind when I made my wail a couple of weeks ago, though it might have seemed so from the juxtaposition of the paragraphs. But as he appropriated my remarks to himself, I thought he might be more guilty than I had realized, and, feeling that he knew more about it than I did, I let him have his way about it. My objection lies not to poetry when even fairly well constructed, though I have always regarded it as an attempt to be interesting when one has nothing to say; it only arouses my resentment when it resembles the work of a blacksmith in a flower garden with carpenter's tools. Well-constructed poetry harms nobody; it only wastes space.

Ex-I. T. U. President William B. Prescott looked into the G. P. O. one evening last week—evening I said, for we were doing a little overtime when he came in. Mr. Prescott's work in the editorial section of the Inland Printer forms one of the most interesting features of that great magazine and one to which I never fail to give my closest attention. I do not always agree with him, but I don't know that that is any argument against the soundness of his positions.

* * * *

What a lot of bitterness of feeling in our personal association and intercourse would be avoided if we could but understand each other's motives and reasons! A word misunderstood, perhaps spoken under a misapprehension, and an enmity is originated that, without mutual explanations, grows and feeds itself. After it is started every act is distorted and aggressions are sought for and magnified. Every move of your supposed enemy has reference to yourself, wherever that motive can be ascribed to it, and every word is a studied insult, though you may feel at a loss sometimes how to apply it. If he attempts a joke, a sinister intent is discovered in it; the lightest remark is weighted with the deepest malevolence. The devotees of some religions get together once a year and settle all monetary differences between the members. Would it not be grand if we could get together once a year and have a thorough understanding, settle all misunderstandings, bury the tomahawk, wipe off the slates, and begin anew "with charity to all and malice toward none?" That would be next to the splendid practice of not taking offense or getting insulted until we are sure that offense and insult are intended. This has no bearing on my controversy with the poets.

The Star last Saturday had a splendid portrait of Grand Chancellor Thomas A. Bynum, of the Knights of Pythias of the District, in connection with the dedication of the new Pythian Temple. Under the Grand Chancellorship of Mr. Bynum the order has been prosperous, and the fact that the new temple has been built during his incumbency, and largely by his efforts, is a monument to his faithfulness and efficiency that will long endure.

A marked copy of a West Mansfield (Ohio) paper stated that my old friend "Texas" Smith was a guest of that office on Thanksgiving Day, the paragraph further stating that he had set type in every State and Territory of the Union and in the Hawaiian Islands. As he has spent over thirty-five years in almost constant travel, it might almost be said that he has set type in every city, village, and hamlet in the United States. Not a few here have known him in one place or another.

Shelby Smith made a brief visit to the G P. O one day last week, on his return from a duck-shoot on the lower Potomac, where his summer home is located. As the publisher of a labor paper in Philadelphia he is experiencing all kinds of prosperity, which is a matter of the greatest gratification to me as well as his friends here.

* * * *

A friend handed me a tract-shaped affair the other day, containing the inclosed interesting matter, which he said came to him by mail, without any means of identification except a badly blurred New York postmark. If trades unions are such desperate things as herein represented, the people ought to know it. At any rate, I am willing to contribute as far as I can to the publicity of such a puerile document, without further comment:

TRADE UNIONS.

Trade unions are bands of men who inflict injury on those who fail to accede to their lawless demands, It is therefore the duty of the people to rid the country of trade unions.

Trade unionism is rarely discussed. If it were, trade unions would soon cease to exist. The trade unionists carefully avoid discussing trade unionism in their publications and in their public utterances.

The trade unionists assume that lawless deeds are right if done by themselves. The law that applies to others should apply to them also.

There was a man in New York City named Parks who extorted money by threatening injury. He was sent to prison for the crime. Other trade unionists are extorting millions of dollars annually by the same means that Parks used, yet these are let go at large. Parks took the money as an individual, these others as an organization. The law says that money got by injury to person or property inflicted, threatened or implied, is stolen, and whether the money is taken by an individual or by men banded together does not change the crime.

An organization to be lawful must be composed of a voluntary membership. The great part of the men in unions are got there and kept there by force.

The means used to compel men to join the unions and to keep them there are unfair lists and entertainment committees, labels and brass knuckles, cards and lead pipe, fines and sand bags, assessments and wrecking crews, shot guns, torch and dynamite.

The law says men must be free to buy, sell and use material that it is lawful to buy, sell or use. It also says a man must be free to pursue his chosen vocation. These laws are so just and so essential to the higher development of the individual and to the true growth of a nation that they are believed in by all right-minded men. For this reason only the low-minded can be got into the unions except by force.

Th trade unionists demand that the man must give them money to pursue his vocation, that a boy must give them money to learn a trade, that a man must give them money who buys material the use of which they have forbidden; that a man must discharge a boy who is learning a trade under conditions different from those which they permit. For all this they have no authority in law, so in order to enforce these demands they injure property, strike down men, or both.

There never came before a people a plainer proposition than that of trade unionism. It is simply the question as to whether the laws made by the regularly constituted law making authorities are to prevail.

SOCIETY NOTES

Emile Hemmighoefer, employed in one of the Departments at Washington, who came home to vote, returns to his duties to-day. Mr. Hemmighoefer was accompanied here by Louis Nau, one of the most popular Washington bartenders. During their stay here the gentlemen were the guests of Mrs. Margaretha Spindler, of South Charles street. Both spent much time at the World's Fair. This was Mr. Nau's first visit to the great Middle West, and he was well entertained. Mr. Nau was well pleased with Belleville and her people, and more particularly with her pretty girls. It is whispered that Mr. Nau does not return to Washington as heart-whole and fancy-free as he came.—Belleville (Ill.) Morning Record, Nov. 10.

If Louis was mashed on a Belleville Dutch girl, it is no more than has happened to him here scores of times, but so far he has escaped entangling alliances. As a general proposition he is oftener the masher than the mashee, and Belleville probably contains another victim to his manly beauty and social charms. Emil, while not so beautiful, is a more seasoned flirt, and many a poor girl has had her hopes raised by his attentions, only to have them dashed to earth by his flight to another flower in his search for sweets. Giddy, giddy—devilish giddy butterflies of fashion both.

* * * *

Dr. R. I. Thomas, of the Proof Division, started for Los Angeles, Cal., on Tuesday, probably to spend the winter. He has two daughters residing in that summer city, to which he goes to escape the rigors of a Washington winter, which, in his great age—about 86 years—he feels very much. He asked that THE TRADES UNIONIST be forwarded to him, expressing the pleasure this great family journal gives both him and Mrs. Thomas.

Gen. William Birney spoke against Socialism at Building Trades Hall last Sunday evening, but I have not heard whether he totally annihilated the pernicious doctrine or not. Unfortunately, none of the city papers had any report of the meeting.

Have you noticed the subscription offer of THE TRADES UNIONIST?

Wm. Peacock was transferred to the night force. He has been a great traveler and has some very fine photographic views of Cuba neatly arranged in blank books.

Miss Olive I. Gilmore made a visit to the Ten-Cent Store Saturday night and dropped $10—on the floor, she thinks. There are no black arrows to indicate its exact location; but if you find it please return it to its real owner.

The Thanksgiving poem, "How to be Thankful," by Wm. Tipton Talbott, in THE TRADES UNIONIST of November 24, is well worthy a place in your scrap book. The sentiment so ably and forcefully expressed is a good one.

Miss Abbie Boutwell has resigned her position as compositor in this division. It is reported that Miss Boutwell will engage in the printing business with her father, who conducts a prosperous job office in Leominster, Mass. Her many friends wish her success in her new venture.

Luke J. Bennett has been transferred to the Third Division. He is a good advertisement for the relief association. For a number of years he has been a member of the G. P. O. Mutual Relief and never drew any benefit 'till recently, when he was taken with an ailment which incapacitated him for work for several months. He says he is mighty glad he was in the relief association; otherwise he would have a big debt to meet.

Greetings, friends, et al. It is safe to assume that everyone in the Gazette Division was more or less thankful for some one thing or many things when Thanksgiving Day arrived. I will refrain from specifying some particular thing which each member of the chapel gave thanks for because of the lack of originality in so doing. However, one member of our homiletic combination—one James E. Hoes—was cheered by the advent of a son and heir, and while the new arrival was a day late on the scene the rejoicing was just as genuine as if the calender had been properly "fixed" to suit the occasion—as they sometimes "fix" the clock on the Hill when there is something doing and time presses. Jim's "chesty" carriage since the "event" started the poetry-wheels of some of the hands. A few samples are submitted, which I hope the censors will treat leniently, or ignore:

Jim wears the smile that wont come off;
His face lights up with joy;
He's shaking hands with all his friends.
The cause? A nine-pound boy!

He's "Sunny Jim" just now, no doubt;
But wait for midnight "stunts"
Hunting paregoric, squills, and such;
'Tis then he'll be "Jim Dumps."

Memorial Services.

The Memorial Committee of Columbia Typographical Union have made all arrangements for the annual Memorial Service in honor of the deceased members of the Union, to be given at Typographical Temple next Sunday, December 6.

A program suitable to the occasion will be rendered. Jackson H. Ralston, a distinguished member of the bar of this city, and an honorary member of the Union, will be the principal speaker, and addresses will also be delivered by President John R. Berg, and ex-President Joe M. Johnson, of Columbia Union.

The numbers on the musical program have been selected with care and are appropriate to the service. Haley's orchestra will have charge of the instrumental feature of the exercises, and prominent soloists will make the vocal part of the service a success.

The committee have done their work well and now only desire a good attendance to attest appreciation of their work. The committee in charge is Philip S. Steele, S. J. Gompers, Wiley H. Davis, E. S. Wild and Henry Weber.

Song Recital.

Miss Eleanor Burges, of Pressfeeders Union, No. 42, wishes to announce to her many friends that she will give a song recital at the Washington Club, 1710 I street northwest, on December 7, at 8.30 o'clock. Tickets, fifty cents.

Miss Burges will also sing the part of "Mercedes" in the opera "Carmen," given by the operatic department of the Washington College of Music, assisted by the Washington Symphony Orchestra, Reginald DeKoven conductor, on Friday afternoon, December 2, 3.15 p. m., at the Columbia Theater.

Tickets for the recital may be had from Miss Burges, in the main press room, Government Printing Office.

It's easy for a minister to tell his congregation how to reach heaven, but he might find it difficult to personally conduct them there.

GOSSIP FROM THE G. P. O.

First Division.

Simon Pocher denies most positively that he found the Black Arrow.

Additional electric lights have been introduced in spots where most needed. Turn on the lights.

How are you pleased with your environments? Glad you were not disturbed? We thought so.

On the sick list this week are Comrades Gray, custodian of confidential vaults, and A. W. Sefton.

John Onyun, of the day side, was the last transfer to the Night Force. Sorry to part with our genial friend.

Are you going on the night side on the next detail? Only a few days more and all doubts will be removed.

"Pard" Bloomer struck the bull's eye squarely in the center last week in his well-timed homily on money-borrowers and money-lenders.

M. De W. Siewers, of this division, was robbed of $37 in cold cash and one dressed turkey on Thanksgiving eve. Residence—115 B street northeast.

We understand that during the past week the beneficiaries of the late Fred. W. Grose and C. A. Hughes received the life insurance—$1,000 in each case.

Harry W. Templar, slug 93, has been transferred to the Proof Room, night side, and made copy-collator. A good selection, as Temp. is a star-printer, and don't you forget it.

The last compositor to return from his leave, was slug 143, Elmer E. Schooley, temporarily assigned to Captain Bonney's subdivision, second floor of the new building.

John H. Kettner, elevator conductor, has been transferred from the G street side, to the south "gold" elevator at main entrance—North Capitol street front. Succeeds Joseph N. Benner.

Louis V. Woulfe, clerk in the office of Foreman of Printing, was one of the large crowd that visited the City of Brotherly Love on Saturday and witnessed the Army and Navy foot-ball game.

Since the result of the Indian foot-ball game at the World's Fair on Saturday last between the Haskell and Carlisle Indians, the two Carlisle Indians in this division act like a runaway team. Carlisle won, of course.

Moses Cohen, a most exemplary citizen, who died suddenly at his residence, 1130 Eighth street northwest, on Tuesday, November 22, had many warm friends not only in this division, but in the Government Printing Office.

In alighting from a street car a few evenings since, Judge Holeman, who holds down slug 162, had the misfortune to make a misstep, falling to the ground, receiving a severe shaking up, and detaining him from work the following day.

At the wedding of Miss Lucy Catherine Oyster, daughter of that well-known representative of the typographical fraternity, E. W. Oyster, to George Horner Ward, which took place recently at the Foundry M. E. Church, E. J. Wilber was one of the ushers.

We believe it was thoroughly understood when we volunteered to correspond for this division, we would note all changes, etc. The following are the quotations for this week, consequent upon the transfers to the night side: Siewers, slug 2 to 98; Butler, slug 12 to 79; Cooley, 154 to 96, and Andy Goebel, from 29 to 113—not 13.

We have been informed that recent advices from Portland, Me., state that our late fellow-compositor, George H. Ball, will be obliged to spend the present winter in the pine woods up in the Rangeley Lake region—the nature of his disease requiring this heroic treatment. The kindest wishes of his old division are extended to him in his hour of trial.

Key-board, yes, that's it exactly. We have heard considerable the past few months with reference to "practicing on the key-boards." But that is not what we have reference to in this item. We mean the bran new board on which to place the keys to the lockers when not in use. Yes, every compositor or employe has a locker assigned to him, whether on the day or night side and the board is located within the cage.

Query. Was it not an oversight in not having some distinguishing mark on the various floors of the new building, not only for the information of the thousands of visitors who pass through, but for the guidance of the employes? Aside from other considerations it would be easy for the guide, the stranger would know at a glance what floor he was on without inquiring. Then, too, why shouldn't we know where we are at?

The Night Force for the season of 1904-05 held its first session Monday evening, November 28, 1904, and numbers about seventy compositors, located on the G street side. It goes without repeating that C. E. Young is the foreman or superintendent, properly speaking, with Messrs. Jas. H. Ross, Jno. Greene, jr., and Chas. W, Burnett, promoters. Business hours, on clock-time—5 p. m. to 1.30 a. m., with an intermission of 30 minutes—9 to 9 30—for lunch or refreshments. The transfer from our division, included the following well known persons—T. M. Donn, imposer; A. L. Huss, Geo. A. Tuttle, Geo. E. Breitenbach, Geo. H. Sehorn, W. F. Crump and E. S. Wild, case-workers; Geo. A. Robey and Richard N. Carter, laborers; helper, J. A. Bell. A mighty good selection and we don't much care who knows it. Chas. Rudy came down from the Job Room last week, and took a position at the copy desk.

After a vacation of one week Machinist Claud Pendarvis reported for work on Monday.

J. A. Scannell returned last week from a pleasant visit with the home folks in Massachusetts.

After a visit of several months at his home in Wisconsin, Percy Reid resumed his position as a helper on machines last Monday.

Assistant B. F. Constantine, who was called to Illinois recently on account of the illness of his sister, is back at his desk. Mr. Constantine left his sister in a precarious condition.

Timekeeper Ekward S. Moores has returned from a trip which included Wisconsin and the Indian Territory. During his absence his place was ably filled by Imposer Chas. Slentz.

Several of those who daily watch the construction of the new union depot from the south windows of the new building have expressed the belief that its completion and the final adoption of Columbia Union's new constitution will take place about the same time.

The friends of W. J. Reed, the cartoonist, will be pleased to learn that he is progressing nicely in his studies at the Corcoran Art School. Mr. Reed is possessed of a natural talent for pen and ink work, and some day I expect to see his name as familiar to the public as are those of Davenport, Opper, or Gibson.

The breaking up of the Record proof room last Saturday is but another indication of the coming of Congress. Assistant J. A. Huston has had a pretty nice bunch of trusties and the order for disbandment was the cause of many regrets. Among those whose lamps were trimmed and burning and ready for the summons for night duty were Messrs. Brockwell, Buchanan, Hambright, Hayne, Hyler, Joe M. Johnson, Miller, O'Connell, Sargent, Schildroth, and Robinson.

I have seen all sorts of chairmen collect dues in my time, but the manner in which Chairman Hayden does business would make the man who beats the lunch lady give up with pleasure. George came in Monday morning wearing a new $40 suit and a $7 pair of shoes. He hung a $5 hat and a $60 overcoat up in his locker and announced that he needed money. After the paymaster had paid his visit to this room the crowd simply fell over each other in an effort to hand him the long green.

Members of Columbia Union should not overlook the fact that Sunday next is the second annual memorial service of Columbia Union. Chairman Steele and his committee have worked hard to make a program that will be pleasing to all, and while I am not posted as to all those who will participate, I feel that the mere mention of such well-known artists as Will E. Burchfield, Tom Jones, and the charming Mrs. Jessie Spencer Hover is sufficient to insure the success of the exercises.

For the first time in a good many years just how many I do not know—ladies are attached to the Record force. Miss Jessie Burke and Miss Mae White are detailed from the Gazette division and frequently spend an afternoon at the Mergenthaler keyboard. While I personally did all in my power to reduce the number of lady compositors in the G. P. O. (by marriage to one) I am not prejudiced to their employment. Nor do I believe prejudice exists among the men composing the Record force. It is a good thing to have them with us and from the large number who volunteer assistance of all kinds I should say they are doubly welcomed.

One of the largest jobs so far turned over to Foreman John R. Berg for machine composition has been a hearing of the Interstate Commerce Commission. Although by no means the most difficult one handled, it has been, nevertheless, a good test of both operator and machine, being filled with small caps and quad lines. When it is considered that the great majority of the operators are yet in the infant class as regards the speed which they will eventually attain, and the rapidity and neat manner in which the work was executed, there is very little left for the calamity howler who has published all sorts of calamities for the Mergenthalers in relation to its adaptability for Government work.

Now that we are face to face with another session of Congress I sincerely hope that Representative James Richardson will not forget the statement he made last spring of his intention to try and secure sick leave for employes of the G. P. O. While he may not desire such, I do not believe he would turn down the services of a committee appointed by Columbia Union to assist him in his efforts. The idea that a Government printer is not as justly entitled to sick leave as a Government clerk is so obviously unjust as to need no argument. If success should attend his laudable efforts I predict that some day the name of the gentleman from Tennessee will take its place in printer history along side of those of Childs, Drexel and the late-lamented Amos Cummings.

"Pard" Bloomer's arraignment of certain correspondents last week struck me as rather amusing. His admission that he himself was at one time a novice at the literary business will undoubtedly pass undisputed by all readers of THE TRADES UNIONIST. But why should he be so severe on all those who have not yet reached that high altitude in the world of letters; why should he, the writer of sermons, look with scorn upon the novice who says that "Blankety Blank has built a new fence," or that "Slug so and so sports a new pair of shoes." To reach the lofty position which "Pard" occupies as a writer has required years upon years of practice and study, and patience on the part of the readers. In the face of the evidence it would seem as if the esteemed Bloomer was entirely to severe in his arraignment of some of us poor struggling aspirants for literary honors. But, after all, probably he is only following the example set by our Savior by chastizing those whom he loves best.

At the outset of this brief item I wish again to beg the pardon of the members of the Ladies Auxiliary for mixing into their affairs. A meeting of that most interesting body will be held on Monday night when the annual election of officers and other business will come before it. Among the candidates for presidential honors are Mrs. Webb and Mrs. Hyler. Either one will probably make an able and efficient officer and reflect credit upon the organizaton. There is some opposition among the membership to allowing the lady compositors employed to remain members of the Auxiliary. If the ladies possessed of such opinions will stop to consider that it was chiefly due to the lady compositors that the organization was perfected and brought to the fore and placed on a solid financial basis, they must certainly see the injustice of allowing these ladies to be separated from the organization. But should the time ever come when the lady compositors are compelled to retire from the body they helped to create, I sincerely hope they will again organize themselves into a society, the object of which will be sociability and assistance to the Typographical Union.

Some people contribute liberally to a subscription for money to be used in the purchase of a testimonial to some one who may be in a position to reciprocate, but invariably give the blank stare and "go by" to every appeal for charitable aid, and as regularly turn away from every plea for help to those who need but a pittance from each to win in a fight against a reduction of wages already too small. There is but one effective way to reach this class, which, happily, is of the minority, and that is by appropriation.

It may be that people who enjoy the fulness of things material are honest in their conclusions that those who are less favored have little cause for complaint, that the less favored continually dwell in an atmosphere of imaginary evils, and that to allow these a greater share of the comforts of life or anything approaching the luxuries would be to them a curse rather than a blessing Some very good people have supported this view, and some who are equally as good have abandoned them to accept the more rational, which recognizes the right of labor to the full enjoyment of all it produces; and now as a departure from private owenership and monopoly of utilities we are rapidly heading toward public or community control, hastened by excessive capitalistic arrogance and a brazen disregard of chartered privileges. The elements of discord are always apparent and a part of great reforms, and are as necessary for the purposes intended as the disturbed atmospheric conditions which precede and promote the storm—after which the calm.

NAVY-YARD ITEMS.

A naval examining board composed of Pay Inspector Hunt, Paymaster Leutze, and Assistant Paymaster Hancock is now in session examining candidates as to their qualifications for the position of assistant paymaster in the Navy.

The famous old Hartford, the flagship of Admiral Farragut, has been with us for a week, with a full complement of jackies, for the purpose of taking part in the ceremonies attending the unveiling of the statue of Frederick the Great. Thousands of visitors from this and other jurisdictions have visited the Yard to see this famous old ship, which has so remarkable a history.

I have received a copy of the Naval Apprentice, and it is certainly an interesting publication. The paper is devoted to interests of naval apprentices and enlisted men, and is published at the Newport Training Station by F. J. Buenzle, chief yeoman.

Secretary Morton has issued a general order, prohibiting, in the strongest terms, a practice which has grown up in recent years in the Navy Department, Navy Yards, and Naval Stations, of collecting money for, and receiving gifts. The Secretary directs attention to the fact that this practice is in violation of the statutes, and he insists that it must be stopped under penalty of dismissal of both the donors and receivers.

Captain E. C. Pendleton, superintendent of the Naval Gun Factory, has submitted his annual report to the Secretary of the Navy. It is as follows:

New machinery to replace those obsolete, $150,000.

New sighting shop, $87,000; machinery for and installing same for this shop, $150,000.

New brass, iron, and steel foundry and yard buildings, $300,170; machinery and equipments for same, $121,075.

New building for the manufacture of guns of small caliber $190,000; machinery for same, $368,930.

New locomotive, $8,000.

New boilers and installing same, $50,000.

New locomotive house, $61,747; machinery for same, $12,000.

New forge shop, $134,937; tools and machinery for same, $148,000.

Extension of East and West Gun Carriage Shop and Erecting Shop, $334,448; machinery for same, $660,232.

Grand total, $2,776,539.

This report of the superintendent and his recommendations is of such a character which should interest every citizen of Washington, principally the Board of Trade, the Business Men's Association, the various Citizens' Associations, the merchant, the banker, and the railroad corporations.

It should also receive the cordial support of the Grand Lodge of the International Association of Machinists and the American Federation of Labor.

Why?

If Congress appropriates the amount asked for, not counting the temporary work that will ensue in the building of these shops and the money expended thereby which will find its way to all branches of trade, but the permanent feature is the one most interesting. After these shops are completed it will be necessary to employ one thousand more machinists and other mechanics at an annual salary of $1,000,000, added to the enormous expenditure in wages now paid to employes, approximately $2,000,000, making a total of $3,000,000 per year.

Is this not food for thought? Is this not enough to interest the different classes of men and institutions enumerated?

I have closely followed the action of the associations of other cities and I find it almost universal that prompt action is taken to promote mercantile industry. If this can be true of cities where all improvements must necessarily increase taxation, why should it not be the case in this city, where the citizen only bears his proportion to the whole country in Government improvements.

Think for a moment what an increase of 1,000 mechanics means, with an additional million of dollars to be expended. There is not a merchant in this city, from the smallest grocery to the largest mercantile house, but will be benefited.

Property will advance as the population increases, because houses will be in demand at a good rental. The merchant will be benefited because there will be a greater demand for the necessaries of life, and so on, ad infinitum.

In my judgment there can be no excuse offered by any association why they should not take up such a momentous question when it involves no expenditure of money on their part, but, to the contrary, the great benefits that will accrue to all by the expenditure of this money through its many channels of trade.

But to do this will require work. Committees should be appointed from each association—workers and not drones, who will labor night and day unceasingly for this purpose.

The papers announce that Charles Schwab will commence at an early day to build a plant equal if not superior to the great Krupp works of Germany, for the purpose of building guns, mounts, and all accessories thereto. There is a serious side to this proposition. The shops of the Naval Gun Factory, working as they are with three shifts of men, are unable to meet the requirements. The shops are congested with material; castings are piled on castings, making it dangerous to the lives of the workingmen. As an instance of this a worthy mechanic was killed a few weeks ago by castings tumbling over.

Now as to the result. As soon as Mr. Schwab completes his great plant the first move on his part will be to secure all the surplus over and above the amount of work that can be done in the Gun Factory. Will it stop there is a question. Can it be said that he will not endeavor to secure contracts that will place the Naval Gun Factory in the category of a repair shop.

We all remember before Secretary Whitney changed the Navy Yard into a gun factory the many days of idleness on account of deficiencies in appropriations as controlled by the different bureaus in the Yard. Such is not now the case. Men have regular work and thereby are enabled to meet their expenses.

Do the business men of Washington wish to go back to these times, when mechanics in the Yard seldom worked more than half the year? I trust not. Therefore it behooves us all, great and small, to join hands with the superintendent of the Naval Gun Factory and uphold him in his efforts to make the Gun Factory of this city the greatest on earth.

Columbia Lodge, No. 175, I. A. of M., held its regular meeting Wednesday night. Under the good of the order the following subject was debated by Bro. George Preston, secretary of the Grand Lodge, and Bro. Fred Brennan:

"Resolved, That a closed shop is impracticable in Government service."

Brother Preston made an eloquent plea for the closed shop, while Brother Brennan, speaking against his convictions, took the Parry end.

Brother Brennan received the prize, which was duly smoked by all present.

Say not it matters not to me
My brother's weal is his behoof,
For in this wondrous human web
If your life's warp, his life is woof.

Woven together are the threads,
And you and he are in one loom;
For good or ill, for glad or sad,
Your lives must share one common doom.

There let the daily shuttle glide,
Wound full with threads of kindly care,
That life's increasing length may be
Not only strongly wrought but fair.

So from the stuff of each new day
The loving hand of time shall take
Garments of joy and peace for all
And human hearts shall cease to ache.

We have a lot of grumblers in our Lodge who never attend the meetings, yet find fault with anything done by those who do. I have a rod in pickle for them, and they will hear from me in a short time. It will be a Caudle lecture.

The seamen gunners in the Yard gave a ball Thanksgiving eve. It was one of the best of the season and was enjoyed by all present. Many officers and their families attended, joining with the jackies in making it a success. This is but one of the many balls that will take place during the season.

TIM TICKLE.

Ladies' Dining Room. R. A. Driscoll, N. Cap. and G. Oyster pan roast, 10c.

BOOMER-ANG.

I wouldn't have struck you quite so hard,
Had I believed you'd suffer so, old Pard.
I should have thought how much you are the older,
Before I knocked the chip from off your shoulder.

But now you're whipped, just bear it like a man
And in the future act a little wiser, if you can.
"Silence is golden," so the proverb goes,
You've this to learn, as everybody knows.

You 'mind me of a boy I used to know at school,
When he'd been licked; the little fool
Would hid behind his fence and "sass"
The boy who licked him as he'd pass.

Don't dodge the issue by nickname and drivel,
But do your best to be polite and civil;
You "Mistered" me, perhaps I ought to state,
That time you ran for delegate.

And now, as you've been criticising me,
Let's turn about, and I your critic be.
I'll try and make the diagnosis fair,
And not like yours, full of hot air.

You seem to be affected with pomposity,
And have, by far, too much verbosity.
If you had less of these and more precision
You would not then be subject to derision.

Quality, not quantity, is what the people need;
There's altogether too much chaff mixed with your seed.
Just take the hint—you've had your day,
And from the public gaze should pass away.

William Kennedy Dead.

William Kennedy, of Chicago, was found dead in bed at his home on Thanksgiving Day. Mr. Kennedy has failed in health for several years past, but his death was unexpected. Probably no man enjoyed a wider acquaintance among printers throughout the country than Mr. Kennedy, his position as foreman of the Inter-Ocean, bringing him in contact with the traveling members of the craft. He was a true friend to the members of the craft and has been practically in retirement since he resigned from the foremanship of the Inter Ocean about a year ago. He was filling the position of agent of the Union Printers Home at the time of his death, having been practically selected unanimously at the recent I. T. U. election.

David J. Snyder Dead.

David J. Snyder, a well-known employe of the Government Printing Office, where he was employed in the Second Division, died at his home last night. Mr. Snyder suffered a stroke of paralysis about three years ago and never fully recovered from it. He was an ardent union man and was a favorite with all his fellow workers in the G. P. O.

Mr. Snyder came to Washington about twelve years ago from Indiana, and took an active part in union affairs up to the time he became incapacitated through illness. During his first years as a journeyman printer he worked in nearly all the large printing centers and was well informed on craft matters.

Pioneer Printer Dead.

DeWitt C. Hotchkiss, of St. Louis, Mo., one of the oldest employes of the Globe-Democrat of that city, died recently in that city.

Mr. Hotchkiss was a veteran of the civil war, being mustered out as a lieutenant. He represented St. Louis Typographical Union and Detroit Typographical Union at I. T. U. conventions and was prominent in the affairs of St. Louis Union. He was one of the "Old Guard" that always remained true to union principles and helped to make St. Louis Union strong and prosperous.

Aven Pearson Dead.

Aven Pearson, foreman of the Treasury Branch of the Government Printing Office, died to night after a short illness. Mr. Pearson was for years connected with the Government Printing Office, most of the time being in charge of the Congressional Record composing room.

Mr. Pearson was a veteran of the civil war, and a member of the G. A. R. A kind and lovable man, he had a host of friends among the craft on account of his many good traits of character. He was seventy-two years of age, but up to his death he displayed a vigor remarkable for one of his years.

Union Label Carnival.

At a recent meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary of Columbia Typographical Union a committee was appointed to consider the feasibility of holding an exhibition in this city comprising all union-made articles that bear the label.

Similar exhibitions have met with great success in other cities, principally in Northern New York, and great good has been accomplished in calling attention to union-made goods and the label they bear.

It is proposed to hold the exhibition in the early part of next year, but nothing will be done unless it can be made an assured success.

NAVY-YARD ITEMS.

TIM TICKLE GOES HUNTING.

For ten days I have been on vacation, necessarily I will have no specific items this week. Taking advantage of the generosity of Uncle Sam.

I did not do as Brother Smithson, destroy all the mallard ducks at Giesboro; or like Friend Lynch, purchase all the drakes in Alexandria and endeavored to palm them off as canvas backs on his unsuspecting friends as the victims of his gun; but to the contrary I hied myself to Southern Maryland and have just returned loaded down with rabbits, squirrels, and partridges. I almost forgot to mention a big fat 'possum I intended to send to my great and good critic who writes such good stuff for THE TRADES UNIONIST.

A mutual friend has advised me against such action, as he says "Pard" would "slobber" over trying to make 'possum and sweet potato rhyme. So I have taken his advice, so as to ease the readers of your paper the embarrassment and necessarily the loss of time in trying to follow my good friend in his endeavor to perform something that is so foreign to his nature. So I have presented the varmint to our mutual friend, who no doubt will tell "Pard" what he missed in not partaking of the luscious fruit of Charles County.

Possibly I have done wrong in so doing, maybe if "Pard" had greased himself well with this delicious fruit he might get into a condition to slide through the difficult labyrinth of poetic effusions.

But space is precious, and I will change to another subject.

A LETTER TO THE FILIPINOS.

You Filipinos don't know what you are missing by not wanting to become citizens of this grand country of ours. There isn't any thing like it under the sun. You ought to send a delegation over to see us, the land of the free, land of churches, and over 400,000 licensed saloons and innumerable "speak-easies."

We have a fine collection of bibles, forts and guns; also a thousand or more of millionaires and a large army of tramps. A mixture of theologians and thieves, libertines and liars, politicians and poverty, Christians and chaingangs, schools and scalawags, trusts and paupers, money and misery, homes and hunger, virtue and vice; a land where you can buy a Bible for fifteen cents and a bad drink of whiskey for five; where we have a man in Congress with three wives and several in the "pen" for having two; where some men make sausage out of their wives and some want to eat them raw; where we make bologna out of dogs, canned beef out of dead horses and sick cows, and "stiffs" out of those who eat it; where we put a man in the work house for not having the means of support and in the chaingang for asking for bread; where we license bawdy houses and fine men for preaching Christ on the street corners; where we have a Congress of 400 men who make laws and a Supreme Court of nine men to set them aside; where good whiskey makes bad men and bad men make good whiskey; where newspapers are paid to suppress the truth and made rich for telling a lie; where professors draw their convictions from the same place they do their salaries; where preachers are paid $25,000 a year to dodge the devil and tickle the ear of the wealthy; where business consists of obtaining wealth and property in any manner that won't land you in the "pen"; where the trusts hold you up and poverty holds you down; where men vote for what they do not want for fear they will not get what they do want by voting for it; where a girl who goes wrong is made an outcast and her male friend is treated as a gentleman; where women wear false hair and men "dock" their horses tails; where men vote for a thing one day and cuss it the remaining 364; where we spend $500 to bury a statesman who is rich and $10 to put away a workingman who is poor; where to be virtuous is to be lonesome and to be honest is to be classed as a crank; where we pay $5,000 for a pet dog and fifteen cents per dozen to a poor woman for making shirts; where we teach the Indian the Bible and kill him with bad whiskey; where we put a man in jail for stealing a loaf of bread and elect him to Congress if he captures a railroad; where the checkbook speaks loud; where corruption permeates our whole social and political fabric and the devil awaits the unfortunate on every street corner.

Come over to us Fillies. We have got the greatest aggregation of good things and bad things, hot stuff and cold things, all sizes and all varieties and colors ever exhibited under the sun. Won't you please come and be Christianized?

THE AGE LIMIT.

Recently I read the statement that the Pennsylvania Railroad Co., Carnegie Steel Works, and several other corporations had issued orders that no further additions to the working forces of men who had passed the thirty-fifth year should be made.

Has it come to this, that a man who has just arrived at a time in life when boyish pranks cease and mature judgment commences, to discover there is no middle life?

Has it come to this, that if a man wishes to see his children arrive at a working age he will be compelled to enter matrimony while he is yet in knee breeches?

Has it come to this, that we who have passed the limit must now be railroaded to the poor house?

Sooner than this I would like to see Congress enact a law compelling all workingmen, after passing the age limit prescribed by Dr. Carnegie and his ilk, to submit themselves to the pound master in the city in which they reside and then and there put to death by the latest and most improved scientific manner.

If this should happen a grand opening would present itself to the great philanthropists of the day.

In place of endowing colleges and public libraries, where the poor never enter, they could find an avenue, a distributing center, by building homes for our dependent widows and orphans.

What a splendid opportunity. Over the ashes of those old men who had outlived their usefulness at thirty-five a home erected for those who were dependent on him. The thought is one of joy and pleasure, for the reason we will not then, as we do now, strive and labor to save up something for our loved ones when we have passed over the river.

We could rejoice and be glad to know that our loved ones would be amply provided with everything except the presence of their husbands and fathers.

WHEN I AM OLD.

Dedicated to the Captains of Industry.

[Subject to criticism by A. F. B.]

When I am old and feeble and sere,
I wot not but that I be in the way;
'Tis a cruel thought, and yet oft I fear
That they'll wish me sleeping under the clay.
They'll think me a useless cypher here
Because I am old and feeble and sere.

When I am old they'll have me a chair,
A chair as decrepit as gray as I;
Where I'll sit and think of my boyhood fair,
And muse, and sigh; and if e'er I cry
They'll think me a child, and wish me asleep
On a pillow, a clay bed, six feet deep.

When I am old and this supple frame
Bends down 'neath a burden of care and grief,
And these eyes are dim, and these limbs are lame,
And I lean on a staff for a short relief,
They'll try to be kind, and gently scold
And think that I feel not because I am old.

When I am old it will wring my heart
To be overlooked by neglected ones;
To suffer and pine, to ache and smart
From the cruel words of reckless tongues.
I shall sit away in some corner alone
And grieve that I've aged and feeble grown.

If when I get old they'll use me so
They will fail to be kind to my helpless years;
Long, long ere such time may come, may I go
To a happier home—a home without tears;
A home without pains, but with pleasures untold
Where none is heard saying, "Thirty-five; you're too old."

ANNUAL MEMORIAL SERVICE

Columbia Typographical Union, 101, Pays Homage to Its Dead.

THIRTY-TWO DIED DURING YEAR

Music and Choral Service of a High Order of Excellence—The Temple Well Filled With Members and Friends—Addresses by Ex-President Joe M. Johnson and Jackson Ralston, an Honorary Member of Columbia Typographical Union.

A large attendance of members of Columbia Typographical Union and friends were present at Typographical Temple on Sunday afternoon on the occasion of the second annual memorial service in honor of deceased members of the Union who died during the past year.

Will A. Haley's orchestra gave selections from Verdi's "Memorial," which was followed by prayer by Rev. E. B. Bagby, pastor of the Ninth Street Christian Church.

A trio, composed of Mrs. Jessie Spencer Hover, Mrs. Nellie V. Suess, and Miss Nettie Wallace, rendered "Savior, Again to Thy Dear Name," which was well received.

President John R. Berg, of Columbia Typographical Union, made a few remarks relative to the service, and called on Secretary George G. Seibold to call the roll of the dead during the past year.

Secretary Seibold made a few brief remarks on the uncertainty of life, and said that our Union had contributed its share to the Grim Reaper, and read the roll of the dead. The list is as follows:

Daniel Grady	Fred. A. Hall
J. C. Martin	James B. Harris
Gomer C. Davis	C. M. Roberts
C. O. Alexander	J. B. Harne
William H. Hickman	J. W. Thomas
Orlando Gibson	Charles L. Crow
Sidney T. Bates	William H. Towers
J. L. Welty	Albert E. Ingalls
B. F. Hackman	George D. Hughes
E. P. Cummins	Thaddeus Slentz
A. J. McGuiggan	James B. Canfield
F. A. Saxton	E. R. Sprague
John C. Lamont	August M. Laing
H. M. Armistead	Howard W. Morrison
F. F. Grose	David J. Snyder
James E. Fitzgerald	Aven Pearson

At the conclusion of the roll call "taps" were sounded by the cornetist of the orchestra, the effect being solemn and weird in the silence.

Wiley H. Davis then gave a good rendition of "The Trumpeter," his tenor voice carrying the audience along with him in the pathos expressed in the song.

Chopin's Funeral March was played by the orchestra, which was followed by an address by Joe M. Johnson, ex-President of Columbia.

Ex-President Joe M. Johnson said in part:

We have met to-day to pay respect to the memory of our fellow-craftsmen who have fallen in the battle of life, and in doing so Columbia Union honors itself. I do not know whether all of those who have passed over the river were Christians in the common acceptation of the term, but I do know that as Union men, like the Apostle Paul, they have fought a good fight and have kept the faith. It has often been necessary to suffer hardship and deprivation, but they were ever ready to make the sacrifice, and whatever the circumstance they realized that their cause was a just one, and they kept the faith—and who shall say that the benefits accruing to the organization, and to the world as well, by their maintenance of the principles of unionism do not entitle them to be called Christians? Whatever faults may have been theirs I would write them on the sands, and gratefully acknowledge the debt of gratitude we owe to those who have contributed to the upbuilding of the structure of unionism and the amelioration of conditions which furnish a test calculated to try men's souls. Amd so, to those, our brothers who have gone before, we would pay a loving tribute for their manly qualities and unswerving allegiance to the cause which makes for our common good.

The orchestra rendered "Intermezzo Sinfonico" by Mascagni, which was followed by a baritone solo, "Eternal Day," rendered in his usual good manner by Will E. Burchfield.

The Nordica Mandolin Club rendered selections from "Tannhauser," the audience following closely the rendition of the piece.

President Berg, in a few words, introduced Jackson H. Ralston, a well-known member of the local bar, and an honorary member of Columbia Union, to deliver the principal address of the service.

Mr. Jackson H. Ralston spoke in part as follows:

When I was asked to address you this afternoon at this memorial meeting I gladly accepted the invitation, as it would afford an opportunity to not only testify my high regard for our deceased brothers, but also repay in part, if I might, the debt I owe to the Union for benefits and favors received in my earlier days. This roll of thirty-two members of the organization who have died during the past year contains the names of many of those with whom I was personally acquainted, some of them as long as twenty-five years ago. They were men of sterling character, ever ready to battle for the right as represented in the cause which they held most dear, but they have turned in their last take; they have corrected their last proof; they have heard the last call of time! We do well to honor their memory, as they were instrumental in putting the standard of the Union where it is to-day—in the forefront of the ranks of organized labor.

Mrs. Jessie Spencer Hover, with great feeling, rendered "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," which was followed by "Cujus Animam" from the orchestra, Mr. A. E. Knowlton, the cornetist, carrying the solo part throughout with good effect.

Thomas L. Jones, the popular tenor soloist, sang "The Choir Invisible" as only he knows how to sing it, and was followed by the benediction given by Rev. E. B. Bagby.

To the strains of "Hearts and Flowers" by the orchestra the large audience passed out, well pleased with the service, which was both artistic and appropriate.

Mrs. Bessie N. Wild was the accompanist, and, as always, her work was artistic.

The committee in charge of the service are to be congratulated on the excellence of the program arranged for the service and the manner in which the service was conducted. The committee is as follows: Philip S. Steele, chairman; S. J. Gompers, Wiley H. Davis, E. S. Wild, and Henry W. Weber.

The Question of Wage Scales.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

It was a pleasure to read the courteous letter of Mr. Shields in THE TRADES UNIONIST last week. Naturally he defends the principle enunciated in the interpretation placed on the Washington scale of prices, as he believes it is right. Others, however, are just as honest in the opinion that it is not the proper basis of interpretation. As stated in my previous article, the meaning of the Washington idea is plainly that the best man in town is worth no more than the scale provides, "no matter in what capacity he may be employed." There may be some who are paid above the scale, but if there are any aside from foremen it is not generally known.

Mr. Shields has the impression that if a man can get more than the scale the union should have a hand in the matter. Not at all. That is where the chance for the individual comes in. All the union can reasonably be expected to do is to enforce a minimum scale and see that every worker in the trade gets at least that much. But it should not put up a bar and say no one should get more if he can convince his employer that it is profitable to pay higher for his services. Therein lies the fault here. He is absolutely prohibited from making such a request, although the office may raise the wages if it so desires. Does that happen? Not on your life. On the contrary the foreman picks out the high grade man and sets his work up as a standard which all must attain. Not long ago a good ordinary compositor applied for work in an ad room here. The foreman's first query was:

"Can you take the copy of a page ad, lay it out, choose the type and arrange the whole thing?"

The applicant said he could probably do so after he became familiar with the office style, etc, but he was given no chance whatever. That is an extreme case, but it shows the tendency—to demand the very best kind of work for the minimum pay. Printers of experience well know that the handling of page ads in the manner mentioned is high grade work, and men who can do it successfully should be entitled to extra pay for what they are able to do.

Another thing, don't lose sight of the fact that we are all out for the dollars—as many of them as we can get for our work. Also keep in mind that employers are engaged in the same merry chase. Pin down these two facts. Now, under which plan do the printers get the most money? Even citing the unhappy condition of things in the State of deportations it will be seen that the printers there get $4 a week extra by reason of the fact that they are not prohibited from asking for it. In the same town, with the job scale at $20 a week for eight hours there are numerous instances where experts in job composition, or other special lines, receive much more than the scale. Such is their superior ability that the employers gladly pay the extra money and believe they are benefiting themselves by so doing. So you see when the limit is removed and the workers can demand higher pay if he wants to, more money is forthcoming. A greater share of the dollars comes the way of the worker. Hammer a nail in there and don't let the fact get away.

When the contention is made that Washington has the best news scale in the United States there is room for a difference of opinion. According to the Typographical Journal, Seattle, Spokane, Helena, Butte, Anaconda, and I believe San Francisco, have $4.50 a day for seven hours, night work, which is a little in advance over here. But when it comes to comparing Washington with cities in which piecework prevails it is left way behind. New Orleans has seven hours and the earnings are far ahead of anything here. But the star town of them all is Galveston, where they work only five hours and at piece work make as much and more than can be earned in Washington working seven hours. St. Louis still has eight hours, according to latest information, and earnings are about 33⅓ per cent greater than in Washington. In the places mentioned having piece work it can be readily recognized the machine men get paid fairly for the total amount of product, and each man gets the full benefit of his superiority. No maximum limit is set, and so each individual has an incentive to work hard. There, you see, is the ideal condition for the individual development. He gets the dollars, and lots more of them than he possibly could under a flat scale. Fasten that down with a spike.

An anomalous condition under this flat scale plan is presented here. Not even a foreman can demand over the scale. Hence, in one job room, I am informed, a foreman is actually receiving $1 a week less than several of the men he hires, and at the same time works at least an hour a day longer and has all the added responsibility. What is more, he could be reduced in pay still lower, and his only remedy would be to quit his job. Isn't it beautiful, this leveling process?

Every ambitious worker desires to progress. His success is largely measured by the amount of shekels his services command. Our employers never tire of telling us to work for the sake of the work itself and not to have our eyes fixed so eternally on filthy lucre. Do they ever let their gaze wander from that same attractive pile? Hardly. Such talk on their part is only an attempt to get us to fix our gaze on the glories of the sky while they proceed to gather in and enjoy all the good things on earth. Those who work for a living must concentrate some attention on earthly things if they are to enjoy any of the comforts of this life.

The greater part of the whole trouble lies in the fact that nowhere in this country is there a fixed standard or measure of what the worker shall give for the money he receives. Employers in every line have a minimum below which no one is allowed to fall. By hook or crook, flattery or force, that minimum is raised gradually and continually. When we have learned the fact and enforce the rule that the employer's minimum should be our maximum for a day's pay, and that all excess should be paid for pro rata, then we will have a fair condition of things. Until that can be attained any system which brings an approximation thereof is the better one. For that reason the Denver idea is more beneficial to the worker than the Washington contention.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

From the time when all labor was slavery, when every man who had work done for him considered the man who did it as his property as much as he did the horse which he rode, the struggle for consideration and remuneration has been maintained by the laborer, with a degree of success that is apparent. From an actual slave, with his only reward such food and clothing and lodging as his master chose to give him, he has risen until he is now consulted as to what his remuneration shall be. This has not come with a wealth-based civilization, but in spite of it, and the way has had to be fought every inch. From the earliest time when wages were paid for service—when the master first conceded to his laborer the right to have wages instead of subsistence—the basis from which those wages have been figured has been, not what the labor was worth to the master, but what the laborer could live on, and to this good day we hear the term "living wages," the most insulting expression that can be made use of in describing the remuneration of toil, implying still the condition of slavery—that the laborer shall have for his work sufficient to keep him physically able to do more work.

This is not the time, nor have I the space, even if I had the ability, to review, even in the roughest outline, the history of labor from the time when all labor was actual slavery down to this twentieth century era of trades unions, demanding and enforcing a more equitable degree of remuneration for labor than it ever received before. The progress has been steadily onward from the villein of five hundred years ago to the freeman of to-day, and it were as easy to push back the tides of the ocean as to stop it now, though all the methods known are being brought to bear to that end. The latest slave within a civilized country was held in "free America," but his freedom came. But his freedom came not as the result of his own efforts or aided to any considerable extent by them, while the American workingman is the principal factor in bringing about juster rewards for his labor, aided by an enlightened public sentiment in spite of the efforts of a dishonest press to stifle it. The sympathy of the greater portion of the people not personally interested in maintaining low wages is with trades unionists, and this sympathy is growing every day, as evidenced in every great struggle.

Thirty years before the last African slave was freed in the United States there were African slaves in every State of the Union but one. Why were the slaves freed? In the North because they were unprofitable; in the South because their holding placed free labor and its employers at a disadvantage in the North. There was a great humane sentiment against human slavery, of course, but nothing creates sentiment like self-interest. That great humane sentiment was never aroused to free our own slaves, but those belonging to some one else. Then there were not lacking ministers of the gospel to preach the righteousness of slavery and the criminality of the abolitionist, as there are now plenty to preach the criminality of the trades union and the righteousness of servants obeying their masters. Outrages and violence are alleged against the trades unionist, but we gloried in the man who stole and freed a slave, and the more so if he had to kill the master to do so, though legally the master's right in his slave was as great as Parry's in his slave pen.

In the days of slavery all laws were in the interest of the slaveholder. The trades unionist has a harder legal battle to fight than the abolitionist—the one fighting for himself and his kind, the other battling for a race which never raised a hand in its own behalf—the latter having tne sympathy of the courts from environment and sentiment, while the former has to contend with a system of common law based on English feudal times, when—it seems so yet—all law was for the rich and against the poor. Whenever a law is passed that inconveniences the large employers, a court can always be found to declare it unconstitutional, often by a puerility of reasoning that arouses pity and contempt and by which any law ever passed by any legislative body under any circumstances could as well be repealed by the judgment of a court. It is a sad day for any country when its judiciary brings upon itself the contempt of all but the beneficiaries of its prejudiced if not corrupt acts, but a line of injunctions and decisions of unconstitutionality are fast bringing that of this country to that condition. Chief Justice Taney's dictum that "a negro has no rights that a white man is bound to respect" was as fair and no more infamous than two recent New York decisions—that a law making eight hours a legal day's work is unconstitutional, and that it is illegal for any employer to enter into contract to employ none but union labor. Taney's decision was less infamous, for he only decided that under the laws as they existed "a negro has no rights which a white man is bound to respect," while the New York decisions have no stronger backing than that the judges did not want such laws to stand, as evidenced by Chief Justice Cullen's remarks:

> I fear that the many outrages of labor organizations or of some of their members have not only excited just indignation, but at times have frightened courts into plain legal inconsistencies and into the enunciation of doctrines which, if asserted in litigations arising under any other subject than labor legislation, would meet with scant courtesy or consideration.

The traditions of the legal profession are all based on the master and servant theory, so far as the relations of labor are concerned, and contracts regarding labor between employer and employee are not and seem incapable of being held and regarded in the same light that contracts regarding tangible property are. The courts too often refuse to regard a man as having property rights in his own labor, and therefore competent to make contracts for its future delivery, except when such contracts are altogether in the interest of the employer, when they cheerfully enforce them.

Instead of being in the advance of civilization and enlightenment and everything that makes for the equal rights, happiness, and opportunities of man, "the law" is a laggard, a brake on the wheels of progress, recognizing facts only after they are forced upon it, conceding nothing until enlightened public opinion compels it, retarding what it cannot prevent, and consenting only when further resistance is futile.

And what of Parry and his kind? They are slave holders passing resolutions that they do not want slavery abolished.

The Leesburg (Fla.) Commercial, Joseph H. C. Pratt, editor, recently had a column editorial headed "Poetry v. Prose," from which I extract the following, in indorsement of an article of mine not long ago:

> Rev. A. F. Bloomer, whose sermons are widely read and whose arguments proclaim him a gifted man, has contributed an article to a late publication wherein he asserts that it requires greater ability to write poetry than prose. * * * For our part, we have never considered that poetry represented depth of thought or range in execution. Most of it borders on mediocrity and meets a casual glance only to be forgotten. If read at all the average poem scarcely compensates the individual for the time consumed in its perusal. Once in a great while a poem of strength appears, but this is such a rarity that the votaries of that science are fearful lest its image may never appear again. When Edwin Markham wrote "The Man With the Hoe" the world proclaimed him a genius, and the world was right; but Markham produced nothing before or since that approached that masterpiece in rhythmic splendor, and he never will again. He should have written that poem and died; but we suppose he had his living to make and was forced to continue, a condition due to necessity and the encroachments of hunger. But in discussing the merit of verse we must consider the volume and not the choice pieces. Most of it is madrigal in arrangement and substance, and is about as nutritious to a lyric clientele as a clay sandwich would be to a hungry man. Having run a weekly newspaper for twenty-five years, we have had experience with those who possess the muse and speak by authority. When a young person is bereft of reason he generally writes poetry, and his creative fancy has handed us such climacteral pain as "The Empty Keg," "Hero of the Pipe Line," "Close the Shutters—Willie's Dead!" "Jim was Good to Me if He Did Drink," and other specimens of maudlin imbecility which are almost enough to drive a man to vote the Republican ticket or convert him into a burglar of the higher class. * * *

Now, Mr. Sloppy Rhodes, look at yourself.

A friendly and cheering greeting from Al. M. Robinson was delivered to me the other day by his brother, Foreman C. M. Robinson, and I mention the fact because there are many of the old, old time who remember him in the G. P. O. He is spending the afternoon of his life at the Soldiers' Home at Santa Monica, Cal., where he is comfortable and happy, in charge of the printing office attached to the home, a right which he earned by honorable service to his country. Sometimes I envy those old fellows in soldiers' homes, who, having outlived all responsibilities and ambitions, are basking out their days, without care and without worry, awaiting the call which comes to all. A great philosopher said, "Call no man happy until he is dead," but I would amend it to read. "Call no man happy until his ambition is dead," for no man with an ambition can be free from care and therefore happy. Happy is he only who lives one day at a time, and that day to-day.

I recently received a copy of Col. C. H. Slack's Bristol (Va.-Tenn.) Courier, and it is a hot blatter. I would like to give some specimens, but nothing short of copying the editoral page would give an adequate idea of its intensity. The Colonel is ein heiss hund in the editorial chair.

* * * *

I have received from Charles W. Fear, associate editor of the Kansas City Labor Herald, secretary of the Label Committee, copies of the quarterly issue of the Union Label Bulletin, which is most effective means of forwarding the union-label movement that I have yet seen. It contains a list of the articles which may be found bearing union labels, a list of union labels, and the names of all dealers who handle such articles bearing such labels. It beats a boycott list or a "Don't Want Our Patronage" list out of sight. All that is necessary is to have a copy of the Bulletin and when you want to buy anything, look to see whether such articles are sold bearing a union label and where. The little folder contains facsimiles of many labels, with which to compare labels on goods. The list of union-label articles comprises everything that I can imagine any man or woman wanting.

One of the temporary appointees in the Third Division, Henry M. Smith, is an ex-president of both Cincinnati and Denver unions and was a delegate to the convention held in Washington either in 1868 or 1879—which my informant was not positive.

* * * *

Because of a rather remarkable combination of circumstances, the name of the late Capt. Aven Pearson was necessarily printed at the head of the list of "Our Honored Dead" on the program of the memorial services of last Sunday, though he was the last to die. After the programs were printed David J. Snyder died, and the committee had the job put through the press again to insert his name at the bottom of the list, where it was run across the two columns of names. Then Captain Pearson died before the day set for the services, and the only place where his name could be inserted was at the head of the list, in the space under the ornament placed there. But without inquiring into the reason why, a few made unpleasant remarks about it of which they will be heartily ashamed now that they understand it.

* * * *

The large attendance at the memorial service last Sunday is a credit to the heads and hearts of our members and their families, and fittingly were our earlier called brothers commemorated. The artistic efforts of Mrs. Jessie Spencer Hover, Mrs. Nellie V. Suess, Mrs. Bessie N. Wild, Miss Nettie Wallace, and Messrs. Wiley H. Davis, Will E. Burchfield, and Thomas L. Jones, the able addresses of ex-President Joe M. Johnson and Mr. Jackson H. Ralston, the modest but capable presiding of President John R. Berg, the fine instrumentation of Haley's orchestra and the Nordica Mandolin Club, and the eloquent prayer of the Rev. Mr. E. B. Bagby all combined to make Columbia Union's second memorial service a peculiarly appropriate memorial to our dead but not forgotten friends.

Personal Mention.

Frank K. Foster, of Boston, was in the city this week en route to Boston, on his return from San Francisco, where he has been attending the convention of the American Federation of Labor. Mr. Foster was elected for two years as a delegate to the American Federation of Labor, representing the International Typographical Union, and will attend the next session at Pittsburg. He is a well-known writer on labor topics and is one of the few "sound and sane" men in the labor movement who can give a Roland for an Oliver when discussing Socialism in any assemblage.

Card of Thanks.

The undersigned, representatives of the Fall River Textile Workers, who have been on strike against a reduction in wages since last July, desire to express our appreciation and deep gratitude for the many favors received at the hands of the various trades unions of this city during our stay here. We will take to other fields of labor the remembrance of a fortnight spent in Washington productive of good to our organization in a material way.

GOSSIP FROM THE G. P. O.

First Division.

Who is the "medal" man in alley 14? Bob or Harry?

How our granger typo McEvoy holds on to the figure 3; was slug 31, now 93.

Well, who will be the candidates for chairman at the approaching election?

Slug 152, F. W. Kern, like Mr. White, was also transferred to the day proof room as reader.

H. W. Gray, R. A. Johnson, A. W. Bentz and C. W. Henry, who have been on the sick list, have reported for duty.

Chas. Danenhower, of the "Y," having sustained a serious sprain in one of his ankles, is incapacitated for work.

Billie Skeen has been detailed as a temporary maker-up in Col. Leavitt's subdivision, behind the west elevator, on the G street side.

And now will the substitute watchmen be good since President Roosevelt has issued an executive order putting them under Civil Service?

Of the transfers to the night side, six were temporary appointments. Very commendable, indeed, for the temporaries should be favored.

Recent temporary assignments to this division were: Wm. R. McKenley, Chas. E. Roland, A. C. Giles, Frank W. Kihlborn and Frank Hayslip.

I don't know, suppose we did lose a "bunch" of good workmen in the December shuffle, "there are others," and we will get the paper out on time.

A blinding flash-light hit our Illinois friend Werneke, and he never stopped a-going until he reported in the Sixth Division (Record that was) proof room, night. Another move up.

Will H. Chase, maker-up on the "Why" since the adjournment of Congress, has been transferred to and holds a similar position on the day Record.

Every member of this division should subscribe to THE TRADES UNIONIST, the best eight-hour labor paper published. Give your order to Fred Berger.

The following are the weekly quotations of slug changes for this week: 7 to 140, 48 to 105, 52 to 97, 158 to 101, and Davidson (60) represents the slug held down by Chris Auracher.

What do you say fellow-comp., arn't you real down glad that the Benning's races are all over? It certainly was strenuous and wearing on the nerves and telling on your pocket-book.

William Franklin Pierce White, a veteran of the night side, was transferred to the day proof room, and as it carried a deserved promotion Mr. White has been warmly congratulated.

Our fellow-workman, Philip Steele, was largely instrumental in arranging the excellent programme for the memorial services last Sunday. President Berg, by the way, made good committee selections.

Did you see those snap-shot pictures of Simon Pocher. His trainer, Sergeant John Waller, of the "string and page paper division" on the underground floor, says "on account of his complection" we could only catch a dark shadow.

"Parson" Robinson, of the "dry and wet" paper division, was accorded a hearty welcome upon reporting for duty on Monday. If any person should be over-inquisitive just tell him that the "Parson" is a legal resident of Vice-President Fairbanks' State.

Others that were lost were: L. P. Kenney, maker-up, on the "Y," transferred to the Sixth Division day, as maker-up, together with F. O. Jones, D. R. Lyons, Winslow Louis, Guy W. McCord and Louis C. Vogt, presumably to operate Mergs. in the same division.

On Monday last Thomas Lewis, doorkeeper under both administrations of Public Printer Palmer, resigned and has gone to Florida to reside. His many friends wish him continued prosperity. Lieut. George C. Harris, of the force of watchmen, has succeeded to the vacant doorkeepership. A deserved selection.

This is what we gleaned with reference to the changes at the close of business last Saturday evening, occasioned by the enlargement of the night side: Messrs. Auracher, Barr, Berry, Carville, Elwood, Evarts, Griffis, Johnson, (C. D.), Lytle, Macklin, Nelson (Alonzo C.), Peake (Charley), and Little Joe Skelly—14 compositors; John T. Howe, laborer, transferred to First Division night.

Softly the shadows fall. This time it was our big-hearted friend David J. Snyder who has been summoned to yonder shore. While not a member of this division he had many warm friends and admirers, and each noon time he was a regular visitor. Always cheerful and with a sunny disposition he was ever making friends. His Masonic brethren performed the last sad rights at his funeral. Universal sympathy goes out to the sorrow-stricken wife.

Do you, or do you not think the elevator service is improved? Naturally bashful, we decline to advance any opinion, but hope that the betterment of the service will soon be so commendatory that even the "Knockers" won't have a knock left. Right here, boys, is it the proper thing to linger on the sidewalk until the whistle blows, and then all the loiterers cuss because they can't get up. Always two sides to every question. Stick a pin right there.

Second Division.

Arthur Jacobs is on the sick list.

F. T. Razey and Col. C. C. Semmes are on "rings."

W. O. Allison and G. W. Mullins are the latest arrivals in this room.

W. G. Glenn had the privilege of working on the extremely confidential job—the President's message. Mr. Glenn has worked on this before.

T. J. Rowe is again holding down the postmaster's job in his usual accommodating manner after an absence of thirty days spent at his home in Duluth, Minn.

"What Paul said to Timothy."—A special sermon for men—fathers and sons—Rev. E. B. Bagby, at the Ninth Street Christian Church, Ninth and D northeast, next Sunday night. Come.

Messrs. Milo Shanks, W. J. Harris, Wm. H. Cornish, and one other whose name I did not get, represented this chapel at the funeral of our late fellow workman and friend, David J. Snyder.

It is a notable fact in favor of the honesty of printers and the kindred trades that every lunch counter in or around the big printing office trusts their patrons to pay or put on the slip the amount of their bill. While I have known printers to fail to pay their bill, I have yet to see one who will cheat in stating the amount he has eaten.

If one-half day's leave was made the minimum in this office, it would please most all of the employes, I have no doubt. As it is, rather than lose the time many have to waste a whole day's leave, when they could attend to their outside affair in a half day or less. It is said that in the other departments even a half hour's leave may be taken.

Speaking of Mr. Jas. A. Hemenway's prospects for the Senate caused a member of this division to hark back a few years when he knew him before he got into politics. He says Mr. Hemenway was just a sewing machine agent at first, then he got a couple of mail routes on one of which our late Dave Snyder was the driver. This narrator says he often rode with Dave on his route.

The memorial service committee deserve much credit for the excellent program of last Sunday and the satisfactory manner in which it was conducted. Mr. Berg has shown judgment in all his committee appointments and especially this one. When he made that grand old man chairman of this committee—a man whose name is a household word with the members of Columbia Union—"Phil" Steele—then the success of the services was assured.

The Average Book for G. P. O. printers is out and will be distributed next week. It will be absolutely free, the same as it was last year. It is being issued this year by the Timothy Class, which is composed of young men. Last year it was printed by the Bereans, which is a men's class. Printers are cordially invited to visit either one of these classes Sunday mornings at 9 30 at the Ninth Street Christian Church, Ninth and D streets northeast. All who receive a book will be given an opportunity to assist the class with a silver donation which is to be applied toward a $100 pledge they have made for the Southeast mission this church is conducting at Fifteenth and D streets southeast.

H. NEWSOM.

DAVID J. SNYDER.

Whereas it is with profound sorrow that the members of the Second Division Chapel of the Government Printing Office learned of the death of their late chairman and fellow-worker, David J. Snyder, on November 30, 1904;

Whereas in his long suffering he but emphasized those noble traits of true manhood in his devotion to his duty, to his Union, and to his family that are developed in a pure, Christian life; and

Whereas in the death of David J. Snyder Columbia Typographical Union has lost a faithful member, his fellow-workers a true and helping friend, and his family a loving and generous support; therefore be it

Resolved, That the members of the Second Division Chapel hereby extend to his bereaved wife and family that profound sympathy born of intimate association and Christian love in fellowship with a pure and noble sprit.

Resolved, That at his funeral the Chapel shall be represented by a committee of its members

Resolved, That these preambles and resolutions be engrossed and presented to the bereaved family and printed in THE TRADES UNIONIST and in the Typographical Journal.

Third Division.

The new chairman is all right.

Wonder if Percy Wallace will let his whiskers grow this winter?

John E. Rastall, slug 132, and Philip E. Sardo, slug 119, were introduced to us last week.

General Delahunty asks the following very pertinent question: What is the world to a man when his wife is a widow?

William L. Harris, of the Second Division, is mentioned as a possible candidate for delegate to the I. T. U. convention at Toronto next year.

C. J. MacMurray informs me that he lost a valuable watch charm last Saturday night somewhere in the building—in the wash room he thinks—for the return of which he will be very grateful. He may be found at frame 131.

Henry M. Smith, who was assigned to frame 116 in this division on the 2d instant, is an ex-president of Denver and Cincinnati unions. Mr. Smith is a temporary, and came here from Harpers Ferry, having previously worked in Chicago.

The following were transferred to the night force Saturday evening, November 26: Burr G. Williams, T. J. Arrington, E. E. Coates, W. H. Davis, B. A. Reid, C. J. Unger, A. H. McKnight, D. A. Taylor, T. E. McCardell, and William McEneany.

Last Saturday we lost thirty-one men by transfer, twenty-six of whom went to swell the crowd of experts on the First Division Night Force. Au revoir, gentlemen! We are sorry to lose you, for we consider that we have been singularly fortunate in being associated with such a lot of good fellows. May you come back to us in the spring?

Former chairman Piehoff surprised everybody by rallying from the relapse which he experienced several weeks ago, so that he was able to start for his old home in Spartansburg, S. C., on Wednesday evening, Nov. 30. A postal received by W. A. Kinsolving from him states that he stood the journey well although he was thirteen hours on the road. He will be right among the pines and will be able to devote his whole time and attention to getting well, a consummation devoutly to be wished. His many friends in the G. P. O. will anxiously wait for news from him.

On Friday, November 18, the resignation of Chairman Robert P. Piehoff was received, and Elmer Dement, secretary and acting chairman, called a chapel meeting for 12.20 p. m. to take action in the matter. After Mr. Piehoff's resignation had been accepted, Messrs. William H. Duling and Joseph E. Goodkey were nominated for chairman to fill the unexpired term. Upon the resignation of Mr. Dement as secretary, Joseph W. Belcher was unanimously chosen to fill that office. The ballot for chairman at 1.30 resulted in the election of Duling, he having 61 votes to Goodkey's 53, a majority of 8. The new officers will serve until December 31, when the regular election will take place.

R. L. S. Halpenny, of the correcting alley, who represents the New York Life Insurance Company in his leisure hours, attended a banquet and lecture to agents given by the company to certain of its solicitors in the Atlantic division, at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, Philadelphia, November 30. The New York Life has thirty solicitors in Washington, from whom Mr. Halpenny and five others who were thought worthy of special distinction by the president of the company for having accomplished the greatest results during the year were selected, their expenses paid, and invitations given them to attend the banquet above referred to. Mr. Halpenny reports that he had a royal good time, and that he is ready to insure Tom Lawson or anybody else he happens to meet first.

Among the many substitutes doing the duties of absent "trusties" just before election, it seems fitting to say a special word of commendation for Will E. Soult, who relieved Assistant Foreman George M. Sherman when he went to Kansas to vote. The duties of the man who runs the copy-box seem light; but the lightest of duties become tedious when one is forced to attend to them without intermission from whistle to whistle. The mere handing out of copy and keeping a record of who gets each piece is simple enough; but the man at the desk is required to be an information bureau as to the style of any job that may come to the division; he must be prepared to be patient with new-comers and others who are sure to ask all manner of stupid and unnecessary questions, answering them in such a way that they will think they have been doing him a favor; in short, he must be "all things to all men." It is simple justice to say that Mr. Soult came up to the requirements above set forth during the three weeks' term at the desk, and that in all respects he was a most worthy substitute for the assistant foreman. And it takes a mighty good man to fill Mr. Sherman's place.

The following letter explains itself:

WEST FALLS CHURCH, VA., Nov. 29, 1904.
BROTHER BELCHER:

The resolutions of sympathy passed by the Third Division chapel on the death of my father, Henry McConvey, were presented to the family of the deceased, and they were appreciatively received, and will be framed and hung on the wall of their home in close proximity to similar resolutions] on the death of deceased's son, George E. McConvey, who died in 1899 while a member of the Third Division chapel, Mr. Roberts being foreman of the Third at that time. The father was buried at Arlington National Cemetery, at his own request, near the lamented William H. Hickman, under whom I served most of my apprenticeship.

Yours truly,

HENRY T. MCCONVEY.

The world is indeed a small place, after all. Last Monday night, while waiting for the elevator to take us to the street, I saw Charles S. Davis] go up to an elderly gentleman in the crowd, saying, as he extended his hand, "What is the reason we don't know each other?" Just then we got aboard and the subsequent conversation was lost in the confusion. On Tuesday, however, Mr. Davis informed me that the man he spoke to was John E. Rastall, now slug 132, who published the Union newspaper in Junction City, Kans., away back in 1876, when Davis himself published the Tribune in the same city. "We used to criticise each other's Republicanism, said Mr." Davis, "and furnished some very warm reading matter to the good people of Junction City. My! How quick the time has passed since then," continued the slug man. "It don't seem any more than ten or twelve years since that happened; but it is twenty-eight long years—and here we are, both in the Government Printing office, and not running it either." When I left the two old printers Tuesday night they were still swapping reminiscences.

The time is out of joint. O cursed spite!
That even I was born to put it right.

My friend Bloomer is having what he calls a "controversy with the poets." Some years since a friend called me into his room one night. I went willingly, as he was a fine performer upon the piano, and I hoped he might play for me. After a few desultory remarks, made in a queer embarrassed way, he blurted out the information that he was about to be married, ending with: "I felt that if I did not tell somebody pretty soon, I would bust!" It is a great wonder to me that Bloomer hasn't "busted" long ago in the face of the fearful doggeral—it is nothing else—that he has run up against in the columns of this paper. Now that he has opened upon the authors of the sloppy stuff which he dignifies by the name of "poetry," let us all hope he will not cease his warfare until the whole tribe is relegated to the shades of a merited oblivion. Before I leave the subject I want to congratulate Bloomer on his having at last awakened to the fact that "all is not gold that glitters"—i. e., that not everything written by Mr. Bugg-Talbott is up to the top notch of literary excellence. I have long felt it in my bones that my judgment of the work of the last-named gentleman would at last meet with approval, but I never dreamed that Bloomer would be the first to detect the flaw, much less call down publicly him of the "elevated mental plateau." Go it, dear Bloomer! You are engaged in a great work. Remember the words of Truthful James:

Now, I hold it is not proper for a scientific gent
To say another is an ass—at least, to all intent.

Don't mind 'em when they call you names like the above. As intimated, it is improper, and you are making war upon impropriety. "Constant dropping wears away a stone," and patience and perseverance will accomplish much. You may even convert such as McPike, Tim Tickle, and T. A. R. At least it is worth while to try.

Woman's Auxiliary.

Woman's Auxiliary, No. 13, held its regular monthly meeting Monday evening. Miss Laura B. Gordon presided. There was a very good attendance, notwithstanding the inclement weather.

Regular business took up the early part of the meeting.

On motion of Mrs. F. C. Roberts, it was voted to send to each member of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, now in the Printers' Home, a Christmas present ($2 50 in gold) as we did last year, and to include in the offering one member of the Union who is too ill to go to the Home at the present time.

The election of officers was next proceeded with. Mrs. Joe M. Johnson, Mrs. Clair C. Barnes, and Mrs. Bert V. Wolfe were chosen tellers.

Mrs. Arthur C. Webb was elected president; Mrs. C. L. Nace, vice-president; Mrs. A. W. Bowen, treasurer; Mrs. E. H. Thomas, secretary; Mrs. Samuel M. White, chaplain, and Mrs. F. C. Roberts, sergeant-at-arms.

Mrs. A. J. Huckins was received as a member, being transferred from Charleston, W. Va., Auxiliary No. 40.

The next meeting night falling on New Year's, it was decided to let the president fix a day and call a meeting.

GOSSIP FROM THE G. P. O.

Sixth Division.

Ex-President Joe M. Johnson may not be a sermon writer, but he is certainly a top-notcher when it comes to preaching a sermon. His address on Sunday was not only magnificent from a common-sense point of view, but showed a familiarity with the Bible greater than that possessed by the ordinary man.

In the selection of Jackson H. Ralston as orator for the memorial service the committee made no mistake. Although possessed of a voice which would not win for him the title of silver-tongued orator, his love for the printer man, his familiarity with his traits, his former personal acquaintance with many of those whose memory was being honored, made his selection an ideal one.

"God bless the members of this union and of all unions," said the Rev. E. B. Bagby in his prayer last Sunday. And those who know Dr. Bagby personally and those who heard his prayer will readily acclaim "God bless Rev. Bagby." The congregation of his Ninth street church is composed greatly of printers, and his close association with them, in both the work of the church and for the welfare of the community, has made it possible for him to speak such words as those from the heart.

The transfer of the day Record to night work was accomplished in good good shape last Saturday. With two or three exceptions the force was taken in its entirety. The installation of the machines has caused many changes in the personnel of the Record force. Many of the old wheel horses are scattered to the four-quarters of the big printery. The present force is made up of many who have never seen service on the Record before. But as they are a good lot of fellows, industrious and intelligent there is no real good reason why the great Government daily should not be issued with its usual promptness. Here's to you, fellows; it's lonely without you.

Any person who stayed away from the memorial service last Sunday on the ground that it was a local affair and "probably would not amount to very much" will never fully realize the real treat they missed. Indeed it was a local affair, and the better for it. It was an affair beautiful in its simplicity. There was no attempt at grandeur, but the greatest could not have been more appropriately honored. Could the men whose names appeared on the long list of those departed have a voice I believe in one grand chorus they would exclaim: "Well done, good and faithful committee. You have done your work; your mission is completed. Nothing else would have added to its success."

The day Record was ushered into existence on Monday morning, when something like forty compositors from the various divisions reported for duty. B. F. Constantine is in charge with L. P. Kenny and Will Chase as makers-up. More harmony or better feeling could not have existed if the force had worked together for a quarter century, and the chances are that among the lot some swifts will soon develop.

I have heard a good many hard knocks on the heathen Chinese, but recently I have reached the conclusion that there is yet hope for the yellow-skinned son of the wash tub. During a meeting of the grievance committee last week a cigar-maker complained of a scab cigar shop on the avenue that employed seven men and a Chinaman. "That is," said the cigar-maker, "he did have that many 'till the Chinaman got disgusted with the conditions and quit." In view of this fact I would suggest that Charley Dietrich organize the Chinks into a "no tickie, no shirtie" union.

Despite all efforts to overcome the habit, the nick-name "Side Show" follows the Gazette and is more frequently used.

We have an up-to-date never late timekeeper in the person of Mr. Mord Hyams, nephew of ex-Senator (now Judge) Pritchard.

Mr. Burkhart had scarcely got settled in the harness as correspondent from this division when he was called hence, or, more properly speaking, to another sphere of usefulness.

Huntsbury is receiving the congratulations of the room because of his recent promotion from "rings" to cases on "heads," a distinction he has rightly earned. Next?

The following came in as reinforcements during the first part of the week: E. M. Davison, E. M. McIver, R. P. Moffit, Alfred T. Bayer, Mark B. Hack, E. H. Fisher, Wm. A. Uber, Shelley Kieffer, Evan T. Scherer, Elliott Hayden, Geo. L. Carter, and Jas. R. Long.

The "Spess" people showed their appreciation of memorial day by a creditable attendance last Sunday afternoon. All have words of praise for the specially pleasing programme, which was a tribute to the dead and an inspiration for those who are striving for higher ideals and nobler living.

I hear much favorable comment showered upon "Tim Tickle," your Navy Yard correspondent. Beside the news, which is always an interesting feature of his letters, he is also making us more familiar with the history of that particular branch of Government service of which so few of us have but a limited knowledge, or none at all. Here is one of the advantages of the trade paper as an educator.

About a month since an advertisement appeared in the Evening Star of this city from a man at Lancaster, N.Y., offering to furnish high-grade apples of different varieties at $1 50 per barrel, freight free. The proposition had an air of plausibility surrounding it, and several of the Specification chapel "took out" on it. The purpose of this item is not merely to call attention to the investment, but to suggest to investors the wisdom of making sure of the apples before parting with their money.

The annual election of officers of the Union Mutual Relief Association took place on Tuesday of this week. The present membership of this society is 231, and the new year starts out auspiciously in the number of new members proposed. It has paid out in sick benefits the past year something over $1,000. The roster is represented by employes of the Specification, Gazette, Job Division of the Bindery, and office of Superintendent of Documents. The following were chosen to officiate during the ensuing year: President, Fred E. Weber; Vice-President, Jason Waterman; Secretary-Treasurer, Edw. P. Butscher. Board of Directors: Ed. R. French, G W. Hall, Edward J Hazen, Laura B. Gordon, Irma D. Palmer, and Fanny E Levy.

Several of the men in this division have returned from St. Louis recently. They all spoke in glowing terms of the Fair.

Notwithstanding the fact that the copy for the Book of Estimates was late coming in this year it was gotten out and delivered to Congress on time.

Mrs. DeGroot, wife of W. A. DeGroot, lost her pocketbook, containing over $50, on one of the City and Suburban cars some time ago. Her name and address were contained therein, and if an honest person had found it she feels sure it would have been returned to her.

As published in THE TRADES UNIONIST of last week, Capt. Aven Pearson, foreman of this division, died suddenly last Thursday evening at 11 o'clock. He worked Thursday; was out with a friend that evening until 9 o'clock, and was taken ill shortly after he returned home and died at the hour stated.

The notice of his death Friday morning came as a shock to us all. Although apparently in perfect health, Mr. Pearson had not been well for some time. He confided this to personal friends, and also expressed the hope that his last illness would not be a long and painful one, but that the end would come quick—as it did. The funeral services were held at Lowe's undertaking establishment, on Eleventh street northwest, Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock, under the auspices of the Loyal Legion, and was attended by most of the employes of this division as well as many of his personal friends from the main office and elsewhere. The interment took place at Arlington. The floral tributes were numerous, the one from the employes of this division being the most elaborate. As an evidence of the esteem in which he was held by the employes, the following resolutions, which were adopted at a chapel meeting the day after his death will attest:

Whereas, through the sudden death of Captain Aven Pearson, the employes of the Treasury Printing Division have sustained a great loss, we desire to express the respect that we entertained for him while living, Therefore, Resolved, That in his death we are deprived of a competent, faithful, generous, thoughtful and well-wishing guardian of our daily employment—of a friend and associate as well as foreman.

Resolved, That having served with distinction as a soldier under Logan he had endeared himself to his comrades and to all lovers of the country's defenders, and through his entire life as an honest and upright man, and by his cheerful and congenial disposition, and his improvement of the talents of God's creation, the country has lost a valuable and patriotic citizen.

Resolved, That the sentiments here expressed be understood not alone to contain the words of their composition, but in addition thereto that heartfelt, unexpressed, and irreparable sense of personal loss and grief that his sudden death has brought to every member of this division.

Resolved, That a copy of this resolutions be furnished to the son of the deceased, and offered for publication in the papers of Washington City.

THE TRADES UNIONIST.

OFFICIAL ORGAN CENTRAL LABOR UNION, WASHINGTON BRANCH, AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

Vol. IX. No. 27 WASHINGTON, D. C., THURSDAY, DECEMBER 15, 1904. Price, 3 Cents.

THE CENTRAL LABOR UNION

Action on Plumbers' Reinstatement Goes Over to Next Meeting.

UNIONS ACT ON UNFAIR FIRMS

New Organization Admitted—Columbia Lodge of Machinists Ask Co-operation—Important Resolution on Affiliation With Certain Trades Goes Over to Next Meeting—Carpet Workers to Organize an International Body.

The regular weekly meeting of the Central Labor Union was called to order at 8 p. m. on Monday evening, Vice-President Brinkman in the chair.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

CREDENTIALS.

Credentials were presented from Stenographers, Typewriters, Bookkeepers, and Assistants Union, No. 11773, a new organization, and Frank F. Hartwell, F. C. Alexander, Louis A. Stern, J T. Sherier, and D. F. Manning were chosen to represent the organization.

The credentials were received and delegates seated.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Bookbinders Union, No. 4, stating that the report of the Executive Committee of the Central Labor Union, on the plan of reorganization of the building trades was indorsed. Placed on file.

From Retail Clerks' Union, No. 262, stating that action of Central Labor Union on Academy of Music and M. F. Dorsey cases had been approved and that a fine of $5 would be imposed on any of its members found patronizing either establishment. Placed on file.

From E. J. Ratigan, secretary Council of Allied Building Trades, requesting information on an alleged statement made by representatives of Paperhangers' Union, No. 420, regarding status of Building Trades Section. The secretary was directed to deny the authenticity of the statement.

From E. J. Ratigan, secretary of the Council of Allied Building Trades, stating that no credentials had been presented to that body by Plumbers' Union, No. 5, and that Plumbers' Union stand charged with owing certain money for the maintenance of the Building Trades Section, and further requesting that Plumbers' Union be not seated in the central body until all indebtedness due the Building Trades Section be paid. Action on the communication was deferred until after the report on reorganization of building trades be received.

The secretary received communications from the following unions, indorsing action of central body on Academy of Music and M. F. Dorsey cases:

Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, No. 5. Fine, $5

Electrical Workers, No. 26. Fine, $2.

Bakers, No. 239. Fine, $2.

Bookbinders Union, No. 4.

Retail Clerks, No. 262. Fine, $5.

Sheet Metal Workers, No. 102

Stationary Firemen, No. 63 Fine, $5

CALL OF UNIONS.

Bottlers: That a fine of $5 would be placed on any of its members found patronizing Kernan's, Lafayette, and Academy of Music, and saloon of M. F. Dorsey, 1213 Seventh street northwest.

Carpet Workers: Called attention to the condition of their craft throughout the country, and stated that a convention of their craft would be held in this city during the coming week for the purpose of forming an International Union.

Musicians: Called attention to Kernan's, Lafayette, and Academy of Music being on unfair list.

Machinists (Columbia Lodge): Asked consideration of the following resolution, which was read and adopted, and referred to the Legislation Committee:

Whereas Columbia Lodge, No. 174, International Association of Machinists, has requested the co-operation of this body in securing legislation for the purpose of increasing the capacity of the plant known as the Naval Gun Factory; and

Whereas the employes of the Naval Gun Factory, with its present inadequate equipment, are required to work day and night, in three eight-hour shifts, including Sundays, which adds to the cost of the product and reduces the efficiency of the employes; and

Whereas according to official reports the present plant has rendered large financial profits in the manufacture of ordnance for the United States Navy, at a savings of 30 to 40 per cent to the Government, and it has been admitted by official expert authority that the accuracy and workmanship has never been equaled by any plant producing a similar class of work; therefore be it

Resolved, That the Legislative Committee of this body be and is hereby instructed to meet and co-operate with the Legislative Committee of Columbia Lodge, and do all in their power to advance the proposed legislation, reporting from time to time to this body of the progress made and the legitimate expenses incurred.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

The Grievance Committee reported progress.

The Legislative Committee reported that they had placed the evidence of violation of the eight-hour law on work in the District, and would make further report.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The credentials from Plumbers' Union, No 5, presented at the last meeting, and action deferred until this meeting were read. Further consideration was postponed for one week.

NEW BUSINESS.

The following resolution was introduced and action deferred until next meeting, it being considered in its nature an amendment to the By Laws:

Resolved, By the Central Labor Union of the District of Columbia, that the secretary be, and he is hereby directed in the name of the Central Labor Union, to extend an invitation to all trades organizations in said District to affiliate or reaffiliate with the same, "and that all resolutions, construction of law or other acts of the Central Labor Union whereby an organization's representation in the Central Labor Union is made contingent upon the said organization's affiliation with the Allied Council of Building Trades of the Central Labor Union, or the Allied Label League and Miscellaneous Trades Council of the Central Labor Union, is hereby repealed, annulled and rendered void."

On the assembling of the day force on Monday morning a few of the old timers got together, talked it over, and selected John E. Hogan for chairman.

On Tuesday morning, No. 1, Vol. 39, of the Congressional Record for the third session of the fifty-eighth Congress made its appearance for the first time of its career a machine set paper. It contained something like twelve pages, and in appearance looked the work of art. While I did not have much of a chance to make a personal examination, I guess those prophesied pied lines, up-side-down ones, etc., were pretty scarce or some one would have told me.

Lost Childhood.

WILLIAM TIPTON TALBOTT.

I seek but can not find the land of wonder,
Where golden eyes looked on me from the sky,
Nor can I pluck again the rare fresh blossoms
A child plucks, won by beauty, thoughtless why.

My heart is weary. Though the future wooed me
With friendly kisses, I would pass her by,
Could I but find again that land of wonder
Whose golden stars smiled on me from the sky.

The flowers I gather now I know will wither;
Too well I see the blights that on them lie.
I can not pluck again the rare fresh blossoms
A child plucks, won by beauty, thoughtless why.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

There is a sort of inborn feeling in humanity to take the side of the under dog, but it is not always a popular thing to do. The under dog—generally considered as the yellowest kind of a yellow dog at that—of whom I am now going to talk a little while is the wife beater. The papers teem with regularity with recommendations of the re-establishment of the whipping post for his benefit, and our local police judges have been renewing their suggestions to the same effect. At first blush that seems to be about what the wife beater deserves, and it is especially a fitting punishment for the brute who gets drunk and maltreats her. But I have known cases where, if we had the ancient English practice of domestic disciplining, divorces and desertions of family would have been avoided. Women are not all angels, any more than men are all devils, and there are cases where women make home a hell for their husbands, to whom but two courses are open—to grin and bear it, or desertion of wife and perhaps little children. Many men, from love of their children, and sometimes because of the pitiful helplessness of the women who are deviling the lives out of them, will endure a system of nagging, fault-finding, tattling, debt-making, or studied neglect that makes them the objects of pity and contempt of those who, knowing the wrongs they suffer, do not know the compassion they feel for their persecutors. If such a man, the victim of such a woman, had the legal right to hammer blue hell out of her once or twice, or even half a chance to go into court after having done so and show his great provocation and thereby soften his punishment, families would be many times saved and good people enabled to avoid worry over the evils of divorce. For the man so situated—and men are so situated sometimes—there is no course open that will not put him in an objectionable light before a world that is most positive in its opinions of what it knows least. If he takes the law into his own hands in a case where the law provides him no adequate remedy and endeavors to convince his erring wife of her error in the only way in which an argument could be effective, six months in jail, with sorrow that there is no whipping post for him; if he goes into the courts, he must lay his gaping wounds before a gaping public, with separation, perhaps from infant children, and with still upon him the support without the earned comfort of a family, as the only legal remedy; if he deserts his family to escape the hell of such a home, he earns the contempt of all who remember him at all, or a jail sentence if the law can reach him; if he is weak enough to try to drown his sorrows in drink, he aggravates his troubles and gives color to the idea that he is the one to blame when the troubles become known; if he "grins and bears it"—the only horn left to the dilemma—it grows worse until he resorts to one of the other methods or takes his own benighted life. There are such cases. If I were a police judge and a man were brought before me for beating his wife, if he did it while drunk I would give him the limit of the law; if he did it while sober I would inquire with the utmost minuteness into the provocation or dismiss the case as inscrutable to the judgment of an ordinary man. Now let "Tray, Blanche, Sweetheart, and all the little dogs" snap at the fringe on the bottom of my pants.

The project of the Woman's Auxiliary of this city to hold an exhibition of union-label merchandise should meet the warmest encouragement. In the purchase and use of union-label goods is one of the strongest weapons of union labor, and to interest the ladies in the movement, as they do most of the buying, should be our first effort. Every member of Columbia Union should lend all assistance and encouragement to the efforts of these ladies in the good cause. I am much impressed with the plan of the Kansas City union-label committee—advertising where union-label goods may be bought instead of boycott lists—which I mentioned last weeek.

After reading "Tim Tickle's" effort of last week, "When I Am Old," which condition of senility he fixes to arrive when he is 35, as he invites me to criticise, I congratulate him, for I should judge that he has twenty-one or twenty-two years to live yet before reaching that age. I enjoyed also his "Letter to the Filipinos"—in fact, I enjoyed it almost as much as when I first read it, a year or two ago.

I recently received a copy of The Stick, published monthly by Louis F. Fuchs, at 207 North Eleventh street, St. Louis, Mo., of which this is the first number. It is devoted to the art of printing, to advance which it gives specimens of fine work which are gems, especially a couple of title-pages. In an editorial entitled "The Objective Eight," referring to the movement for a universal eight-hour day, its editor shows that he is union to the core. By the way, in this instance as in many others where new publications are sent to me, subscription blanks were inclosed. I am willing on all occasions to be a good thing, but if I am not worth exchanging with in my personal capacity I will have to content myself with sample copies.

While there is the strongest sympathy with the motion of Frank A. Kidd to levy an assessment of 50 cents for the benefit of the fund to build an annex to the Union Printers' Home at Colorado Springs in honor to the late Amos J. Cummings, of which he gave notice a month ago, there is a feeling among some of the older and more conservative members that it will be better to have it go over for a few months—say until spring—because of the increase of dues which we voted upon ourselves, to take effect the 1st of January, and because of the further fact that the distress of families of our former fellow-workmen and the relief of fellow unionists on strike have made unusual demands upon our generosity. Mr. Kidd's heart is right and his project is a splendid one, but there is no hurry and it can ust as well wait a little while, for the funds for this noble monument to our deceased friend will not be needed for a year or so yet.

My friend Belcher comes to my rescue in my battle with the poets, but I am afraid that the motive underlying his assistance was a desire to get a swat at his ancient enemy, William Tipton Talbott de Bugg, with which I am not in sympathy, for Brother Talbott de Bugg does much very good and no really bad work in short-line literature. He also bats Mr. McPike, who has also done much ingenious verse of an entirely harmless character and never very bad, and neither does that appeal to me. But what he has to suggest regarding the literary tarred rope Tim Tickle and Sloppy Rhodes meets my warmest approval. It is a great thing to earn the indorsement of Brother Belcher and I am proud of my achievement.

A friend sent me a newspaper containing an account of the death of a noted Western printer called "Muscogee Red," from which I meant to make extracts, but it stuck to some one's fingers while leaning over my desk and now it is his. I have no doubt many within the sound of my typewriter knew "Muscogee Red" and would be interested to read of the manner of his death.

I received a letter from Carlos B. Tomlin one day last week, and as it was written on a linotype mill it shows that he is slowly regaining his health, for otherwise he would not have the strength to go down town and resume his machine practice. He speaks in the most complimentary terms of the Home, where he is residing, and of its management. He is one of those who live in a tent, which are heated by steam in cold weather and so made very comfortable. The steam is turned off at 9 o'clock at night, giving them the natural air to sleep in, and on again at 5 in the morning, making the tent warm in which to dress. He delivered cheering messages from my old friends there.

The December number of the Typographical Journal, one of the best issues which Secretary-Treasurer and Editor John W. Bramwood has yet put out, has three pages devoted to editorial and personal commendations of the Union Printers' Home, among the former that of the Washington Times, as the result of the splendid description of the Home written by Mr. A. H. McQuilkin and published in the Inland Printer for November. An article on "Almanacs and Calendars," by William S. Bridge; a story, "When Reaction Sets In," by Joseph E. Cohen, of Philadelphig; another, "Zeke Blair's Oil Well," by J. L. Cahill, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Notes and Comment (six pages of editorials) and What We Are Doing, by the editor; The President's Page, by President Lynch (always worth reading); numerous short articles; the returns of the referendum on the various amendments; the Woman's Department; Correspondence, and official information, make the Journal of interest to every member of the craft, and he who does not give it a close perusal is himself the loser. Our official organ is improving with every number and is the best single investment the I. T. U. ever made.

There were a number of promotions in filling the vacancy caused by the death of the late Capt. Aven Pearson. Benj. F. Constantine succeeds to the foremanship of the Treasury Division, with H. J. Gaylor as assistant foreman, while Albert K. Mundheim, who lately filled the latter position, succeeds Constantine as day foreman of the Sixth (Record) Division. Mr. Constantine is well known throughout the office, having been here for a number of years. Mundheim served his apprenticeship on the National Republican, partly under the foremanship of the late William H. Hickman.

Merlin Hull, now editor and publisher of the Jachson County Journal, of Black River Falls, Wis., was in this city a few days ago, on the sad errand of attending the funeral of his mother. He was for a number of years an employe of the G. P. O., but left here four or five years ago to go into the business in which he is now engaged, in which he is well established, with an office equipped for any kind of work and publishing a newspaper which has all the appearance of prosperity.

I think the secret of the opposition of President Eliot, of Harvard, to everything which the trades unions do that is really effective for their interest is based on a deep and abiding belief that a subservient lower class upon which we educated men can stand is necessary to our existence as a superior people. Four years at a trade usually makes a young man an independent factor of society; four years at college too frequently only fits him to be a pensioner on a charity-maintained university all his days.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 6, 1904.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST, CITY.

DEAR SIRS AND BROTHERS:—Anent the recent criticisms of Pard Bloomer appearing in your valuable paper, and having waded through several large and juicy thoughts thereon, I am compelled to announce to you—

Like Æsop's lion, Ross says sore I feel;
All others scorn but damn that ass's heel.

Yours, fraternally,
R. M. G. ROSS.

Mr. Ross must be one of the dogs who yelp when stones are thrown in the dark, for I confess I never heard of him before. But to show him that he has no monopoly of the art of writing his kind of "poetry," I'll make him a verse, and, like him, use a thought that has been used before:

When the "lion" came to, he was but a monkey
Who'd mistaken a fist for the heel of a donkey—
A monkey he was—no wiser, but sadder—
And chattered his rage from the top of his ladder.
A monkey may climb as high as the roses,
But one is less charmed by what he exposes.
The roses and Rhodeses and monkeys and Rosses
Show life's proportion of crowns and of crosses.

Some weeks ago I printed a little story about Sam Edmunds and Joe Borden going to Kansas, establishing themselves as lawyers, and awaking one morning to find that the town in which they lived had moved away, whereupon Sam returned to Washington, while Joe went further West. The other day Sam received from Joe a beautifully printed pamphlet, "The Test of Time," issued by the Shaw & Borden Company, of Spokane, Wash., of which Joseph A. Borden is treasurer, descriptive of their printing plant, as a souvenir of the fifteenth anniversary of the establishment of the company. The company occupies all of a six-story building and employs about fifty people, their business being larger than any other in the State or any of the adjoining States and covering everything in the printing and stationery line.

Jefferson's Manual, an annual publication for the use of Congress, was somewhat more elaborate this year than heretofore. Cases were made in full leather, which permitted some exceedingly tasteful designs in the stamping.

"King" Brady was seen walking down the street Sunday, after the heavy snow, all bundled up in a storm coat, ear muffs, arctic overshoes, and a pair of home-knit wollen gloves. This must have reminded the "King" of the zero weather of his native heath.

John Foster after successfully raising four stalks of cotton last summer, is now posing as an authority on cotton raising and is endeavoring to arouse interest in that Southern staple among his friends in the Bindery. He has been most successful with Jack Hambly, who has a large bunch.

Notwithstanding the fact that we live so close to the weather man, we do not get so fine a brand of snow as they do in Boston, according to Whispering Willie. The crop of snow produced in Boston is of the kind that makes poets sing and Willie rave about. A change to the Bostonese variety would just fit Willie. Can we not secure a committee to wait upon the Weather Bureau?

The Public Printing.

In an editorial the Post, of this city, passes judgment on President ROOSEVELT'S reference to his message to Congress on the waste of money in printing useless documents.

The editorial in the Post follows:

The President strikes at a chronic, costly, and growing abuse when he says to Congress that at least one-half of the amount of printing now done by the Government could well be abolished. "Probably the great majority of the Government's reports and the like now printed," he says, "are never read at all, and, further, the printing of much of the material contained in many of the remaining ones serves no useful purpose whatever." That is notoriously true, but there is little, if any, reason to expect that it will lead to an immediate and radical reform of the evil so clearly portrayed. The practice of printing worthless matter, and, what is almost as wasteful, of printing excessive amounts of matter that possesses some merit, has been a subject of newspaper comment for many years. Every phase of the abuse has been pointed out, and specific illustrations have been numerous, but the reckless waste has gone on increasing until it has reached colossal proportions. It is safe to say that millions of dollars have been paid for printing voluminous reports of special committees and commissions that scarcely anybody but the proofreader has ever read. Many volumes have been devoted to the testimony given by wild-eyed cranks on the invitation of committees authorized to go over the country and keep open houses in various cities. The President's estimate of 50 per cent waste is really moderate. We believe that an impartial investigation would find the wastage even greater than one-half of the total cost of public printing.

It is quite proper that the Government should own a printing office and do its own work in that line. That is not paternalism, but a dignified and decent way of transacting public business. It is, also, eminently fitting that the Government should pay its workingmen and workingwomen liberal wages. It is the duty of the Government to set a good example in this regard. Instead of going into the market and buying labor where it could be had cheapest, our Government does well to fix and adhere to a reasonably liberal standard. True, this sets aside the theory that the methods of private business should be followed in Government business, but we should all be ashamed of our Government if it adhered strictly to those methods, rigidly applying the law of supply and demand, putting wages up or down to meet the changes incident to that law. But all this furnishes no excuse for the wanton waste that characterizes Government printing.

It is evident that the Post man believes that the conditions above cited are true, or he would not have stated that it was safe "to say that millions of dollars have been paid for printing voluminous reports of special committees and commissions that scarcely anybody but the proof reader has ever read."

The reverse is true in this case. While it may be admitted that a great many publications of various kinds might have been unnecessary, the occasion for printing all documents and reports is based on the assumption that they are necessary to a certain extent. In every branch of the Government a great deal of valuable space in Department buildings is given to file cases in which tons of old papers, some of value and others practically worthless are preserved with care. The same principle of preservation of records applies to the printing of documents by Congress. It is never known when they are to be used. But when called into use the existence of one volume compensates in time and labor the cost of an edition of 5,000.

Some years ago a pruning committee went over the question of public printing and cut off many publications that were considered obsolete or unnecessary, but public printing still grows.

The Post should be commended for its fairness in conceding the right of Government to do its own work and to pay good wages for it. As a question of expediency, it is more than probable that it is cheaper and better for the Government to do its own work.

AFTER-DINNER DILATIONS.

SUCH IS LIFE.

Some Congressmen who come to town
Are rather prone to worry
Because their fences all blew down
In last November's flurry.
Of these all will go home again,
And some will ne'er return,
While some, again, will still maintain
"'Tis ne'er too late to learn,"
And these, perhaps, will try once more,
And once more win the race
Which they had lost two years before
By much or—by an ace.

Mr. Nailor is employed in the Specification proof room, but expressions of real sympathy are shared by every one of his large circle of friends.

A. J. E. Hubbard, of the Colorado Springs Labor News, made that paper a great help in dethroning the late Mr. Peabody and electing the Hon. Alva Adams Governor of Colorado. "Hub" is at his best where the fray is thickest and hottest, and it is with genuine pleasure that his many Washington friends learn of the success which has crowned his well-directed efforts.

The Gridiron Club, which seems to be a sort of side show to the two-tent performance on the hill, gave an exhibition in the banquet-room of the Arlington last Saturday evening. The purpose of these performances, it would seem, is to furnish occasion for making prominent the shortcomings or idiosyncrasies of members, when unpleasant though pardonable things are said of people in high circles, and when even the Chief Magistrate receives a drubbing but is denied the right of expostulation. These exhibitions are conducted on a scale similar to the "Knockers' Club," where printers enjoy the latitude which gives them an opportunity of stating "many a truth in jest," and where in a way the amenities are cultivated in the very presence of a roasting atmosphere.

Farmers seek to control the prices of their products through local and State organizations, and justify their course on the ground of self-protection; but it is the exception rather than the rule where one is found to recognize any good in the trades union. Some day, when his narrow vision is able to grasp the fact that the better pay the trades people get the better prices the farmer receives for his labor and produce, then he will let go of some of his present notions, will be less inclined to accept gold brick offers, and will fail to listen to those who prey upon his credulity or seek to prejudice him against those who under wholesome trade conditions are his best friends. It is an understood fact that the enemies of organized labor are actively engaged at this time circulating literature (by means of the larger weekly publications and by pamphlets) intended to prejudice people of rural communities, and by specious arguments are seeking to make it appear that trade unionism stands for all that renders anarchy abhorrent.

CYCLE.

WISH REALIZED.

John Henry Boner Rests Under Soil of Native State.

John Henry Boner, known far and wide as "North Carolina's first man of letters," and who died in Washington in March, 1903, has had his one great wish gratified, and now sleeps beneath the pines of his native State. Under the auspices of the Moravian Church and members of the Authors' Club, of both of which Mr. Boner was a member, the reinterment was made in the Moravian cemetery at Winston-Salem, N. C., last Sunday. Bishop Rondthaler, of the Moravian Church, offered a few appropriate remarks in connection with the life of the dead man and an address was made by Dr. Marcus Benjamin, of the National Museum of this city.

Prior to the reinterment the remains had laid in the Congressional Cemetery here, but the pathetic plea contained in one of Boner's poems that he might be buried in the land of the State he loved so well aroused in the breasts of his friends a desire to see that his wishes were carried out. A subscription was raised for this purpose, and the memorial services held Sunday were the culmination of that effort. The officers of the association which carried out the desire of the dead poet were:

President, Marcus Benjamin, United States National Museum; Vice-President, Chas. W. Otis, Government Printing Office; Secretary, John Spencer Bassett, editor South Atlantic Quarterly, Durham, N. C.; Treasurer, John Franklin Crowell, director of the Intercontinential Correspondence University, Washington, D. C.

The following later consented to serve the organization in an honorary capacity: Honorary president, Edmund Clarence Stedman; honorary vice-presidents, William Jacob Holland, director of the Carnegie Museum; Richard Watson Gilder, editor of the Century Magazine; Samuel Conrad Lemly, Judge-Advocate, United States Navy; Edward Rondthaler, Bishop of the Moravian Church; John W. Fries, and William A. Blair.

Dr. Benjamin in his address referred feelingly to the works of the dead poet and to his friendships with the eminent literary men of America. He mentioned, among the friends of Boner, the names of Stedman, Aldrich, Hay, Henry Abbey, Clinton Scollard, Robert Underwood Johnson, and John Vance as among the great American poets, who gave to their late companion in verse the true estimate of his worth to the world of letters.

Over the tomb of the poet was placed a wreath sent by the employes of the Government Printing Office, his former associates. Dr. Benjamin closed his remarks with the words:

"Tennyson has written, 'For a poet can not die,' and so, now that we have brought him back to you, I beg that you will proudly guard the remains and lovingly cherish the memory of him who was ever so loyal to his people and to his State. He is with you once more and in his own words I leave him:

"'Back to the Old North State;
Back to the place of his birth;
Back through the pine's collonade gate
'To the deareast spot on earth.'"

Home at Last.

[W. N. Brockwell in Raleigh (N. C.) State Journal, of December 9, 1904.]

One of North Carolina's brightest men and sweetest singers is going home next Saturday. He makes the journey to the Old North State for the last time. Life's journey for him was over some time ago, for he died in this city March, 1903. I refer to the late John Henry Boner, printer, poet, and man of letters. Like many others of his class, he died poor so far as this world's material stores are concerned, but rich in friends who loved him for his many charming qualities, and it is through the bounty of these friends that he is "going home" at last. The movement to take his remains back to his old home really started on the day when we laid him to rest in an unmarked grave in the Congressional Cemetery in this city.

Mr. Marcus Benjamin, of the National Museum, a life-time and dear friend of the dead poet, took the matter up, and as a result the Boner Memorial Association was formed.

Another most faithful worker in the matter was Mr. Charles W. Otis, a former co-laborer and warm friend of Mr. Boner in the Government Printing Office.

Among the contributors to the fund were such well-known literary lights as Edward Clarence Stedman, Richard Watson Gilder, and Thomas Bailey Aldrich.

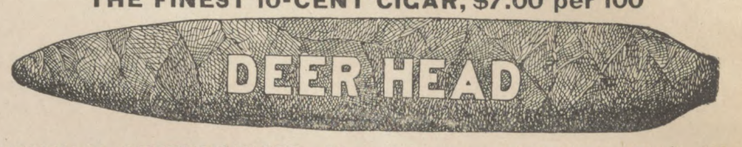
The remains, accompanied by Mr. Benjamin, will leave here on Saturday night, and on Sunday afternoon, December 11, a service will be held in the Moravian Church at Salem—an edifice and a town often mentioned in the bright word painting of Mr. Boner—and then the physical being of the poet will go to its last resting place in the old Moravian burying ground, one of the sweetest and simplest homes of the dead which it has ever been my good fortune to look upon. I shall not go into the details of Mr. Boner's life in this short note, for that will doubtless be treated in the daily press of the State when he arrives "at home," but will say that I knew him quite well as a man and listened to his songs as a poet with charmed attention. Both the knowledge of the man and the beauty of his verse have been helpful to me—have made me a better man; and that is the noblest aim of letters, to make the individual better and through the individual to improve the world—the great mass of humanity. I rejoice that this son of song, of whom North Carolinians may well be proud, is going back to "the dearest place on earth," as he once described his old home; for I recall these beautiful lines from one of his poems as tenderly expressing his desire to rest in the bosom of his native sod:

"Where'er it be my fate to die,
Beneath those trees in whose dark shade
The first loved of my life are laid
I want to lie."

Through the love of unchanging friends this wish is about to be gratified.

Carpet Workers in Session.

Representatives from Boston, Baltimore, Pittsburg, Chicago, Washington, St. Louis, Stockton, and New York, of the carpet workers of those cities, are in session at 905 E street nothwest, for the purpose of forming an International organization of that craft.



During the stay of the delegates in this city the local committee of the union here will endeavor to show the beauties of the national capital to the visitors.

On Saturday evening the delegates will be entertained at Building Trades Hall with a smoker and light entertainment.

GOSSIP FROM THE G. P. O.

First Division.

Slug quotation—41 to 40

Comrades Brewer, King and Lawler are on the sick list.

Oscar Nelson transferred to Sixth Division, day, on a Merger, we suppose.

Two pay-days this week—regular pay day, Monday. Relief pay-day Thursday.

Another Harrisburger moved up a point—Fred. J. Orth from Night Force to Night Proof Room.

Daniel J. Hegarty and Edgar B. Bennett have been transferred to Night Proof Room. Clever young gentlemen.

Soon the burning question will be, not who will be a candidate for delegate, but who will be the next Public Printer?

Mr. Joseph Dierken, of the "front office," was summoned to his home town, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., last Friday by the sudden death of his youngest sister.

Sure enough Carlisle Indians were much in evidence at the Academy last week. Where, oh where, were our Indians? Ask the venerable timekeeper.

"Force of habit" is wonderfully intensified in some individuals, particularly those compositors who insisted on computing overtime for Thanksgiving night.

Chairman Nachman closed the week's duties by taking up a subscription for our late fellow-workman, David J. Snyder. Glad to learn it was liberally patronized.

Two representatives of the Old Dominion State, Maurice Rouselle and David F. Rucker, received regular appointments as laborers. They seem to "catch on" to their new duties.

That trio of well-known thoroughbred imposers on the day side—Messrs. Burnside, Garrette and McFarlane, are nothing, if not funny and original. But their latest exploit is keeping tab on George H. Eakle's (the well-known coal man) weather predictions.

"Use these first." An Irish card with these three words printed in display type on Imposer Gunn's desk brought forth many inquiries. For a satisfactory explanation inquire of either H. S. Gunn, or Bruce Bielaski. No "black arrow" in this, says Simon Pocher.

This division was mightily pleased on Monday morning when the glad news was received that "Doc," Radley, formerly one of us, but lately on a "Merger," had been advanced to a maker-up in the Sixth (day) and assigned to running out copy. A first class deserved advancement, for Rad. is "all wool and yard wide."

The Friendship Sick Relief Association is an offshoot of the Immediate Relief, and is reported in a flourishing condition. It will thus be noticed that the office is well provided with relief associations, but it has been clearly and most successfully demonstrated in the past twenty years that "Relief" is a mighty good thing, and you cannot have to many of them.

Promotions, advancements, resignations, transfers and death frequently occur in this "busy storm-center," the G. P. O. We note the following: John F. Douglass to Foreman Rickett's office; Theo. H. Jackson, from messenger to doorkeeper for private Secretary Collins; F. N. Perkinson, from driver to messenger in office of Foreman of Printing; Lieut. Jno. S. Funnicliff, day watch to night watch, succeeding Lieutenant Harris, advanced to doorkeeper; R. M. Calhoun, from the H street door to lieutenant of the day watch, and assigned to duty in the new building under Captain R. B. Harlow.

We understand that the G. P. O. Mutual Relief Association—the pioneer organization—disbursed for sick benefits during the past twelve months in excess of six thousand dollars, averaging more than five hundred per month. To think what an immense amount of relief has thus been afforded to those in need. Then, too, it must be remembered that the membership at large, independent of those to whom benefits were paid, received seven dollars ($7.75) and seventy-five cents. A snug little sum for Christmas. It speaks well for the excellent management of the Relief, and the officers are deserving of the highest praise of the large and influential membership. The annual election will be held on Sunday next.

There are a number of Relief Associations in the G. P. O. We would recall the Equitable, the Columbia (which we understand will pay between eight and nine dollars) the one in the Specification Room and one in the Press Room, also a flourishing one (the name we cannot now recall) composed exclusively of colored members. There is also another candidate for public patronage—the Government Printing Office Immediate Relief Association, organized eighteen months ago. The present membership, 179, includes white persons of both sexes, and since the organization there has been but two deaths. The death benefit paid is one dollar for each member on the roll until the membership reaches 250.

Third Division.

The Chadwick financial expose has been a subject of much interest among the "prints" during the past two weeks. Branham (of the ring alley, and noted for his West Georgia style of humor), asked Wood recently: "What newspaper does Mrs. Chadwick remind you of?" Wood thought it must be the New York Financial News and Examiner. "Too easy," said Branham, "She's merely a Cleveland Plain Dealer!"

The Third Division was well represented at the Old Boys' banquet. I saw Foreman Lawson, Time-keeper Lenhart, Imposers Soult and Saltzman, Bankman Kitzmiller, Slugman Davis, Rule-case man LeMerle, and Compositors McAloon, Goodkey, Halpenny, Sanders, Mears, Warren, Julian, and Doyle. Near me were Wm. Leavitt, of the "Y," Leo Rullman, of the Fourth Division, and Titus F. Ellis, besides a lot of others.

Major William Warner, of Kansas City, Mo., who voluntarily gave up the position of Representative in Congress because of business pressure, and well known to Grand Army men as a past commander-in-chief, is a candidate for United States Senator from Missouri to succeed Senator Cockrell. Major Warner is entitled to the warm regard of every union man from the fact that some years since, when as a result of the great strike on the Missouri Pacific Railroad a number of the strikers were arrested, he appeared before the court and defended them free of charge, which action on his part created such a revulsion of public sentiment that the railroad people were forced to grant the demands of the strikers. Let us hope that when Major Warner comes to Washington one year hence he will be the duly elected Senator from Missouri.

In common with many other employes of the G. P. O., I take the Post and read it before coming to work in the morning. Up to Tuesday morning I had supposed what I regarded—and still regard—as Washington's leading newspaper would not be guilty of the all too prevalent crime of "faking" in its news columns. But I attended the "Old Boys" banquet on the evening previous, and as I was present until the finish. I was in a position to know what occurred there. And so, when I read in the Post that the banqueters sang "Auld Lang Syne" when Senator Scott mentioned Mark Hanna's name I was prepared to pronounce the statement a "fake," pure and simple. Not to be outdone the Star, as is its frequent custom, copied the Post's report of the occasion, with slight changes intended to convey the impression that its reporter had been there. The Post said:

* * * At the names of McKinley and Hanna heads were bowed, and for several seconds not a sound was heard in the banquet hall. Then with one accord the guests rose to their feet and gave vent to pent up feelings. The band struck up an appropriate air, those present took up the refrain, and the words of "Auld Lang Syne" were sung * * *

The only thing true in the above paragraph is the sentence, "the guests rose to their feet and gave vent to their pent up feelings." There was no silence and no heads were bowed, the band did not play, and nobody sang "Auld Lang Syne" or anything else. There was nothing but a long-continued thunder of applause after Senator Scott said the words "Mark Hanna." It was a spontaneous tribute from the guests to the memory of one of the most colossal figures in recent American history. We union men can not forget the deep and sincere interest which Senator Hanna took in the welfare of the American workingman, an interest which was so deep that it impelled him to say in one of his last public utterances that so far from desiring the Presidency, he intended to devote the remaining years of his life, as President of the Civic Federation, to the best solution of the labor problem, to the end that capital and labor might realize fully that their interests were identical. We could ill afford to spare such a man. It would possibly have been a credit to the guests of the Old Boys' banquet had they followed the program indicated by the Post. But there was no fake in what they really did. They voiced their love and admiration for the great Senator in a mighty shout that shook the windows. Let us hope he heard it!

The girls of this division are still young enough to have birthdays, and one of them distributed candy in honor of such an event. May she long remain young enough to acknowledge having a birthday.

Here is a splendid clipping from the December number of the Typographical Journal:

DON'T BE A KNOCKER.

You may find honor among thieves, truth among liars, and wisdom among fools, but you will never find a spark of manhood, womanhood or principle in the makeup of confirmed knockers. Don't get in the habit of being a confirmed knocker.

The transfer of R. H. Harstin to the Night Force caused a vacancy in the chairmanship of our chapel and Miss Laura B. Gordon was unanimously elected to fill the unexpired term created by Mr. Harstin's resignation. Miss Gordon was at one time chairman of the Job Room chapel and so brings knowledge and experience to bear in fulfilling her duties as chairman.

If I must take medicine I prefer the usual routine of a prescription and not the surprise of getting it from one of the drinking cups in the office. A few days ago, as I went by one of the coolers, I stopped to wet my whistle with just a few drops of water. If I had filled the cup full of water it might have been less evident—but I didn't; I got all that was coming to me. Think it was camphor.

A recent issue of the Denver Times contained a fac-simile of one of its first numbers of 1872, when Colorado was a territory and its population was about 2 500. Mr. A. J. Boyer started the paper and was its editor and proprietor for several years. He is justly proud of its present proportions, which compare favorably with the New York Journal, and it caters to a population numbering about 200,000. Mr. Boyer sold out his interest in the Times and went to California, where he made other ventures in the newspaper field founding the Oakland Tribune, which is still in existence. The Times contains an excellent half-tone picture of Mr. Boyer and the story of its career in newspaperdom.

I think the membership of Columbia Union should keep well informed as to the capabilities of the Lanston machine and where possible qualify as operators, so that it will not be necessary to send elsewhere for skilled operators. When the Linotype machine was introduced in the newspaper offices of this city there was considerable hardship experienced by reason of the ignorance of the workings of that wonderful machine. According to a paper published by the Lanston Monotype Company the Official Gazette has the honor of developing the fastest operator on the Lanston keyboard in the person of Miss Hattie Jewett, her record being 43,000 "ems" in eight hours. The Patent Office work has always seemed to attract to it compositors of exceptional skill in piling up the "ems," and in the days when type-setting contests were permitted quite a few of them walked off with the trophy. Of those who have been connected with the Patent Office work who have won prizes are J. W. McCann, W. W. Maloney, J. R. McBride, H. V. Bisbee, Spencer Bennerman, Dick Richards and W. W. McCollum. But there were many others on Spess at different times noted for their speed who would probably have equaled the records made. For instance, Covert, Hammer, Roderick, Gunder, Marschalk, Carter, Welch, Hodes, Sterner, Aughinbaugh, Brinner, Schwrar, and perhaps others—a constellation of names that stood prominent above their fellows almost, if not altogether, anywhere.

CUMMINGS MEMORIAL.

Frank A. Kidd to Introduce Resolution For Assessment.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

On page 184 of The Typographical Journal for October, proceedings of the I. T. U. convention, is the following:

Mr. Kidd (Washington) secured unanimous consent for the introduction of the following resolution, which was read by the secretary:

Whereas this convention has pledged the membership of the International Typographical Union to the erection of a permanent memorial at the Union Printers' Home, in honor of the late Amos J. Cummings; and

Whereas a contribution of 50 cents from each member of the I. T. U. will successfully carry out this direction of the convention; therefore be it

Resolved, That the delegates to this convention pledge themselves to bring the matter before their local unions, and urge upon the membership the propriety of contributing 50 cents each to this commemorative and cent object.

The resolution was adopted unanimously.

In conformity with this injunction of the convention, at the next meeting of Columbia Union I shall submit the following resolution:

Resolved, That an assessment of fifty cents be levied on each regularly employed member of Columbia Typographical Union, No 101, said assessment to be paid on or before January 15, 1905, and to be known as the "Columbia Union Christmas offering in aid of the Cummings Memorial at the Union Printers' Home."

Mr. Thomas McCaffery, resident trustee, in a communication submitted to the convention by President Lynch, set forth fully the plan decided upon, from which I make the following extract:

It being generally conceded that the Union Printers' Home is the proper location for a memorial to a union printer, it is only reasonable to suppose that a memorial which would add to the betterment and usefulness of that institution would be the grandest monument that could be erected to perpetuate the memory of any union printer. As the Washington convention of last year practically decided that it should be a memorial library, and that this library should be provided by extending the northeast wing of the main building of the Union Printers' Home, I think you should point out to the members of the convention the advisability of adopting this plan of memorial and urge upon them the necessity of providing means for its completion.

As you are aware, the present assembly room, in which is located the Home library, and where the residents congregate to read, smoke, converse with each other, and amuse themselves with cards, dominoes, etc., is only 35 by 40 feet in size. With the increased number of inmates, this room is generally overcrowded during the fall and winter months, when the days and evenings are too cold for comfortable existence out of doors, and it is wholly inadequate for the giving of entertainments for the amusement of the residents of the institution. By extending the northeast wing of the main building 65 feet, as contemplated, this room would be increased in size to 40 by 100 feet, which would provide ample space for assembly hall, reading room and library. This hall could then be divided by rolling partitions, with movable frames, giving a library room 50 by 36 feet in the clear and arranging for bookcases on two sides. The partitions being movable, the entire space could be converted into one large hall, where lectures, musicales, and other forms of light entertainment might be frequently given, thus letting in many hours of sunshine upon the lives of the older and more feeble inmates who are unable to seek recreation in other ways, and upon whom the relentless hand of time presses heavily.

Besides the great benefits enumerated above, this plan would furnish accommodations for forty-eight more residents upon the second and third floors, thereby increasing the capacity of the main building nearly one-third. Sixteen sleeping rooms, 12 by 15 feet in size, would be provided on these two floors, capable of accommodating three occupants in each room.

In the basement we would secure an extension to the dining room of 23 by 36 feet, with a corresponding increase in the size of the kitchen, serving room, and servants' dining room, besides providing storage room for general supplies, a refrigerator room, bakery, flour storage, and coal bins.

It is estimated that this extension can be completed for $25,000.

There is not sufficient money on hand to warrant the commencement of work upon this memorial extension at the present time. If every member of the International would contribute 50 cents towards this commendable project, the memorial will be erected without delay, the capacity of the Home will be greatly increased, and the memory of Amos J. Cummings perpetuated in a manner that will be an honor to his name, and which will stand as a living monument to the wisdom and generosity of the union printers of North America.

While much could be said in support of this proposition, the salient features are so well expressed by Brother McCaffery that nothing, it seems to me, need be added. The glad Christmas tide is upon us, and it would be a gracious and generous act upon the part of the membership at this time to vote the assessment unanimously. This would make Columbia Union the largest contributor to this fund unless "Big 6" should add considerably to her $1,368, or No. 16 (Chicago) should supplement her $1,600. Put No. 101 at the top.

The Arena All Right.

Inquiry having been made at this office as to the attitude of The Arena, the following communication from Trenton, N J, the place of publication, will be of interest:

TRENTON TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION, NO. 71.
TRENTON, December 9, 1904.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

Your letter of December 5, received. Referring to your question in reference to the trades union standing of the Arena magazine, I wish to state that it is published in a union-label office, conducted by Mr. Albert Brandt of this city. It is a fair publication.

If I can be of any further service to you, please let me know.

Yours sincerely,
WALTER P. WILSON,
Corresponding Secretary.

Union-Made Clothing.

We desire our readers to notice the announcement of L. A. Downey, the tailor, in our advertising columns.

Mr. Downey is prepared to test the efficiency of this paper by quoting a price of $35 on suits made by union tailors that he has been receiving $45 for during the season. Being union-made and of best quality of imported worsteds, it is an opportunity not often presented to the general public.

Christmas Cigars.

A present that will be highly appreciated by the lover of a good smoke is a box of Offterdinger's After Dinner Cigars. The ad in this paper gives the price at $4.50 per 100. Offterdinger also quotes a price of $7 per 100 on his famous Deer Head, the best 10-cent cigar in the city for the money.

Textile Workers' Subscription.

The subscription in aid of the Textile Workers of Massachusetts to date is as follows:

NAVY-YARD ITEMS.

Masonic Temple southeast was the Mecca Wednesday evening last to which the members of Columbia Lodge, No. 174, I. A. of M., journeyed, it being the annual election of officers. After the excitement that follows such an event the following carried off the honors: E. L. Adams, president; T. F. Dornin, vice-president; Fred Brennan, recording secretary; Robert H. Cowan, financial secretary; S. D. Cole, treasurer; Clark Wood, conductor; Thomas E. Carroll, sentinel; W. F. Brown, H. T. LaClair, and W. R. Adams, trustees; Robert Dick, Guy Stewart, and Jno. W. Roth, auditors. A love feast followed in which the victor and the defeated vied with each other in expressions of fealty to unionism and the good of the order. We look for a great year under President Adams, as he has for his guiding star the the noble example of push and perseverance so fully carried into effect by the retiring president, Samuel Elder.

STRAY THOUGHTS.

There are several subjects inviting my attention that are of interest to the employes of the Yard. First is that the Navy Department should provide a suitable building wherein hot lunches could be served to the employes.

I have visited nearly all the different departments here and many large shops in the States controlled by private corporations and find suitable provision made, whereby the workmen are carefully housed during the lunch recess. It is not so with us. No matter how it may snow or rain the workmen are compelled to go out in the open and purchase their lunches from the several parties who have their stands so located. Is this fair? Is this just to faithful employes? Should not the authorities in charge provide a suitable lunch room, carefully inspected by some one appointed for that purpose to see that cleanliness is observed, so that the employes might, under its shelter, enjoy a hot lunch instead of a cold one gathered here and there from the several stands.

It is true if that be done one person would have to be in charge, which necessarily would compel the others to go out of business, but what is the discomfiture of a few to the good results that would follow to the many hundreds who depend on the lunch counter daily.

I trust this will attract the attention of the authorities and that it will bear good fruit.

Another thought follows. Why, with a membership of fifteen hundred members all interested in unionism, is it that so little attention is given to the fact that there is a paper in this city devoted to union principles, THE TRADES UNIONIST. It is embarassing in many ways. First, to the editor who uses every endeavor to produce a readable paper filled with the doings of the different departments. It is also embarassing to the writer, who, in his humble way, tries his best to write on such matters as will entertain and enlighten his fellow shopmates. It is also embarrassing to those who have the paper on their stands for sale. Brothers, don't you think it time to awaken to to the fact that you are a part that helps to make up the great whole. We who write, the editor who prints, and you who read, altogether make up the the machine. Let me tell you if you do not know that every Friday evening THE TRADES UNIONIST will be found at the store of Joseph M. Padgett, 609 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, who will take your order by the year or furnish you weekly. Every one knows Padgett as he was one of the best foremen who ever entered the Navy Yard, and who resigned on account of his health. So don't forget Joe, and THE TRADES UNIONIST.

Another question, and a very important one is this. Approximately we have eighteen hundred machinists in the Yard; of these fifteen hundred are within the folds of Columbia Lodge. Each week brings us new applications necessarily reducing the opposite force, and with the strong influences now at work by the committee on organization I feel we will soon be a complete whole.

President Roosevelt, in his message, spoke so feelingly of the good work done by organized labor that an awakening has commenced already. This is true, and the truth can do no harm. We have men in the Yard who sit idle, never doing the least to encourage their brothers who labor unceasingly to better their conditions. They are drones in the hive of industry, willing and ready to accept all the benefits that come through the efforts of Columbia Lodge, but hold aloof and comfort themselves with the saying that they see nothing good in unionism. Drones, did I say. They are worse than that; blood-suckers is a better term.

There is another feature that I regret.

In the other departments I find that the different foremen are members of their several unions. I regret that it is not so in the Yard. Why, I can not answer. It is generally supposed and with reason, that foremen and subforemen are selected for their ability, character, and intelligence to preside over their several departments.

Viewing it from this standpoint, what good results would follow if one and all would become members of the union representing their trade. By their advice, through their influence, and by their intelligence what benefits would accrue, not only to themselves but to the craft generally? If in the past they have had conscientious scruples for fear of offending the authorities, let that be a matter of history, and as the President says it is perfectly proper and honorable for craftsmen to combine for their benefit it is to be hoped that all the supervising force from the highest to the lowest will take the President at his word. "Who will be the first."

FAULT FINDERS.

In a previous article I stated that I intended to read the riot act to certain persons, who are fault finders in everything; men who never see anything good in other people, or in any thing they do; men who never attend the meetings of their Lodge and yet find fault with those who do, because the action of those who do attend are not satisfactory to those who do not. I can not call them kickers, as that might indicate that they attended Lodge, so I will endeavor to hunt up a new name and call them

Grumblers.

There are some men who take a special delight in grumbling. Unless they can complain they are apparently unhappy. To hear them grumble it might be supposed that nothing ever pleased them.

At home they grumble at their meals, at the noise of the children and the expense of house keeping. In the shop they grumble at the apprentices because they do not know everything as soon as they enter the shop. They grumble at winter weather as too cold or sloppy; at the summer for being so hot; at the autumn as changeable; at spring as rainy. They grumble if their wife wishes to go out in the evening; grumble sometimes as much because she stops at home. They grumble at old clothes for looking seedy, and at new ones for being too tight. They grumble if sick because the doctor don't cure them quicker, and when they get well, grumble at his bill. In fine, next to the bread they eat, grumbling seems to be their chief ailment.

This spirit of dissatisfaction is a curse alike to the grumbler and to his friends. No family can be really happy whose head belongs to this class. The wife is always in dread of the husband's disapprobation and the children lest they should do something to vex their father.

Constraint succeeds to freedom as soon as the grumbler appears. Even the house dog, the faithful friend to man, grows surly under his kicks and fault finding. Even his shop associates shun him so as not to experience annoyance. To himself, however, he is his worst enemy. The practice of grumbling long indulged in, becomes a habit ruinous to happiness. Everything to to him is seen through a jaundiced medium.

Nothing affords the satisfaction that it should. Even when the grumbler would fain look on the bright side of things he finds it to be impossible, for he has been so long complaining that hope itself has deserted him, and disappointment is expected as a matter of course. The sky of life, that was so sunny when he was young, and that is still genial and blue to all healthy minds, seems to his morbid vision but one vast black expanse, heavy with dark clouds and portentious of coming evils

As this spirit of discontent is the great destroyer of happiness, so a cheerful disposition is the fertile mother of felicity. Life, in truth, is what we make it. If we look on it with a benignant, hopeful aspect, it turns a smiling countenance on us, but if we regard it with a settled melancholy it frowns back in gloomy despair. Let a man resolve to be happy, and he has, in his cheerful disposition, an alembic which will transmute even misfortunes. No disaster can overwhelm him, no sorrow utterly break him down. He may be tripped up, but he can not be overcome, for he knows that the race is not always to the swift, and so he is up again and gaily pressing forward, just when others begin to flag. If fate confines him for a while to a log hut, he picks up what comfort can be found there, resolutely closing his eyes to what is disagreeable. But the grumbler, on the contrary, can not be happy even in a palace. Contentment and happiness are strangers to him. He drags out a miserable existence, his highest bliss being merely a sort of negative felicity, arising from the conviction that he is not absolutely miserable.

QUIT GRUMBLING.

No matter how the clouds may drift
While scurrying
Across the sky. The winds may shift
And blue come laughing through the rift—
Quit grumbling.

No matter what the crowd may say,
While hurrying
Along the way. A brighter day
Is lingering along the way—
Quit grumbling.

No matter how the winds may blow
While flurrying
And scurrying. We ought to know
That brighter things are here below—
Quit grumbling.

From San Francisco.

No. 21 probably never had a larger attendance than greeted President Lynch, Frank Morrison, Frank K. Foster, and S. J. Triplett on November 27, who had remained over from the adjourned American Federation of Labor convention to visit the local typographical union.

The brief talks of the visitors were all well received, but "Trip," in that soul-to-soul vein perfected many years ago as a religious revivalist on the Texas border, was the evident star of the occasion.

In the evening Messrs. Foster, Morrison, John Bogert, of New York, Triplett, Tracy, Wandress, and Bob Higgins were entertained at supper and after supper by Home Trustee Will J. White.

Next day several of the printer delegates visited the University of California at Berkeley, where the students were addressed by Frank K. Foster of Boston.

THE TRADES UNIONIST.

OFFICIAL ORGAN CENTRAL LABOR UNION, WASHINGTON BRANCH, AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

Vol. IX. No. 28 | WASHINGTON, D. C., THURSDAY, DECEMBER 22, 1904. | Price, 3 Cents.

THE CENTRAL LABOR UNION

Unions Take Action on The Academy of Music and Dorsey Cases.

NEXT MEETING DECEMBER 30

Grievance Committee Reports Progress—Columbia Typographical Union Acts on Woodward & Lothrop Case—Unions Vigorously Fighting Academy of Music—Resolution Adopted.

The regular weekly meeting of the Central Labor Union was called to order at 8 10 p. m. on Monday evening, President Dickman in the chair.

The Grievance Committee reported progress.

Bills amounting to $71 75 were read and ordered paid.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, stating that request of Central Labor Union to place the Academy of Music and M. F. Dorsey, saloonkeeper, on the unfair list had been referred to Grievance Committee of the union. Placed on file.

Communications were received from the following organizations relative to action on Academy of Music:

Columbia Lodge of Machinists: Indorsing action of Central Labor Union.

Musicians Protective Union: Indorse action of Central Labor Union, and imposing a fine of $5 on any member of the union found patronizing that house.

Communications were received from the following unions, indorsing action of Central Labor Union in placing M. F. Dorsey, saloonist, 1213 Seveath street northwest, on the unfair list:

Bakers Union, No. 118: Fine of $2

Columbia Lodge of Machinists: Indorsed.

Musicians Union, No. 161: Fine of $5.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Legislative Committee reported on cases in hand, relative to resolutions of Machinists (Columbia Lodge), Great Falls and Old Dominion Railway, and a violation of eight-hour law on Government work.

NEW BUSINESS.

The following resolution was introduced by a delegate from Stenographers Union, and adopted:

Resolved, That the Central Labor Union of Washington, D. C., and its affiliated locals, when requiring typewriting, bookkeeping, or stenographic work, shall employ only members in good standing of Stenographers, Typewriters, Bookkeepers and Assistants' Union, No. 11773, of the District of Columbia.

The chair called attention to the fact that the next meeting of the Council would be held on the 30th inst.

Robert Scott Dead.

From a letter to Walter McKee we learn that Robert Scott, well known in this city, having worked on the Times some years ago, and on other daily newspapers, died in Dallas, Texas, about a month ago. He had a Jacksonville (Fla.) traveling card, but out of date. The members of the Dallas Union took up a subscription and gave him a decent burial.—The Unionist, New York.

Manhood Gained.

JOHN HENRY MALEES.

I have lived, and fought, through life to manhood,
While loving eyes watched o'er me from the sky,
And I can live again those rare sweet pleasures
That come to me, by duty done; and that is why

My heart is cheery, though the future comes on apace,
Those kindly greetings, as the passers by
Hail me as comrade, brother, friend,
Give me but joy, I'll not regret, not I.

Then why should I look back with selfish longing
To the life that has gone by?
'Tis best to live the life now passing,
Still seeking light from Him on high.

CHRISTMAS ANTHEM.

While the shepherds watched their flocks
Resting on Judea's plains,
Suddenly the silence breaks
With the angels' joyous strains.

"Peace on earth, good will to men,"
Message sweet from Heaven to Earth.
Love has come to banish hate,
With the advent of his birth.

Lo, a star from out its course
Through the distant trackless skies,
Guides the wise men from the East
To the place where Jesus lies.

There beside his humble bed,
In a lowly manger stall,
Offering gifts and incense rare,
They adore him, Lord of all.

Would that all the world might join
And with wondering angels sing,
"Peace on eath, good will to men,"
Glory to the Heaven-born King.

JUST EVERY-DAY LIFE.

This is the season when the "girl with the eye for art" is in evidence. She gazes at the exhibits in the stores of Ninth and G streets, reading the panels tagged "$2 50 and up." "Principally up," she asserts, and then climbs the stairs of the Prudential Life Insurance Company, where an artistic calendar is presented to prospective patrons. Then to Golden & Love, on Louisiana avenue, to secure an embossed figure of Prosperity, the output of Woodward & Tiernan Company, St. Louis. The next visit is to the Home Life office at Fifth and G, and another gem is added to the collection. But it remains for Anton Fischer to secure the masterpiece among the local houses and consequently their offering is in demand for the bedecking of the den and boudoir.

My late side-partner of the Second says he can hear Assistant Heslet's yell of "Get copy!" in his dreams. When I hear "Bill proofs!" in my sleep the time-keeper need not look for me the next day; the harbormaster and his crew will be engaged in that congenial occupation with the object of their search at the bottom of the Potomac.

A gentleman way up in banking circles took a lady out for a sleigh ride during the recent fall of snow. She is a big girl, and the banker, nestling under her elbow—I suspect the lady held the reins—was nearly out of sight as they drew up to a West-end residence. "Who've you got with you?" was the inquiry over the expanse of pave and parking. Back came the answer, "The cuddler!" That name will stick to him for many a moon.

I know. On one occasion I rang a door bell. After the colored girl had shown me into the parlor, one of the ladies in the house asked over the banisters, "Who is it, Emma?" when on my ear fell the reply. "It's that black-eyed devil!" For many years, with this particular bevy of beauties, I never knew any other name.

BUGG'S SERMON.

Brethren: As the Christmas season
With its jollity draws nearer,
With its jollity and gladness,
And its music of kind actions,
Let us each assist his neighbor,
Brother making glad his brother;
Say the pleasant word and hopeful,
Do the kindly deed and helpful.

And, oh, do not let the fellow
With the much-disordered liver,
Full of malice, full of envy,
Stir you up to act unseemly.
Him too often we have with us.
In the language of the vulgar,
Of destructural jaw-workers,
He is what is called a knocker,
And he loves to ply his hammer
Till the human heart o'erheated
Sends forth sparks of senseless passion,
Foolish hatred. For the knocker
In his spiteful glee imagines
That the heart is boiler iron,
And he causes hideous discords
Where the heart should throb with music.

But despite his dreadful clamor
Let your path be strewn with flowers;
Gather bright bouquets of friendship
From the fields of Christian kindness;
Toss them to your struggling brothers,
Help them on their way rejoicing,
Better for the genial fragrance
Of kind words—of gentle language.
oh, how sweet they bud and blossom
As we cross life's desert places—
Blooms of Bloomer, Sutton's wild flowers,
McPike's Pikes that gem life's turnpike,
Newsom's nosegays, Gunn's wit blossoms,
Growths from Redfield's bouquet garden,
Morning glories of Rough Writer,
And Tim Tickle's prose perennials;
Cowboy's cowslips, Paste's wall-flowers,

Cycle's crysanthemums reaching
Altruistically sunward,
Not to mention other blossoms
Of good cheer and hope and gladness!

Now, my brethren, lest the thistles
And the poison plants which cynics
Like to cultivate and nourish,
Foul with atrabilious tarnish,
Slimy, loathsome, vile, and hellish,
Should invade the radiant reaches
Of the fields of Christian kindness,
Oh, I pray you, shun the knock-talk,
And with music of kind actions
Shake the dust from off your heart strings.

—ADAM BUGG.

BOOMER-ANG.

Pardon Bloomer—may his tribe decrease
Awoke one night, an awful thirst t'appease,
And saw right by the gas-light in his room
An angel writing in a book of gold;
Unnumbered drinks had make old Pardon bold
And to the presence in his room he said:
"What writest thou?"
The angel answered, with a look of sweet accord,
"The names of those the public like, oh Pard.
"And is mine one, said Pardon?"
"Nay, not so," replied the angel.
Pardon spoke more loud and foolish still, and said, "I want you then,"
To put me down as one who loves the pen."
The angel wrote and vanished; the next night
The angel stood again by that same light
And showed the names of those who thought themselves the best,
And lo, Pard Bloomer's name led all the rest.

COLUMBIA UNION MEETING

The Request of Philadelphia Union, No. 2, Favorably Acted Upon.

MEMORIAL COMMITTEE REPORT

Woodward & Lothrop Case Referred to Officers of the Union—Grievance Committee Doing Effective Work—Kidd Resolution Goes Over—Secret Committee Makes Final Report.

The regular monthly meeting of Columbia Typographical Union was called to order at 2.30 p. m. last Sunday, President Berg in the chair.

The minutes of the last stated and adjourned meeting were read, and, after correction, were approved.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Central Labor Union, asking indorsement of action of that body in placing the Academy of Music and M. F. Dorsey, saloon keeper, on the unfair list. Referred to Grievance Committee.

From Hat and Cap Makers' Union, requesting that members of No. 101 purchase only hats and caps bearing the union label.

On motion, the secretary was instructed to keep a file of communications from organizations asking cooperation in advancing the cause of the label and furnish copy of same to the Woman's Auxiliary.

Communication from Philadelphia Union, asking assistance in the erection of a monument in that city to George W. Chance. Action deferred.

Bills amounting to $44.50 were read and ordered paid.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

The Grievance Committee reported that they had under consideration the grievance of Upholsterers Union against Woodward & Lothrop. The committee stated that they were not prepared to make any recommendation in the case, and referred the matter back to the union. On motion, the matter was placed in the hands of the officers of the union.

The Grievance Committee also reported that they had exacted a promise from J. C. Bauman, saloonist, 301 H street northwest, to discontinue handling cigars made by the firm of N. Sickels, which is on the unfair list. This action was accomplished by request and aid of Cigar Makers' Union.

The Memorial Committee reported that its total expense account was $83 15 for recent memorial service; that the service was well attended and was a success; that a letter of thanks be prepared by the secretary and be sent to the ladies and gentlemen who volunteered their services on the occasion.

The committee's report was adopted and a vote of thanks extended to the committee.

The secretary reported that the committee appointed to solicit funds for the striking Textile Workers reported receipts to date of $114, with some members of the committee to hear from.

Mr. Hall, from Allied Printing Trades Council, reported that a list of the union label offices had been published, and that an effort was being made by the council to have the label on all Inaugural printing.

Mr. Brockwell, from Nominations Committee, reported that the committee had passed favorably on the request of two apprentice members for further time to complete trade, which was agreed to.

The committee also recommended favorable action on the admission to full membership of Richard Cromwell, John E. Rastall, George W. Mullins, E. M. McIver, C. L. Lorraine, Percy C. Howell, Robert Maffet, and A. Gowen, who were duly elected and obligated.

The committee asked for further time in cases of several applicants pending, which was agreed to.

REPORTS OF OFFICERS.

The president reported three deaths since last meeting—Howard W. Morrison, David J. Snyder, and Aven Pearson.

The secretary reported the transfer of D. H. James from the active to the passive roll and Walter Ball from apprentice to full membership.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

Consideration of resolution for 50-cent assessment for Cummings Memorial Fund was had, and on motion action was deferred until meeting of July, 1905.

NEW BUSINESS.

The following resolution was read and adopted:

Resolved, That the officers of this union be directed to confer with the officers of the Pressmen's and Bookbinders Unions for the purpose of devising ways and means to acquaint the general public of the many free Government publications that can be had for the asking and to create a demand for the same.

The trustees were directed to ascertain the probable cost of closing up the windows in the rear of the hall and installing a number of electric lights over the arch on the stage, and report at the next meeting.

A motion to permit members of the Woman's Auxiliary to occupy seats in the gallery during sessions of the union was ruled out of order by the chair.

The chairman of the late secret committee (Joe M. Johnson) made a report of expenditures by the committee showing that balance of $3.60 out of an appropriation of $25 remained, which balance was promptly turned over to the secretary of the union.

On motion a special vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Johnson as chairman of the secret committee.

On motion of W. L. Hall, that this union indorse request of Philadelphia Union to permit of a referendum vote on question of assistance being furnished Philadelphia Union in its present struggle, and as no official communication was at hand, after considerable debate the motion of Mr. Hall prevailed.

On motion the usual Christmas offering to residents of the Union Printers' Home who are memders of this union was made.

HOT SHOT FROM OMAHA.

"Sadie Maguire" All Het Up Over Charge of Knocking.

Secretary J. W. Bramwood will surely agree with me when I remind him that the "knocker" who assisted in "knocking" Singing Al Wines out and J. W. Bramwood in, is the same "knocker" who "knocked" the "dead horse" Journal into the home of every union printer in the country. He is the same "knocker" who helped to "knock" Superintendant Schuman out of the Home. He is the same "knocker" who helped to bring Charley Clark's resignation by telegraph. He is the same "knocker" who "knocked" W. B. Prescott loose from a job that was considered perpetual—a job that was as secure as Mr. Bramwood's is to-day. He is the same "knocker" who put life into the "round robin" Charley Deacon thought he had suppressed at Milwaukee and finally had remedied every evil complained of by the inmates of the Home. This particular "knocker" we speak of has some "knock" left in him and he knows there is a healthy anti-Bramwood sentiment among the members (as well as among I. T. U. statesmen), and, with a little help from Denver it can be crystalized into quite a serious "knock" on the spineless editor of the Typographical Journal. Please don't forget, Mr. Bramwood, that it took three years of "knocking" to put the '96 convention in condition to bring about your election. Don't forget that you were elected by the "knockers" at Colorado Springs. It is considered better form to be a "knocker" than an ingrate.

New Machine.

Our associate borrowed a type gauge from the business office of a trade union in the same building in which The Unionist is made up and forgot to return it. Next day one of the lady clerks came to us and said: "Mr. Unionist, Miss R. (the type measuring bookkeeper) would like you to return to us her emming machine."—The Unionist, New York.

THE KICKER.

Bemoans The Departure of an Erstwhile Companion and Friend.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

Some unprincipled person appropriated to his unhallowed uses my copy of your valuable publication (for which I still owe), and in order to peruse the rare literary gems which scintillate in its pages like a jewelry store's Christmas display, I was forced to borrow the copy of a friend (who probably also owes for it). Among the arrivals and departures chronicled by Secretary Seibold, I saw the name of a young friend who has shaken the snow of Washington from his feet and departed for other scenes where perhaps the air is purer, the water clearer, the skies bluer, and the sun brighter. And as I read his once-loved name and pondered on the probability that I might never again in this life see him I was inexpressably saddened. For, unwittingly and unintentionally, I once did that man a great wrong. With only kindly feeling and with a desire only to do him good I committed the gravest offense against him imaginable.

How well I remember him as a "cub." He was one of the brightest and most intelligent youngsters that I ever knew. His memory was marvelous. And when he emerged from the inky apron stage, and, breaking the dull brown chrysalis of apprenticeship, burst upon our enraptured vision in all the irridescent glory of a young "jour," his intellect was a wonder and a joy to the beholder. His memory for "style," that evasive sprite, who ever eludes those who seek to know her intimately, was so nearly perfect that at times his nearest and dearest friends were almost afraid that he might become a proofreader. He could remember all the important dates of history, knew who was the first man up San Juan Hill, was suspected of knowing who struck Billy Patterson, knew how to pronounce chauffeur, could spell all the obsolete words in the office dictionary, which was of the vintage of '76, and his memory for things which we wanted him to forget was little short of diabolical. His marvelous memory was his one treasured faculty.

And when I tell you, Mr. Editors, that I, with one act totally obliterated this stupendously accurate memory, you will sympathize with my grief and excuse these tears.

He came to me one pay-day, and with a tremor in his voice and grief depicted on his face, recited to me a harrowing tale of distress. He besought me by the love I bore my wife and little ones, the memory of my sainted mother, and the flag of my country, to loan him $10 to tide over the crisis which threatened to engulf his fair young life. I yielded, little reckoning the terrible consequences to him. And to me. For had I refused him I would not have to reproach myself with the destruction of the memory of my young friend.

I think, however, had he elected to remain in Washington awhile longer I might have been by Providence permitted to repair my wrong.

Could I meet him once again, preferably after he has worked a full turn-in, and just at the moment when he has reluctantly parted from the cashier, I think—I hope—nay, I am sure I could restore his memory—right my wrong—and pay the coal bill.

Vale, Montgomery.

With the passing of Peabody will go the so-called Commissioner of Labor, one Montgomery, a printer by calling, yet discredited by his local union, and despised by other trades, on account of his betraying confidence reposed in him by admitting him to different labor conventions, and then rushing back and unbosoming himself to the "guy." The United Mine Workers of District No. 15 have not forgotten his treachery. —Labor News, Colorado Springs.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 22, 1904.

MERRY CHRISTMAS.

PORT ARTHUR will be well shaken before taken.

IN the matter of anti-smoke regulations the District Commissioners should smoke up.

THE general adoption of the short work-day will increase the number of consumers and thereby encourage industrial activity and the establishment of permanent prosperity.

As a matter of fact the PARRYITES are opposed to labor unions because they seek to secure at least living wages for their members. Dying wages are more to the liking of the PARRYITES.

THE Washington Post speaks of "voluminous reports of special committees and commissions that scarcely anybody but the proof readers has read." Perhaps that accounts for his bulging intellect.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

On two or three occasions I have been accused of suppressing or preventing the publication of matter written by others and sent to THE TRADES UNIONIST, and I want to say now that not in one single instance have I done so or made any suggestions on the subject whatever. Nor have I attempted to learn the names of those using noms de plume, or ever cared who they were. I have never asked the editors of that paper for any consideration in the way of suppressing criticism of myself, nor do I want such consideration, though I would not expect them to permit aspersions on my character, any more than they would permit me to asperse the character of anyone else. It is an old saying that it is human nature to suspect others of doing what we would do or desire to do in their circumstances, but I don't want to think that of anyone.

* * * *

There was a cruel rumor around the office last Saturday night that Col. Bill Sweeney, maker-up in the Second Division, had dropped dead, but it was a mistake of identity, being another Mr. Sweeney. William H. Sweeney is the oldest appointee in the Government Printing Office in point of continuous service, now being in his forty-fourth year, if my recollection is right, and long may he continue to hold that honor.

* * * *

Columbia Union can always be counted on to do the graceful, and the appropriation last Sunday of a sum of money to each of our members in the Home, as a Christmas present, is another instance. It is true the sum is not a large one; but the Union is not just now "in funds," owing to the large demands which have been made upon it, and a small Christmas present shows the good feeling as well as a larger one would.

* * * *

The Government Printing Office Mutual Relief Association held its annual election last Sunday, all the old officers being re-elected, as follows: A. W. Bowen, president; John B. Dickman, vice-president; E. F. Geyer, recording secretary; J. E. Keefe, financial secretary; A. J. Arnold, treasurer. The amount disbursed in sick benefits during the year was $5,440, at a cost of $4 25 to each member, the pro rata dividend being $7.75. The cost per month per member, for an insurance against sickness of $10 per week for six weeks, is but a hair space over 35 cents, which seems a good deal better than paying nothing and panhandling for help when sickness comes.

I have been permitted to copy the following:

300 WEST SEVENTY-SIXTH STREET,
NEW YORK, December 15, 1904.

DR. MARCUS BENJAMIN, Washington.

DEAR SIR:—Thanks for the five copies of the President's message. They please me much. It is a comfort to see a combination of good taste with good workmanship in a businesslike pamphlet. Please give my compliments to Mr. Ricketts, and accept my thanks for your service in good printing.

Yours cordially,
THEO. L. DEVINNE.

This is praise from one of the finest printers and judges of printing in the world—a man who does his own work well and has no patience with those who do not do theirs well—and a compliment from such a man is worth acres of the fault-finding of those with grudges against the Government Printing Office.

Here is some more to the same effect from another authority on good printing:

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE AND LABOR,
BUREAU OF THE CENSUS,
Washington, December 7, 1904.

MR. O. J. RICKETTS,
Foreman of Printing,
Government Printing Office.

DEAR MR. RICKETTS: Mr. Riddle has courteously sent over to me a couple of copies of the message of the President. I want to congratulate you at once upon the unusually effective and tastefully presentation of this paper. I think you have already learned that I am a good deal of a crank on the subject of artistic combination of types, and it gives me more pleasure than I can express in small compass to find such a striking change as this pamphlet from the old-fashioned and distressing typographical presentation of public documents. I think this advance is due to your progressive spirit, and I fully realize how difficult it is to carry such changes through. The mere fact that you have succeeded in abandoning six or eight faces of type on a page, and use with skill and discrimination one series, and that the most tasteful in existence—for nothing can improve in the long run on old-style caps—speaks volumes for your success in your work.

If at any time I can be of service to you in solving knotty problems of typographical designs, I hope you will call upon me without the slightest hesitation. I may as well confess to you that after years of work at it I acknowledge that I like that sort of work as well as anything that comes my way.

With best wishes, very sincerely, yours,
W. S. ROSSITER,
Chief Division of Publication.

The readiness with which our people put their money into "syms," by which means considerable sums are accumulated and distributed when they "get ripe," suggests to me whether by similar small investments we might not establish permanent businesses. I have written something on this head before, but the fact that it led to nothing does not discourage me—many of my suggestions are barren of results. Suppose a hundred men put in a dollar a week—two dollars a pay day, as they do in the "syms"—and let it run for six months, lending during that time to members such sums as they wish to borrow. At the end of that time there would be a capital of $2,600 besides its earnings, and with its earnings in a year it would amount to about $6,000. With that amount a business could be established—a laundry, for instance, and with the patronage of its stockholders it would be a paying investment from the start. A tract of land could be bought for a year's accumulations, on which dwellings could be erected, which, with the rents and further accumulations of the association, would be paid for within a short time, when other land could be bought and other buildings built. This could go on continuously, my idea being that the investment individually would be infinitesimal and not felt by anvone, and whatever was earned and accumulated would be so much clear gain, and if a fellow lost out he would be no worse off than he would have been if he had never gone into it, for he wouldn't have saved the dollar a week any way. A system by which the stock of anyone could be bought and cancelled could be established; or, with the permission of the association, he could sell to an outsider if he wanted to get out. There are many businesses which might be conducted with profit in this way, and it looks to me as though the idea would be worth trying. I do not contemplate a source of income to the members—though it might yield an income in ten or fifteen years worth having—but a provision for the future in a company the assessments and profits of which would be constantly added to the working capital. I believe it would be better than insurance for those who lived for any considerable time after going into it, for if, in its magnitude after a dozen years of accumulation and addition, it got to paying good dividends, the living, instead of their heirs, would enjoy them. The idea is a good one even if no business were engaged in, for there are often opportunities for making money if one or a company has the money to snap up an opportunity—just an investment company, with no interest to pay, but the cash on hand with which to make a "good buy," to sell again when it can be done at a good profit. I believe the idea is feasible.

* * * *

I was talking finances to a fellow the other day and of course airing my views about the different ways to get ahead in the world, when he broke in on me:

"I've got a scheme that beats yours about six lengths in a furlong. Get every cent you can and keep it."

"Sure!" said I, "but how are you going to manage it? A man has got to live."

"Don't pay anybody a cent!" he exclaimed, enthusiastically. "Stand 'em all off! Tell the butcher and the grocer that the great amount of sickness you have had in your family has exhausted every cent you could raise for nurses and doctors, and if they go to the front office about you, tell the same story there and make big promises, interspersed with weeps. When the butcher and grocer won't stand it any longer, get others—the town is full of them. If you do have occasion for doctors, don't give 'em a cent. Doctors are the easiest people in the world to stand off any way. Borrow all the money you can and never pay a cent unless to gain confidence so as to hit 'em harder next time. Get down on your knees, if necessary, and tell the most distressing stories of suffering at home; that will bring the money out of the hardest-hearted shylock in the world. If anybody intrusts you with money to execute an errand for them—to pay dues into a society or any other debt—keep it. The most they can do is to cuss you. Do everybody wherever you can; get every cent you can and salt it away—and never, under any circumstances, give away your plant or admit that you have a cent on earth. Keep this up until your debts get within the limit that will enable you to take advantage of the bankruptcy law, become a bankrupt and you are free, with all the money you have earned and got in other ways put away and to the good.

"That's too hard a way to get money for me," said I.

"It's not too hard for me," said he.

Though Dr. William J. Manning—I don't know whether he is on the night force this year or not—told me this story some weeks ago, this is the first occasion when I have had time to tell it. Says he:

"I was standing at the corner of Fourteenth street—there where the Colorado Building stands—when along came Mr. Wheat, the foreman of the night proof room.

"'How do you do, Mr. Wheat?' said I.'

"'How do you do?' he returned. 'I don't believe I can call your name.'

"'Manning,' said I, and at that moment my friend came up.

"'Dr. Williams this is Mr. Wheat, the foreman of the night proof room,' said I, after the custom at such times.

"They shook hands and greeted each other.

"'I'm looking,' said Mr. Wheat, 'for one of these osteopaths. You doctors think you know everything, but you don't know anything when it comes to treating a case like mine. I've got sciatic rheumatism and I'm going to try an osteopath. I was told I could find one somewhere about here.'

"We directed him to a house which bore an osteopath's sign and went about our affairs, and I never thought about it again until meeting Mr. Wheat some days after in the office.

"'How's your rheumatism?' I asked.

"'How's my what?' he asked, in astonishment.

"'Your rheumatism? You told me you had the rheumatism.

"'I never had rheumatism in my life and I never told you I had,' he insisted.

"'Didn't you tell me up on Fourteenth street that you had the rheumatism and were going to consult an osteopath?' I asked.

"'I never saw you on Fourteenth street or any other place outside the office,' said he. 'You've been talking to Congressman Livingston, I expect. I have been taken for him.'"

Which reminds me that some years ago the late Mr. Cavis, who had been away and had just returned to work, met Mr. Wheat in the proof room, who put out his hand to shake hands.

"Why, I shook hands with you in the front hall just now, as I came in," said Mr. Cavis.

"Not with me, you didn't," said Mr. Wheat, "for I haven't been in the front hall." This was when the proof room was on the ground floor.

"Why, I surely did," said Mr. Cavis. "I'm going up to see if I made a mistake."

In a few moments he returned.

"It was Congressman Livingston that I shook hands with," said he.

I had a pleasant chat of a few minutes with Mr. W. W. Clark, president of the Illinois State Allied Printing Trades Union, one evening last week, while he was taking a look at the G. P. O. by night. He gave me some account of the way he made his way into Joe Leiter's stockade around his coal mine in Illinois and the state of affairs there. John Onyun tells me Mr. Clark is an editor, but he neglected to mention the name of his paper. He is a very pleasant, agreeable, and extremely well informed gentleman.

I hope the poets will be good for awhile now and not drive me into writing their kind of slop again. It always leaves a bad taste in my mouth.

A week or so ago I received a letter from James R. Alford, dated at Manila, November 1, notice of which was crowded out last week by less important matter. He denies that he is dead or that he had a stroke of paralysis, but says that his health has been bad ever since last August and that he will have to undergo a minor surgical operation. There are not more than half a dozen of the Washington contingent there now, all the others having returned home. Gessler had just returned to Manila and claimed that he was glad to get back. Sam Musick, who had officiated in Gessler's absence, was about to spend his leave in China, in company with Walter Barney, linotypist, who is on his way home. Mr. Leech was not expected until December. Alford expects to return to the United States as soon as his time is up.

* * * *

A fine old gentleman passed away yesterday in the person of Mr. Columbus Denham, an old bookbinder, whom I have known for many years, in his eighty-sixth year. I do not think he has been engaged at the business for several years. A number of his sons were engaged in the printing business, of whom I knew Win., Warner, and Garnett, printers, and Dan, some years dead, a pressman. Mr. Denham was a real 'gentleman of the old school."

YULETIDE.

Congress now doth stand adjourned,
And there'll be little doing
'Till those who've gone have all returned,
Then trouble will be brewing.

To friend and foe, a merry Christmas.

The proper observance of Christmas day is by much noise—in a horn.

The local merchants are complaining of a dull holiday trade. The shoplifters have not yet turned in their report.

If it isn't too late, perhaps Mr. Carnegie would appreciate the suggestion that he forward to Mrs. Chadwick one of his hero medals as a Christmas remembrance.

GOSSIP FROM THE G. P. O.

First Division.

L. W. Baldwin advanced to imposer in the Sixth day, one point advance.

Chas. S. Elder transferred to Sixth day, and advanced to maker-up. Two points.

Another pay-day. This time it was the Equitable Relief, paymaster H. Clay Espey.

Slug quotations—32 to 90 and 33 to 80. Incident to recent transfers, both "temporarys."

Green J. Jordon, laborer, assigned to messenger duty in the office of Assistant Foreman Spottswood, has resigned.

Among our holiday celebrities, we would mention Sunny Jim, Honest John, Funny Jack, any amount of Colonels, Majahs, Judges and "Black Arrow" Simon Pocher.

That all-around compositor in "Dick" Richards's supply division, J. L. Getman, has been temporarily sent down on the "Y," the compensation of maker-up going with the job. Jake is all right.

Mr. E. Coleman moved up a point—doing imposer's stunts as an assistant to Ben. Fowler up in the "William" room end—succeeding our late transfer, Mr. Baldwin. E. C. is a capable young man.

At the annual election for officers of the G. P. O. Mutual Relief recently held, the old officers were unanimously re-elected. Congratulations are in order, both to the membership and the newly re-elected officers.

We understand that late advices contain the glad information that J. J. McCarthy, recently located in Charleston, S. C., is employed on the Times, Denver, Colo., and much improved in health. Mac. has many friends in the G. P. O. who will be pleased to hear this.

The business of the past week closed on Saturday evening with the transfer of "Judge" R. C. Starr and L. W. Baldwin to the Sixth day. Some one has remarked that there are so many transfers from this division to the Sixth, that it will soon be the First, so far as the personnel is regarded.

If you have not already subscribed for the only labor paper in the District—THE TRADES UNIONIST—hand your name to Fred Berger. Thus not only keep abreast of happenings in the great printing office, but encourage the proprietors in their laudable efforts to furnish a first-class labor journal.

"Zeke," the colored individual who has been assisting at the lunch counter in this division for years, ever since the Kingsley Bros. furnished those delicate little sandwiches nicely prepared, has lost his job. But the lunch comes right along as regular as the whistle blows at 12, and the eaters line up in great shape.

John F. Lane was assigned to this division on Tuesday and credited to slug 28. The young gentleman, we understand, worked in this division when in charge of Capt. W. H. Fisher, the present efficient foreman of the Capitol and Library division. Mr. Lane, so said, was transferred from the War Department.

Harry W. Davis, for more than a quarter of a century a compositor on the Evening Star, who died after a brief illness on Monday evening, had many friends in the G. P. O., who will regret to hear the unwelcome news. We understand that he was a member of G. P. O. Council, 211, National Union, and was insured for $5,000.

Query—Where, oh, where are the candidates for chairman of our division? We have heard but a single name mentioned. Phil. Nachman says he is not in the "running." He certainly has made a good and attentive official. Then, too, some of the boys that had the bee in their bonnets have been transferred. So there you are.

This side of the room is good enough for us. The sun don't bother us one bit, either in summer or winter. And then, too, we can't all have window frames on the G street side. Leave them for the vets—Messrs. Bentz, Covert, Holeman, Dickman, Barringer, Rhodes, B. C. Wright, Phil. Steele and others. Us youngsters will catch on later. See.

All applicants for position in the Government Printing Office are respectfully referred to the Civil Service Commission. You can't get a job in this great big office, or any of the numerous branches without being certified to by the Civil Service Commission. That is one of the prescribed duties of the Commission, and whether you think you have a "pull," or not, the application must come through the C. S. C.

ROUGH WRITER.

FURNISHED ROOMS—For one or two gentlemen; with table board if desired. No. 51 Massachusetts avenue northwest.

Third Division.

A. P. E. Doyle is reported sick.

Alice Guild, slug 13, recently returned from seventeen days' leave.

Strenuous life on the bank statements ended last week, when we finished up Wyoming, and now the "old spavs" (so called) will have a rest.

Pard Julian is keeping very quiet. Look out for an explosion soon.

F. E. Warren, slug 44, is making a canvass for secretary of the Pennsylvania Club, located at Fifteenth and K streets, northwest. The chances of election at present seem to be in Mr. Warren's favor.

Christmas is close upon us, the season of "peace on earth, good will to men." If it were only that! But the habit of giving presents has grown to such alarming proportions that in many cases the significance of the day is lost in thoughts of how one is to pay for purchases that never would have been made at any other time. We are apt to forget that friendship that is true can not be bought; it is an impulse of the heart. More good will, and fewer presents given in the expectation of return offerings of like nature, are what we want. Merry Christmas to all!

The Washington Credit Association, organized temporarily November 16, whose advertisment appears in another column, met for permanent organization December 18, the election of officers resulting as follows: President, E. A. M. Lawson; Vice-president, T. Frank Hall; Secretary-Treasurer, R. M. Cheshire; Directors: E. C. Saltzman, W. J. Bateman, Jas. Doocy, F. O. Sanders, J. W. Belcher; Auditors: L. E. Smith, W. M. Camp, W. L. Agnew. The Washington Credit Association is a very different organization from an ordinary loan company. They don't loan money, and they have nothing to sell, but they issue orders which are accepted as cash payment by most of the good stores in town. The holder of the orders settles with the Association by notes, without interest or any other charges than the actual amount of the bills. The merchants allow the Association a small commission for the business sent them, which represents the Association's profits in the transaction. Any one in good standing, with a regular income, can obtain these orders, and leading merchants in all lines of business accept them. It is a far better way of tiding over a difficulty than borrowing money at ten per cent a month, or paying the big credit prices charged by the installment houses. The Association has established an office at Cole & Swan's jewelry store on H street, directly opposite the old Government Printing Office, where the secretary-treasurer, R. M. Cheshire, may be found each evening from 4 30 to 5 30

Alley 7 has lost its brightest ornament. One morning last week the foreman came into its sacred precincts, whispered a few words, and the blow fell. Wellington F. Simons was transferred to the Sixth Division. It has been my privilege to occupy the same alley with Mr. Simons since March 2, 1903, the day when I first set foot in the G. P. O., a period of nearly two years. During that time I never saw him lose his temper once, and although there have been numerous occasions when, with entire propriety, he might have opened up the vials of his wrath, he has invariably returned a "soft answer," or one calculated to excite the mirth of the other fellow to such an extent that bad temper gave way to uncontrollable laughter. Besides the gift of imperturbable good nature Mr. Simons is possessed of a rare intelligence that never balks, no matter what question is asked. When a subject comes up for discussion he always gives an intelligent rejoinder, and the man who isn't familiar with that complex compilation of contradictions, the "Manual of Style," has only to ask our friend, to be supplied with correct information. Without intending to be uncomplimentary to anybody, I can say truthfully that of all the departures from alley 7 during my tenancy (and there have been many, some of them distinguished), that of Mr. Simons has left the greatest hiatus. There was the genial Harry Bradley; the sedate Davis (now slug man); "Whissy" Bunker (look out for your rules!); the dashing Jim Phillips ("Texas"); the versatile Frank Warren; "git thar" Henry D. Wadhams; the dignified Newsom; the smiling "Scotty"; the omnipresent Joseph Goodkey; the tuneful Unger. All these have left and we have managed to spare 'em, although with some regret. But we believe the last-named gentlemen will not take it as a reflection upon any of them when we say that when Mr. Simons left us the sorrow was more genuine than we had felt at any of the previous departures. We commend him to the good offices of those of the employes of the Sixth Division with whom he will be brought in contact. They will find him all that we have stated, and a lot more that we can't think of. His qualifications may be summed up in one short sentence: He is a printer and a gentleman!

RED MORGAN'S SUDDEN BRACE.

A Christmas Story.

BY GEORGE M. RAMSEY.

It was Christmas Eve, and the gin palace of Bob McMurray in the city of C—— was crowded, his being the popular resort of the men of the printing trades, and the glasses were clinking and the laughter was loud and boisterous, for "Red" Morgan was telling a story as only he could tell one when in the humor. A tall, handsome well-dressed fellow he was, as he leaned upon the bar, of age apparently verging upon forty, the most striking feature being his full crop of auburn hair that had given him the nickname by which he was known from Boston to San Francisco and from St. Paul to New Orleans, and in almost every city intervening, for "Red" Morgan was a traveler, not of the box-car hobo tribe, but of the always well-dressed, neat appearing class who travel from city to city asking favors from none, apparently from restlessness of disposition. An excellent workman, the best-paying situation seemed of no value to him, so far as holding him in any particular locality. Bright, smart, witty, and as liberal as a prince, everybody was his friend, and yet none could say they knew much of him, for there was something in him that forbade familiarity even when on one of his wildest whirls.

Two days before he had reached C——, and finding a number of former companions, and the size of his roll apparently needing diminishing, had started in to paint the town, and, judging from his condition and that of a number who had endeavored to keep pace with him, he had made a complete job of it. Having ordered for the house once more he found his funds insufficient to liquidate, and inquiring the most convenient hock-shop, said: "Boys, just wait a minute until I get a ten-spot on this Benjamin, will you, for overcoats and empty pockets are wrong fonts," and out into the street he hastened.

It was a stormy, nasty night, and the wind chilled his blood as he staggered along the street, and he almost collided with a woman at the door of the pawnshop to which he had been directed, in his haste to escape the cold.

The woman and himself were the only customers in the place, and Morgan could not help overhearing her request to the broker for a small loan upon some small trinket she desired to deposit, and the sound of her voice awoke memories of the past he had been endeavoring to kill for years, and had she looked as she passed out she would have noticed the man holding on to the counter for support.

The pawnbroker noticed his agitation when he turned to wait on him, and answered his questions as to the name and residence of the woman, for he saw they were prompted by no idle curiosity, and all the more readily advanced the twenty-five requested on the overcoat, for the pawnbroker was a humanitarian and had pitied the poor little woman more and more on each of her visits to his shop.

The crowd at McMurrays were much astonished a few moments later to see "Red" Morgan take something soft for his, pay for the round, and bid them all good-night, in a hurried, agitated manner, and very much astonished soon thereafter was the corner grocer a few blocks away at the questioning of a handsome overcoatless, dissipated looking stranger as to whether he knew a family named Gray and of their condition in life, etc. Indeed the grocer did know pretty little Mrs. Gray, and sorry he was, too, for her, with a husband sick these many months, and a number of children to support, and convinced he was, too, that they were in dire distress, for although she had always paid for everything, her purchases had become more and more meagre for such a family, and he had also noticed that the older children were not attending school since the severe weather set in, for lack of proper clothing, he presumed.

Would he make up a Christmas basket for ten dollars of such things as he thought best for such a family, and deliver without disclosing whence they came? Indeed he would, and he would give them one hundred cents' worth for every dollar, too, and no purchase that had ever been made at his store had ever given him more pleasure in the serving.

The grocer also informed Morgan that Mrs. Gray had attended a little church around the corner, the parsonage to which stood next door, the pastor of which could very likely give him more information regarding the Gray family's circumstances, and much astonished were several small shopkeepers in the vicinity on this same stormy Christmas eve to see the old and much beloved pastor of the little church, accompanied by a well-dressed but overcoatless stranger, purchasing toys and games and candies and fruits, and all the little things that go to make Christmas the happy time of the year for the children of the poor; and Santa Claus saw no happier children next morn than the little ones of poor sick John Gray and his true little wife Annie, and no one but the good old pastor knew whence came the money that aided John Gray and finally restored him to health, and brightened the darkest days of his little family, and that the winning of pretty Annie Wilson by John Gray had made of "Red" Morgan a restless wanderer on the face of the earth.

IN ITS TWENTY-FIRST YEAR.

G. P. O. Relief Association Re-elect Old Officers.

The twenty-first annual meeting of the Government Printing Office Relief Association was held at Typographical Temple last Sunday, and the following officers were re-elected and installed for the ensuing year: President A. W. Bowen; vice-president, J. B. Dickman; recording secretary, E. F. Geyer; financial secretary, J. E. Keefe, and treasurer, A. J. Arnold.

During the meeting addresses were made by J. B. Dickman, A. J. Arnold, and others, reviewing the far-reaching effect of the good work done by this, the parent organization of similar societies formed all over the world, inquiry as to its work coming from remote parts of the globe.

The total membership of the association December 1, 1904, was 1,035, and a large number of new applications were acted upon.

The amount paid out during the past year for sick benefits was $5,440. To those who did not receive benefits a pro rata dividend of $7.75 was paid.

The Government Printing Office Mutual Relief Association is the oldest sick benefit organization in the United States, and is conducted with the least expense possible.

The officers and members of the governing board are well-known and trusted employes of the Government Printing Office, and as not one penny has gone astray since its organization it speaks well for them.

The annual manual and constitution of the association is in the hands of the printer, and will be issued early in January. The previous editions have always been in great demand, and the forthcoming publication promises to eclipse all of them in the printing art.

Death of Octogenarian.

The death of Columbus Denham, a venerable citizen of the District, occurred Wednesday at 10 o'clock a. m., in his apartments in the Henrietta, 933 N street northwest. Mr. Denham was born on "the navy yard" in 1819.

For many years before the Government Printing Office was established he conducted a bookbindery in the old Globe building, Pennsylvania avenue, between Third and Four-and-a-half streets, and did much of the Government folding and binding, which is now done at the Government office.

He was then known as "the official binder to Congress and the Departments." Mr. Denham had lived here throughout the eighty-six years of his life.

Labor Notes.

Workers in sugar plantations in southern California will shortly be organized.

Over fifty of the sixty-five national and international unions connected with the American Federation of Labor have as their chief officials American-born men.

The International Brotherhood of Bookbinders will hereafter publish an official organ direct, and the office of publication may be in Chicago.

The Cigarmakers' union was the first labor organization to advocate an eight-hour day. This union succeeded in establishing it on May 1, 1886, and it has been in force constantly ever since that date.

NAVY-YARD ITEMS.

It is with sadness I notice the death of Mrs. Mary Elizabeth, wife of Marion C. Thompson, of the Labratory Department in the Yard. She passed out Friday, December 9. A dutiful wife, a loving mother, and an earnest Christian has gone to her reward. She was a tireless worker in the order of the Eastern Star and many widows and orphans of Masonic brethren have blessed her coming, feeling no doubt that the mantle that covered her deeds of charity had been placed upon her by those who had been bound together by the mystic tie.

Milton V. Willey, one of the best-known men in the Yard, employed in the blacksmith shop, was found dead in his bed Sunday. He was a native of Maryland, but has resided in this city for many years.

The wife of Rev. Richard Emmons, of the East Gun Carriage Shop, is dangerously ill. The sympathy of his shopmates go out to both, as their wedding was only chronicled in THE TRADES UNIONIST a few weeks ago. The illness was caused by a fall.

The wage board is now in session and committees representing the various crafts are presenting data, each endeavoring to prove to the board that an increase in pay is not only desirable, but justifiable, as we are the lowest paid of all craftsmen in this city in Washington employ. It is to be hoped that owing to the great increase in living that the board will recognize that fact and recommend to the Secretary a reasonable increase.

GREATER FACILITIES.

There has been much favorable comment by the officers in the Yard relative to the article advocating a large increase in the ordnance plant, which appeared in THE TRADES UNIONIST.

The daily papers have taken up the question with spirit and energy. The Legislative Committee of Columbia Lodge, No. 174, I. A. of M., acting jointly with a committee from the Central Labor Union, have taken up the subject, and from now on until Congress closes every effort will be put forth to interest the business element in carrying out the recommendations of Captain Pendleton.

As usual, THE TRADES UNIONIST and Columbia Lodge are the pioneers in a work that if carried into effect will be positive proof that the Government can not suffer by the action of organized labor, but to the contrary it will always find organized labor in the front ranks advocating an honest day's work for an honest day's pay.

It is a fallacy, as some try to prove who do not know the faithful labor performed by Government employes, that the Government pays higher wages than outside corporations for the same kind of labor. It is a fact that can not be disputed that where a department is closely unionized there is no friction among the men, but a closer application to their work, and nowhere can this fact be better illustrated than in the Naval Gun Factory.

Contractors can not compete with us neither in cost or quality in gun construction. This is fully demonstrated by the several contracts that have been thrown up by those corporations who sought the privilege of showing Uncle Sam that they could take contracts, make a profit thereby, and do the work better at the same cost as at the Naval Gun Factory.

Failure upon failure has been the result and it will ever be so.

DEBATE.

Columbia Lodge, No. 174, I. A. of M., at its regular meeting Wednesday night, was largely attended to listen to the debate between two of the heavy weights—Brothers O'Donnell and Carroll.

The subject was:

Resolved, That Columbia Lodge institute a co-operative store.

Brother O'Donnell, for the affirmative, produced figures to show from the days of Adam and Eve co-operation has been a success.

Brother Carroll, taking the negative, made an eloquent argument to the contrary.

Brother O'Donnell carried off the honors, which were duly smoked.

Among the visitors were several members of the Grand Lodge; also Brothers E. H. Fitzgerald, No. 264, Boston; F. B. Knight, No. 196, Watervliet, N. Y.; H. H. Jones, No. 441, Norfolk, Va.; R. G. Moody, No 214, Springfield, Mass.; G. S. Ross, No. 635, Pensacola, Fla.; H. Pile, No. 11, Norfolk, Va.; W. A. Johnson, No. 81, Rock Island, Ill., and George L. Cain, No. 654, Charlestown, Mass.

These gentlemen are representatives from their respective Lodges meeting here as delegates to the District Lodge, No. 44, composed of navy yards, naval stations, and arsenals.

Their object in visiting Columbia Lodge was to induce said Lodge to enter the District Lodge that all legislation sought by employes of navy yards, stations, and arsenals might be done by the District Lodge.

Columbia Lodge at this time can not see its way clear in the matter and so notified the delegates of their action.

Why is it that your correspondents seldom write anything interesting for our lady readers. I have no desire to be the pioneer in this direction, but some one must take the initiative.

Now that winter is coming on, and the "poor ye have always with you," I consider it my duty to try in my humble manner to say some word that might influence the ladies, who perchance may read this article and soften their hearts to charity.

I wish it understood, however, that I do not mean the wives of the wage-earner, as God knows they have all they can do to attend to the wants of their husbands and children, coupled with the arduous duties of housekeeping. It is the lady of elegant leisure, whose time hangs heavily on her hands I will try to captivate, and ask her to read, not only the subject, but the article complete. The subject is:

ARE YOU A LADY?

The term lady is an abbreviation of the Saxon word "leofday," which means bread giver. The "lady of the manor" was accustomed once a week to move among the poor as an alms giver, enriching their tables, and bearing away the poor man's smile. She moved in queenly beauty, and to her queenly robe clung the children of the lowly, looking at her as if their little eyes could never be satisfied with seeing.

Their little hearts could never utter
How well they loved her bread and butter.

But they loved her smiling face more. They needed not that any tell them how priceless is a smile. It was May day with them whenever she came among them with smiles and bread, and it was always May day with her, for the smiling poor loved her, and crowned her queen of all of the year.

Reader, are you a lady? Are you a queen among the poor? Do the children of the poor put a crown on your head? Do they make your hair gleam with gems, or is it burning with diamonds that the fingers of the poor never set there? Do the poor man's children cling to your gown, and find a protecting shadow in its folds? Do you wear a robe that "dirty little fingers" have never touched? Or is it pure and snowy with the touch of unwashed poverty?

Oh! there are garments that in the eye of God are very white, because the soiled, tear-stained cheeks of crying, starving children have pressed them. There are pocket handkerchiefs that in the eye of God are of great price. The practiced eye of the woman of the world says they cost neither ten nor an hundred dollars, and are not fit for a lady to carry, but God says they adorn the hands that carry them. They are a precious ornament, and fit for the hand of a queen on her throne, because they have wiped away the tears of those who sigh and cry in the home of want. Let me ask every lady, "Do you carry such a handkerchief?"

Do you wear a dress that in the eye of God is a robe of light, because the weary, aching little heads of hungry children have leaned against it? Are your jewels the grateful hearts of the poor? If they are, then they will never lose their luster, but shine brighter and brighter the longer you wear them.

I would rather have one grateful tear from a famished child I had fed, than all the jewels that glisten on a queen's brow.

They are all God's poor. They are our poor.

Let us turn aside from the crowded parts of the world, where only the rich and the gay and the pleasure-seekers walk, and take the dark and unalluring path that leads to the door of the poor man's home.

It's a cold winter, warm fires, warm dinners, and warm hearts must protect us all from the snow and cold. The poor are shivering over their last stick, weeping over their last crust, sighing for one warm heart to give them a blessing.

Woman, sitting in a rich house, in a rich chair, a rich carpet on the floor, comfortable in all things, sitting there luxuriously dressed, clothed in the "purple and fine linen" of life, let a thought of God's suffering poor start you from your reverie. The richest gifts of life warm your head and adorn your body, God has given you a bright cup to drink. 'Tis well, drink it—you may.

But let the poor man's children gather round; let them press their lips to the cup; let them share with you life's sweet draughts.

God is good to you and you should say:

As sweetly falls his love on me
I'll let it fall on you.

You are sitting by your warm fire, and I see you looking with a taste-illumined eye at a bouquet of house plant flowers, standing on your sideboard.

Possibly it cost several dollars. You paid that for it yesterday. It's all right enough. God made the flowers. He gave you money to buy them, but oh! buy something for the poor. Whenever you spend a dollor for yourself, spend one for the poor, and children shall gather round a bright fire, and laugh merrily over their warm clothes, and warm meal. If you have a mother's heart in you it will make it thrill with joy to know that the pangs of hunger are quelled; that sad little faces smile once more; those pale thin cheeks are plump and rosy again with health.

But give something more than your money; give yourself, and God will love you, and his poor will bless you.

You are sitting in a downy chair, close to a bright warm fire; possibly the air is full of snow, and the wind blows cold. It may be a long distance to that house of want. Possibly you may have to walk. How can you? Your snug parlor is so pleasant; the heat of your fire steals upon you so deliciously, and then the sky is so cloudy, and the wind is so cold. How can you go?

You can. Let the love of the poor, and the poor man's God sustain you.

Draw away from your fire, get up, put on your overshoes, wrap around you that well padded cloak; put on your furs, hang on your arm a basket of delicacies for the sick and palatable food for the hungry. With a woman's heart, a woman's energy, a woman's will, go. Your cheek will have a ruddier tint, your eye will have a brighter light and your heart will receive a greater blessing.

"As you have done it unto the least of them, ye have done it also unto me."

NAVY-YARD ITEMS.

Brother Jacob Hengstler, of East Gun Carriage Shop, is wearing a broad gauge smile as the boys offer their con gratulations. After much coaxing, the elusive stork was persuaded to alight, bringing a twelve-pounder. Jake says it is the best Christmas present Santa Claus ever brought him. Just wait until he experiences some of its antics about 2 a. m., with a good old-fashioned case of colic, and Jake may change his tune. Any way, he is happy because it is a boy.

The following touching letter has been posted on the bulletin:

To the Employes of E. G. C. Shop, Naval Gun Factory: I wish to express my sincere thanks to those who so kindly contributed to the beautiful floral tribute sent in memory of my dear boy, Charles.

Affectionately,
MRS. R. A. HOLLIDGE.

Charley Hollidge, who was just entering manhood, was the only son. His apprenticeship was just ended, and he looked forward with all the buoyancy of youth to a fulfilment of a long and successful career. Suddenly he was called to pass over the river to the un known. His many virtues, his friendly disposition, were the traits by which he is best remembered.

Brother Walter Kelly, of No, 137, Old Dominion Lodge, Newport News, Va., made quite a hit at Chase's Theater last week in his comical sketch, entitled "Judge Brown's Court." The Judge and several leading citizens of the News, were the guests of Professor Kelly one evening during the week and enjoyed themselves hugely. To those who do not know, I will state that Judge John Brown is the presiding officer of the police court at the News. Judge John, as he is familiarly called by the boys, believes in the closed shop, and woe be unto the scab or strike breaker when he appears as a defendant in his court. It is a great pity there are not more like Judge Brown.

The Secretary of the Navy has issued the following order, owing to the fact that the work is pressing, and needed to supply certain warships with ordnance:

NAVY DEPARTMENT,
WASHINGTON, D, C., Dec. 15, 1904.

SIR: Authority is hereby given to the Superintendent of Naval Gun Factory to run several of the machine shops of the Naval Gun Factory on Sundays and legal holidays for a period not to exceed four months. Employes who work on Sundays and holidays during said period will be allowed the ordinary rate of pay with fifty (50) per cent additional for such days. It is not obligatory for employes to work on Sundays and holidays during this period, but those who volunteer should do so with the understanding that their pay will be as above stated.

Very respectfully,
PAUL MORTON,
Secretary.

To the Commandant U. S. Navy Yard, Washington, D. C.

Mr. Ed. Kennedy, versatile writer, athlete professor, oyster roast promoter, gas stove agent, and worthy brother of Columbia Lodge, No. 174, has received a flattering offer from a foreign government as inspector of infantry, "so it is reported."

Brother Ed. won his spurs at Manila as lieutenant of a company in a Marine regiment. Being so modest, he reluctantly gave me his story, which for hairbreadth escapes clearly outclasses General Funston.

While scouting one day in the upper Luzon he became separated from his company. Suddenly, without warning his horse was boloed from under him, which was followed by an attack of a dozen or more bolomen. He knew he must fight or die, and drawing his sword determined to sell his life dearly.

Being a trained athlete, he succeeded in sidestepping as they rushed at him and each rush meant a dead boloman.

"To tell the honest truth," says Ed., "I succeeded in killing the whole band and returned to my company."

His friends now call him "Tom Pepper."

THE HALF DAY HOLIDAY.

The Washington Times of Saturday says that (1) employes of the Navy Yard who took their half holiday may lose their pay; (2) that Secretary Morton issued an order granting the employes of the Navy Yard a half holiday for the Saturday preceding Christmas; (3) that after issuing that order he discovered that it was contrary to law; (4) that the Comptroller of the Treasury had decided last summer that the employes in the Navy Yard were not entitled to half holidays with pay; (5) that after issuing said order granting a half day holiday, and finding said order was contrary to law he asked for a decision from the Attorney-General.

Let us reason with the Times, which never fails to put the knife under the fifth rib of the mechanic whenever opportunity offers.

The question arises: Did Secretary Morton issue said order? If so, who is responsible for its failure in being carried into effect?

A committee duly instructed from Columbia Lodge waited on the Secretary and asked, on behalf of the men, that the half holiday be extended to the employes of the Yard, thus placing them on the same plane as the other departments; as the Government Printing Office and Bureau of Engraving and Printing.

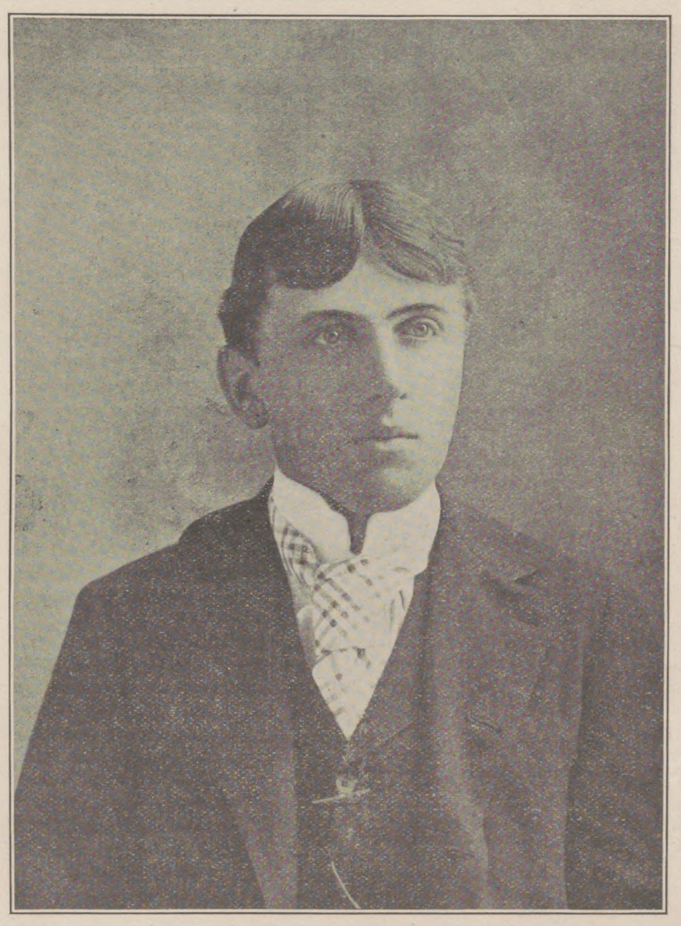
If I have received the report correctly he stated that they were not entitled to the half holiday, as they were not included in the department orders.

The committee then waited on Mr. Loeb, at the White House. He being busy they were referred to Mr. Barnes, who took their statement in writing and assured the committee that it would be laid before the President.

So much so good. The committee left, feeling assured that no discrimination would be made against the employes of the Yard, as the President had assured the committee on a previous occasion that in his executive order governing holidays for the Printing Office he would also include the Navy Yard.

The order was sent to the Printing Office this time but not to the Navy Yard.

If it be true, as the Times says, that Secretary Morton issued an order giving employes in the Yard the Saturday half holiday to enable them to buy their Christmas necessities, why was the order not executed? Who is responsible? Should not the Secretary call for a report? If such an order was issued no workman in the Yard was advised, though they waited long and patiently.



It is true that many men went out at noon, but they did so after their applications had been approved "without pay," as many of the employes live in distant places and wanted to get home to see their families and have an opportunity to purchase some tokens for the little ones.

Again the Times says the Comptroller decided last summer that the per diem employes were not entitled to pay for the half holiday.

The Times is ageing fast and its memory is failing, as it will be remembered that after the interview between the President, the Attorney-General, and the Comptroller, at the request of Columbia Lodge, the Comptroller decided promptly that the employes of the Naval Gun Factory, whose occupation was of a permanent nature were not classed as per diem employes, and they received not only the half Saturday holiday for July, August, and September, but also the pay for the same.

It has often been stated that the Navy Yard is not a part of the Navy Department. Is not a dog's tail a part of the dog; and if the dog goes on a holiday, does he leave his tail at work?

If the men in the Yard, who come directly under the naval officials, are paid their wages from moneys appropriated by Congress under the naval bill, and whose official superior officer is the Secretary of the Navy, are not a part and parcel of the Navy Department, will some Joseph arise and interpret the question, that the employes may know "where they are at?"

E. L. ADAMS, President-elect Columbia Lodge, No. 174, I. A. M

BETTER THAN THE WHIPPING POST.

Praise Your Wife.

Praise your wife, man. For pity sake, give her a little encouragement; it won't hurt her. If she has made your home comfortable, your hearth bright and shining, your food agreeable, for pity's sake tell her you thank her, if nothing more. She don't expect it; it will make her eyes open wider than they have for many years, but it will do her good for all that, and you, too.

There are many women to-day thirsting for a word of praise; the language of encouragement that comes not. Through summer's heat and winter's cold they have drudged uncomplainingly, and so accustomed have their fathers, brothers, and husbands become to their monotonous labors, that they look for and upon them as they do to the daily rising of the sun and its daily going down.

Homely every-day life may be made beautiful by an appreciation of its very homeliness. You know that if you can take from your drawer a clean shirt whenever you want it, your wife's fingers have ached in the toil of making it so fresh and agreeable, so smooth and lustrous.

Everything that pleases the eye, and the sense has been produced by constant work, much thought, great care and untiring efforts, both bodily and mentally.

It is not that many men do not appreciate these things and feel a glow of gratitude for the numberless attentions bestowed upon them in sickness and in health, but they are so selfish in that feeling. They don't come out with a hearty, "Why how pleasant you make things look, wife," or "I am obliged to you for taking so much pains."

They thank the tailor for giving them "fits;" they thank the small boy for offering them a seat in a crowded car; they thank a lady for removing her hat at the theater—in short thank everybody and everything out of doors, and come home, tip their chair back, and their heels up, pull out the newspaper, grumble if the wife asks him to hold the baby while she takes up dinner; scold if the fire has got low, or, if everything is just right, shut their mouths with a smack of satisfaction, but never say to their wife, "I thank you."

I tell you what, men, young and old, if you did but show ordinary civility toward those common articles of housekeeping, your wives; if you gave the one-hundredth part of the compliments you almost choked them with before you were married; if you would stop the badinage about who you are going to marry when No. 1 is dead; if you would cease to speak of their faults, however banteringly, before others, fewer women would seek for happiness outside their own homes.

Praise your wife, man, while she is living, and don't wait to give her flowers when she is dead. Remember one thing, her deficiencies are fully if not more so counterbalanced by your own. If men would take this lesson to heart and act accordingly the whipping post would never have for its victim a wife beater.

THE CLOSE OF THE YEAR.

A few more days and Time's iron tongue will proclaim the departure of another year, and with it goes many a hope that has long nestled close to a warm heart. How varied have been the events which the records of the past year brings before the vision of the mind? How much have we enjoyed for which we should be grateful, though we mourn over the failure of many fond anticipations, the loss of many valued joys that come no more, and the farewells of friends who have passed away.

Let us think justly of life's gifts; let us not look only on the dark spots in the pathway we have trod, but acknowledge that if we have met with disappointments, we have also seen, felt and enjoyed brightness and sunshine, and the accomplishment of some of hope's dearest prophecies. Some friends we have lost, cold distrust has frozen, or hot anger has dried up the sweet waters of affection, and the face that once wore a smile at our approach, now averted, and mantled with the cloud of sullenness.

But have not others, in whose bosoms beat truer hearts, grasped our hands, and granted us the warm embrace that tells us we have met a kindred spirit. Let the thought of what we have lost, make us faithful to what we have now, and then will the memory of sorrowful things be made to us a wise instructor.

May we bless the Father of mercies for all the joys of the past, and be ready with grateful hearts to receive and enjoy the blessings of the future.

In the grave of the dying year let us, one and all, bury every unkind feeling, every unjust criticism, and open up our hearts to the belief that there is some good in man no matter how low he may have fallen.

SMILES AND SATIRE.

The discussion of a burning question quite naturally leads to some heated arguments.

And speaking of the gladsome Yuletide, how did you like the box your necktie came in?

About this time the youngster who found an air rifle in his Christmas stocking is yearning for the thrilling life of a boy bandit.

Nan Patterson may console herself with the thought that she will share the poster type honors with Mrs. Chadwick a little while longer.

At this time of year many men who feel impelled to turn over a new leaf compromise with their conscience by changing their brand of whisky.

The Massachusetts legislature, charged with being bought and sold like sausages, contents itself with the reply that Tom Lawson talks like one.

George Ade now has an income of $2,000 a week and the same brand of dyspepsia as John D. Rockefeller. Some people cerrainly are born lucky.

Since their advertisers have commenced to fly the coop the publishers of Everybody's Magazine may be pardoned for doing a little frenzied financiering on their own hook.

The recent political landslide completely buried a number of people, but the Congressional Record presents indubitable evidence that it only came up to Congressman Baker's chin.

Perhaps the best reason for the presence of the Christmas cigar on the market is the fact that it brings a better price in that form than in its legitimate one when served with spare ribs or hot dog.

The Washington Times is now offering $100 in prizes for the best dreams experienced by its readers. There are a whole lot of people who wouldn't dare tell their very best dreams, much less put them in print, even for a hundred plunks.

There seems to be a perfect epidemic of sermonizing among the correspondents lately. One week the whole sassy bunch are trying to claw out each other's eyes and the next they all preach from the text, "Love one another." Wouldn't that jolt you?

Before the air is allowed to permeate tho rooms of St. Regis Hotel, in New York City, says the Woman's Home Companion, it is filtered, a barrelful of dust being taken from it every day. And it's a cinch that it's a very frigid day when the management doesn't take another barrelful from its guests.

Overheard in the Record room:

"I see they are circulating a subscription for a Christmas gift to the lunch woman."

"Yes, but I 'passed it up.'"

"That so?"

"Yes. I pay for all I eat at her table. She can be thankful for that."

"If she knew you as well as I do she undoubtedly would be."

And now the shutters are up.

A recent Labor Bureau bulletin contains the statement that within a comparatively short time the typesetting machines have sent six or seven members of Big Six to the foolish house and also that at least one local member of the craft is operating an imaginary machine in the big institution beyond Anacostia. In view of the recent introduction of the iron printers into the G. P. O. this ought to be of some interest. Thus far the bughouse wagon has not backed up to the door of the big printery, but the following lines give an inkling of the state of mind of one Record linotypist, and we may as well prepare for the worst:

The Merg. merges slowly on,
The keyboard keyed up well;
The elevator elevates
And sends the line to hell.

The buffer is a bluffer,
The mats matriculate,
The spacebands fall overboard—
Gee, but it's getting late.

There is more like the above, neither better nor (perish the thought) worse, and in view of the stuff that has been inflicted on us by the poets lately I would perhaps be justified in printing the entire mess, but being naturally of a kindly disposition I will refrain and content myself with expressing the hope that this budding young genius will see the error of his ways before Pard Bloomer sees his poetry. We are having enough trouble in the house as it is.

A New Jersey woman, mother of four children, deserted by her husband, and in extremely needy circumstances, appealed to a clergyman of her faith for help, and he, knowing her whole pitiful story to be true, had her haled into court as a professional mendicant. No horse thief or second-story worker would have displayed a greater lack of chivalry than that, and if this particular individual is as poor a hand at preaching the gospel of the lowly Nazarene as he is at practicing it his congregation has been sadly buncoed.

"Speaking of presence of mind in the game of politics," remarked Bill Brockwell, reflectively, "away back in 1886 the Hon. John Nichols, a well-known printer of Raleigh, N. C., played a card never heard of before nor since. In that year he was an independent candidate for Representative in Congress from the Fourth North Carolina District, and during the campaign was booked for a speech at an open-air meeting in one of the towns of Johnston County, the most rock-ribbed Democratic stronghold in the State.

"The day of the speechmaking arrived, and with it the Hon. John. He was greeted by a large and attentive audience, and everything went off smoothly. At the conclusion of his remarks, however, he was approached by one of the prominent residents of the burg with the query:

"'Well, Mr. Nichols, I suppose you're going to do something for the boys?'

"'Do something? I don't know what you mean.'

"'Why,' replied the p. r., with a deprecating shrug, 'you see, all the candidates that come into this neck of woods have a habit of inviting the boys to irrigate their whistles, and somehow they've got into the habit of looking for a little liquid nourishment on occasions like this.'

"'But, my dear man,' remonstrated the candidate, 'I am a Baptist church member in good standing, and can't countenance such things.'

"'Well, it's up to you,' retorted the p. r. 'You want the votes and the boys want their rum. So you can either sidetrack your religious scruples for an hour or make up your mind that there'll be nothing doing for John hereabouts on election day. See?'

"The Hon. John saw, and his heart grew heavy. The crowd was even then beginning to disperse, and as he cast his eyes about him they lit on a large barrel of salt mackerel. Born and reared in the old North State, he knew full well the tarheel's love for mackerel (or anything else in the shape of good victuals), and a bright idea flashed across his mind.

"To think was to act. The mackerel soon changed owners, the crowd was called back, and in a neat little speech the candidate for Congressional honors presented everyone of his hearers with a big salt mackerel 'as a slight token of esteem,' etc.

"Election day came and passed, and the Democratic stronghold gave Nichols a substantial plurality. He was elected and served during the Fiftieth Congress. That is the first and last time I ever heard of a candidate advancing his interests by thirst-producing instead of thirst quenching tactics.

"In 1889 Nichols was a candidate for the office of Public Printer and came very near landing the job."

"Has this story a moral, Brocky?" butted in a bystander.

"Sure. The moral, son, is this: You can always break a pane of glass if teere is a brickbat handy."

"Or a mackerel," suggested some one as the gang separated.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

"I wish you would tell me the office rule regarding punctuation," said a worried Merg. operator to me the other evening.

"There is no set office rule about punctuation," I answered.

"Well, there is a general rule that long punctuation is preferred, isn't there?" he continued.

"No, there are no general regulations whatever. What you and some people call long punctuation is about the most senseless rule I know of," said I, "consisting principally of avoiding the use of commas before and after parenthetical and qualifying clauses. Whose book on punctuation have you studied?"

'Never studied any."

"From what did you gather your ideas of punctuation?"

"Why, I learned punctuation when I learned my trade—what I know of it, which doesn't seem to be much after you fellows get hold of my proof."

"Well, I expect you are as well off in that respect as many of the proofreaders, which accounts for the different ideas of the art which prevail. But it would be to the advantage of you and every compositor to read all the treatises on punctuation that you can get hold of, especially on the use of the comma and semicolon, and it is little short of a crime for a man to call himself a proofreader who has not done so."

"Tell me what your system is."

"My system, as nears as I come to having one, is to punctuate in such a manner as to bring out at a glance the meaning of the author, so far as it can be done by punctuation. Sometimes a comma or its absence will obscure a meaning. Do that which will make the meaning apparent most quickly. But getting other people's ideas as set down in books on punctuation will help one to determine what will most clearly indicate the sense. If you have neglected that part of your education, you have no right to rail at those who have gone to some trouble and undertaken some labor to acquire a reasonable degree of knowledge of the subject."

And then I woke up.

Sister Sadie Maguire seems to be quite warm under the collar at Editor Bramwood, of the Typographical Journal. My personal acquaintance with Sadie was all acquired, what little I have, at the Washington convention of the I. T. U., and I found her a very agreeable gentleman. I have never been a regular reader of her paper—I even declined to subscribe at the time that Shelby Smith used it to tear the miserable Wahnetas limb from limb and scatter them, dismembered wanderers, to the four winds of heaven—but I have seen it at times, and for the life of me I can't understand why she should object to being designated as a "knocker," for "knocking" surely is her forte. It is true that the "knocker" sometimes knocks things down, but she never builds things up. Of course when any necessary thing is knocked out, something arises to take its place; but the "knocker's" part is in making the vacancy; she never fills it. I am not familiar with the cause of her grief in the present case, but I feel sure that the membership of the I. T. U. do not want the Journal turned into a "knocker's" rag, if that is what she wants, and I feel equally sure that our apparently vexed sister will not be able to make any great inroads on Secretary-Treasurer Bramwood's popularity among thinking men by such attacks as the one which recently fell under my eye. The influence of the "knocker" is daily waning and the solid men are at the front. The "knocker" and the "square man" can hereafter make faces at the rear.

Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Brockwell, the former of the Record Proof Room and its chairman, lost their youngest child by death on Tuesday. The little one, Mary Rosalie, was but six months old, and had been very weak from birth, giving no promise of ever coming to maturity. The funeral, which was private, was from the residence, No. 1259 M street northeast, on Wednesday.

* * * *

It is now a little over thirty years since I made my initial bow on the Congressional Record, and though I have not been continuously employed on it, I have been during twenty-two of the thirty sessions, not to mention an extra session or two nor a few weeks on a session not counted among the twenty-two. During three of those sessions I worked as a compositor, the remainder as a reader. Eleven different men have been foreman during that time—some of them two or three times. First was M. D. Helm, who served as such from the establishment of the Record, in December 1873, until some time in 1877; then came E. W. Oyster until the winter of 1881-82 or the following spring, when he was succeeded for a few weeks by Byron A. Ford; then M. D. Helm for a few months, followed by the late Aven Pearson until the fall of 1886, when C. M. W. Earle and the late James E. Bergin each held it a few weeks, succeeded by Charles E. Etchberger, who retained it until 1889, when Mr. Pearson again took charge; in 1894 George A. Tracy became foreman and remained as such until 1897, when Mr. Pearson was again reinstated, to be succeeded in a year or so by the late W. H. Hickman, who relinquished it in 1901 because of failing health, William M. Bass succeeding him; Mr. Bass was himself succeeded by John R. Berg, the present incumbent, in 1903. When I first worked on the Record it was printed from "flat forms" on a drum-cylinder press; now it uses the largest and latest improved perfecting presses. Then it was hand set; now it is machine set. And so forth.

* * * *

I will let my friend Tar Roads off with nothing worse than a paraphrase of the late Madame Roland: "Oh, Leigh Hunt! Leigh Hunt! What crimes are committed in thy name!" when I might tear the living pepsin out of him on the rottenness of the slobber which he squirted at me last week, the reason for my consideration being that he had it in him and it had to come out if it required a cathartic.

* * * *

It has been proposed by some one—in a desultory way, I fancy—to make a subway from the Capitol to the Government Printing Office. I can hardly conceive of a more useful and desirable means of communication between these buildings, which have so much business with each other. It is true that when the new Union Station is completed and the B. & O. R. R. tracks taken up there will be a straight uninterrupted street between them; but straight streets are often impeded by traffic, and will be especially likely to be so near the railroad station, possibly by street cars thereon and certainly by many street car crossings. Much of the business between the Capitol and the printing office is in the winter time, when ice and snow make traveling bad in spite of anything that can be done. In a subway there could be a tramway, to be operated by electric power, for the conveyance of the immense amount of printed matter that must go to the Capitol, as well as the messengers to and fro and the "copy" of bills, documents, and reports for the Record therefrom. If such a valuable aid is contemplated, now is the time to construct it, before the intervening space is filled in with earth, as it must be for much the greater part of the distance, for the grading will extend from the printing office to the hill on the south side of where the railroad tracks now are, and it would not be necessary to excavate a much greater distance than the length of two squares, most of the remaining distance only requiring to be arched over before the filling in is done. The subway could be run from the basement of the Capitol to the basement of the printing office, and being a considerable grade all the way, cars could be operated by gravity one way. It seems to me a most desirable improvement and I hope the idea will be pushed in the present session of Congress.

* * * *

There has been quite a series of accidents and personal injuries to employes of the Proof Room recently. The latter part of last week Copy Editor W. S. Baker fell and broke one of the small bones of his ankle, but after about a week is able to get out on crutches. On Sunday evening C. E. Etchberger, sr., fell on an icy door-sill and struck the back of his head against the sharp brick corner of the doorway, cutting a gash about three inches long, which had to be sewed up, but was able to go to work on Wednesday evening. On Tuesday Maj. Carey A. Vaughan fell and injured his shoulder and arm so severely that he was incapacitated from work and compelled to carry his arm in a sling. On Monday evening while Joseph H. Babcock was returning, with a couple of friends, from a visit to Dr. DeWitt C. Chadwick, and while changing cars at the corner of Eleventh street and New York avenue, he fell and broke his hip, being so severely hurt as to necessitate his removal to Sibley Hospital. He has been in bad health for some years, and the nature of his injury is such as to make his friends very solicitous as to the result.

George Brandon is the latest accession to the ring alley.

Isn't it about time for the delegatorial bee to begin to buzz-z-z-z?

The Gazette is evidence that the machine is doing its work.

There is every evidence that Santa Claus carried a large stock of neckties.

That short Christmas story by Geo. M. Ramsey had all the elements of a good sermon.

We might show our appreciation of the services of the faithful postman by a silver offering on New Year's day. Rain or shine, we are always glad to see the postman.

Passing events of each chapel of the Union should be regularly recorded and compiled for historical reference. A great deal of valuable data would thus be preserved.

Since last Saturday afternoon was so stormy and bad, we are rather in hopes that Uncle Sam will make good by giving us the afternoon off on Saturday of this week.

Adam Bugg's short-line sermon of last week was a clever heart-to-heart talk with the scribes. Adam's writings have many admirers in this neck o' the woods, and so have Talbott's.

Dan McCarty received a pocket-knife as a Christmas present. It has a cork-screw attachment for opening champagne bottles. In fact, there's nothing lacking except the champagne.

Chairman Morcock found a bunch of brass rings of varying sizes on his frame, presumably a Christmas present, or possibly a hint that "rings" will be appreciated if warranted by proof submitted.

It is unreasonable to expect a fellow to swear off smoking on January 1 while there yet remains a box or two of choice cigars which came as a Christmas gift. Otherwise we might consider the proposition.

Owing to a large issue of patents this week and on account of loss of time by holidays, forty-seven of the faithful were called back from the night force and will probably remain here till the 4th inst., when Congress will again convene.

A man of this force believes that some significance attaches to the number five, because his experience has furnished a coincidence. On Monday he took out on beverage five different times and the proof of the first take he set on Tuesday had five "outs."

The inclement weather which came at the height of Christmas tide gave greater charm to the home, and many are the reports of an unusually pleasant holiday season of rest and enjoyment; and the spirit of charity was everywhere more marked and in full accord with the lesson which comes with the proper observance of the day.

On Saturday last, near high noon, Foreman Ramsey coupled with the announcement of a half holiday his message of good will by a "Merry Christmas to all." The remaining moments of the short work-day were devoted to song service by a select choir of singers, joined by as many as were imbued with the spirit which the occasion prompted, after which pleasantries were exchanged by those who through years of association have established friendships as enduring as time itself.

It will be remembered that mention was recently made of a transaction wherein one Hudson, of Lancaster, N. Y., offered to forward choice apples at $1.50, freight free. Several gentlemen and one or two ladies of this room clubbed together and immediately sent a money-order, amounting to about $20. Days and weeks passed without so much as an acknowledgment of the money, when there began to blossom a suspicion that something was wrong. Finally a letter of inquiry was addressed to the postmaster of Lancaster, who replied that a man bearing the name of Hudson, a stranger to the town, had drawn the money but had not been seen since. The investors now regard their prospects of receiving the apples about the same as the chance of receiving their money. The case is being investigated by the Post-Office Department.

THE OPERATOR'S DREAM.

[Dedicated to Foreman John R. Berg, with apologies to the Poe family.]

By CHAS. S. GUNN.

Once upon a midnight dreary
As I pondered o'er a query
Wondering if 'twas best, by ginger,
To punch the keyboard with one finger,
Or, like some the swifter sons of guns,
Use all the fingers and the thumbs,
I saw a form, I heard it calling,
Calling as it had ne'er called before;
Seemed to me it was the foreman
Coming thro' my chamber door.

Oh, the torture of the moment
As I saw him standing there:
In one hand he held a proof sheet
With the other clutched his hair.
"You're the bird," at last he shouted
"That keeps me up in the air!
"Now I have you, blast your picture
"I shall throw you down the stair!"
Then he grinned and then he murmured
"Yes, gosh darn you, down the stair."

I implore you, I beseech you!
Shouted I in deep despair,
Next chance I have to correct it
I'll make good, I solemnly swear.
But the foreman simply answered,
"No, confound you! Down the stair!"

Then the scene at once shifted,
I was in the composing room,
Heard the click, click of machinery,
Saw the place to be my tomb.
Then he grabbed me by the collar,
Opened up the metal pot,
With a sickly grin he gave me
What was now his parting shot—
A curse I shall long remember,
Not a sweet forget-me-not.

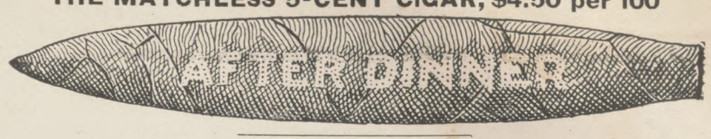
"Oh, you one-lunged son of satan,
"Your careless acts make me quite sore;
"Correcting errors in your first proof
"You have made some twenty more."
Then into the pot he dropped me
With a dull and sick'ning thud,
Started up the old machinery,
Turned me into a hot slug.
Then I awoke, all in a tremble,
Took an oath my drinking was o'er,
For my dream had been a nightmare—
Only this and nothing more.

THE POET'S UNDOING.

A poet won a charming bride,
A cultured modern beauty,
Of whom he sang with manly pride,
As was his bounden duty.

And when his first-born came along,
While joy did overflow him,
He said: "The kid shall live in song;
He'll make a first-class poem."

Ah, who can tell what gloom is hid
In hopes the fancy nurses?
While he composed the little kid,
His wife composed the verses.



—WILLIAM TIPTON TALBOTT.

GOSSIP FROM THE G. P. O.

First Division.

Happy New Year!

Wiley H. Davis is taking a few days off.

Slug quotations: 71 to 93; 93 to 98, and 126 to 119.

One of our most popular members, Judge Holeman, has been on the sick list.

Haven't heard the name of but a single person named for chairman of this division.

How do you like the office calendar for 1905? Ain't it a beauty? Didn't get one? Well!

Did you miss any person this week? Of course, Jimmie Weaver. Give us something harder to guess.

Charles Danenhower, of the "Y," is still confined to the house by reason of the accident which befel him.

Now we are off for another New Year. Cheer up, and let us hope that it will be the happiest of our lives.

Among the ice victims during the week we would record C. A. Vaughan and Joseph H. Babcock, of the Proof Room.

A. Bruce Bielaski, on Assistant Foreman Spottswood's staff, passed Christmas at his home in our neighboring State—Maryland.

E. Heidingsfeld passed his Christmas holidays up at Harrisburg. Some one has remarked that he took in the grand old Indiantown—Carlisle.

Did you see Jack Burnside's Christmas tree? Prettiest out R street way. But then he is an expert at Christmas tree building. So says Mac.

O, I don't know, we lay claim to some lucky individuals in this division as well as the Third. Respectfully referred to either G. R. B. or J. E. B.

George—everybody knows George of this side of the room, who has been placed in charge of the rule case, Frank Lloyd doing "boiler stunts," vice Danenhower, sick.

We regret to learn the misfortune that befel Wm. S. Baker, the veteran copy editor, a few nights since. Sincerely hope he will speedily be restored and return to office.

Didn't our colleagues on the night force have a nice rest? They are entitled to everything coming their way, and we are not one bit envious, even if we can't help our looks.

Do you know that sub-watchman George Schlosser, assigned to duty in this division at the 4 o'clock relief, has hosts of friends. Yes, and Jack Burnside says he is the father of twelve girls.

Say, did you see Charlie Alexander's double on the floor the other day with Charlie Robinson, of the Day Proof Room, when he called to see Charlie Garrette. The visitor's front name was Charlie, too.

That trio of good compositors, Geo. F. Montgomery, Jimmie Weaver, and Geo. A. Plummer, received a Christmas gift in the form of a transfer to the Sixth Division day. O, those Mergs.; but we don't blame our fellow-compositors who are ambitious and may their fondest dreams be fully realized.

William S. Waudby, a recent candidate for Commissioner of Labor to succeed Hon. Carroll D. Wright, in a communication to the Evening Star, says: "I appreciate the trust reposed in me by organized labor more highly than all the appointments that lie in the hands of a President of the United States to bestow."

Recent advices impart the information that Charles E. Maney, of Ridgebury, Orange County, N. Y., died December 24. Mr. Maney will be remembered by some of the survivors of the old Document Room, as he worked there within the past ten or fifteen years. He was a member of the G. P. O. Council, No. 211, and had a $4,000 certificate.

John B. Dickman, representing slug 129 is certainly a popular personage. He is at present filling the following-named offices: President Central Labor Union; Vice-President G. P. O. Mutual Relief; Speaker of Mt. Vernon Council of the National Union, and Delegate to the Cabinet of the same organization. Gee-whizz, he must be a busy man. Hurrah for Mr. Dickman.

A number of surprises occurred the day before Christmas, and among them was a nice box for Harvey, of the "Y." Also the handsome scarf pin to Simon Pocher from his numerous friends, including the "boss" of the string and page paper division. The gift was presented to Simon by Slug 103 in a few nicely rounded phrases and replied to by the recipient in his usual eloquent style.

Third Division.

Don't wait until New Year's Day to make your good resolutions. Make them now and stick to them.

William H. Bright, transferred to the Night Bill Force in the first batch, has resigned, and is reported to be in Philadelphia.

Miss Nellie Shipman was welcomed back to her frame Saturday morning after an absence of several weeks "having a good time."

In order to show that I am above all petty spite in whatever I have said heretofore, or may say hereafter, in this column, I heartily and cordially wish everybody who reads this a happy New Year. This world was created for us all.

In its report of the Washington Choral Society's Christmas rendition of Haendel's Oratorio, "The Messiah," the Star said: "The orchestra played the beautiful Pastoral Symphony excellently." This composition was first produced in 1746, or about sixty years before Beethoven's Symphony by the same title came into existence.

John F. Warner, our messenger, was made the recipient of a Christmas testimonial from his friends in the division who wanted to show their appreciation of his unvarying courtesy to all. Mr. Warner's reply came around a little later on a card marked, "Read and pass."

THIRD DIVISION CHAPEL:

"Time hath ne'er seen a repetition of Delight in all its phrases," says the poet, but the undersigned begs leave to acknowlege about 99 per cent of the old delight incidental to earlier years, at the evidence of your good will so unexpectedly and generously bestowed. In Memory's chaplet this token shall be an evergreen.

Very gratefully,
WARNER.

It is said that certain French scientists are of the opinion that there is no necessity for the use of salt on food. Neither is there any necessity for any employe of the G. P. O. borrowing from the "syms" to the limit, exhausting his credit with friends and merchants, and then skipping the town. One such case has been reported lately. There are several others where the subject shows a constitutional aversion to debt-paying, and finally places his affairs in the hands of an assignee. One other has contracted debts which he simply refuses to pay until he gets ready. Isn't it about time to call a halt on such "frenzied finance" as this? (With apologies to Tom Lawson.)

Did you read "Hiawatha," slightly altered, in last week's issue, which appeared under the caption, "Bugg's Sermon," and was signed by Adam Bugg? It was quite the best production in verse of the four which appeared, and, although it showed occasional signs of carelessness, was, on the whole, a credit to its talented author. I must confess to a grievous disappointment, however, at finding myself unmentioned in the list of those who furnish "bright bouquets of friendship" for the columns of THE TRADES UNIONIST. I find the names of Bloomer, Sutton, McPike, Newsom, Gunn, Redfield, Rough Writer, Tim Tickle, Cowboy, Paste, and Cycle,

"Not to mention other blossoms
Of good cheer and hope and gladness!"

But no reference to myself, unless, indeed, Adam means me when he talks of the "cynics" who like to cultivate and nourish thistles and poison plants,

"Foul with atrabilious tarnish,
Slimy, loathsome, vile, and hellish."

I cannot help thinking that this is one of the places where Adam might have obeyed the injunction so frequently given by the clergy after reading a hymn, to "omit the last stanza." And yet I feel a cordial sympathy with his efforts to down the habitual knocker, more especially as in this latest phase he shows a disposition quite foreign to that displayed last summer, when he made me the object of his pen shafts of sarcasm and seemed to take a truly unchristian delight in the same "knocking" which he now condemns so roundly; my only offense having been, that I, an utter stranger to him, not knowing even that Adam Bugg and Talbott were one and the same until subsequently informed to that effect, had stated things as I saw them, without feeling toward him one way or the other. But I do not wish to revive the controversy. What I do want to say is, that if Adam Bugg is sincere in what he calls his "Sermon," I am with him to the end.

J. Hadley Doyle, President of the Potomac Boat Club, is selected by the Washington Times to carry the "black arrow" envelope, containing $100. J. A. Dempsey, coach for said Potomac Boat Club, meets Mr. Doyle and asks him: "Have you the black arrow?" The president thereupon hands the coach the afore-mentioned envelope with its enclosure of wealth, which then become the property of the coach, according to the terms set forth by the Times.

Query: Was this whole "black arrow" scheme, with its resultant excitement for such a large proportion of the population of Washington, merely a dodge to advertise the Times, or was it the real intention of Mr. Munsey, from the first, to donate $100 to the Potomac Boat Club coach?

Justly or unjustly, there seems to be an opinion in the minds of many people that the beneficiaries of these newspaper gift enterprises are chosen before the contest begins. It is a fact, however, that such schemes as the "black arrow" are lotteries pure and simple, the only saving clause being that with every guess one makes on any proposition one must subscribe for the paper offering the "prize." In my humble opinion the game isn't worth the candle. In too many instances the periodical for which one must subscribe under such conditions isn't worth the one cent per diem charged, and people could not be induced to subscribe at all if some sort of a bonus were not offered.

I am reminded of an experience that Slug Man Davis once had in a Times "word contest." It transpired that he came within just one word of submitting a perfect list. The objectionable word was "hell," and the editor would not accept it because it was "the name of a place." Mr. Davis letter to the editor asking his authority for calling "hell" the name of a place, and desiring to be informed of the location of said place, remained unanswered.

Sixth Division.

John H. Clapham, who has been with the Mergenthaler crowd for the past four months, has been given a temporary appointment as an expert operator and will remain for some time to come to assist in the running of the Mergs.

Among the recent arrivals from other divisions is the well-known H. Newsom, of the Second. Mr. Newsom has for several months acted as correspondent to THE TRADES UNIONIST for his former division and the loss of his interesting notes will be undoubtedly felt by that interesting paper's large list of readers.

The G. P. O. calendar for 1905 has made its appearance. As a work of art it is a beauty and as a souvenir is entitled to a place among the many depicting the grandeur of Government buildings, the picture at its head being an exceptionally fine one of the new printing office. From the large number I have heard express a desire for one, I hope those responsible will see that enough are printed to distribute freely.

During the past two weeks a number of linotype machinists have arrived at the G. P. O. from various parts of the country and joined the army of Uncle Sam's employes. Chas. A. George comes from Baltimore; Frank W. Hathaway from Willimantic, Conn.; F. C. Damm from Chicago (and other ports); Sidney H. Cluxton from Baltimore, and Andrew Bailey, from the Globe Printing Co., of this city. All of these appointments are from off the civil service list and the result of the recent examination held for linotype machinists.

It has been suggested that the name of the Sixth Division might appropriately be changed to that of the "Little First," on account of so many members of the present force coming from that division. Foreman Mundheim's entire force of makers-up—Will Chase, L. P. Kenny, Chas. Elder, and Chas. Radley—are ex-First men, while some of the others are Baldwin, Jones, Lewis, McCord, Montgomery, Lyons, Nelson, Starr, Vogt, Plummer, Mears, and the writer. I heard a knocker say that Foreman A. W. Bowen was never slow to grasp an opportunity, but that in getting rid of the above bunch he has proven himself a past-master in the art of unloading.

On the retirement of Machinist Geary last week all the Mergenthaler machines in the G. P. G. were turned over to the tender mercies of Frank A. Vinton, who comes to this office from the Baltimore Herald. Although a young man, Mr. Vinton has seen service with the Mergenthalers for many years, having worked with the inventor of the machine in its early stages, when the stock was a drug on the market, and the International Typographical Union laughed at the idea of anything ever taking the place of the printer and his stick. Aside from being a machinist of the first-class, his long association with printers in the newspaper offices throughout the country, and from the fact also, that during two years of his boyhood days he was the devil in a newspaper office, has rendered his selection, in my estimation, an ideal one both for the Government and the printers. He has chosen the day side from which to direct operations.

The following verse over which was written, "Read and pass," was handed me last week. Should the author's condition continue to be alarming, I suggest that he apply to Foreman John R. Berg who has a remedy that will give immediate relief:

A solid run for eight hours straight,
With proofs that worry and agitate,
And are "must" and can not wait—
I'm really sorry I learned to operate.

Miss Laura B. Gordon of the side—no, the Gazette—paid the Sixth a visit last week. I noticed she wore a little pin on which was inscribed the word "Canada." In view of the Toronto convention I asked her if it bore any significance as to her plans next summer, but she replied that it was only a souvenir from St. Louis. Since the success of Miss Wilson last year there is no longer any doubt but that each succeeding year will find one or more lady candidates for delegates. I have heard that among the sure candidates this year was Miss Teresa McDonald, of the Post, who withdrew last year in order not to jeopardize the chances of Miss Wilson. Miss McDonald is a charming little woman with a great big brain, and if she does make the race this spring, take a gentle tip and place her name on your list of winners.

I have a friend in this division who, at times, is inclined to be poetical, but being of a rather retiring disposition, he has never had the nerve to face the criticisms of "Pard" Bloomer, or friend Belcher by allowing any of his productions to appear in print. Under a solemn promise not to betray him by the publication of his name, I am going to give to the readers of THE TRADES UNIONIST one of his "choicest" productions. Were I the judge, I think about thirty days at hard labor would be the best I could do for this chap. Here's the poem:

Oh, the Mergs! Oh the Mergs!
Of the room that's called John Berg's;
How they worry us,
How they flurry us,
With their noisy channels filling,
With their screeching and their spilling,
With their hurts
And their squirts
(That are known not to experts!)
With their italics that turn out roman—
(I can swear that this is so man!)
With their matrices not descending
And their space bands e'er offending,
With their lines that will not inspace
When we try our best to thin space,
And 'steen other things we might mention
That take up our young attention
Like each finger as we jam it
Make us think and say ohdamit?
* * * * * * *
Yet though thuswise we berate them,
We're dinged glad to operate them.

Which comes pretty near being a fact. For, after all, the fellow who kicks the hardest is the one who likes his job best.

Something like four and a half months ago Wm. A. Geary, one of the head machinists for the Merganthaler Linotype Company, of New York, arrived in Washington as the advance man for the coming of the linotypes. The task before him was not a simple one; the success of a great undertaking was upon his shoulders. Following close upon his heels were the forty-six double-decked linotypes soon to be installed in the Government Printing Office, thirty-five of which were placed in the Record, seven in the Job Room, and four in the Congressional Library branch. In his work he was assisted by Machinists Wm. Roger and Samuel Livingston, and Machinist-operators Leo Smith, John H. Clapham, and George E. Banner. Later the force was joined by John Van Valkenburg, head traveling inspector for the company, who assumed charge of the Job Room plant. From the day of their arrival Mr. Geary and his force have been hard workers. All days looked alike to them; the nights as well as the mornings were passed working for the success of the machine. But their mission has been fulfilled. Last week into other hands the care of the plant was given, and the force departed for home to spend the Christmas holidays. I am one of those who believe the plant is a success, and for which Mr. Geary in particular and his helpers in general are entitled to much credit.

AFTER-DINNER DILATIONS.

Whether it is more blessed to give than to receive depends altogether on the amount received.

From all we learn of the inaugural preparations the inference is that they are getting ready to rub it in.

Some people now have as much faith in the Weather Bureau as they once had in the Hagerstown Almanack.

As a Christmas gift Nan Patterson received a disappointment from the jury and bouquets from admiring friends.

Fires are generally regarded as unfortunate happenings, though there is little to prove it in the usual mark-down prices at fire sales.

If everybody would adopt the "After-Dinner" cigar the housewife would have less reason to complain of the smoke nuisance; but why dilate? Printers and trades people generally know a good thing when they smoke it.

As an inducement to settlers it can not be too generally understood that the authorities of Washington are fighting the smoke nuisance, and that actual residents are not compelled to shovel snow from the sidewalks, and that Potomac water is good when boiled.

A store for the sale of exclusively union-made goods will soon be opened in this city, which will afford an opportunity for union men and their families to practice what they preach and for manufacturers to prove to the public that the union label is a guarantee of good goods at fair prices.

Pity poor little Weazenface, who chatters "yesser—yesser" in an under tone of self-consciousness which suggests that he is lacking in full citizenship and must do stunts to please, like the red-frocked monkey which is prompted to play his part while a conscienceless master jerks the string.

It is too much to say that everything is poetry which is centered or pushed away from the column-rule, or because ending words of every alternate line or so jingle or yield a melody not unlike the clatter of duck-shot in a baby's rattle-box. We had hoped to escape this apology, but it now seems necessary.

A. J. Benton and Miss Margaret Hoesch were married on Christmas Eve. The happy bridegroom presented the girls of this division a nice box of candy, which they did full justice to; but it is doubtful if that altogether allayed their disappointment in him. These widowers are so sly.

Geo. M. Wyatt, who was Captain Ramsey's messenger, resigned from the G. P. O. some time ago and went West to take up the practice of law. He is now dean of the law department of a college at Argenta, Ark. His business card reads as follows: "Geo. M. Wyatt, Attorney-at-Law and Dean of Law, Department Shorter College, Office by the Free Bridge, Argenta, Ark."

Miss Anna Wilson, following her usual Christmas custom, made the Lime Kiln Club a present of a cake, which came from home. It has been the practice to first try the cake on some seasoned veteran and await results before passing it out to the younger brothers. Mr. Gibbs has usually volunteered to be the goat; but as he is now a member of the First Division chapel another victim was chosen by lot. Frank Wilkins, having safely passed through the ordeal, the usual course was pursued by the more timid members of the club.

OPTIMISTIC OBSERVATIONS.

The New Year bells will soon ring out, and for a few days many of those whose better natures have not been swamped in the whirlpool of iniquity will form some very breakable good resolutions. Out of all these fragile flowers of conscience perhaps one in ten thousand will remain intact. Holiday and birthday resolutions are unreliable. There is apt to be something superficial about them. To a considerable extent they are entered upon because it is "the proper thing to do." New Year resolutions are generally made in the same sort of genial glow that animates New Year calls, and they are just about as delightfully perfunctory. The fact is that none but heroic souls—and heroic souls are rather scarce—can raise to the full height of strenuous reform. Longfellow aptly says to the poet, "Look into thine own soul and write." It is quite as much to the point to insist that the reformer look into his own soul and reform. And by the same token, every day in the year should be reformation day.

How seldom it is that any man peers far into his own soul. When I was a child I viewed the old farmhouse cellar with awe and a slight degree of fear, although I knew there were stores of toothsome apples and very palatable cider, besides other good things, stored there. When, candle in hand, I went down into the cold twilight depths, it was things wholesome and tempting which drew me thither. But I shrank from the cobwebbed gloom. And so it is with us who go down into the cellar of the soul. The candle of conscience trembles in our grasp. We egotistically make the most of what is good therein, but we childishly shrink from the cobwebs and darkness. We are too likely to leave the foulness as we found it, so that it continues to taint the moral atmosphere. As regards other men's souls, that is another matter. Too many of us—"knockers" we are sometimes called—enjoy calling attention to the foulness and rubbish which cumber the souls of our associates. Even much crude guess-work is sometimes indulged in with reference to the faults of others. I like to believe, however, that "knocking," backbiting, uncharitable criticism—whatever you chose to call it—is becoming less frequent. It is to be hoped so. For this would be an appreciably better world to-morrow if to-day more men would honestly begin to search for their own faults instead of for the faults of others

While it is seemly at this season of the year to be thankful for past progress and to view the future hopefully, there is no reason why, with a smirk of satisfaction, we should assume that there is no more virtue to be extracted from the carnal man. Indeed, those persons who assent that the world is good enough to suit them are retarders of civilization. They are either shallow-minded or sluggish hearted, or else they make the statement in order to justify their moral laziness. The claim that there is a satisfactory abundance of good in the world is made by hypocrites or bigots as a fiat money note in payment of taxes on their charity. It is well to take these "truly good" optimists by the ears occasionally and lead them into the highways and by-ways, the slums and market-places, of life, mercilessly pointing out some of the running sores of society. It is "bad form," no doubt, and may lay one open to the charge of "vulgarity." But there is some satisfaction in knowing that the "truly good" optimist—who hardly approaches nearer than seventeenth cousin to the real optimist—has been forced to touch elbows with human squalor and vice and misery.

If all the "truly good" optimists would work as hard at the suppression of evil as they do in their endeavor to hide evil beneath the mantle of ignorance, the world's Christian advancement would more nearly keep pace with its wonderful advancement along material lines. And accordingly it is a high crime against civilization—against progress—to encourage the retention of the brutal in man by telling him that he is pretty well regenerated. For he is not regenerated. He still beats and neglects his wife and children. He lies, he cheats, he steals, he murders. He flaunts his misdeeds in the eyes of the world, or he tries to hide them behind a snivel or a smirk. He drinks too much of the wrong kind of nectar. A devil's brood of vile passions continually twist and cramp and warp him. It is well that he be made to understand, even though a little pessimistic prodding be necessary, that he has a long toilsome pathway of regeneration before him. But let there be no misunderstanding here. This is not to say that the world is as bad as it can be. It simply means that the world is not as good as it ought to be.

THE TRADES UNIONIST.

OFFICIAL ORGAN CENTRAL LABOR UNION, WASHINGTON BRANCH, AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

Vol. IX. No. 30. WASHINGTON, D. C., THURSDAY, JANUARY 5, 1905. Price, 3 Cents.

THE CENTRAL LABOR UNION

Building Trades Section Withdraws From the Central Body.

ACCEPT PLUMBERS DELEGATES

Action Taken By Local Unions on Academy of Music—President Dickman Makes Report From Executive Committee—Building Trades Proposition Settled Without Friction—Other Business.

The regular weekly meeting of the Central Labor Union was called to order at 8.05 on Friday evening, December 30, President Dickman in the chair.

Secretary Winslow having been excused on requeet of the chair, Delegate Nothnagel, of Electrical Workers Union, No. 26, was appointed secretary pro tem.

CREDENTIALS.

Engineers Union, No. 99, presented credentials certifying C. W. Howdershell, which being reported favorably by the committee, was duly accepted and the delegate obligated.

COMMUNICATIONS.

The following unions have communicated with this body, indorsing its position on the attitude of M. F. Dorsey, 1213 Seventh street northwest:

Carpet Mechanics, No. 1. Fine, $2.

Stone Masons Union, No. 2.

Paperhangers Union, No. 420. Fine $5.

The following unions also indorsed the action of this body relative to placing the Academy of Music on the unfair list:

Carpet Mechanics Union, No. 1. Fine, $2.

Stone Masons Union, No. 2.

Paperhangers Union, No 420. Fine $5.

Bills for per capita to American Federation of Labor and lost time by chairman of Legislative Committee were read and ordered paid.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

President Dickman called Vice-President Crown to the chair.

President Dickman then made a report from the Executive Committee, reading a communication from J. A. Daly, secretary pro tem of the reorganized Council of Allied Building Trades, stating that the building trades had perfected a reorganization and had decided to withdraw from the Central Labor Union as a constituent organization, inclosing a copy of its constitution recently adopted by a referendum vote by the different unions represented in the building trades.

The President also read a communication from the Council of Allied Building Trades, stating that the new constitution and by-laws of that body had been approved and asking for the appointment of a committee from the Central Labor Union to meet the trustees of the Council of Allied Building Trades for the purpose of adjusting any difference existing between the two bodies financially.

The Executive Committee recommended that all parts of the Central Labor Union constitution referring to the Council of Allied Building Trades be stricken out and the committee be instructed to meet the trustees of the Council of Allied Building Trades to adjust the differences existing between the two organizations and report back to this body at next regular meeting.

The recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

The Legislation Committee reported progress.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The credentials from Plumbers Union, No. 5, presented at last meeting, were taken up for consideration. On motion, the credentials were received and delegates ordered seated.

President Dickman resumed the chair.

NEW BUSINESS.

A motion made and carried instructing the Legislation Committee to use its best endeavors to have the child labor bill for the District of Columbia, introduced by Senator Lodge, passed.

The amendment introduced by Delegate Brinkman at a previous meeting was laid over to next meeting.

President Dickman then addressed the Council, thanking the members for the loyal support given him during his term of office and wishing all a prosperous and a Happy New Year.

His Nightmare.

BY WILLIAM TIPTON TALBOTT.

So you think wife beaters shouldn't be subjected to the lash.
Well, I beg to differ with you, though my judgment's sometimes rash.

Say; I've got an ugly temper, and I chaw and sometimes drink.
I'm a Bible-class prize scholar in my language, I don't think.

But I'm fond of home and loved ones; never hurt one in my life.
Yet I had a nightmare lately, and therein I beat my wife.

Was arrested, tried, convicted—sentence sort of made me quail—
And before I hardly knowed it I was languishin' in jail.

Then—you know how dreams keep movin'—I was standin' in the yard
Waitin' for a hundred lashes to be laid on thick and hard.

And with tears I begged for mercy—shouted—raved. Not fear of pain
Made me lose my nerve, but thinkin' of the scars that would remain.

But they stood there still and solemn; with cold glances made me strip.
Then— Say, gents, I almost fainted. 'Twas my wife that held the whip.

She's been always kind and meek like, with a sort of homespun grace
And yet there she stood before me with the demon in her face.

And her arms, bared to the shoulder, bulged with muscle like a man's,
And the whip was steel and rawhide and she grabbed it with both hands.

Then the children gathered round me in my downfall to rejoice,
And the youngest—little Polly—cursed me in her pipin' voice.

There was blood-stains on their garments—on their souls the slime of sin—
And I saw in them reflected all the devil I had been.

God! I've heard of guilty wretches driven mad by dreams, but—well,
Him that knows how much I suffered hasn't yet got back from hell.

Not the pain the whip inflicted, though it cut me to the quick,
Made me beg for death in mercy, where I writhed with horror sick.

'Twas the thought of what a hell the weak half-butchered wife's must be
If a floggin' so affected such a husky brute as me.

And I guess when I hear preachers talk of guilty souls laid bare,
I won't smile in sinful pride again and call their words hot air.

When I woke I sure got tearful, which there ain't no law forbids
When a man regains a lovin' wife and a bloomin' bunch of kids.

And from what that night he went through, to yours truly it don't seem
That he shouldn't have been punished if it hadn't been a dream.

I say flog the brutal wretches, and I guess I'll change my tune
When we visit Mars in air-ships and there's sun spots on the moon.

SMILES AND SATIRE.

Mr. Carnegie really can not understand why there should be any cases of starvation in this country when he has been giving libraries right and left during the past year.

The conduct of the grass widow who wore purple every time Bishop Talbot called on her is most severely frowned upon by the women whose complexions wouldn't stand the racket.

The reported discovery that there is no land at the North Pole will be contemplated with perfect equanimity by those of us who are satisfied with Washington as a summer resort and couldn't help ourselves if we weren't.

Attorney-General Moody is now after the print paper trust with a big stick and hopes to soon have it beaten to a pulp.

Governor Peabody and his friends are going to give the people of Colorado a little demonstration of the adage that possession has the law skinned by a mile.

Mrs. Chadwick's counsel will endeavor to build up her defense on a plea of insanity in spite of the fact that she has a great deal less to be mad about than the people she flim-flammed.

The leap year joke can now be laid away for another four years.

From the first installment of "dreams" published by the Times last Sunday it is quite evident that its readers are victims of nightmare. Mr. Milo Shanks confesses that after consuming too much turkey he dreamed that all the printers in the G. P. O were turkeys and that his division was in charge of an extremely large gobbler. We extend our sympathy and sincerely hope he will never indulge in too much lobster salad.

Mr. Hill has "retired," and a demoralized Democracy is wishing him pleasant dreams and a longer sleep than Rip Van Winkle's.

The American Forestry Congress has been in session here this week. After adjournment its members will again take to the woods.

Earl Count Courtney, the "dream prophet," predicts that the year 1905 will be free from wars or disasters, but the War and Navy Departments both insist on an increased appropriation—just as a precaution.

"Christmas shopping," said the Foxy One, "has no more terrors for me. I give my wife a trenty-dollar bill every Christmas morning and escape all the worry and annoyance connected with the selection of a suitable gift, I am not pulled and hauled about by the holiday crowds, and, besides, by the first of the year I may need the money again."

The tobacco trade has already recovered from the usual New Year depression.

After all the hullabaloo over the ravages of the boll weevil the cotton crop this year is so large that planters are burning part of it in order to keep up the price. There may be a little encouragement in that for the people who put their money into cotton some time ago—and burned it.

Port Arthur has fallen, but up to date none of the New York papers have claimed the credit for it.

'Twas a wild and stormy night. For several days there had been nothing doing under the big white dome, where the statesmen are wont to congregate and make faces at the trusts while listening to the sound of the Speaker's hammer and John Wesley Gaines's voice. Consequently business was dull in the Record Proof Room, and the firm was losing money every time the clock ticked. Over the "silent" readers' end there hovered great gobs of gloom. Every man jack on the slate, Bill Brockwell absent—and the wind whistling through the crevices.

In sheer desperation the gang went into committee of the whole to consider stories of reckless daring and hair-breadth escapes. After the pipe had passed around the circle and we had been once more regaled with the wonderful story of Buchanan's fall from the roof of a grain elevator, some one alluded to the narrow escape Marion Bullock had about six years ago.

Bull, be it remembered, was at that time an enthusiastic bicyclist, but, like so many riders of the tricky steed, he came to grief. One night he collided with an ice wagon or something of that kind and was woefully and completely done up. The hurry-up cart toted him, in an unconscious condition, to the Casualty repair shop in double-quick time and—well, let him tell it:

"When I came out of my trance," said Bull, stifling a yawn, "there came to my year the confused murmur of voices. By my cot stood a nurse and two of the house physicians, who did not appear to have noticed my return to consciousness.

"'If we could stop that hemorrhage from the ear,' one of them was saying, 'he might have a chance for life.'

"'Oh, I don't know,' replied the other. 'He's due to die from shock anyway.'

"About this time it dawned upon me that I was the particular individual under discussion and that I was supposed to be booked for a one-way trip on the Styx. The thought was anything but cheerful, and my first frantic desire was to ask the gossiping sons of Æsculapius why they didn't try a wad of cotton and a quart of chloride of iron in the ear, but just then my light went out again.

"The next time I came to I found my family physician, Dr. Philip Roy, by my side. He had checked the bleeding with a plug of cotton and a few drops of the remedy my own rattled brain had suggested, and my chances for life had improved.

"That was my narrowest escape, for I was pretty near all in when the astringent got in its work. But I often wonder why in Alexandria my first thought was to suggest the use of a whole quart of the ferri chloridi."

"Possibly because you have been in the habit of taking your bitters that way, Bull," suggested some one in a spirit of levity.

"Sounds to me like one of those Times rarebit fiend dreams," chimed in Harry Watkins.

And just then Mr. Huston piped all hands on deck to help the revisers out of a hole.

To Secure a Home.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

I have read with interest the suggestion of Mr. Bloomer that a number of employes of the Government Printing Office combine small savings for the benefit of all. There are many ways in which the capital thereby created may be employed, but as the most earnest desire of most men, at least men with families, is to own a home, I am moved to offer a suggestion looking to that end. The first step to the acquirement of a home is to own the lot. You can always borrow the building cost, provided the lot is clear. Now, the present is a good time to buy vacant ground, especially in the Northeast and in the section around Lincoln Park. Much better than will be the case two years hence, when the completion of the Union depot, the elimination of crossings at grade, and the necessary removal of hundreds of railway employes to the sections named will have created an active demand for houses there. Just now ground is low in price. The reasons are not only the desire of the owners to realize on property that has been so many years unproductive, but likewise an open or a secret combination between builders, real estate brokers and the trust companies to keep down the price of vacant ground. While there are yet owners of the latter who must get from under, and while yet the active demand that I deem inevitable, is deferred, this combination rules. Therefore, now is the time to buy.

The method of purchase could be something like this: Contract for the purchase of a square or part of a square. The price to be named in the contract. The plat to be subdivided at once, though subdivision not to be recorded until later. As fast as one lot has been paid for, the owners agree to have it released from whatever encumbrance rests on the whole. The members of the association to draw lots to determine who shall first acquire a lot, and so on in rotation. The persons who thus acquire a lot to receive a deed for it, so that a building loan can be obtained and the lot made productive. All members to be bound to continue their payments to the association. The lot-holder to give the association a second trust for the proportionate cost of his lot, or, such other security as may be deemed best. By this plan the association would not pay interest on purchases made. Just so fast as a lot has been acquired, the person to whom it is allotted would be obliged, however, to pay interest to the association.

I do not know whether the plan has been outlined here as clearly as it is "in my head," but if anything of the sort should be undertaken, I would be glad to explain it more in detail, and I would also undertake to find a number of large properties the owners of which would sell on the basis suggested. Of course, such a contract, when recorded, would bind the owners of the land as much as a deed would. The price per lot, in two different localities that I could mention would be about $700. If Mr. Bloomer should take hold of this matter in good earnest, it could be readily carried out, and if an outsider can join, I want to go down for a share.

AUGUST DONATH.

A G. P. O. EPISODE.

She was a Bindery maid—
A dainty, winsome thing—
And round the Christmastide he brought
To her a diamond ring
("He" means a printer youth
Enamored of the elf).
He said two gifts he'd offer her:
The diamond—and himself.

The maid she coyly smiled,
As on the ring she drew:
"One present at a time is all
That I can take from you."
(Wherefore his rivals laugh
And to him gayly sing:
"Oh, Willie, you've been knocked out, but
The maid's still in the ring.")

CHARLES P. NEILL, Recently Appointed Commissioner of Labor.

Mr. Charles P. Neill, the newly appointed Commissioner of Labor, was born in Illinois, December, 1865. He went with his parents to Texas in 1870, and lived there until 1885. He left school to join the ranks of the wage-earners at an early age, having gone into a bank as messenger at the age of eleven. He continued at work for nearly ten years, and at the age of twenty gave up his position to begin preparatory studies for college. He studied at the University of Notre Dame, Indiana, at the University of Texas, and at Georgetown College, District of Columbia, graduating from the latter place in 1891, and then returned to Notre Dame as a teacher to secure means to carry on his further studies. He pursued graduate studies in political economy at the University of Chicago and at Johns Hopkins University, receiving the degree of Doctor of Philosophy from the latter institution in 1897. He was appointed instructor of economics at the Catholic University of America, in Washington, in 1895; was promoted to associate professor in 1897, and was appointed to the chair of economics as full professor in 1900, and has held this post up to the present time.

Mr. Neill's mind has a practical bent, and his choice of a field of study was due to the close relation of political economy to the problems of actual life. He has always taken a keen interest in movements of social betterment. While at the University of Chicago and at Johns Hopkins he was an active worker in the social settlements in Chicago and Baltimore. He has been a member of the Board of Managers of the Associated Charities of Washington since 1897, and when in 1900 Congress created a Board of Charities and Corrections for the District of Columbia Mr. Neill was appointed on this board by President McKinley, and was chosen as its vice-president. He has for years been active in the effort to eradicate the alley slums of Washington. He is at present a member of the legislative committee of the Citizens Committee on Housing, an organization working for legislation for the improvement of housing conditions in the District of Columbia, and he is also a member of the Sanitary Improvement Company, a corporation organized to furnish good homes to wage-workers at low rents.

Mr. Neill has for years been a close student of labor problems. He has spent some time in England studying labor conditions there. In 1902 he was appointed by President Roosevelt as assistant recorder of the Anthracite Strike Commission, and during the long period of the existence of that Commission important and delicate duties devolved upon him. In the closing addresses before the Commission both sides united in paying public tribute to the thoroughness and the fairness with which he had done his work. The award of the Commission provided a sliding scale of wages in addition to the 10 per cent advance given to the mine workers, and on the application of both sides to the controversy, Judge Gray, Chairman of the Commission, appointed Mr. Neill commissioner to supervise the operation of the sliding scale and fix the rate of wages monthly.

During the strike in the mines of Northern Alabama in 1903, Judge Gray was chosen as the fifth member of a commission agreed upon by operators and mine workers to arbitrate their differences, and at his request Mr. Neill was chosen as recorder of that Commission. He is particularly well known in the anthracite field, and has on more than one occasion done much to aid in removing friction there since the adjournment of the Commission and to bring about better relations between mine-workers and operators.

Mr. Neill will enter upon his duties as Commissioner of Labor on February 1, 1905.

ALLIED PRINTING TRADES UNION LABEL COUNCIL WASHINGTON. 2

Only Eight-Hour Union Office in Town.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 5, 1905.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

The Supreme Court of North Carolina recently decided that boycotts by trades unions are lawful, in the case of The State v. Van Pelt et al. I will quote the report as given in a newspaper, in order that I may not misstate the case from ignorance of the English language as handled by lawyers:

The members of a carpenters and joiners' union of Salisbury were indicted for conspiracy to break up and destroy the business of a lumber merchant on whom they had made a demand that he refrain from employing other than union labor, on pain of being considered out of sympathy with organized labor, and whom they had published, after his refusal to comply, as having been placed on the "unfair list," with the accompanying advice that no member of the union or any branch of organized labor should handle the product of his business. The men indicted were the appellees in the case before the Supreme Court. On the hearing in the court below the defendants demurred to the bill of particulars furnished by the State and were sustained, the judge quashing the indictment. In the Supreme Court's decision the lower court was therefore affirmed.

The opinion, which is very extensive and full in tteatment, was written by Associate Justice Connor. Affecting as it does the rights of organized labor to enforce its demands by influencing others not to deal with an employer of labor who has incurred the displeasure of the unions, it will be seen that the case is one of the greatest importance, which is increased when it is considered that the court is unanimous in its decision and that the opinion was written only after long consideration of every aspect of the case.

Such a decision as this is rare enough to be refreshing in the long list of decisions against trades unions. That men or a body or association of men have a right to refuse to do business with anybody they please, with or without provocation, would seem to be a self-evident proposition, and I believe that to that extent the right is conceded generally, the trouble coming when they tell anybody else of their resolution with a view of securing sympathy and co-operation. So far as I know, this is the first decision of a Supreme Court that in enforcing a boycott a trades union is acting within its legal rights.

Law has been facetiously defined to be the will of the man having the last guess. The wide variation in decisions of the same questions, based on the same state of facts and the same propositions of law, demonstrates beyond dispute that law is a very inexact science and that any judge can find all the authority he wants for deciding any case in accordance with his sympathies or as dictated by the exigencies of his political party. Of course the judiciary is supposed to be free from political influences and bias, a happy condition of affairs which is brought about by the almost invariable nomination as judges of strict party men by conventions and the appointing power, in order that the people may not lose faith in the judiciary, the last resort of a free people and the repository of its liberties.

This North Carolina decision serves to break the monotony of a long line of adverse decisions as to the rights of labor as contrasted with those of dollars, but will not be largely quoted by courts whose sympathies, affiliations, and perhaps personal interests lead them to view the matter from the opposite standpoint.

I observe a disposition on the part of Johnny Ottinger to plow with my Bill Brockwell, in his recent return to literature, which I deprecate. To prevent this in the future I shall run a "Bill Brockwell subsection."

The esteemed William d'Orsay is an unfailing source of reminiscence to Brocky, a wellspring of constant delightful recollection, the scene of most of his stories being Specifications in the old days. He tells this (often):

One day d'Orsay went up to the box to "take out."

"Did you get a runover, Bill?" asked one of his alleymates.

"A runover! Sacred Ganges of the Ind!" roared Bill, in disgust. "I get a runover! The Archangel Michael would fall from the heavens and smash a hole into the firmament if I got a runover!"

He went to work manfully on his take, which developed into a beautiful 115-line runover. Brockwell looked at it as d'Orsay was about completing it.

"How about the Archangel Michael falling from heaven if you got a runover, Bill?" asked Brockwell.

"Brockwell, you are a liar!" said d'Orsay. "I never made use of any such expression. I am not in the habit of using such language."

Brocky went out to collect witnesses. Everybody was willing to swear that d'Orsay said so, whether he heard him or not. D'Orsay saw the crowd approaching.

"Enough! I give in," said he. "I said it, and I expect him to fall any minute."

This story might be told in other ways, specimens of which I will give to show my familiarity with all sorts of literary styles:

Bill Brockwell has a story about Bill d'Orsay. Get him to tell it to you.

How about that runover story that Brocky is telling? Ask Bill d'Orsay.

Bill d'Orsay says he never gets a runover. Bill Brockwell tells a story about that. Eh, d'Orsay?

Somebody says that the Archangel Mike will take a tumble if he ever gets a fat take. Bill d'Orsay says it wasn't him. Ask Brockwell.

* * * *

By the way, Brocky gives a portion of his experience on his entry into the Proof Room, like this: He was given a partner who was very precise in the way he wanted copy read to him. As Brockwell will not tell who it was, I think the party must be still living. He read along satisfactorily until he came to the name "Hughes," which he pronounced according to the practice of the best speakers.

"Hug-hees?" queried his reader.

"Hug-hees," said Brocky, going on.

Soon he came to the same name, which he again pronounced in the generally accepted manner.

"Hug-hees?" again asked the reader.

"Hug-hees," answered Brocky, meekly, again proceeding. He had read a stickful or so, when his reader stopped him.

"See here, Brockwell," said he. "We are about to come to that name again. That name is Hug-hees; it is always Hug-hees. Damn you, I want you to call it Hug-hees hereafter!"

As Brocky was new he tremblingly assented.

I received a copy of the Christmas menu of the Union Printers' Home the other day—a beautifully embossed and printed souvenir of the occasion—and the list of good things made me wish that Superintendent Deacon had asked me to dine with the old boys. There is no nobler charity than the one which we are supporting at Colorado Springs, nor one more ably superintended and managed, nor are there more grateful and appreciative beneficiaries than those of our brethren who have fallen behind in life's race and sought asylum there.

It is with mixed emotions that I read Tim Tickle. If he is using poetry I prefer what he gets out of his scrapbook—not that I have ever seen it before, and therefore recognize it, but there are certain unmistakable signs by which I can distinguish between what he writes and the other, and I prefer the latter for reasons unnecessary to state. If he is making prose, his own product has at least the merit of novelty, which I can't say of the cribbed. Tim's and my tastes in literature are so similar that the same sort of stuff appeals to both of us, only I tire after reading it a few times. I had always understood that printing other people's writings as one's own was ticklish business, and it seems to be Tim Ticklish business.

There is such a delightful red-light district, maison-de-joie air about the bevies of beauties who figure in Mr. Sutton's prose poems that I count that issue lost in which "the black-eyed devil" has no reference to them. What an accomplished roue he has been—nays is; for he is not yet to be classed with the Has Beens.

John Berg probably now realizes what it is to be Gunned for. It was most appropriate that the parody on Poe's Raven last week should be followed by the legend, "The Poet's Undoing." But it seems to be another case of an empty Gunn going off, under pressure of a rear-directed sour apple.

I have mentioned before how much I am impressed with the Kansas City mode of aiding the sale of union-label goods as contrasted with that of warning against non-union dealers and merchandise, which consists, as I have explained, of advertising where union-label goods can be found, enumerating them. I recently received another letter from Mr. Charles W. Fear, secretary of the Union Label Committee, and as it shows the success of his plan, I will print it:

KANSAS CITY, MO.,
December 25, 1904.

MR. A. F. BLOOMER,
THE TRADES UNIONIST,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER: Permit me to thank you for your kindly notices of our efforts. I believe that you and THE TRADES UNIONIST can do a great deal of good by directing the attention of the A. F. of L. to the plan of advertising labor's friends. Upon being elected six months ago to membership on the Label Committee I was surprised to find out that the committee of ten had not had a meeting for several months. It was also discovered that dozens of letters had been received from women, wives of union men, asking where union-label articles could be purchased. After repeated efforts, extending over two months, a big meeting of women was held and a Label League formed. Again came the question, "Where can this or that article be secured?" The committee was divided whether to adopt the fusion plan or my suggestion. I won out, and, in the face of bitter opposition of half of the committee and a portion of the central body, printed 10,000 of the pamphlets, at the small cost of $50. Merchants were found who were afraid to furnish a list to the committee and union men were dubious. But the opposition is not so strong, and the merchants who were opposed now run after the committee, and have even offered to pay for a line under this or that head. We are all more than pleased, and at the last meeting my friends elected me to represent the Industrial Council at the Joplin convention, in order that I may have a chance to place before that body our plan of label agitation. I shall do my best.

Only last month the Label Committee had a call for information about a union-label piano. It took about four weeks to find out about the matter. There was not a line in the Piano and Organ Workers' Journal about a union-made piano, but plenty of names of non-union articles. Were one-half the space devoted to the union-made pianos and organs a great deal of good would result. Can anyone doubt this?

Again, 200 women, members of the Women's Auxiliary and the Union Label League, desired the names of publishing houses whose books for the holidays bore the union label. The committee could have sold hundreds of holiday books for some merchant if we could have given the name of some union publishing house and the name of a local firm which handled its books with the Allied Printing Trades label upon them.

I have had many such questions come up in the last six months, forcing me to a realization of the fact that the purchasing power of organized labor is sadly neglected and needs but a little cultivation to become even more powerful than our other weapons. We must exert a portion of our efforts to help our friends—and ourselves. We must divert our money into channels which will help build up the organizations and employ union men.

You, Mr. Bloomer, and THE TRADES UNIONIST can help bring to the attention of our leaders the fact that we should change our policy so as to include the advertising of our own products and friends instead of our enemies and their products.

With best wishes and thanks for your comments, I remain,

Fraternally, yours,
CHARLES W. FEAR.

A similar measure adopted in this city would be a hundred times more effective, to my mind, than any that has yet been tried. It is useless to issue boycott lists, for they are forgotten or no heed taken. To advertise our friends will be more to the purpose than to denounce our enemies and will avoid the charge of malice.

From a recent number of the San Francisco Labor Clarion, sent me by Herb. Steele, I gather a few items of interest:

The delegates from San Francisco Union to the State Federation of Labor convention were F. J. Bonnington, L. Michelson, C. M. Jones, and C. E. Fisk.

Among those who have gone from 'Frisco to Sacramento to work in the State printing office are Adrian M. Jones (formerly well known here), S. M. Hughes, L. C. Stilley, Verg E. Fortsen (who will be the head of the proof room), D. H. Shanhan, and "Diagram" King, the latter having just come from Los Angeles.

About two hundred cards have been deposited in San Francisco Union in in the past three months, mostly by men from the far East.

Co-operative meat markets were to be established in several places in that city on January 1. Individual printers have taken over $1,000 in stock. One started in Oakland six months before, with $400 in cash, now has $5,000 in hand and property paid for valued at $23,000.

I am beginning to receive mail from different parts of the country addressed to "The Rev." Somebody even sent me a religious paper from Philadelphia, which I regard as "carrying coals to Newcastle." It is not so much because of my one sermon that I consent to accept the honor being given me as from a feeling that the general precepts which I constantly contribute and the example of a correct life which I furnish are but receiving their just recognition. But I decline to be good from fear of punishment; it is much nicer to be good for its own sake. In this I have at last found a field in which I have practically no competition. The poets are the principal source of what little unhappiness I have.

Miss Louise Silvey, daughter of Mrs. A. O. Silvey, the caterer of the Record room, was severely injured, one ankle being broken and bruises on the face, by the fall of a bucket from a derrick on the site of the new union station, last Tuesday morning. The carelessness by which such an accident could be possible should render somebody responsible in large damages.

Arthur P. Ferl, who came to the G. P. O. about eight years ago, spent some three years in the Philippines, and returned to the office a few months ago, from which he recently resigned, has sent me illustrated pamphlet setting forth the magnificence of San Pedro, Cal., accompanied by a business card announcing that he is engaged in engineering real estate investments, loans, and insurance there. He has my best wishes for a prosperous career, with an abiding faith that he will achieve it, for he has the necessary qualities.

C. W. Pafflow, of the Proof Division, who has been painfully ill for a week or two, was removed to the hospital on Monday to undergo a surgical operation, from which it is hoped he will secure permanent relief.

The sympathies of all go out to John B. Jaques, long of the Record room, but for the past two years of Specifications, in his bereavement by the death of his wife last Monday. Mr. Jaques lost a daughter by death but a year or so ago. His afflictions follow each other rapidly.

When the old year died the bells all tolled and whistles blew and bedlam let loose a furious fusilade of welcome to the new born. Judging by reports at hand the season of good resolutions is over, and the indications are that this year is not to be an exception as regards the experiences of the probationary period. One discouraged individual has turned in his hard-luck story, which runs as follows:

The leaf I turned on New Year's day
Somehow got turned the other way—
In other words, it didn't stay.
No matter now what others say,
I'll turn no more, (though others may)
'Cause that I turned went clean astray,
And since that time the d—l's to pay.

The proposition to establish a whipping-post in the District of Columbia as a panacea for wife beating has provoked some spirited discussion. One man protests because he thinks the poor man would be discriminated against, that the rich and eminently respectable would escape, and that particularly and eventually the custom would resolve itself into the black man's burden. Why not submit the whole matter to a vote of the people, thus giving to every man who wants the lash an opportunity to say so? There is another matter akin to this. How about the child beater—male and female.

Favors Labor Unions.

At the Episcopal convention recently the report of the standing committee on relations of capital and labor, o which Bishop Henry C. Potter, of New York is chairman, was unanimously adopted. The commission was appointed by the general convention of 1901 to study the purposes of labor organizations, to investigate the causes of industrial disturbances and to hold themselves in readiness to act as arbitrators should their services be desired.

"We are convinced," the report says, "that the organization of labor is essential to the well being of the working people. Its purpose is to maintain such a standard of wages, hours and conditions as shall afford every man an opportunity to grow in mind and in heart. Without organization the standard can not he maintained in the midst of our present commercial conditions." The convention also pronounced against child labor.

GOSSIP FROM THE G. P. O.

Ex-Delegates' Association.

The regular quarterly meeting of the Association of Ex-Delegates will be held at Typographical Temple next Sunday afternoon, January 8, at 3 o'clock. The treasury of the Association is in a prosperous condition, and as there is no immediate use for the funds the question of suspending dues will be discussed.

The annual election of officers will also take place.

A large attendance is urgently requested.

First Division.

Chas. Danenhower continues to improve slowly.

Let's see, next holiday will be the twenty-second of February; not so long to wait.

How often have you written 1904 for 1905? But the last date is an easy one to write.

Chairman-elect Davidson was cruelly reminded on Tuesday that his troubles had not begun.

Say, did you help jingle the cow-bell at the incoming of the New Year last Saturday night?

Owing to sickness in their families, Messrs. Schoeneman and Sansom have been detained from office.

Slug 4, since the beginning of the new year, is a resident of Maryland. A New Year's gift, Wallace?

A good resolution for the New Year: If not already a subscriber to THE TRADES UNIONIST, hand in your name to Clerk Berger and he will do the rest.

It goes without saying that N. J. Lillard was re-elected secretary of this chapel by an overwhelming vote, even if we did cut out that salary suggestion.

It was Titus F. Ellis, of the Proof Room, who was instrumental in having hundreds of large attractive "Ingin" calendars circulated during the past week.

"Nothing doing" in slug quotations. Just the same as the stock market in Wall street during the holidays. But everyone is apparently satisfied with his frame.

R. C. Scott, of Foreman Ricketts corps of handsome messengers, was assigned to duty in Assistant Foreman Spottswood's room during the week, owing to the absence of Bruce Bielaski.

Have you heard that fairy story about Jack Burnside, the mud puddle and the G. P. O.? If you haven't, pass through this division with the next bunch of visitors, and get it straight from the gentlemanly guide.

No, it does not necessarily follow that the chairmanship is a stepping-stone for delegatorial honors. We have in mind a number of mighty good men who made excellent chairman and they are still of the common people.

Did you have your photo taken the other day with or without the flash-light? We understand there is a large demand for the picture containing the floor hands, helpers, laborers, Jack Burnside and Comrades Waller and Pocher.

Our printer friend, Geo. H. Eakle, the northeast coal merchant hustler, was not unmindful of the G. P. O. employes last week, as he distributed a large number of 1905 calendars. You did not have to draw for them—just took them. Accept thanks.

Did you hear the whistle toot at high noon last Saturday? Well, yes; we all took lunch and resumed work at half-past 12, same as any other day. I guess we have seen our finish on the half holiday before New Year's Day. On the whole year we average up very well on holidays.

Vice-President Love, of No. 101, who represents Slug 95, now lives in his newly erected residence, Seventeenth street and Brentwood Road, South Brookland. Dan Sansom, from the wilds of Western Pennsylvania, says Billy patronizes the 17-minute car. That may be a joke or a fake; I don't know.

Eugene Root, in charge of slugs, leads and quads—a general utility man—is taking a few days off up in West Virginia. Mr. Root applies himself closely and is thoroughly proficient in all the details of his assigned duty. Our whilom friend, Steele, is looking after Mr. Root's duties in connection with his own.

There being no opposition to R. L. Davidson for chairman on the last day of the week, the last day of the month and the last day of the old year, he was thereby declared the unanimous choice. The retiring chairman, Phil Nachman, was a hustler and discharged the exacting duties in a very satisfactory manner to the members. He could have won in a walk had he consented to enter the race.

Say, did you read Foreman Shanks' dream in last Sunday's Times? Wonder what was the cause of the dream? High price of the birds, or did you "mix" them. First time we ever heard of a "job lot of printers" dubbed turkeys. Hold up, we aint so awful old, but we have heard of one printer forenamed "Turkey," who was appointed foreman of the Record—not the Sixth Division—and filled the office, theoretically, about sixty minutes.

The annual election of G. P. O. Council, No. 211, National Union, was held at the regular meeting in Scottish Rite Hall last Saturday evening. The following were the newly elected officials.—President, T. E. Colton; Vice-President, H. J. Redfield; Speaker, J. S. Graves; Secretary, Joseph Dierken; Financial Secretary, Chas. H. Leeds; Treasurer, Thos. L. Jones; Usher, W. A. Kinsolving; Sergeant-at-Arms, Jos. E. Goodkey; Doorkeeper, H. A. Lavisson, and Chaplain, C. W. Sower.

Owing to the recent death of Marion E. Lynn, a laborer in the Bindery, the members of the Government Printing Office Immediate Relief Association have been notified to pay an assessment of one dollar before January 15. This Association has been in existence about two years, and this is the fourth death. There are about 180 members all told, of whom about six belong in this division. It is exclusively a Government Printing Office Association and must not be confounded with the National Union Immediate Relief, which pays $200 on the death of a member.

Take joy home,
And make a place in thy great heart for her,
And give her time to grow, and cherish her;
Then will she come and oft will sing to thee
When thou art working in the furrows; aye,
Or weeding in the sacred hour of dawn.
It is a comly fashion to be glad:
Joy is the grace we give to God.
—SELECTED.

JOSEPH E. GOODKEY,
Chairman of the Third Division, G. P. O.

Bret Harte once wrote a short story called "M'liss, the Child of the Sierras," which has since been dramatized and is occasionally presented to the lovers of wild Western plays. There is one scene in the story not incorporated in the dramatic version. It is where the school gets examined. M'liss has been an attentive scholar and has made rapid advancement in her studies, in some instances surpassing the rest of the pupils, but as the curriculum did not include Bible study, and as M'liss was the only child of a shiftless miner whose one desire seemed to be to get as drunk as possible all the time, she was not acquainted with those stories from Holy Writ which many children in the effete East have at their tongues' ends. Consequently she came to grief when the wise old examiner, after asking a number of questions and receiving correct replies thereto, asked her how the sun moved. "East to West!" said M'liss. "Did the sun ever stop moving?" was the next question. "No!" said M'liss. "Wrong; next!" said the examiner. And the next young woman responded, "Joshua commanded the sun to stand still and it obeyed him." As M'liss had no acquaintance with things supernatural and believed only what her reason and understanding told her was possible, she lost no time in testifying to her belief. Her retort came quick and sharp. "It's a d—— lie! I don't believe it!" she said.

Far be it from me to say aught in derogation of the Chairman of the Third Division. Yet I think that nobody will deny that if the question had been asked, say at any time since May, 1903 (when Mr. Goodkey resigned the chairmanship), up to two months ago, whether Goodkey would ever again be chairman of this division, the answer would have been as strong an expression of disbelief in such a possibility as that expressed by the "Child of the Sierras."

The trend of events might have been seen, however, in the November election to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Chairman Piehoff, when, with a full chapel, Goodkey came within eight votes of tying Wm. H. Duling. In his signal victory over Elmer Dement and the undersigned he has shown that in spite of opposition he is able to command the support of nearly half the chapel, which, as it elected him, is conclusive.

Since his first accession to the chairmanship, Mr. Goodkey has had a meteoric career. I had hardly been in the chapel a month (March, 1903) before election day came around, and he was reelected by a good majority. It was about this time that his celebrated controversy with Simpson culminated in a row between the two which so terrorized the latter that he had Goodkey arrested. As Goodkey marched toward the front where an officer was waiting for him, he smilingly remarked to the crowd, "I'll shoot him full of holes!" But we all knew he was joking, although he is known to be a Kentuckian. The court said, "Personal bonds," and the incident closed.

Some time in May, 1903, Mr. Goodkey resigned, having fallen down on his average through too much devotion to the interests of those who depended on "pick-ups" for their average and looked to him to furnish them the "phat." Since that time there have been nine elections for chairman, in nearly all of which he has been a candidate. In the election held September 30, 1903, he received two votes. Nothing daunted, he has plugged away like a Japanese general storming Port Arthur, and has at last landed the prize.

Mr. Goodkey has at all times been an active union worker, attaining prominence in his local union at Chicago, Louisville, and St. Louis. As a member of Columbia Union he is always suggesting something which he thinks will benefit his fellow-workmen. He was the author of the idea of a yearly memorial day for our departed brothers which has since been incorporated into the International laws. Last summer he received a large vote for delegate to the A. F. of L., and also for trustee of Columbia Union. He was one of the injured on the ill-fated car which, in overturning, killed one employe of the G. P. O. and bruised so many others, himself escaping miraculously from a more serious fate. All these and other things have happened to our chairman; but he bobs up serenely, at the helm once more.

Let us give him the support he deserves. Having done that, it is up to him.

New Year's Day was like a day in May.

It wasn't much of a day for elections, either.

R. L. S. Halpenny, late of the correcting alley, was transferred last week to the Sixth Division.

Will some one please tell Messrs. Saltzman, Knoble, and Jenkins that Port Arthur has fallen?

It was fun to hear Goodkey threaten to fine Delahunty $10 last Friday while the General was passing the ballot box.

The chapel treasury has for some months been in a condition of utter bankruptcy. But we will have money now.

It looks as if Bloomer got a "scoop" on that wife-beating proposition, for "Blanche, Tray, and Sweetheart" haven't even whimpered.

Folio man J. W. L. Dillman went to Philadelphia December 31, to remain until Tuesday morning, and incidently to witness the celebration of New Year's Day as they do it in the City of Brotherly Love.

When Friday was first announced as the day for choosing the next chairman, Goodkey protested loudly, claiming that an election on that day would be illegal. It is dollars to doughnuts that his doubts are now set at rest.

The retiring chairman, William H. Duling, merits the hearty thanks of the chapel for his uniform courtesy and willingness to oblige all. He refused to allow the use of his name as a nominee, or perhaps there might have been a different result.

I am informed that each officer and man in the Army and Navy of the United States is entitled, by virtue of such service, to buy all articles of food, clothing, furniture, etc., at a special rebate. Then why are not the printers entitled to the same privilege?

Elmer Dement should not be discouraged over the fact that he got 13 votes at the recent election. Thirteen States downed England in the Revolutionary War, but it took eight years to do it. There is no such thing as the much-talked-of "unlucky thirteen."

Last week I learned through the Sixth Division correspondent that Brother Newsom had been transferred to the hot metal department from the Second Division. We shall miss "Newsom's nosegays" unless he concludes to become a free lance. Think it over, Hubert!

At the election for officers of the chapel for the term ending March 31, 1905, held Friday, December 30, Joseph E. Goodkey, Elmer Dement, and Joseph W. Belcher having been nominated for chairman, the following vote was cast: Goodkey, 43; Belcher, 36; Dement, 13. T. A. McAloon was elected secretary without opposition.

On the afternoon of January 2, a brand new son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Thomas L. McEneany. The proud father received the congratulations of the entire Division early Tuesday morning. The gentlemen holding down Slugs 1, 24, 33, 46, and 51 are hereby informed that it is now up to them. The world is waiting for you!

H. W. Kitzmiller is once more working on frame 46 after having for some months past officiated on one of the presses, the decimated ranks of our division making an additional imposer no longer necessary. "Kitz" has performed his duties well and it is respectfully suggested that he merits the best consideration of the Public Printer.

Albert P. E. Doyle has been off nearly a week, part of the time suffering from brain fever. No sooner did he show signs of improvement than Mrs. Doyle was prostrated with a severe attack of rheumatism, from which there was only a slight improvement at last accounts. Mr. Doyle has our earnest sympathy and our most cordial hopes for the speedy release of his family from sickness.

This Division makes grateful acknowledgment of the receipt of new "Average Books" for recording the product of each day's composition, donated by the Timothy Class of the Ninth Street Christian Church, through my old alley-mate and friend, Hubert Newsom. The books are very well printed and meet a pressing need. May the Timothy Class and Newsom live long and prosper.

To those who have not yet experienced the guiding hand of our new chairman, let me give a friendly warning: Don't you believe he won't fine you if he catches you breaking one of the chapel or office rules. It will be done so quickly that you won't begin to realize what has happened until you are compelled to go down into your jeans for the necessary 25 cents to $10, according to the gravity of your offense.

Late advices from former Chairman Piehoff are to the effect that his change of residence has resulted in considerable improvement in his general health, he having gained five pounds since his arrival in Spartansburg, S. C. His generous friends in the various divisions of the G. P. O. contributed $289.25 in the hope of saving his life by removing him to his old home. There is some good in these "knockers" after all, eh, Adam?

Fourth Division.

During the past week the Fourth Division was photographed in a body, and, without egotism, it is a fine looking assemblage. From the standpoint of intelligence, dignity, and general good looks it is unsurpassed.

The Fourth Division held two chapel meetings last Saturday—one for the election of officers and the other to express New Year greetings to Foreman D. J. Roberts. At the first meeting John P. Smith, who has proven a most efficient officer as chairman for several terms, was unanimously re-elected to that position, while S. F. McDonough was re-elected secretary.

It being the holiday season, when an exchange of greetings and well wishes was in order, Foreman D. J. Roberts, sent the following to the employes of that division:

GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE,
FOURTH DIVISION,
December 31, 1904.

To the Employes of the Fourth Division:

I desire to thank each and every one of you for your uniform kindness to me during the past year, and to wish you all a healthful, prosperous, and Happy New Year.

Respectfully,
D. J. ROBERTS.

The chapel, in meeting assembled, then passed the following resolution:

Resolved, By the employes of the Fourth Division, that we extend to Mr. D. J. Roberts, our foreman, our sincere thanks for the kind expressions of his regard for us, and in return wish him a Happy New Year and promise him our best efforts to make the new year more successful, if possible, than the one just closing.

After the adoption of the above resolution a committee of three was appointed to escort Mr. Roberts before the chapel meeting, whereupon he was informed of the passage of the resolution, and in a most pleasant manner expressed his well wishes. Then followed a hearty hand shake with those assembled, which emphasised the cordial feeling and kindly relations that exist between Foreman Roberts and the men who work with him. His consideration for others and his many acts of kindness have endeared him to all who know him, by whom he is held in the highest esteem.

Specification Notes.

George Graham fell and sprained his ankle Tuesday while on his way to the office.

All but one of the 47 detailed for this work during the holiday recess returned to their winter quarters Wednesday morning.

The new year start in with very little of a startling nature, or little that would be regarded as news. Everyone is busy, but that's not new of the Spess.

C. S. Bickley resigned on Tuesday, on account of failing health, and will at once remove to Arizona where he hopes to receive a benefit by change of climate.

John B. Jaques, of this division, mourns the loss of his wife, who died on New Year's day. Interment was made at Rock Creek Cemetery on Tuesday. S. J. Gompers, E. W. Morcock, and C. A. Read served as pallbearers.

Rumor has it that an order is on the way requiring compositors to "fol. lit." on Specifications, except in cases of manifest absurdities. This is where the fellow with the pencil and fresh from guessing school will have an advantage.

Robert H. McMackin, William H. Maghan, and John L. Gleason, delegates-elect of Bricklayers' Union, No. 1, of this city, left on Wednesday night to attend the convention of the International Bricklayers and Masons' Union, which convenes at San Francisco, Cal., on January 9, 1905. The delegates-elect went via the Sunset Route, and will be joined enroute by other delegates-elect and visitors. Mr. McMackin was accompanied by his wife and son, and an extended trip through California and other points in the West will be made before their return home.

Sixth Division.

John H. Clapham, late of the Mergenthaler force, reported for night duty on Wednesday.

O. T. Mattingly, reviser, has been detailed from the Proof Room for work in this division during the session.

A. W. Lowe returned to work on Tuesday. Mr. Lowe spent the holidays in New York City and reports having had a royal time.

About fifteen new subscribers were added to THE TRADES UNIONIST list this week from the Sixth Division. Could it be they are all candidates.

John J. Ottinger is evidently not in love with the peculiar style of poetry manufactured by the printer poets. Johnnie, your education has been sadly neglected.

In last week's items I reported Sydney Cluxton, one of the new linotype machinists, as coming from Baltimore. Mr. Cluxton hails not from Oystertown, but Rochester, N. Y.

"I might tear the living pepsin out of him on the rottenness of the slobber squirted at me last week," said Pard Bloomer last week, referring to one Mr. Rhodes. And this from the dean of the literary corps. Ye Gods!

Among the recent arrivals in this division is Steve Wall. For many years Mr. Wall was a floor hand in the old First Division in the old building, but of recent years has been located at the Treasury branch. His position in this division is that of imposer.

The failure of the Sixth Division caterer, Mrs. Silvey, to bring us our daily bread on Tuesday was not occassioned by the storm, but owing to an accident to her daughter, who had the misfortune to receive a broken ankle, but in what manner I was unable to learn.

If you should happen to hit the avenue during your Sunday evening stroll you will generally find a group of printers congregated in front of the Post building. At first sight as I saw the group standing around in a circle last Sunday evening I thought I had struck a Salvation Army band holding an experience meeting. On arrival it seemed as though my old friend Jim Kreiter, was acting as chairman and the way the gang went through the alphabet was alarming. They had passed the "G's" when I arrived, but I am writing this to tell you the finish was a hot one. It's worth a trip down the avenue.

This story telling business reminds me of a little incident that happened one day last fall. Machinist Claude Pendarvis, of the night force, who had just then come to this office from the Times, and myself, were seated one plesant noonday out in front of Driscoll's ice cream parlors, across from the office, when we were approached by a rather tough looking citizen with several to the good.

"Ah, ha," he said as he approached with extended hand, "Mr. Pendarvis, of the Times."

"No, sir; not of the Times," said Pendarvis.

"What, not Pendarvis of the Times?" said he.

"No, sir; not Pendarvis of the Times." again replied the latter.

"That settles it," said the jag. Right here is where your little Willie cuts it out. When they all commence to look alike, then your little Willie's through."

Then he waddled slowly up the street.

"Bill Brockwell is a pretty good story teller," said Guy McCord, formerly of the First, now of this room, "but I have one up my sleeve that's pretty fair. Did you ever know Fred Hodafer, who used to work on the Post, but now in Boston, I believe. Well he is a tremendously big man—in fact he was often referred to as the biggest printer in the world. I don't think I am betraying any secret when I say that he had a perfect fondness for the ponies, and if he was in town when the races were on, could generally be found of an evening around the "horsey" quarters. I knew him well in 'Frisco, and it was during a race meet that what I am going to tell you happened. Fred was hanging around the hotel one night making love to the jockeys, and as he started to leave the place, a little dried up jockey asked him if he was going out to the races next day. Fred said he thought he would, when the little jockey jokingly offered him his jockey badge.

"I'll take it," said Hodafer, and take it he did.

Next day he lined up at the entrance, and when he went to enter presented the gateman with the jockey's pass. The gateman looked at it and then looked at Hodafer, saying, "My God, man, what do you ride? An elephant?"

NAVY YARD ITEMS.

One of our sailor Japs has gone into the international business, I refer to Kisogo Sato, of the Dolphin, who is much respected by all his fellows for his gentlemanly bearing and quiet disposition. His marriage with Miss Ella Ray Campbell, of New York city, yesterday by the Rev. E. H. Lamar, of Wilson Memorial Church, was a surprise to his sailor friends. He is now receiving congratulations from all on board. May the romance which started in New York and ended so successfully in this city bring to them a lifelong happiness. No doubt the Russian Government will now claim that an alliance has been consummated between America and Japan.

The Secretary of the Navy has issued the following circular:

NAVY DEPARTMENT,
Washington, December 24, 1904.

SIR: A question has arisen in regard to the legality of granting a half holiday to per diem employes at the Washington Navy Yard on the Saturday afternoon preceding Christmas and New Year's day. The question has been referred to the Attorney-General for opinion. Under the circumstances per diem employes may be excused with the understanding that those who go out must do it with the chance that their pay will be checked in case the opinion of the Attorney-General is adverse.

Respectfully,

PAUL MORTON,
Secretary of the Navy.

To the Commandant, Navy Yard, Washington, D. C.

Received at Commandant's office, December 27, and forwarded to heads of departments same date.

Posted for benefit of employes December 29.

It is not my desire to criticise any official who is my superior officer, nor will I attempt to do so, as I am a strict believer in discipline. There are facts, however, which may be made plain sometimes by asking questions.

It will be observed that the Secretary issued the circular December 24, and it was not received at the commandant's office until December 27.

What caused this delay, which necessitated the employes to work on Saturday evening, when, if received in time, advantage could have been taken by the employes, "even at their own risk?"

Did some one blunder innocently or otherwise? I hate to think that any person would deliberately do such a mean act. I am glad to know that no official in the Yard was cognizant of the order. Men will talk, and no earthly power can stop them, and many bitter things were said against the Yard officials under a belief that the order had been received and not recognized for a purpose, "that of keeping the men at work."

Those who had served in the Navy and others who had been in the Yard for a long time knew differently, but it was impossible to impress the newcomers that an officer of the Navy does not seek a court-martial for disobedience of orders. Therefore the circular clearly vindicates all the officials in the Yard.

It is now up to the Department to answer who is responsible for the delay.

HOW TO PROMOTE UNITY IN LODGES.

If the following simple rules were lived up to there would be less dissention and more unity when we meet as brothers should meet, all striving for one cause—

The Brotherhood of Man.

1. Remember that our will is likely to be crossed each meeting night, so prepare for it.
2. Every brother in the Lodge has an evil nature as well as ourselves, and therefore, we are not to expect too much.
3. To learn the different tempers and disposition of each member.
4. To look on each member as one for whom we should have a care.
5. When any good happens to a brother, to rejoice at it.
6. When inclined to give an angry answer, to "overcome evil with good."
7. To observe where others are suffering, and drop a word of kindness and sympathy suited to them.
8. To watch the little opportunities of pleasing, and to put little annoyances out of the way.
9. To speak kindly to the new member and encourage him to attend the meetings.
10. To try for the soft answer that turneth away wrath.
11. When we have been pained by an unkind word or deed to ask ourselves the question, have I not done the same and been forgiven?
12. In debate not to exalt yourself, but to bring others forward.
13. Never to judge one another harshly, but to attribute a good motive when we can.
14. Respect the brother who has grown gray in service. You will be as old as he some day.

I am indebted to a dear friend in the G. P. O. for a copy of the Bulletin of the Bureau of Labor. Many thanks, Jack, and a Happy New Year to you. If some admirer would send me a copy of the "Jefferson Bible" I would appreciate the gift. "Don't all speak at once." The editor will deliver the goods.

HAPPY NEW YEAR.

How many thousand voices utter forth on New Year's morn to kindred and friends these words. How few reflect, even for a moment, on the depth of meaning that is contained in them, but let them pass as a common salutation. It were well did we pause at the entrance of another year, and in communion with our own hearts ask ourselves, what course of conduct we should pursue in order to make the new a happy New Year.

Vain, indeed, are a multitude of wishes for our happiness, if reflection and prudence are strangers to us and we still are walking on in the path of inconsiderateness. To cherish reasonable anticipations of enjoying a pleasant year we must summons up all the energies of our minds, and resolve, and daily advance in the practice of the resolution, that we will improve our time, and all the opportunities that lie in our way for doing good and cultivating our moral and mental faculties.

Kicker, in your issue of December 1, hit the nail square on the head. I, too, dislike the man who deliberately trifles with the affections of woman. I would rather shake hands with a highwayman than with a person who has sacrificed to his own vanity the lifelong happiness of an inexperienced girl. I fear that this sort of conduct has never been sufficiently reprobated, and females too often betray the rights of their sex by accepting with pride the homage of a man who has become notorious for the conquest and destruction of their sisters, as if his mercy and love could be depended upon who has once been cruel to an affectionate woman.

The world laughs and stores of living proverbs and stupid jests on the briefness of woman's love are administered, but you will find, if your heart be not hackneyed by selfishness, that this will be in vain.

Perhaps you had no intention of being serious, you only flirted; tried to be agreeable and to please for the moment, but what if while you are meaning nothing, your trifling created anguish, your sport became death to the object of it. When, by exclusive attentions, you have excited a regard by the development of talent or by the display and devotion of personal graces you have fascinated the mind and the heart—when by the melting and the speaking eye, the faltering voice, the fervid tone, the retained hand, you have awakened the passion you can not lay—when you have done this in the cold blood of vanity, and it suits your convenience or sated coxcombry, to furnish the scene by an altered mien, a distant courtesy, or an expression of surprise at the expected efforts of your civility, will you be able to quiet your conscience with a jest; will you sleep on an adage of fools, or a lie of your own?

What if the poor being whose hope you have changed into despair, whose garden you have blasted with mildew and dust, whose heaven you have darkened for evermore, shall suffer in silence, striving to bear her sorrow, praying for cheerfulness, pardoning without forgetting you, till the worm has eaten through to life, and the body is emaciated which you have led to the dance, the voice is broken on which you have hung, the face wan which you have flattered, and the eyes frightfully bright with funeral luster which used to laugh radiancy, and hope and love when they gazed upon you? What if a prouder temper and a stronger constitution should lead to spite and impatience and recklessness, is there mandragora could drug you to sleep while this was on your memory, or does there really live a man who could triumph in such bitter woe.

Women have their weaknesses, and plenty of them, but they are seldom vicious, like men, and as to their levity of heart, who shall compare the worldly, skin-deep fondness of a man with the one rich idolatry of an innocent virtuous, trusting girl. It is her all in all, and when she gives her heart away she gives away a jewel which, if it does not make the wearer richer than Croesus will leave the giver poor indeed.

THE TRADES UNIONIST.

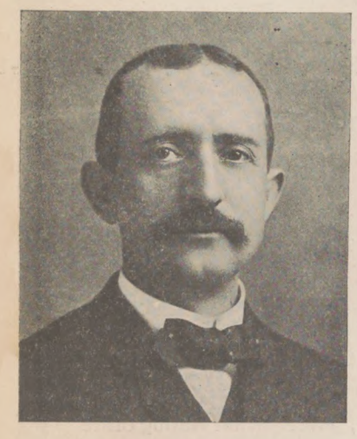
OFFICIAL ORGAN CENTRAL LABOR UNION, WASHINGTON BRANCH, AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

Vol. IX. No. 31. WASHINGTON, D. C., THURSDAY, JANUARY 12, 1905. Price, 3 Cents.

THE CENTRAL LABOR UNION

All the Present Officers Re-Elected Without Any Opposition.

RELIEF FOR COLORADO MINERS



Two Unions Withdraw Delegates—Auditing Committee Makes Report—Painters Want Scale Enforced in Navy Yard—Resolutions Adopted.

The regular meeting of the Central Labor Union was called to order at 8 o'clock on Monday evening by President Dickman.

CREDENTIALS.

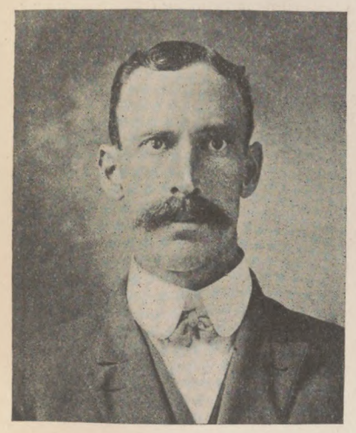
Credentials were received from the following organizations, which were accepted:

Barbers, No. 305; Theatrical Stage Employes, No. 22; Brewery Workmen,

JOHN B. DICKMAN,
Re-elected President Central Labor Union.

No. 118; Beer Drivers, No. 234; Bookbinders, No. 4; Sheet Metal Workers, No. 102; Retail Clerks, No. 262; Columbia Lodge, No. 174, Machinists; Bottlers, No. 251; Tile Layers, No. 2; Cigar Makers, No. 110, and Carriage and Wagon Workers, No. 72.

COMMUNICATIONS.



From Slate and Tile Roofers, notifying secretary of their withdrawal from Central Labor Union. Referred to Organization Committee.

From Stereotypers Union, No. 19, notifying secretary of withdrawal from Central Labor Union. Referred to Committee on Organization.

From Bottlers Union, No. 251, indorsing action of central body in placing M. F. Dorsey and The Academy of Music on the unfair list, and imposing a fine of $5 on any of its members found patronizing either establishment. Filed.

From Building Laborers, No. 46, indorsing action of Central Labor Union in placing The Academy of Music and M. F. Dorsey on the unfair list, and placing a fine of $2 50 on any member found patronizing either place.

From Painters, No. 368, stating condition under which its members are working at the navy yard, and asking for co-operation of central body to aid in securing the new wage scale in effect August 1. Referred to president and Painters' delegates.

C. W. WINSLOW,
Re-elected Secretary Central Labor Union.

From Barbers Union, No. 239, stating that all efforts on their part had failed in endeavoring to have Mike Milletti, of Hotel Lawrence and Hotel Johnson, conduct union shops, and asking that the matter be taken in hand by the Central Labor Union. Referred to Grievance Committee.

Bills amounting to $64 25 were read and ordered paid.

W. H. Leonard, a representative of the Western Federation of Miners, was given the privilege of the floor, and spoke of the conditions existing in Colorado. On motion, the sum of $100 was appropriated for the Colorado miners.

The order of business was suspended and election of officers for the ensuing six months was taken up.

The election resulted as follows:

President, John B. Dickman, by acclamation.

Vice-President, W. S. Crown.

Secretary, Chas. W. Winslow.

Financial Secretary, Jno. G. Schmidt.

Treasurer, J. M. Heisley.

Sergeant-at-Arms, Samuel Beckett.

Auditors: H. T. LeClair, Ed. Nothnagel, and C. A. Pfau.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

The Auditing Committee submitted its report for quarter ending December 31, 1904. It shows receipts for quarter of $725.40, and expenditures of $717.71, leaving a balance on hand of $7.69, and that there is due from affiliated unions for dues the sum of $127 and $30 due from a former member of the excursion committee, making a total due of $157

NEW BUSINESS.

The Auditing Committee was requested to make inquiry as to disposition of tickets on recent excursion and report as soon as possible.

On motion, five shares of stock in Union Outfitters to Men Company were subscribed for.

The chair was voted permission to to continue E. J. Roche as chairman of the Legislative Committee until Congress adjourns, Mr. Roche not having been returned as a delegate by Bookbinders Union, No. 4.

Resolutions favoring the passage of Senate bill 5988 and Senate bill 6319, favoring the regulation of employment of child labor in the District of Columbia and also providing for compulsory education in the District of Columbia, were adopted.

A resolution was also adopted indorsing the action of the Board of Inspectors of Passenger Vessels asking that skilled men only be permitted employment on sea going vessels. Adjourned.

Woman's Auxiliary, Monday night.

AFTER-DINNER DILATIONS.

The Mother's Congress is about due. The fathers, in due time, will be made acquainted with their new duties.

The newspaper pictures of Senator Chauncey Depew convict that gentleman of man(s)laughter in the worst degree.

There is some talk that delegates to the International should be chosen from among the case-holders. There always is about this time of the year.

The Specification division was photographed on Tuesday, when everybody tried to look pleasant. Pay day would be best for that sort of business.

Senator Smoot is having the experience of those who would travel two roads at one and the same time, and both leading in different directions.

The miscreant who attempted to despoil the monument to Frederick the Great on Tuesday last, while not intending it, undoubtedly contributed to the demand for more bluecoats. No friend of Fred would do such a thing.

If wife beaters were supplied with a better quality of the exciting fluid perhaps that would tend to break the force of their blows. The stuff that knots the muscles and suggests axes and razors has too much of the Carrie Nation strenousity.

What interests us most just now is whether or not there is to be a mark down from present prices in the sale of tickets for the Inaugural ball, and whether or not this will include hat-box rent, and umbrella and gum shoe storage and a seat on the grand stand.

Some of the guests had recovered sufficiently on Monday to be able to rehearse the menu with a tolerable degree of accuracy and talk about the live lobsters that were a feature of the banquet given the operators by the agent of the Lanston Monotype Machine Company, on Saturday night last.

An all right all night bank has been opened in New York. Burglars were first to demonstrate that banks could be successfully operated for a portion of the night with capital stock dependent entirely upon deposits. Their aim was to do a safe business, and the necessity of advertising never appealed to them as a good proposition.

Most people if asked to choose bebetween $15,000,000, cash in hand, or the accumulation of, say, one cent today, two cents to-morrow, and so on, doubling the sum for thirty-one days, would chose the $15,000,000 in hand, and on the theory that "a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush" they would be justified; but some one who has taken the trouble to figure it out has discovered they would be short at the end of thirty-one days to the amount of $6,000,000. It is with you to decide whether you are willing to wait the thirty-one days.

It is learned that the health of Mr. W. F. Roderick is seriously impaired, and the announcement has called forth expressions of regret and genuine sympathy from those who were long associated with him during the years he was employed as one of the Specification force. Here he distingnished himself as a model workman, both as to speed and accuracy, and his promotion from case to copy editor was universally regarded as a just recognition of painstaking service. About four years ago Mr. Rodrick accepted the position of Secretary of the Board of Public Schools and has discharged the duties of that office with credit to himself and to the entire satisfaction of the Board. We but express the wish nearest the heart of his many friends when we hope that Mr. Rodrick may be restored to perfect health and that his years of coming and going among us may be many and pleasant.

A bill has been introduced in the House, which, should it be enacted into law, will add to Grover Cleveland's annual stipend the sum of $25,000, a sum supposed to be sufficient to strengthen him in his purpose to remain in seclusion and to keep him in spending money the remainder of his natural life as ex-President. Before this matter goes much further it should be ascertained to a certainty whether Mr. Cleveland would be willing to affix his seal of approval to a "safe and sane" proposition of this kind. The case should be presented to him with a good deal of caution in order that his well-known aversion to paternalism may not be aroused and lead to the crushing humiliation which would result from a rejected tender, small though it may be, and which in but a slight degree is the measure of gratitude so universally shared and bestowed by an affectionate people, now that he is entirely and permanently removed from the zone of "pernicious activity."

The hysteria or crusade period is now on when the scribes, each with a stick as big as they can carry, are literally knocking the "Knocker," whose greatest offense is that he is in league with the truth, which, as they claim, should not be spoken or published at all times. Reviewing a lifetime there are mighty few mortals who have not sidestepped when occasions seemed to justify, but the genuine knocker is a middle-of-the-roader and hews to the line, caring little where the chips may fall. Heroic natures are prone to applaud him, mildly or vociferously, according to their several environments. The footprints of the "Knocker" are indelibly stamped on every portion of the habitable globe, or wherever the light of Hope has penetrated. He is the advance courier bearing the message of "Peace on earth, good will to men." He it was who furnished the first page of recorded history and all history worth recording. Through his efforts thrones have tottered to their face, and tyranny, oppression, and wrong, have been avoided or undone. The "Knocker" is indispensable, and the chances are that he will actively continue while time lasts. Long live the Knocker!

CYCLE.

Official Gazette.

The male operatives of the Lanston Monotype Keyboard, and some of those intimately connected with its manipulation, were the guests of Mr. H. H. Snell, the head machinist of the Lanston Monotype Company, at a theater party and banquet last Saturday evening. The lady operatives will enjoy Mr. Snell's hospitality the coming Saturday evening.

H. H. SNELL,
Chief Machinist Lanston Monotype Co.

Mr. Snell was born in New York State and is the head machinist of the Lanston Monotype Company's large corps of skilled mechanics. He has been in the employ of the company for about nine years and has superintended the installation of some of the largest orders of its machines. He was in charge of the Monotype exhibit at the Fair in St. Louis when the order for machines in the Government Printing Office was about to filled and was placed in charge of that enterprise as being the man best equipped to get the best results, having a thorough knowledge of the keyboard and caster and, in addition, being a born diplomat. Mr. Snell has assisted largely with, and is author of, some of the most important of the Lanston Monotype Company's text books. Twenty-eight machines have been secured by the Government; ten allotted to the Fifth Division, and eighteen to the Official Gazette Division.

The evening was as delightful as regards the weather as if it had been ordered, and nearly all the "boys" were in evidence at the Columbia Theater when the curtain rose. The play, "Piff, Paff, Poof," was a happy selection, as it suited the taste of the bunch of "wind-jammers" to a standstill—pretty girls, witty dialogue, entrancing ballet, and plenty of action. After the performance the party was requested to proceed to Fritz Reuter's dining hall. Nearly everybody present did as requested, except a few henpecked ones and a fellow who lived in the woods and was afraid he would miss the last car.

A. J. Benton jogging along casually.

The table was beautifully decorated, the central object at five or six points being a live lobster, suitably garnished to make him attractive. The menu was excellent, lobster and oysters in various forms being the main courses.

Mr. Charles Smith acted as toastmaster, calling on the speech-makers and making them deliver the goods.

J. A. Healy was the first speaker called upon. He explained that he had left his notes at home; but he would tell a funny story, which he did. After the thunderous applause had subsided some one remarked that he had heard that story before. It was unanimously decided that the applause was due to the charming manner in which the story was told.

Allan G. Flowers made an eloquent speech, and as a climax presented a handsome carving set to Mr. Snell as a token of the good will which his attitude toward the donors had evoked.

Mr. Snell, in responding, said, among other things, that the success of the machines was in a large measure due to the fair-minded manner in which the boys had met the emergency, and that the result had exceeded his expectations.

Harvey D. Best disclaimed any talent as a speech-maker, yet managed to keep the company "on the grin" for about ten minutes with his experience and trials as a pupil on the keyboard. He presented his teacher, Mr. Smith, with a set of knives and forks as a gift from the scholars, remarking that he might not be able to carve his way with them, but they would answer for red apples or other school-masters perquisites. Best was at his best.

Mr. Smith, being too busy with his duties as toast-master, called on J. E. Payne to respond for him.

Mr. Payne, in a few well-chosen words, adjusted matters for Mr. Smith and then launched into some very interesting statistics relative to the achieve ments of the Monotype machine in the Gazette Division for the month of December, stating that the average amount of type per hour was 4 300 ems.

Mr. Flowers then made a statement as to the average of the Fifth Division—straight and tabular matter combined—which we fail to remember; but the figures were startling.

Messrs. Arnold, Ridings. Stretch, Morse, Holmes, Kirby, Maddox, Winchester and Outcault each spoke in happy vein, introducing the wit and humor of the evening's performance very aptly.

Charles Etchberger entertained the company with his experience as an employ of the Lanston company at a time when the machine was not as well developed as at present.

B. H. Swain read some interesting facts relating to type-setting and kindred matters which were listened to attentively.

John O'Donnoghue, after some witty remarks, drew his watch from his pocket and after consulting it said: "Tomorrow will be Sunday." In deference to his implied wishes, the banquet ceased to be. There were thirty-three at table.

Miss Anna C. Wilson was elected to membership in the Ex-Delegates Association on Sunday, January 8.

The election of chairman for the Gazette Division resulted in the unanimous choice of Miss Laura B. Gordon as guide and friend of the chapel.

E. R. French's annual report to the Union Mutual Relief Association is about the nicest piece of typewriting work imaginable. It covers about twenty-four pages, and all the tabulated statements are centered and inclosed in borders.

Scott K. Young thinks he has the type machine beat to a standstill. He made the discovery that by rubbing two type together very rapidly a third type would make its appearance. It is suggested that he "sort up" a case in that manner and publish a "spook" paper with the product.

J. B. Trudgian, chairman of the Second Division, loaned me a copy of the Glasgow Herald, a Scotch paper, and I felt amply repaid for the time spent in its perusal. The Scotch evidently have a different idea of journalism than the American. All the news, but no display or "featuring" of it—a marked contrast to the yellow journals.

The readjustment of the force to suit changed conditions has promoted the idea of photographing the different "alleys" into group pictures. Miss Sarah E. Stimpson has succeeded in producing some very nice pictures. However, last summer she thought she would like to secure a negative of the little smoked quartet which scrambled for pennies in front of the Office during lunch hour. One day, at the supposed psychical moment, she took aim with the camera and pressed the button. When the film was developed the critter resembled an octopus as much as anything else—a central blurred mass and a multitude of waving arms and legs. Too much action for the money.

Bindery Notes.

President James L. Feeney has appointed the following delegates to represent the Bookbinders Local Union, No. 4, in the Central Labor Union in this city:

P. J. Whitelaw, formerly delegate to the International conventions held at Philadelphia and Albany. Mr. Whitelaw was at one time president of No. 1, New York City.

Charles W. Nelson, ex-president of the International Bookbinders, and ex-president of No. 1, New York City.

H. E. Brattain, formerly of Local No. 53, Indianapolis, and president of that Local when appointed to the Government bindery.

Matthew Kelly, formerly of Local No. 15, of Hartford, Conn. Mr. Kelly has held every office in his Local and was president of the Central Labor Union of his city.

The new president of Bookbinders Union has selected the strongest delegation of men ever sent to the Central Labor Union of this city from their Local. They take the places of Edward J. Roche, Robert F. Frailey, William Parry, E. F. McCarthy, and James Fogerty.

The annual entertainment and dance of the Bookbinders of the G. P. O. and branch offices will be held at National Rifles, January 18.

The King of the West will be the center of attraction in the first part, with thirty other black face men.

Esterly will tell about the black bundle, and Holt will be the main squeeze on the end.

One of the funny sights lunch hour was to see Dr. Gunning shearing Sam Koockagy's whiskers.

L. F. Ludlow, of New York, made several after dinner speeches New Year's day, and is longing for the next opportunity. Do not fail to book him.

Harry Ashion made his annual address at the last meeting. There is hardly any doubt he has been preparing for his debut. His humorous attacks on the Calamity Howlers, Flambeau Orators, and Toy Actors will be long remembered by those present.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 12, 1905.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

The Typographical Journal for January is full of good things. "The Machine Operator and His Nerves," by Herbert W. Cooke, of Boston, is worth reading by every one, and especially operators. "Co-operative Printing Shops," by J. W. Sullivan, of New York, is an able review of efforts which have been made in that direction. "A Scoop on Skates" is a story which it would not be appropriate for me to comment on. "The Philadelphia Situation" sets out the state of affairs in a way that, had we had it at the last meeting of this union, would have prevented the action taken. "Note and Comment" reviews labor matters so fairly and covers the field so well as to command admiration. "What We Are Doing" shows in two pages the work which has been done in the cause which we all have at heart. "The President's Page" is in President Lynch's happiest vein, and he is one of the most forceful writers and speakers in the whole labor field. "Woman's Department" shows what the Auxiliaries are doing. "Correspondence" opens with tributes from H. H. Madden, E. M. Kerrott (well known here), and Hon. P. Shelley O'Ryan to the late William Kennedy, with which is his portrait, and letters follow from all the principal cities of the United States and Canada, so well written as to convey a correct idea of the condition of affairs everywhere. Then follows the official information so necessary to unionists. The Journal is so capably edited, is so fair and moderate in tone, as to command the respect of all union men and all who are friendly to the cause. It is a model for trade journals to study and follow. No one can find fault with it except the professional backcapper and knocker, whose gospel of hate and practice of scolding find no favor except with a class, now happily growing smaller daily, which never did anything to build up, but always labored to tear down. Under the editorship of John W. Bramwood, the Journal is growing more popular with each issue, and consequently more influential.

* * * *

The passing away of Arthur B. Proctor, for many years of the Treasury Division, but recently of Specifications, removes an old-timer from among us. He was formerly active in union matters and at one time was a candidate for delegate, his card, with his photograph thereon, labeled "Ecce homo," being well remembered. He was a genial, sociable man, with no evil traits to mar his make-up as a man. It is true that he died in St. Elizabeth Hospital, but he was not affected mentally, having been sent there for treatment for nervous troubles.

* * * *

I have been forced to compromise with Ottinger in the use of Brockwell as a source of anecdotes, and you will find in his column this week the stories that rightfully belong to me. I was the original discoverer of Brockwell as a story mine and had him all staked and the papers recorded, but Ottinger has jumped my claim. I do not yield without a contest and in future hope to give to an appreciative public many columns of his reminiscences. I shall not give up Brockwell's d'Orsay stories without a bitter struggle.

* * * *

The Inland Printer for January is fully up to the high standard which Editor A. H. McQuilkin set for it several years ago—that of being without a peer among artistic technical publications of the art of printing. To every branch of the trade and the allied arts it monthly gives lessons which none of those engaged in them can afford to be without, and artistically it is without a competitor in either hemisphere. Earl R. Baxter, of the Times, is the local agent.

* * * *

I see that Governor Adams, of Colorado, has been seated. This may prevent the bills of the mining companies for pay of the militia from being receipted.

* * * *

Another Adams, he of Pennsylvania, is pushing the bill to provide a whipping post for the Adam who lams his Eve. But he is foxy enough to have avoided any entangling alliance with any little Eva himself, and so is personally in no danger of incurring the punishment he would provide.

* * * *

Adam Bugg, too, has been getting into it. But I'll bet if Mrs. Eve Bugg were to cause his dream to come true in a measure, he would use more potent weapons than long-line poetry.

* * * *

According to the New England Printing Trades Journal, "Governor Douglas, of Massachusetts, has gone out of his way to say that the labor vote did not elect him." It is a pity that it did if he says it didn't.

* * * *

This is straight to the point, no matter who wrote it:

You may find honor among thieves, truth among liars, and wisdom among fools, but you'll never find a spark of manhood, womanhood, or principle in the make-up of the confirmed knocker. The liar may utter the truth by mistake, the thief be honest by accident, or the fool wise by chance, but the knocker will ever remain the contemptible coward that he is. Don't get into the habit of being a knocker. The habit will grow and you'll be a confirmed knocker. Be a booster. Everybody likes a booster.

* * * *

Three of the Star boys, Harry B Hickman and Frank Lillie, operators, and L. H. Whitham, machinist, inspected the Record machine plant last Saturday evening. As experts in machine printing, their commendation of the Record layout is worth having.

* * * *

Next Sunday will be the regular meeting of the Union, and in view of the fact that it is my birthday I believe it is the intention to consider the report of the Law Committee, unless the kickers decide that it is not desirable to do so. Up to date the reward of that committee for several months' hard work has been apathy, indolence, and senseless opposition on the part of the members of the Union, with mighty poor support from their friends. Let's attend next Sunday and "shuck oysters or get off the wharf."

* * * *

I have received an invitation to the twentieth annual banquet and ball of the Old-Time Printers' Association of Chicago, to take place on Tuesday evening, January 17, 1905, at the Sherman House, in honor of the birthday of Benjamin Franklin, for which compliment I am indebted to my long-time friend William Mill, secretary. As the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of Franklin will occur next year, that will probably be made an extraordinary occasion. There are enough Chicageese here to make desirable the publication of the names of those composing the executive committee, as follows: Oliver H. Perry, chairman; William Mill, secretary; Fred K. Tracy, Chas. N. Bond, M. H. Madden, James L. Regan, Fred Barnard, H. S. Street, D. J. Hynes, C. M. Moore, P. J. Cahill, P. B. Olsen, Thos. E. Sullivan, John S. Leander, A. H. McLaughlin, Samuel Rastall, James A. Bond, Nicholas Welch, A. B. Adair, John Anderson, John S. Burke, John Canty, Wm. Hack, Wm. Pigott, John W. Troy, Jos. C. Snow, James J. Schock, John McGovern, Isaac D. George, and John Gordon.

* * * *

My good friend Donath's indorsement of my suggestion of the organization of a "symposium" for business purposes, in the shape of a permanent investment of so much at each pay day, gives me courage to believe that there is something in the proposition. Admitting the desirability of the workingman owning his home, it is also very delightful to own some other fellow's home and draw down a monthly income therefrom, both of which experiences I have enjoyed. To own one's home makes him measurably independent, but he is not free to change his neighbors, as the tenant is—this by way of intimating that there are two sides to everything. With a steady income of $5,000 a year besides profits, such an association as I have in mind, with the right to take advantage of any opportunity to make money that might present itself, would in a few years have a large capital and its shares would be valuable. I wish some of our people with a talent for organization and exploitation, neither of which do I possess, would set the ball a-rolling, and, like Brother Donath, I would be glad to take a share. The individual investment each pay day would be too small to affect anyone's income and the aggregate would be large enough to accomplish results.

* * * *

Running out of machine oil the other day, I stopped in the Hammond Typewriter Agency for a supply, not desiring to go several squares out of my way to get what I have been using.

"Will Hammond oil do for Underwood typewriters?" I asked the gentlemanly attendant.

"Yis, dom thim, and it's too good for thim," he answered, as he filled my order. Thus business rivalry always shows itself.

* * * *

My information from our sick is to the effect that Joe Babcock is progressing fully as well as could be expected, though Dr. Chadwick still deems it inadvisable to admit his friends to his bedside. That from Chas. W. Pafflow is not so encouraging, and while I do not understand that he is in a precarious condition, he is a very sick man. The former is in Sibley and the latter in Georgetown University Hospital. Maj. C. A. Vaughan has so far recovered from his injury that he is able to be out and he paid a short visit to the proof room early in the week.

* * * *

If the whipping post for wife beaters and the ducking stool for scolding women—they are fellow antiques and we need the one as much as the other—are revived for the benefit of this District, married life will indeed become "one grand, sweet song." The less the law and all others interfere between man and wife, the better for the institution of marriage, which seems to fill its real mission—the propagation of the species—in inverse proportion to the degree of civilization.

* * * *

In the Washington (D. C.) TRADES UNIONIST I have been reading a breezy column or two contributed by A. F. Bloomer. I have, in my few years of trials and tribulations, seen and heard tell of Bloomers, and bloomers, of various sorts and sizes, and under ordinary circumstances could not in my declining years, pass them without stopping to take a second glance, even "for old time's sake." But in this instance I halt, read and re-read those paragraphs, and ponder. Years ago, I can't remember just how many, there came to my exchange table a sprightly little labor paper, from Toledo, Ohio, called The Industrial News, of which a man named Bloomer was editor. These paragraphs and the name bring The Industrial News to mind, and with it a number of old-time workers in the cause of humanity, most of whom have gone to the land where the Rockefellers do not enter and the Parrys cease from troubling.—Belleview (Mo.) The People's Banner.

Pleading "not guilty" to the second count in the indictment above, I only consent to the first because it would be hard to prove or disprove, and I hate disputes. My complimentary friend is himself a living monument of devotion to the cause of the workingman, publishing his paper "on Banner Farm, 2 miles west of Belleview, Mo.," and without an "ad." to lighten his financial load he toils on in the cause, with naught but 25 cents a year subscription rate for remuneration. All hail to the Will Crittenden Thorntons of labor journalism, who have undertaken that most gigantic and thankless task of trying to educate the workingman to a knowledge of what a giant he is and what a fool he is not to use his strength in his own behalf instead of being the slave of his employer and the tool of the political party into which he happened to be born. But some headway is being made, Brother Thornton. Nil desperandum!

The Masonic Disciple is agitating for a "daylight" Masonic lodge, for the benefit of night workers, and in accordance with its invitation the names of seven of the fraternity on the Post have been handed in as prospective members. There are many Masons employed at night to whom such a lodge would be a boon, as it would be to business men living in the suburbs, who do not care to come into the city at night. Masons who would like to join are invited to send their names to the Masonic Disciple, 413-415 Ninth street northwest.

I met M. C. Foss in the office of Chief Clerk H. T. Brian last Monday. He will be remembered as formerly the foreman of the Treasury Division and in other responsible positions, as well as a compositor and proofreader in the way-back, and later as a clerk in the War Department. He showed the severe illness which he has suffered for the past two years, the result of la grippe, from which we all hope for his early recovery.

It has been suggested to me that it would be the proper thing for the Record men to crowd around the paymaster's table at pay time, to the exclusion of those on other rolls, the Record being the last to be paid. I hadn't noticed it, but if it hadn't happened it wouldn't be commented on.

NEW YEAR'S DAY.

WILL M. MAUPIN.

New Year's day is "swear off" day,
And O that some would do it.
'Twould be so fine, O brother mine,
And we would never rue it.
If Standard Oil would give up spoil
And Steel would drop its grafting,
We'd shout with glee from sea to sea
And burst our buttons laughing.

If Baer would swear to treat us fair
And not with greed pursue us;
If trusts in wheat and sugar sweet
Would both no longer do us;
If all would say that from this day
'Twould be their chief endeavor
To treat us white, we'd all delight
And give them praise forever.

If trust in shoes would now refuse
To squeeze us on the prices;
If trusts in meat should now repeat
"We'll ask but decent prices."
If these would swear to treat us square
Through Nineteen-five, and after.
We'll all rejoice in loudest voice
Until we shook each rafter.

If trusts to-day would each one say,
"We'll gouge you folk no longer;
For be it known our love has grown
Each passing day much stronger."
I here repeat if these words greet
Our ears this New Year weather,
We'd all arise in great surprise,
And then drop dead together.

Ex-Delegates Association Meeting.

The first quarterly meeting of the Ex-Delegates Association of Columbia Typographical Union was held last Sunday at Typographical Temple. The meeting was fairly attended and a number of new members were received.

Owing to the plethoric condition of the treasury the dues for the year were fixed at 50 cents per capita, which was the amount formerly received for quarterly dues.

Resolutions on the death of Albert E. Ingalls (Kansas City, '88) were read and adopted, and ordered spread upon the minutes. The secretary was also directed to transmit a copy of the resolution to the relatives of the deceased.

A committee was appointed to report on the advisability of giving an entertainment in the spring.

The election of officers developed a confidence on the part of the members toward the officers in charge that the full corps were unanimously re-elected for the ensuing year. The officers are as follows: President, Z. T. Jenkins; Vice President, Dexter S. Hussey; Secretary, J. T. Herbert; Treasurer, Chas. W. Otis; Sergeant-at-Arms, H. S. Sutton.

Treasury Branch.

The bonds for this month are about completed.

T. F. McKeon has been promoted to the position of maker-up.

J. H. Wynne and John L. Sherfy, laborers, are late arrivals in this divison.

John R. Brown, who has been absent for about a week on account of sickness, is reported to be improving.

Miss Emily C. Shaw, of the press room, has the sympathy of all in the loss of her brother, who died the last of the year.

W. F. Schooler, of Maysville, Ky., formerly an employee of this division and of the main office, was a welcome visitor this week.

The following compositors were transferred here one week ago: Messrs. Frank F. S. Miller, from the First Division; David Eccles and Robert H. Miller, from the Second Division, and George A. Seaman, from the Third Division.

At the regular semi-annual meeting of the chapel held recently, there was quite a spirited contest for the chairmanship. The candidates were Fred. I. Nobles and W. Brice Coston, who has been chairman some time. It required five ballots to decide it. There were two ties—each receiving thirteen votes—and twice the vote was defective. The fifth ballot resulted in the re-election of Coston by a vote of fourteen to twelve.

After an illness of about two weeks, suffering with nervous prostration, A. B. Proctor, of this division, died January 5. He worked Christmas eve, but was not feeling at all well, and from that time on he gradually grew worse until he expired. The funeral services were held Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock at his late residence, Twelfth and M streets northwest, and were largely attended, many of his friends from the office being present. Interment was at Arlington Cemetery. The employes, as a slight token of the esteem in which he was held by them, sent a beautiful floral wreath, and as a further mark of respect, the following resolutions were adopted at a chapel meeting, held the day after his death:

Mr. Arthur B. Proctor, who died in this city on the 5th inst. at the age of sixty years, had been a discontinuous member of this chapel for some seventeen years and an employe of the Government Printing Office for twenty-five years. He was born in New York; enlisted and served with credit from that State in the civil war; was a member of George T. Meade Post, G. A. R., and several Masonic orders; and

Whereas in the death of Arthur B. Proctor the members of this chapel have lost a true and tried friend, a member devoted to the principles of unionism, and the Government a conscientious and faithful employe; therefore be it

Resolved, That we hereby extend our profound sympathy to the bereaved mother, to the son and sister, and to his many friends and comrades.

GOSSIP FROM THE G. P. O.

First Division.

Mr. Haas had a bad attack of la grippe during the week.

Frank F. S. Miller has been transferred to the Treasury Division.

George Schlosser, the watchman on this floor, has been on the sick list this week.

Not a ripple in the Slug market this week. Incident, no doubt, to the holiday season.

After an absence of several weeks, Chas. Danenhower of the "Y," reported for work on Monday.

Slug 162 carries two (2) watches. If he is not a satisfied individual then pleasant countenances don't count. C.

John Crowe, compositor, received a temporary appointment in this division on Tuesday, and was assigned to Slug 134.

Those Carlisle Indians on the G street side are in great glee since their Indian friends from the Carlisle (Pa.) school will be in the Inaugural parade.

Holy Smoke, didn't that bunch of photographers strike it rich taking snap-shots of the G. P. O. employes. And the man that "rubbered" took the best picture.

W. A. Brooks, laborer, transferred from the Bindery, is the very latest addition. He has been assigned to Mr. Spottswood's room—a running mate, as it were, for Bruce Bielaski.

Did you get your "rake-off" from the Relief Association the other evening? No; not a member. Our robust friend, Judge Holeman, did, and he has been extremely cheerful ever since.

May be our newly-elected chairman ain't busy. He was so much so on pay day that he missed Paymaster Bennett, Paying Teller Wilver, and the man with the strong box. Guess that goes with the job.

Jack Burnside says he will head a cent subscription to buy the timekeeper an Indian pony, and thereby save his rubber-heels in taking up time. How about it Colonel Bentz, or J. B. D. and his bunch?

The numerous friends of Dr. J. D. Bridger, an ex-copy editor, will be pleased to learn that he is prospering in his new field of labor. He is the medical referee of the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, and is located at Memphis, Tenn.

The tender sympathy of this division is with our bereaved fellow-workman, Mr. Peter McCallum and family, in the passing away of their darling son, Peter Alexander. A handsome floral piece was sent by the Chapel. Remember friends, He loves a shining mark.

I object. Every one of the star boarders at Lloyd's Cafe lunch, presided over by the attractive and accommodating Seventh street lady, should be compelled to drink coffee out of mugs of the same size. And don't forget to "cough up" the price or go down on the slate.

Members of the Ring Alley tell us that recent advices from our former fellow-workman, Geo. H. Ball, state that he is improving in health, and writes cheerfully of returning in the spring. He is engaged in out-door work in the forests of Maine, and the thermometer about twenty degrees below zero. Let us all hope he will return.

James R. Harper is among the latest acquisitions to our division. "Jimmie" resigned November 21, 1904, from the Second Division, and January 4, 1905, was reinstated. He has a window frame on our side of the room and is assigned to Slug 34. The comparative ease with which so many of my acquaintances became "quitters" and then get reinstated is what we don't understand. I'll venture the assertion that if we attempt the resigning act we couldn't get back.

This division, represented not only by the figure 1, but by the first letter of the alphabet—A—is strictly it; i. e., we are the source or fountain-head. Then, too, we not only lay claim to, but have the Supply Division on the North Capitol street front, within a short distance of the plaza of the contemplated new Union Station. Then, at the other end, going towards the White House, we have two busy bunches under the management of the two L's (Leavitt and Lesher) and the entire division in charge of Mr. A. W. Bowen.

"In the midst of life we are in death" was most forcibly impressed upon us all a few mornings since, by the sudden death of an employe of the Foundry while on his way to work. He was on the elevator when stricken, and when the sixth (our) floor was reached, gentle hands tenderly carried him to the corridor, but the white angel had summoned him, and within ten minutes thereafter his spirit had fled. Heart disease was assigned as the cause of death, and his age about fifty-five years. We understand he was a comparatively new man, having been employed in the office about two weeks.

No doubt all the older employes of this division were well acquainted with the late Arthur B. Proctor, who passed away suddenly after a brief illness, on the 5th inst. The deceased was a most companionable gentleman, and had been employed in the G. P. O. and its branches for fully a quarter of a century. He was a member of the Treasury Division Chapel at the time of his death; was closely identified with the Masonic fraternity, and was also a member of G. P. O. Council, No. 211, of the National Union, having carried a policy of $1,000 for the benefit of his son. He was in his sixtieth year, and is survived by his aged mother and son, his wife having died many years since. He was also a veteran of the Civil War and belonged to the Meade Post of the Grand Army of the Republic.

GOODKEY.

"With voice and mien of stern control
He stood among the great and proud,
And words of fire burst from his soul
Like lightning from the thunder cloud!"

Mr. Goodkey is now in the saddle.

"Give you five minutes to take out!" said the chairman. No sooner said than done.

John A. Rastall, who has worked for a few weeks past on frame 135, was transferred to the main proof room Monday, January 9.

George A. Seaman was transferred January 5 from frame 134 to the Treasury Branch. We wish him prosperity wherever he may go.

The sensational poses of some of the subjects of those flash-light photographs have been the talk of the division for the past week.

With a chairman who devotes a large portion of his time giving out "divvies" and providing "phat" pick-ups for the men, life is an endless round of pleasure.

On behalf of a large number of my fellow-workmen, I would respectfully ask the Public Printer the following burning question: Why can we not be paid off Saturday instead of Monday?

All who have every been on the temporary list have been taking considerable interest the past few days in the bill lately presented to Congress, providing for leave money for temporary employes. In my opinion a temporary man is just as much entitled to leave at the Government's expense as is a permanent man, and I hope the bill will pass.

Talking about photographs, I heard Folioman Dillman accused of "butting in" one. It seems the picture man had arranged to "take" Messrs. Lawson, Sherman, Lenhart, and Warner. When the proof was submitted it was found that the camera had been pointed directly through the aperture at which we get our copy, and that Dillman, who was seated at his frame distributing, was directly in the line of fire; consequently his face, which was not intended to be included in the group, loomed up strongly in the background.

It is hardly conceivable that any man in his sober senses could deliberately speak in the slighting—not to say insulting—manner used by the editor and one of the contributors to the Typographical Journal in referring to the President of the United States. I surely expected better things of Mr. Bramwood. The Journal usually does him much credit, and it is strange that he should have gone out of his way to sneer at Mr. Roosevelt. As for James Monroe Kreiter, one has only to listen to his bellowing to get a pretty accurate idea of his capabilities. Let no one be carried away by the drivel he puts forth. It is unworthy of a real man.

Meeting of Woman's Auxiliary.

The regular meeting of Woman's Auxiliary, No. 13, will be held Monday evening, January 16, at Typographical Temple. In addition to the regular business, the newly elected officers will be installed. A report is expected from the committee appointed at the December meeting to look into the advisability of holding a label bazaar.

Every member is invited to be present and make the first meeting of the new year a successful one.

A letter has been received from Charles Deacon, superintendent of the Union Printers Home, acknowledging the receipt of the Christmas gifts for members of Columbia Typographical Union at the Home, and stating that they were much pleased to be remembered by the Auxiliary.

Governor Higgins called at the White House the other day and later denied that he had discussed politics with the President. Possibly the popular topic there now is the latest design in neckties.

Two weeks ago I printed the story of a deal in mackerel by the Hon. John Nichols, of Raleigh, N. C., who was elected to Congress in 1886. Contrary to the usual custom of public men of denying and repudiating interviews and yarns, the old gentleman "acknowledges the corn" in the following very interesting letter to Bill Brockwell, in which he relates another little experience:

RALEIGH, N. C., January 7, 1905.

W. N. BROCKWELL, Esq.

MY DEAR SIR: That was a very good little story you got off on me, and it was substantially correct. The incident was at Selma, Johnston County, and the fish were North Carolina mullets, or, as we sometimes call them, New River mullets, and were put up in kegs and not barrels. As a friend of mine afterwards remarked: "Them fish did the work," for my vote at that place was very largely increased over the former vote of the party.

At the time I was a candidate Mr. Cleveland was President, and all the revenue officers were Democrats. About that time about all the offices either party got was the revenue offices, and of course if the Republicans were in office the Democrats wanted to get them out, and vice versa. As stated, at the time named Mr. Cleveland was President, and of course all the storekeepers, "gougers," and deputy collectors were Democrats. Like all the Republicans, I wanted to see the Democrats out, and about the only way I could see at that time to get them out was to repeal the internal-revenue laws. Consequently I took that position. My opponent thought otherwise, as did the Democrats generally.

It was in Chatham County, at a rural precinct, I was making what I thought a great speech, and was especially severe on the internal-revenue laws. Just in front of me I noticed about half a dozen men, talking earnestly and evidently not pleased at what I was saying. They seemed restless, and finally one of them arose and asked:

"May I ask the gentleman a question?"

"Certainly," I replied.

"Well, sir, I want to know if you, a moral man, a temperance man, favor free whisky?"

It was a poser, and for a moment I hesitated. Then with all the earnestness and dignity I could command I said:

"Sir, are you a Democrat?"

"I am, sir, and I am proud of it, too."

Then I said: "Sir, did you ever see a Democrat who was opposed to free whisky?"

The whole crowd, Democrats and Republicans, heartily cheered, and my interrogator turned and left the place. I have seen my friend since, and we have had many a hearty laugh over the incident. It was one of those times when one had to think, and think quickly.

* * * * * * * * *

I started to write "a few lines only," and here I am at the end of the fourth page.

Truly yours,

JOHN NICHOLS.

This is another Brockwell story, and I'm going to tell it if it kills Pard Bloomer:

About fifteen years ago the wild wintry winds wafted to the portals of the capital a verdant youth from one of the backwoods counties of North Carolina. He had never invaded a city of any size before, and as soon as he struck Washington his education began. He had just one lone friend in this town, and that particular individual immediately side-stepped the job of showing his country cousin around town and, being a foxy boy, introduced the Rube to Bill Brockwell and then pulled his freight. Brocky was unmarried at that time, and having plenty of time on his hands he started in to show Reuben the elephant and a few of the minor animals that are permitted to roam at large during sessions of Congress. Everything was new to the boy from the woods, and he appreciated the attention being shown him, although he was so verdant that even his footprints were green.

It so happened that Congress held several night sessions about that time, and Brockwell thought he would add a few trimmings to the education of his new friend by taking him up to the Capitol and pointing out all the celebrities of the day. They secured a front seat in the Senate gallery, and for an hour Bill was busy pointing out well-known people and answering the questions of his companion, who was a Republican and a bitter partisan.

"That," Bill would say, for instance, "is Senator Blank, of Pennsyltucky."

"What's his politics?" would be the invariable query.

Brockwell had pointed out all the people he knew by sight, including Senators Blackburn, Hoar, Ransom, Ingalls, Vance, Vest, and a number of other leading lights of that time, and had explained that it was customary for the Democrats to be seated on one side of the Chamber and the Republicans on the other. He had about exhausted his fund of information and was becoming interested in the remarks of one of the learned Solons on the floor when he suddenly felt his arm gripped as in a vise. His friend's hair was on end and his eyes had a wild, glassy glare.

Pointing a shaking finger at a couple of men on the Republican side who were conversing in a friendly manner, he asked in a hoarse whisper: "Who is that man?"

"Why, that is Senator Hoar."

"No, no. The other one."

"That is Senator Ransom, of North Carolina."

"Didn't you just tell me that he is a Democrat?"

"Yes, and so he is."

"Then"—here he elevated his voice just as a profound silence fell on the Senate—"then why in the blue hell don't they make him stay on his side of the room?"

Here's another one, and I'll tell it if it turns Pard Bloomer green with envy:

This on the Hon. Tim Campbell, the successor in Congress of Sunset Cox and the author of the now famous saying: "Mr. President, what is the Constitution between friends?" It seems that Campbell and S. J. Triplett had made a bet on the date that Congress would adjourn. The loser was to pay for a dinner for five people, and Triplett was never known to be anything but a loser, so the printer Congressman from the "Ate N'York" had a cinch.

Shortly after the adjournment Brocky met Campbell and remarked:

"Well, Judge, I see you won that bet all right."

"Yes, Brockwell," replied Campbell in disgust, "I won the bet all right, but now I'll need a search warrant, a fine-tooth comb, and a drag-net to find Triplett, and by that time I'll sure have an elegant appetite."

Brightwood Notes.

Last Saturday evening a musicale was given at the Brightwood Chemical Engine House under the direction of T. Sarsfield O'Hara Ryan, a member of the company, and Mr. Kavanaugh. Several selections were given on the phonograph by Mr. Kavanaugh.

Katharine Hayes, an understudy to the leading lady in the Liberty Bells company, paid a visit to her home at "The Oasis," last week. Miss Hayes is very bright and popular, and is making a hit in her new role.

A Neat Calendar.

This office is indebted to James H. Irwin, of the Government Printing Office, for a souvenir calendar of Washington for 1905. To lovers of good and artistic color work this series of views of Washington is a treat. Mr. Irwin has been the local agent for distribution to news dealers and stationers of this calendar for several years. It can be found on sale at all first class news stands or from Mr. Irwin.

This calendar makes a suitable gift to relatives or friends out of the city. The price of the calendar is 50 cents.

NAVY YARD ITEMS.

The Secretary of the Navy has appointed a special board, with Rear Admiral J. E. Craig as president, to consider and report upon proposed rules to govern steamboat-inspection service.

I had hoped to have some news relative to the pay question for the ensuing year, but as the wage committee has the matter still under advisement my report will have to be deferred for the present.

The following named persons have been appointed warrant machinists in the Navy: O. B. Kibelle, H. E. Fish, G. Growney, W. S. Falk, R. Bowie, J. J. Cullen, H. J. Wiseman, J. P. Richter, J. Sanders, G. Pearry, J. R. Burkhart, and J. R. Likens.

Columbia Lodge, No. 174, on Wednesday night installed the newly elected officers. President Adams filled the chair so perfectly it was suggested that the chair was fitted to him. We look forward to a year of hustle and perfect organization under Brother Adams.

The following named persons have successfully passed their examination, and have been appointed chief warrant machinist mates: A. P. McCarthy, T. W. Smith, B. Christenson, D. F. Anderson, L. R. Ford, J. Merget, R. L. Drake, A. H. Hawley, T. R. Filter, G. W. Byrne, and H. Lobitz.

In looking over my "scrap book," I find the following recipes, which may be of interest to some of the readers of THE TRADES UNIONIST: For preserving the complexion, temperance; for whitening the hands, honesty; to remove stains, repentance; for improving the sight, observation; a beautiful ring, the home circle; the best companion for the toiler, a good wife; a moth killer, good society.

I acknowledge the many encouraging words from one of the correspondents and will place them in my "scrap book" for dark days and hours of discouragement. They touch my heart tenderly and quicken my pulse and nerve me to still greater efforts in the field of usefulness. I recognize that a helping hand—a good adviser, to one in trouble is often like a switch on a railroad track saving you from destruction. Many men who delight in criticising their less fortunate brother scribes who are so unfortunate as not to be printers, carry their convictions like a drawn sword, cutting this way and that way as they deem best, but sheathe and keep them "very soft and pliable" when it is turned within.

UNION STORE.

Organized Labor has awakened to the fact that there is not in this city a gentlemen's furnishing store devoted exclusively to the sale of union-made goods. It is now proposed to establish such a store, where none but goods bearing the union label will be sold.

To this end a company has been organized under the laws of the District of Columbia, and will be capitalized at $50,000. All goods will be bought for cash and sold for cash. All clerks will be members of the union and union hours will be observed.

The company will be known as The Union Outfitters to Men Company, and will be so incorporated. The trustees for the first year are: H. W. Sherman, E. L. Adams, J. G. Schmidt, G. W. Price, and C. A. Pfau. The shares are $5 and can be obtained from either of these gentlemen. It is to be hoped that union men will not only subscribe to the stock, but use every endeavor to have the public who favor union principles procure all their supplies from this co-operative store.

The place and time for opening this store will be noted later through THE TRADES UNIONIST.

ON THE UNITY OF MANKIND.

My ministerial brother, who some time ago questioned my "Sunny Jim" disposition, has again sought to perplex me by addressing two queries:

1. Which principle or rule of conduct would be best for the "unity of mankind, now they are so much at variance, to try to take the advantage of each other, or to give, each to the other?

2. What book is the most important in the family library?

Space will not permit me to answer both questions in one issue; therefore I take up his first question, leaving the second for future consideration.

We have discovered that in the last few years that a new commandment has been added to the original ten, viz: Do the other fellow before he does you. This seems to be the commandment that is now most predominant—from a worldly view. But as my brother deals only in spiritual forms I will endeavor to fall gracefully into his environment and govern myself accordingly. We are told in the Scriptures that "in the world offenses must come," and we may look for offenses every day. We must not be surprised at them, for they are inseparable from our present state of being. If we discern a fault in some individual with whom we are connected or with whom we do business, let us recollect that we must look to another clime for men without faults. We would do well to inquire whether the man of one fault has no virtues, and if he has to look rather on the bright than on the dark side of his character. If we set ourselves to work at finding flaws in our neighbor's characters we no doubt will be successful, and will find continued cause for irritation and unpleasantness. If on the other hand we take pleasure in recounting their good deeds and dwelling upon their more amiable propensities we will live in a region of perpetual sunshine. Let us also remember that there is no one of us who has not some fault himself, and if we were taken to task or hated for our own peculiar failings by every one who chances to know us we would not have a friend left. A friend must bear with a friend's infirmities, and it is no less our duty to bear with the infirmities of all with whom we come in contact. Unless we are determined to be always in a state of excitement this must be our course, for we shall find no one in whom some fault is not discoverable. He is unfit for society whose temper is soured by every deviation from the path of strict rectitude which he sees. He becomes faulty himself and a source of annoyance to every one around him. No man was ordained to be the censor and judge of his fellow creatures, being himself fallible and dependent on the same Creator for strength to resist the temptations which surround him.

When we imagine that some person has given us offense let us study ourselves and see if we have never given offense greater than he; nay, whether we do not daily give offense to one person or another, and if this proves true, let us, as we expect forgiveness ourselves, stand ready to forgive others. This, in our opinion, would put an end to many of the heartburnings and envyings which now disturb the harmony of mankind.

Truly with the poet we can say:

Friendship's a balm for every wound,
For every grief a cure;
It makes our cup of life seem sweet,
Though troubles we endure.

TIM TICKLE.

Sixth Division.

Next Sunday is Union meeting.

The grand rush is now on in earnest.

Walter V. Smith has been confined to his room for the past few days on account of illness.

"Pard" Bloomer's dislike for poetry is not occasioned by sour apples. It's a case of sour grapes.

Members of the G. P. O. Mutual Relief Association may hereafter pay their monthly dues to Timekeeper C. W. Radley.

W. T. Hall suffered from an attack of acute indigestion on Sunday night. Twice during the night the services of a physician were required to keep Billy on this side of the paddock.

Louis Feldman, laborer, of this division, was married on Sunday evening to a Miss Goldstein, of this city. The ceremony and incidental festivities took place in Spanish War Veterans' Hall.

Foreman Milo Shanks' recent dream that the printing office employes were all turkeys is not at all inappropriate. There are enough "lame ducks" about the office to entitle it to a place in the poultry class.

All the men operating the Lanston keyboards on the Gazette were treated to a trip to the theater and a supper by the Lanston company on Saturday night last. The lady operators will be given a similar treat later. Mr. Mergenthaler, its up to you.

That the Misses Julia Burke and May White are not forgotten by their former co-workers on the Spess is clearly evidenced by the large number of callers from that division who make the noon pilgrimage to this room to pay their respects to these young ladies.

Vincent Howard, of this room, contributed a beautiful little poem to THE TRADES UNIONIST last week. Mr. Howard is not a novice at the literary business, having in the past contributed much, both in prose and poetry, to standard magazines throughout the country.

E. E. Richards, of this division, is an amateur photographer of marked ability. His views of the Capitol and other places taken recently during the heavy snow storm are works of art. Compared with those purchased from professionals recently, I should say patronize home industry.

The delivery of the interior view pictures recently taken of this room took place this week. The finish of the pictures resembles the work of rank amateurs, and most of those who took them did so in order to fulfill their obligation, at the same time feeling that they had been buncoed.

Last week I received a copy of The Trades Unionist News, of Philadelphia, of which Shelby Smith is one of the managers. The paper contains a two-column review of the Miller case by a Yale law student. After carefully reviewing all the fine points connected therewith, the young legal light reached the conclusion that Miller is still employed.

So many people have asked me how Jimmie Weaver is getting along in this room that I feel called upon to say something. James has done two or three stunts at the heavy end of a truck to the satisfaction of all. As an operator he is picking up all the time—picking up mats from the floor. However, as he is still young at the business, its easy money that he will yet develop into a swift.

Senate Doc. No. 60, showing the amount due employes of the Government Printing Office for unused leave of absence was issued last week. Among those having large amounts due them are Vincent Howard and John H. Hooper, of this room. The amount due the writer is something less than $100, but it will at least buy a couple of good cigars, and I hope somebody will hurry up and send a check.

From the large number of favorable comments I have heard expressed over the scheme proposed by August Donath last week, I am sure several in this room can be found willing to subscribe to such an enterprise. Mr. Donath is a man thoroughly familiar with the realty conditions in Washington, and his love for the printer so well known that the stamp of confidence goes with any suggestion he may offer.

THE TRADES UNIONIST.

OFFICIAL ORGAN CENTRAL LABOR UNION, WASHINGTON BRANCH, AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

Vol. IX. No. 32. WASHINGTON, D. C., THURSDAY, JANUARY 19, 1905. Price, 3 Cents.

THE CENTRAL LABOR UNION

John H. Brinkman Resigns as Delegate From Carriage Workers.

A SHORT BUSINESS MEETING

Columbia Typographical Union Indorses Action of Central Body in Academy of Music Case—Hod Carriers Grievance Against A. B. Stannard.

The regular weekly meeting of the Central Labor Union was called to order at 8 p. m. on Monday evening.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read, and, after correction, were approved.

CREDENTIALS.

Teamsters, No. 430: W. Chism, N. Carneill, George Murray, Walter Donaldson, and N. Glug.

Electrical Workers, No. 148: W. J. Fish, F. B. Sweeney, R. F. Lafourcade, G. H. Daddysman, and H. J. Wright.

Engineers, No. 77: Edward Moriarity, James Lahey, Fred Day, Swan Magnuson, and Ora Thompson.

Plate Engravers: H. H. McKeever, L. B. Diggins, C. K. Young, G. G. Kundahl, and T. S. Brock.

Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen, No. 148: M. Hellmuth, C. F. West, George Bakersmith, Edward Masters, and Frank Beuchert.

Carriage and Wagon Workers, No. 72: Chas. B. Wandel, vice John H. Brinkman, resigned.

Tile Layers and Helpers, No. 12: S. Beckett, N. Bailey, F. Highman, A. Hageman, and C. Huntington.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Columbia Typographical Union stating that a fine of $5 would be imposed on any of its members found patronizing the Academy of Music. Also that the Grievance Committee of that Union had visited the establishment of M. F. Dorsey, 1213 Seventh street northwest, and found that the establishment was thoroughly union. A communication written by Mr. Dorsey to accompany the report was ordered to be sent to Bartenders League.

From American Society of Plate Engravers, indorsing action of Central Labor Union in Woodward & Lothrop case. Placed on file.

From Carriage and Wagon Workers Union, No. 72, stating that the Union accepted with regret the resignation of John H. Brinkman as a delegate to the Central Labor Union, and that it was Mr. Brinkman's intention to take ont a withdrawal card from Carriage and Wagon Workers Union in order to apply himself to his business, which he has neglected in the interest of organized labor since his advent in the business world. The Union paid a high tribute to Mr. Brinkman for his services to his Union and the cause of organized labor in this city. Received and placed on file.

From Hod Carriers Union, No. 21, asking that A. B. Stannard be placed on the unfair list. Referred to Grievance Committee.

E. J. Roche, chairman of the Legislative Committee, made a report on the several labor bills pending in Congress, which showed a gratifying result, and bright hopes of passage at this session. The report was accepted.

Barbers called attention to their Union shop card, and requested that all union men patronize only shops displaying this card.

Delegate Sherman called attention to the new union store, which will soon open for business with exclusively union label goods. He asked that all members interested should endeavor to subscribe to stock in the new company.

Adjourned.

Pointed Paragraphs.

From the Chicago News.

Failure is the one thing that is spoiled by success.

The strenuous man often wins a victory that isn't worth the effort

Don't think that because men ask you for advice they really want it.

You may whitewash a man's character, but you can't wash it white.

When some men fail to make a hit they try to blame it on the hammer.

Hit Out From The Shoulder.

WILLIAM TIPTON TALBOTT

In the future trust, boy,
Let the dead past moulder.
For to-day you must, boy,
Hit out from the shoulder.

Up the heights of truth, boy,
Mounting ever bolder,
Cling to dreams of youth, boy,
Nor let faith grow colder.

And keep up the fight, boy,
Growing wisely older;
Hit out for the right, boy—
Hit out from the shoulder.

Satan still is strong, boy,
And with gifts of gold, or
Lies to garnish wrong, boy,
Hits out from the shoulder.

By youth's promise, then, boy,
And the hopes that smoulder
In the hearts of men, boy,
Hit out from the shoulder.

NAVY YARD ITEMS.

Col. Joseph H. Lawrence, the venerable master mechanic of the Gun Shop, is back to work after a severe attack of la grippe. While we recognize the fact that the Colonel passed over the summit many years ago we hope that it will be many years before the Supreme Architect calls him to the unknown where wars and guns are no more.

The Naval Gun Factory Band, at their last meeting, resolved to reorganize by electing Professor Joyce as director in place of Professor Stanley, whom they retired. For some time harmony has not been the watchword with the members of the band. Dissention arose to such an extent that it threatened at one time a complete disruption. On the one hand Professor Stanley claimed that just recognition was not given to his orders as instructor; on the other side the claim was set forth that the director was dictatorial in his manner. Be it as it may, a reorganization has taken place, and Professor Joyce will now lead the band to glory. As I am friendly with all the members, including both professors, it would not be proper for me to take part in the controversy except to write the facts. It is nevertheless true that it is but the irony of fate. You build your house to be occupied by another. It was the master mind of Professor Stanley that conceived the formation and so thoroughly carried into execution a band of musicians who are employed in the Gun Factory. It seems almost cruel that just at the time when the band had become a perfect body of musicians that he, like Moses, was not permitted to officially live to see the promised land. Discouragements of this kind are not calculated to inspire one to build up an institution to be presided over by another as soon as the building is finished. Professor Joyce is well known in musical circles and is considered one of the best cornet solo performers in the country. It is to be hoped that under his direction the band will push on and upward until they reach the zenith of their ambition.

Columbia Lodge, on last Wednesday evening, had as their guest a brother machinist, one who always carries his union traveling card. I refer to the Hon. Wm. J. Wynn, Representative in Congress from California. In an eloquent address he tendered his sincere thanks to Columbia Lodge, No. 174, for the unsolicited but welcome indorsement given to him in the last campaign. Brother Wynn will become a private citizen after the 4th of March next, and will engage in business in San Francisco. The best wishes of Columbia Lodge will follow him, as one who, though elevated to public life, never forgot his creator—his Lodge of Machinists. I wish there were more like Brother Wynn.

W. H. Leonard, representing the Western Federation of Miners, appeared before Columbia Lodge, and delivered an eloquent address and an appeal for funds to assist the miners, their wives, and children, who have suffered in Colorado. His story of the sufferings of those poor people by the cruel Peabody and his bloodthirsty Adjutant-General, Bell, for no other reason except they were union men, was pathetic indeed. The recital of some of the atrocities practiced by the militia upon innocent women and enfeebled old men preclude publication. Columbia Lodge has her heart always open and never forgets to bestow her charity on deserving claimants. A handsome check will be forwarded.

It is a Scriptural saying, "Ask and you shall receive, knock and the door shall be opened unto you." In my last letter I asked some admirer to kindly supply me with a copy of "The Jefferson Bible." Some friend answered promptly, and I now have in my library a remembrance of the Father of Democracy. Thanks to the sender.

OBITUARY.

I wish as a Marylander to record in THE TRADES UNIONIST a tribute of unfeigned love and esteem to the memory of ex-Governor Lloyd Lowndes, who ended an honorable, useful Christian life on the morning of January 8. He was one of the excellent of the earth, true to all the relations of husband, father, son, brother, friend, and citizen, whose quiet and unobtrusive manners, active industry, and stern integrity were characteristics worthy of imitation. In the service he gave to his State for several years "he could always be depended on," having no sympathy with the shifting politician, but took principle—his well-grounded ideas of right as his guide. As a citizen he was one of those who seek to do good and to be useful in a good and quiet way. As a husband and father his praise is best in the heart, difficult to be expressed in words, fidelity based on the deepest affection, which affection derived a constant and generous warmth from "home piety. Best of all, his memory will be ever cherished by those who earn their bread by toil as one who was ready under all circumstances to fight under the banner of the Brotherhood of Man. May the memory of the just be blessed to the spiritual good of all who knew him and may the God of all comfort impart into the bereaved relatives those censolations which are for strength to the weak heart in the time of sorrow.

TIM TICKLE.

COLUMBIA UNION MEETING

Philadelphia Union Indorsed in Its Position on Referendum.

W. H. LEONARD MAKES ADDRESS

Academy of Music Declared Unfair—Stirring Appeal to Aid Western Federation of Miners—Report of Laws Committee to Be Considered Next Sunday.

The regular monthly meeting of Columbia Typographical Union was called to order at 2.30 p. m. on Sunday by President Berg.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

Traveling cards received since the last meeting were read and accepted.

The Nominations Committee made the following favorable recommendations:

William Sullivan, for reinstatement.

John W. Boteler, R. A. Merrow, John F. Newton, for membership.

Glendour Medairy, sr., to be placed on the superannuated roll.

The recommendations of the committee were concurred in.

An application of Miss A. I. Hurley, she was permitted to withdraw same by her own request.

On application of W. W. Nyman, the committee reported that he was rejected by Hagerstown (Md) Union last December, and recommended that law be enforced without prejudice to the applicant, as committee is of opinion that an injustice has been done Mr. Nyman by the Hagerstown Union.

Favorable ballots being cast for candidates reported by the committee, they were duly elected, and those present obligated.

Bills amounting to $44 were read and ordered paid.

COMMUNICATIONS.

A communication was read from Philadelphia Union, No. 2, thanking this Union for favorable action on appeal to Executive Council. Placed on file.

A communication was received from Charles Deacon, superintendent of Union Printers' Home, thanking Columbia Union on behalf of resident members of this Union for Christmas remembrance. Placed on file.

Communication from Executive Council of the I. T. U., declaring appeal of Philadelphia Union to submit question of financial assistance illegal, and stating position of Council in regard to same. Placed on file.

Communication from Philadelphia Union replying to communication of Executive Council, and asking reindorsement of petition. Placed on file.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

The Business Committee presented a report from the Globe chapel on a construction of compensation to be paid on holidays and Sundays.

The committee having reported that the scale for overtime on holidays was double price, the report of the committee was concurred in.

The Grievance Committee reported on the placing of the Academy of Music on the unfair list and recommend the placing of a fine of $5 on any member patronizing that theater. The report was concurred in.

The committee also reported that they had investigated the case of M. F. Dorsey, saloonkeeper, 1213 Seventh street northwest, and found that his establishment was fair. They recommended that a communication bearing on the subject from Mr. Dorsey be referred to the Central Labor Union and the Bartenders League. Report of committee concurred in.

At this stage of the proceedings the privilege of the floor was given to W. H. Leonard, a representative of the Western Federation of Miners, who told of conditions in the Colorado mines and smelters, and the struggle against the great corporations who are trying to crush unionism there. Mr. Leonard was heard with rapt attention and closed with an eloquent appeal for aid. On motion, a committee was appointed to take up a subscription for relief of the miners.

Mr. Everett, for Board of Trustees, reported that it would be inadvisable to seal up the windows in the rear of the hall, as recommended, but stated that dark curtains would be placed on the windows in the rear.

Mr. Everett, from the Board of Trustees, moved that the sum of $50 for janitor and $10 for assistant janitor be allowed from funds in hands of the Trustees. Mr. Everett explained that the amount appropriated is considered for one month's leave, and that at this time the janitor has urgent need for money, owing to death in his family. The appropriation was allowed.

F. C. Roberts moved that the Union meet Sunday, January 22, for further consideration of report of Committee on Laws. Agreed to.

Mr. Hall, from Allied Printing Trades Council, reported that the Inaugural printing had been given to a Union office.

Mr. Vaughan, from committee appointed to confer with Typothetae on compiling shop rules, reported no action, and asked for the discharge of the committee. Agreed to.

The President reported three deaths since last meeting, and reported progress on question of joint publication with the Pressmen and Bookbinders Unions of list of free publications for the people.

The Secretary reported an additional sum of $12 10 collected for Textile Workers of Massachusetts.

On motion, the action of the Union in indorsing appeal of Philadelphia Union at last meeting was reconsidered. After several addresses by members present, and J. L. Rodier, of Philadelphia, the Union, by a unanimous vote, reaffirmed its action of previous meeting.

The following resolutions were then adopted:

Resolved, That it is the sense of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, that a proper construction of Section 3, Art. XVII, I. T. U. Constitution, requires the Executive Council to submit to a referendum vote the proposition of Philadelphia Typograpical Union, No. 2, when such submission is petitioned for by fifty subordinate unions.

Resolved, That it is the sense of this Union that the I. T. U. Executive Council should extend to Philadelphia Union, No. 2, all financial assistance within its power.

Resolved, That the cessation of active work in Philadelphia would be a menace to our own interests, and that it is our belief that I. T. U. funds could not be expended to better advantage.

Adjourned.

Bookbinders Entertainment.

The tenth annual entertainment of Bookbinders Union, No. 4, was held at National Rifles' Armory Hall, Wednesday evening. Over twelve hundred people were present and enjoyed a performance that was replete with good singing and wit and repartee.

The hall was beautifully decorated with palms and ferns, while the music furnished by Professor McCarthy was of a high order of excellence.

The performance opened with the Bookbinders Minstrels, Bernard Spellbring being interlocuter, J. Irwin Esterly and William Holt, bones, while George S. Warren and Luke L. Ludlow were tambos. The solo parts were supported by a chorus of twenty-four voices, Harry F. Smith, musical director.

The minstrel show was productive of much merriment, many local hits being made at the expense of friends in the audience.

In the second part Jos. P. Cullen and J. D. McCauley rendered banjo selections, while George H O'Connor made a hit with J. L Feeney's new song, "Take Your Hat Off to Casey." Margaret Ellwood gave a song and dance sketch; Henry Heinhold rendered an impersonation of the "German Senator;" Otto Hammerbacher played Eberle's "Eine Susse Erinnering," and Harry W. Figg and Daniel Hickey done some fine sketch drawing.

At the conclusion of the entertainment dancing was indulged in until a late hour.

Try oyster pan roast, 10c. Ladies, Dining Room. R. A. Driscoll, North Capitol and G street.

Attention!

A few permanent boarders can get good board cheap; light, warm rooms; steam heat; porcelain bath on each floor; always plenty of hot water. 318 C street northwest. F2

ALLIED BUILDING TRADES.

The Reorganized Building Trades Section Elect Officers.

The Council of Allied Building Trades, as reorganized, met last Tuesday evening and elected officers for the ensuing year.

The organization as now constituted represents the great majority of building trades in the city, and it will be

EDWARD NOTHNAGEL,
President Council of Allied Building Trades.

only a question of a few months when it will comprise practically all the building trades in the city.

In President Nothnagel and Secretary Daly the Council have two executive officers that command the respect of all the organizations represented, and men of integrity and good judgment.

The officers elected for the ensuing six months are as follows:

President, Edward Nothnagel.
Vice-President, Nicholas Hart.
Secretary-Treasurer, J. A. Daly.
Sergeant-at-Arms, Moses Peyton.
Trustees: C. W. Winslow, Thos. F. Ryan, and E. J. Ratigan.

CYCLE.

FORWARD MARCH!

Love on.
The world needs your love,
Where coldness is the fashion;
Where honor's voice is stilled by gold,
Where lives are empty, hearts are cold,
Where all things can be bought and sold
Earth needs your noblest passion.

Hope on.
The world needs your hope,
It is the angels lyre;
Hope gives one glimpse of paradise,
And sweeps the clouds from storm-tos't skies,
While Hope endures, youth never dies—
'Tis God's celestial fire.

Lift on.
The world needs your lift,
And needs you every hour;
It needs your aid to crush the wrong,
Your voice to help the strong keep strong,
Your hand to push the good along;
It needs your will and power.

Sing on.
The world needs your song,
Its music and its motion;
Your note will help to fill the theme,
Your voice work out the Master's scheme,
Of heaven you will catch the gleam,
And rapture be your potion.

Fight on.
The world needs your fight,
Your name and fame and glory;
Stand thou apart in Life's great mart,
Endure the lash, and bear the smart,
And know that thou hast done thy part,
Like him, on Nebo hoary.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

From a very good friend I received the following a few days ago:

PARD BLOOMER: Having entered the realm of polemical discussion and having been exalted to the rank of "Rev." by one of your admiring correspondents, and having demonstrated that Hades is non-existent and Heaven a myth, please turn your virile mind to the elucidation of the much-controverted question as to the "first" and "seventh" day of the Biblical week—Julian and Cæsar not to be consulted.

Also, please cease repetition of "Brocky's" jokes (?) and the date of d'Orsay's "conversion."

It isn't much that my friend asks me to do—to cudgel my mind for reasons for certain conditions of affairs, and to refrain from repeating the stories of a celebrity, which involves nothing more than remembering what he said. But I study to please.

In my own study of the Scriptures and of theology in general I have never been able to find any good reason for the substitution of the first day of the week for the seventh as the Sabbath, and still less reason for designating Sunday as the Sabbath, which is the Jewish name for their day devoted to the worship and service of God, which is Saturday. I can only account for the change of day as an exercise of the eminently human desire to do something different from what had been done, and when the Mohammedans went into the religion-making business they chose still another day—namely, Friday. In fact, it is said that there is no day in the week that is not "Sunday" somewhere in the world, and that in heaven every day is Sunday. The Christian Sabbath is the day of the week on which our Saviour rose from the dead, and according to my arithmetic ought to be Monday, if He was crucified on Friday and rose on the third day. But all that has been chewed over a thousand times, and only serves to inflame the bigots who say: "What I believe is true and that only, and if you don't believe everything that I do and see everything as I do, you are a hell-hound infidel."

It is a misfortune and a blessing that the wording of the Bible is such that nearly a hundred religions are based on it—a misfortune, because the man who attempts to apply his own thinker doesn't know which one to choose, and a blessing, because if only one religion could be based on it we would have but one, and the country of but one religious faith is always intolerant, bigoted, and persistent in the persecution of the "infidel." I often fear that even heaven will not be able to reconcile these religious differences, for, arriving there and finding their Sunday the Sabbath (as every day is in heaven), that fact will be claimed by each as proof of the correctness of the faith of their particular cult.

The establishment of the Sabbath was by the Almighty for His own recreation and repose after six days' hard work in creating the world. In that connection, in the work of the good people who are striving to make the words of the Biblical account of the Creation agree with the indisputable revelations of geology by figuring that a "day" meant a vast geological period, I have seen no disposition to correspondingly stretch the seventh day, on which He rested. But this is unimportant; as our workdays do not equal His in length on this hypothesis, neither can we expect our Sundays to do so.

The first three or four centuries of the Christian religion are so obscured by the mists of that darkest period in the later world's history that much must be taken on trust, and I have never seen any clearer reason given for the substitution of days than that our Lord rose on the day now celebrated, and while there was no Divine command to make Sunday the Sabbath, at the real establishment of the Christian church, about four centuries after the birth of Him on whom it was based, that day was chosen by those who then assumed to be, as their successors have ever since assumed to be, the mouthpiece of God.

But I have never felt any deep and abiding interest in the matter, as I believe the Sabbath to have been established as a sanitary measure, the maintenance of which was secured by making it a sacrament of the church, as many other sanitary measures were fixed in the practices of the peoples of that day, some made necessary by the climate in which they lived. The eating of the flesh of swine was forbidden by the church as a religious ordinance, and is still forbidden by the tenets of the Jews and Mohammedans, for which not the real reason but the fabulous one of the entering of evil spirits into swine is given. As a matter of fact, the porker is not in torrid climes the succulent, wholesome food that he is nearer the north pole, and is really unfit for human consumption—a fact which the leaders appreciated, and they got the Lord to forbid his use. They also found circumcision necessary to health, and in the same way its practice was made a condition for entry into heaven.

I have no criticism to make of the selection of a day to be observed as the Sabbath or day of rest. But I am not entirely satisfied with the laws that have been made for its observance by lawmakers who are prodded up by bigots. It should be a day for the greatest freedom of enjoyment, as all other civilized countries except this and England make it, and we go ahead of England in our bigotry. No man is responsible for any other man's salvation, and should not have the right to say how he shall spend his Sundays, providing he is as law-abiding as he is on weekdays. But the uncomfortably good are never so happy as when they are making others uncomfortable and interfering with their manner of being happy. I do not believe that because it is my pleasure to go to church on Sunday morning and to spend the remainder of the day in godly recreations I have a right to say nobody else shall go to the theater or attend a baseball game. Another's pleasures are not mine, so why should I have a right to insist that mine shall be his? I absolutely refuse to believe that this world is a place intended to be miserable in, but to be as happy in as possible, always provided that that happiness does not consist in making others miserable, and I equally refuse to believe that the Sabbath was intended for a day of discomfort. It is, or should be, the weekly holiday, in which each is free to serve God as his conscience dictates, and he who serves Him only on this day and with his lips serves Him not at all.

A man (or woman either) can commit no crime or offense for which he cannot forgive himself, this being a universal human trait. Ex-Mayor and Wife-Murderer J. Samuel McCue, of Charlottesville, Va., who is to be hanged February 10, longs to meet his darling wife in heaven, where he sent her.

A stranger, without money, hungry, but, so far as shown, decent and sober, asked for food, was arrested, and was fined $20 (what a farce!) or two months in the workhouse in this city last Friday. Who can invent something stronger than mere contempt for such law?

* * * *

The following, from the Topeka (Kans.) Labor Champion, may (there is room for doubt) interest some of the older Kansas people in this city. At any rate it interested me, and that is sufficient reason—and the reason governing real editors in such cases—for inserting it in this paper. It goes back to my boyhood and my advent into trades unionism, and as such is valuable, as the history of the labor movement would be incomplete without it. Notwithstanding my absence from Topeka for over a third of a century, the trades union movement there seems to be healthy:

"Constitution, By-Laws and Rules of Order of Topeka Typographical Union No. 121, chartered December 19, 1869," is the title of a small booklet owned by T. B. Brown of the state office, that is a relic of the first printers' union organized in Topeka. The little book is 3¾ x 2⅜ inches, with enameled cover printed in red and black; it contains forty pages set in leaded agate ten picas measure, and each page has a red line border around it; the book is "gathered" in five 8-page signatures, hand sewed with thread, and is a neat and perfect model of bookmaking. It is imprinted: "Commonwealth State Printing House, 1870." One page contains the names of the charter members, viz.: A. F. Bloomer, L. H. Hascall, H. F. Marvin, E. F. Campbell, T. V. B. Johnson, B. C. Murray and W. S. Reynolds. Toward the latter part of the '70's that union gave up its charter and died, but on the 19th of May, 1882, it was born again under a new charter bearing the original No. 121, and still continues to do business in Topeka. The little book above described was given to Mr. Brown several years ago by James B. Love, now deceased, an old honored and loved member of No. 121, who worked in the Commonwealth job rooms about 1870. It is probably the only copy in existence, and is prized very highly by its present owner.

Government Printing Office Council, No. 211, National Union, will give a musical entertainment at National Rifles' Armory next Wednesday evening, January 25, at 8 o'clock. The entertainments of this organization are always of such a delightful character that nothing is needed but the simple announcement in order to fill the house. G. P. O. Council is easily keeping her position as the banner council of the District.

Topeka Union, No. 121, is making a campaign for State ownership of the State printing office, in which I wish them godspeed. State printing offices are vast improvements over private plants on the contract system for a number of reasons, the principal one which concerns us being that they pay better wages and have better conditions. The profit the contractor would make goes to the employes in wages. There have been numerous offers by private parties to take the Government Printing Office and do the work at such and such a per cent of saving to the Government, but to the question, "Will you pay the wages and give the employes the privileges they now enjoy?" there is always the demurrer, "That is not business. I'll get my work done as cheaply as I can." In fact, there is little in the contract system anywhere except what the contractor can gouge out of the men who actually do the work, which would be all right in a government of contractors, by contractors, for contractors, but should never have a place in the work done for the benefit of all the people. Speed the printers of Kansas, and of every State where they wish to establish a State printing office!

My literary duties made such demands on my time last Sunday that I was unable to get to the union meeting, and so I missed hearing my cordial invitation to the members to attend the meeting construed into a threat by a very dear old friend of mine. By the way, from the action taken on the Philadelphia matter, recalling my remark of a week ago on the same subject, I am forced to concede that I am getting into Shelby Smith's class as a guesser.

The news contained in the following will delight many here:

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., Jan. 11, 1905.
GEORGE P. NICHOLS,
Baltimore, Md.

MY DEAR NICHOLS: As secretary of the Executive Council it is my pleasant duty to advise you that you have been elected agent of the Union Printers' Home by the Council to fill the vacancy in the office caused by the death of William Kennedy. Your selection was unanimous.

With kind regards, I remain, fraternally, yours, J. W. BRAMWOOD, Secretary Executive Council, I. T. U.

As will be remembered, Mr. Nichols was a candidate for trustee of the Home last spring, but was defeated, though receiving much the largest vote of any of those defeated and carrying this Union by a very decided majority. I congratulate the Executive Council on having made the very best possible selection, and I congratulate "Nich" on being elected to this very responsible position by a unanimous vote.

Some of my good friends tell me that I have been treated to a roast in Sadie Maguire's Western Laborer, but I have not been so unfortunate as to have ocular evidence of the fact. Scrapping is entirely foreign to my nature, as all have observed who read my stuff, and I do not admire it in others. However, as a sort of defense of myself, I will say that, confessing little familiarity with the paper in question, I never knew its editor to have a good word to say of a good cause except the Woman's Auxiliary, which was a sort of family affair, and the Republican national ticket in the late election, which probably enabled him to sell a thousand or fifteen hundred extra copies of his boiler-plate sheet.

The Postum Diarrheal Gripeguts man is a good scab after all. He spends his money on union printers by advertising in union papers that union men do not buy his pawky stuff.

Get busy, you fellows who want to be delegates! I have the permission of Frank D. Smith, of the Record proof room, to announce that he is in the race for Toronto with both feet, not to mention hands and elbows. And I here and now pick him as a winner, which, of course, is saying that I am for him.

I have received an invitation to attend the dance and reception of Denver T. U, No. 49, at Marble Hall, in that city, on Monday evening, January 30, as the guest of W. E. Shields. While deeply appreciative of the courtesy, I am afraid I will not be able to be present, owing to a previous engagement. I believe in these things, however, as a means of bringing the membership into closer relations.

Notwithstanding a cold, Wiley H. Davis, of the First Division, acquitted himself with great credit in his tenor solo at Dr. Bishoff's recital last Tuesday evening. He is fast making a name for himself.

National Union Entertainment.

All who attended—and it was a crowded house—the entertainment given by Government Printing Office Council, No. 211, National Union, at National Rifles' Armory last spring will learn with pleasure that another is to be given at the same place next Wednesday evening, at 8 o'clock. This council is famous for its entertainments, the talent provided being the best, and the informal collation served after the musical and literary exercises not being the least of the attractions. On that occasion, it will be remembered, a bouquet was presented to every lady, and the ice cream and cake were sufficient for all, "Have some more!" being the cry on every hand.

The committee of arrangements having the matter in charge, the personnel of which is a guaranty of success in advance, is composed of Capt. H. T. Brian, chairman; T. H. Bynum, Joseph Dierken, Thomas L. Jones, and J. S. Graves—all too well known to need certificates of character or proficiency—and each member is in charge of a committee to execute some part of the work. To C. T. Hendler is delegated the work of looking after the comfort of the guests on arrival—chairman of the reception committee. To Thomas L. Jones has been confided the constructing of the programme and the engaging of the talent. Each of the others has equally important duties.

It is within the bounds of perfect safety to promise an entertainment equal to the one of a year ago (and he is hard to please who was not charmed with that), and the probabilities are that all previous efforts will be exceeded and all preceding entertainments surpassed.

Take your wife or best girl, if you have tickets—and of course you have—to the National Rifles' Armory next Wednesday evening and learn what real fraternity means, without expense for the lesson.

"Sapphire Waltz."

We have just received a copy of the most popular piece of music ever published in this country, called "Sapphire Waltz," composed by Charlie Baker. It is written in any easy style and can be played on either piano or organ. The title page is very handsome in four colors. This piece of music should be found in every household throughout the entire country. Upon receipt of 15 cents in postage stamps, a copy of this beautiful waltz will be mailed to any address in the United States by the Theatrical Music Supply Co., 44 West Twenty-eighth street New York.

GOSSIP FROM THE G. P. O.

First Division.

W. R. Abbott, of the day side, has been transferred to the night side.

We notice in Senate document No. 60, that $52 80 is due Admiral K. Bosworth for unused leave of absence in year 1902. Let us all hope that the bill will pass.

Recent information from Golden, Colo., states that F. E. Garrison is prospering. Mr. Garrison has a large acquaintanceship in the G. P. O. who will be pleased to read this.

There is considerable dissatisfaction on the part of the compositors and others in the division with reference to the flash-light pictures recently taken. We known a number of printers who can and have taken photographs of groups and divisions very far superior.

We understand that Government Printing Office Council, 211, National Union, will give a fine entertainment in National Rifles' Armory, Wednesday evening, January 25. Secretary Dierken says it will be first-class in every particular. An excellent programme of the best available local talent has been arranged by Thos. L. Jones. Refreshments served at the conclusion of the programme. No admittance fee. Admission by card only.

Specification Notes.

There are seventy-two extras now employed on this force.

W. S. Sill rejoices in the addition of one more to his family—a boy.

Miss Edith Hawk received a probationary appointment on Tuesday.

Mr. S. D. Poole has returned from a detail to the Record Clerks' Division.

Miss Adah M. Friedlander, of Pennsylvania, began a probationary period yesterday.

Foreman Ramsey has been confined to the house with a severe cold during the past week, but is now some better.

Fred Davis, formerly of this division, now reader on the Gazette has joined the matrimonial ranks and his many friends are offering hearty congratulations on the stand taken.

DEATH OF MRS. WILLIAM HOWLIN.

The uncertainty of life was illustrated by the sudden death, from apoplexy, of the wife of William Howlin, of the Specification Division, Government Printing Office, on last Tuesday.

On Friday evening, the 13th, while in apparent good health, and entertaining friends, Mrs. Howlin became alarmingly ill and remained in an unconscious condition till life was extinct.

The blow came with crushing effect to Mr. Howlin and friends assembled, who, with sad hearts, hoped to the last for a word or sign of friendly recognition.

The sympathy of associates and friends of Mr. Howlin could scarcely have been more pronounced than that which found expression when occasion for his sorrow was announced, and as a further evidence of esteem and sympathy a beautiful floral piece was sent by his associates to the funeral.

Official Gazette.

Oscar Z. Homer has received a probationary appointment as machinist.

A. J. Arnold has been absent for several days owing to sickness in his family.

Charles Abernethy has returned to work after three weeks' leave of absence.

The girls are wondering whether the Rule of Three in relation to marriages will hold good in this division. A. J. Benton was married three weeks ago and now we hear that Freddy Davis has taken the leap and the girls are watching the few remaining eligibles closely. Fred is not on the scene, so we are unable to furnish anthentic details.

The Woman's Auxiliary to Columbia Union, No. 101, held its regular meeting on Monday evening, January 15, when the new officers were installed. They are: Mrs. A. C. Webb, president; Mrs. C. L. Nace, vice-president; Mrs. E. H. Thomas, secretary; Mrs. A. W. Bowen, treasurer; Mrs. F. C. Roberts, sergeant-at-arms.

The newly elected president, Mrs. A. C. Webb, appointed the following committees for the ensuing year:

Business Committee—Mrs. J. R. Berg, chairman; Miss Marion Booth, Mrs. Frank Benzler, Mrs. Arthur Drake and Mrs. J. A. Huston.

Entertainment Committee—Mrs. C. L. Nace, chairman; Mrs. F. C. Roberts, Mrs. A. H. Jaeger, Miss Laura Gordon, Mrs. J. M. Johnson, Mrs. Delos Carter, Mrs. Frank Kidd, Mrs. T. A. Bynum, Mrs. J. E. Goodkey, and Mrs. O. D. Hyler.

Auditing Committee—Miss Teresa McDonald, chairman; Mrs. Bert Wolfe and Mrs. C. C. Barnes.

Laws Committee—Miss A. C. Wilson, chairman; Mrs. A. W. Bowen, Mrs. Julia Goodrell, Mrs. J. T. Luitich and Mrs. C. S. Elder.

Rallying Committee—Mrs. John McCormick, chairman; Mrs. T. J. Rowe, Miss C. L. Whitehead, Miss K. C. Spencer, Miss Nellie Theaker, Mrs. Mabel Hunt, Mrs. R. A. Julian, Mrs. J. E. Maynard, Mrs. C. W. Burnett, and Mrs. A. S. English.

Relief Committee—Mrs. C. C. Thompson, chairman; Mrs. M. E. Hussey, Miss Irma Palmer, Mrs. Ida Copenharve, and Mrs. H. J. Redfield.

Music Committee—Mrs. L. C. Hover, chairman; Miss Daphne Thompson, Miss Mabel Webb, Mrs. F. A. White, and Mrs. Bessie Wild.

The G. P. O. Mutual Relief Association is the oldest of the many relief associations in the Government Printing Office, having just passed its twenty second birthday, and it may not be amiss to cite a few facts concerning its condition and work. It was organized in 1883, when there were from 1800 to 2,000 employes in the office, and has steadily grown to its present proportions—about 1000 members. In 1889 it was incorporated and its plan of organization has been copied by similar societies all over the United States, information as to its workings being sought even by prominent people in foreign countries. The Bureau of Labor has considered the subject of sick relief among working people worthy of mention in its publications, and in a paper in one of its bulletins, by Wm. H. Waudby, the G. P. O. Mutual Relief Association is given first place. During the twenty-two years of its existence it has furnished financial assistance to 1,752 sick or disabled members amounting to $48,620, covering a period of 4,862 weeks. The total amount paid into the treasury during this time as initiation fees, dues, etc. has aggregated $131,271. The average pro rata dividend for the twenty-two years is $8 72 per year, making the average cost per year for each member but $3.28. Its organizers and friends may well feel proud of their undertaking.

Treasury Branch.

John R. Brown has sufficiently recovered to return to work.

John L. Sherfy, laborer, was sent back to the main office last week.

Fred I. Nobles has been given the job alley frame formerly held by T. F. McKeon.

The following compositors were transferred back to the main office last week: David Eccles, Robert H. Miller, and F. F. S. Miller.

The position held by Ira Taylor for about eight years of imposer has been raised to that of maker-up. Ira's promotion meets with the approval of all.

Frank Fraser, who has had charge of the pressroom here for about six years, has had the title of his position changed from that of Floor Hand to Assistant Foreman of Pressroom.

Many changes in the appearance of this division are being inaugurated by Foreman Constantine which will, when completed, add greatly to the convenience and neatness of the office.

It is about time for some enthusiastic printing office fan to suggest the organization of an office baseball league. The improbability of much overtime work this season will not prevent the printers from getting into the game, and they should be able to carry off the bunting.

It is doubtful if the importance of this Branch and the volume and variety of its work is understood by readers of this paper. Sometime the work done here may be enumerated so that the Treasury can take the important position it deserves among the busy subdivisions of the G. P. O.

THE TRADES UNIONIST becomes more interesting with each succeeding issue, and it is a very entertaining trade paper. That main and dependable feature, Bloomer's Flotsam and Jetsam, never grows tiresome. The rejuvnation of Ottinger, the trite contributions of Cycle, the timely and thoroughly union discussions of Tim Tickle, the poetry and other offerings of William Tipton Talbott, the correspondence of Chas. S. Gunn, J. W. Belcher and H. J. Redfield, augmented by other less regular but always entertaining writers, have made the paper so readable that no printer and few union trades people should fail to support it.

SMILES AND SATIRE.

Chauncey Depew insists that the cheerful good-natured optimist will always win out, while Mr. Bristow demonstrates that occasionally it pays to lose your temper. Now what are you going to do about it?

During the discussion of a bill to restore American citizenship to women who married foreigners and are not widows—real or grass—Senator Heyburn protested against permitting them to bring titles of nobility back with them. This may be just from our point of view, but isn't it rather hard on the people who have nothing else to bring back with them to show for their money?

"Mr. Goodkey is now in the saddle," remarks Mr. Belcher. If the chairman of the Third is now a mounted officer we may look for a few equestrian stunts in the next Goodkey farce comedy. A parliamentary duel on horseback ought to be quite an attraction for some future union meeting.

The statement that whisky is good for consumption ought to go unchallenged in view of the vast army of consumers.

By the time the Senate gets through with his case it is quite likely that Judge Swayne will not know which ward he votes in.

Mrs. Duke enters an indignant denial to the charge that she married for money, and considering the business both she and her husband are engaged in we are led to suspect that she was after tobacco tags.

A Connecticut editor disappeared the other day, and as it was known that several subscribers had paid up that day his friends fear that the sudden acquisition of real money may have unbalanced his mind.

One serious objection urged against the whipping post is the possibility of men of means escaping that punishment by the use of money. Just as if rich men were ever guilty of beating their wives. Oh, fudge.

Under the new Commissioner the pension clerks will doubtless take their annual leave without that haunting fear of finding their records encumbered with a choice lot of demerits on that account.

"I know a fellow in New York who is 105 years old and drinks whisky every day, but he might have been 125 now if he never drank," said John L. Sullivan in one of his recent temperance lectures. From that you would hardly suspect John of being of French descent.

At the head of his editorial column in the Bristol Courier, Colonel Slack carries the motto: "Sic semper tyrannis." And right below that he proceeds to "sic 'em."

Embezzler Watson the other day received another important Government appointment that will keep him so busy for about ten years that he will have to forego the pleasures of automobiling during that time.

In two weeks the groundhog will perform his annual stunt and predict the additional six weeks of coal weather.

In some unaccountable manner the talk had shifted to baths, bath tubs, and bathers.

"That was a right queer thing that happened to a friend of mine a short time ago," butted in one cheerful liar. "This friend of mine, who, by the way, is on the Night Force, and gets home about 4.30 a. m. ——"

"He don't travel with George Hayden, then," interrupted some one.

"Shut up. I'm telling this, and if you fellows want to read proof on it you'll have to at least wait till I finish the take. As I was saying, this party, when he steers a straight course for home, gets there about 4.30 a. m., and for some time has been in the habit of indulging in a warm bath on Sunday mornings before making for his downy couch. A couple of weeks ago he prepared his bath as usual, removed his raiment, and permitted his fairy-like form to slide into the tub with a contented sigh. Feeling usually comfortable, he concluded to make a good job of it and let himself soak for a few minutes, so he picked up a newspaper and was soon interested in an article on Peary's latest dash for the North Pole.

"In this comfortable position he fell asleep and dreamed that he had accompanied Peary in such a hurry that he had neglected to bring more than his lightweight summer garments. Imagine his feelings when he awoke about noon that day and found himself still in soak and the temperature of the water rapidly crawling toward the zero mark. It took him three days to get thawed out enough to crack a smile. And now if you are looking for a large assortment of trouble say "bath tub" to him. He has, I am informed, also cut out the Sunday morning bath until warm weather sets in."

"That reminds me of something that Maud S ——"

"Bushwah!" yelled the gang in unison.

Like a lot of other people who had money to spend in the pursuit of knowledge, Charlie Morgan took in the big fair at St. Louis last summer, and one afternoon he devoted a couple of hours to the art gallery there. While admiring and inspecting the numerous works of art his attention was attracted to one of those people who know it all and are happiest when telling people all about it. This one was a female, large and portly, with about a dozen admiring friends in her train. The character and amount of misinformation she was handing out to her open-mouthed listeners astonished Morgan so that he kept within hearing distance for a few minutes. The woman was certainly gifted with a vivid imagination and she was never at a loss for an explanation. Finally they halted before a portrait of an extremely cadaverous old man with gray hair and side whiskers. Morgan says it looked like one of those "before taking" advertisements. This is what she said:

"Ladies, here we have an excellent oil painting of Mr. Chauncey Depew, of Chicago, leader of the famous four hundred. He gets up all these funny stories you see in the papers."

Right there is where Morgan found it absolutely necessary to get off and fortify his constitution with a drink.

The Wage Workers' Investment Company.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 14, 1905.
EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

Since the publication of my suggestions, endorsing the recommendation of my friend Bloomer that thrifty men and women place together their savings in an effort to have these earn money accumulating, I have received several letters, urging that I make an effort at organizing something of that sort. The kind references to my article, by Messrs. Bloomer and Gunn, in the last issue of THE TRADES UNIONIST, have further convinced me that the desire for such an enterprise exists, and while I have no ambition to pose as its leading spirit, my experience in business matters is at the service of my fellew-craftsmen and all others who care to associate in the suggested effort. And in order to ascertain at once whether one can proceed, I ask space for the outlining, as far as is at this time possible, of a plan of operation:

Form an association, to be composed of not less than two hundred shares, of $250 par value. Payments to be made at the rate of one dollar every other week. No shareholder to be permitted to own more than say ten shares. The association to be incorporated and officered like building associations or investment companies. Not a dollar to be paid in salaries. A trust company could be made treasurer, very likely. Money to be checked out only on the joint signatures of certain officers. An executive committee of say three, of whom the president and secretary should be members, to conduct operations. Elections to be held annually. The association to be formed for the purpose of investing only in property or in notes secured by property.

Since writing my former communication it has occurred to me that the plan there laid down could, like everything emanating from an ordinary mortal's brain, be improved upon. Instead of contracting to buy a piece of ground, and acquiring it lot by lot, we could buy a whole front, pay for it entirely, then build a number of houses at one operation, thus saving a considerable amount, sell these houses on easy payments at a good profit, giving a deed after several hundred dollars had been paid, and thus accomplish two objects: We could enable the homeseeker to buy before he had accumulated a considerable sum, and we would get better prices than are obtained on sales whose conditions are less liberal. Again, we could note auction sales, fix our upset price beforehand, and depute a member of the executive committee to buy in. At other times we would be prepared to buy a person's equity at a profit, being always in shape to pay spot cash to any one who is desirous or compelled to realize without delay. There are many opportunities, as Mr. Bloomer has well suggested, whereby the busy wage worker may participate in the methods that for others produce satisfactory results, if only the proper agency for the purpose can be created. And this little acorn, if carefully planted and intelligently nourished, may develop fully as greatly as many other enterprises that have attained to importance largely through the savings of wage workers.

You will observe that I recommend very modest payments on each share—only fifty cents per week. That is because many could not well afford a heavier payment, and one requisite to success is that a large number may be interested in the enterprise, thus increasing the chances of hearing of favorable opportunities for the investment of our money. Once started investors would have no trouble in disposing of their interest, in case of need, if not to others, then to the company itself.

The above are the ideas that have so far occurred to me. I will undertake the work of organizing, so soon as not less than two hundred shares have been subscribed. I will take five shares myself. And I herewith request Mr. Bloomer, to ascertain, if he will, how many shares can be placed in his Division. I request Mr. Gunn to do the same. I request some gentleman or lady who favors the creation of this company to do the same in his or her division. After the result of such a canvass, if made, has been communicated to me, I will cheerfully undertake what is necessary prior to a meeting of the subscribers for permanent organization. Of course, I only want the names— no money.

Labor Notes.

D. F. Kennedy, general organ zer of the American Federation of Labor for the State of Indiana, discussin g the labor situation recently, said the trades unionists of the Hoosier State were enjoying peace and harmony. The fact that the crops this year were plentiful was cited as an indication that employment would be good in the coming winter.

The Order of Railway Conductors each year sets aside a day that is observed as memorial day, on which its dead members are remembered. The graves of such are visited, flowers placed upon them and addresses are delivered.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN.

An Interesting Sketch of the Life of the Great Philosopher.

Passing down Pennsylvania avenue, on reaching Tenth street one observes the statue of Benjamin Franklin, and on the side facing the avenue, in plain letters, what might be termed boldface Gothic—appears the word in capital letters "PRINTER."

In the center of the front of the Government Printing Office old building stands out in all its majesty the massive head of Franklin, the printer.

Last Tuesday, January 17, was the 199th anniversary of the birth of Benjamin Franklin. He rendered such great service to the people of the United States and his services have been so highly appreciated by the United States Government, that it will no doubt be of interest, not only to printers, but to all readers of THE TRADES UNIONIST as well, to peruse this condensed biography of the printer whose statue, though silent, speaks volumes as we pass it on the avenue.

Among printers who have achieved fame, none ever rose to a loftier height than Benjamin Franklin, whose work for mankind has made a lasting impression upon the minds of printers throughout America.

Benjamin Franklin was born in Boston, Mass., January 17, 1706. As a child he showed such precocity that his father at first thought of sending him to Harvard and educating him for the ministry; but the wants of his large family were so numerous that he could not afford the expense of this.

At the age of ten, Benjamin was set to work in his father's shop. His father decided to make him a printer. He was an insatiable reader, and fond of books. He was apprenticed to his elder brother, James, also a printer.

In 1721 James Franklin established the New England Courant, the fourth newspaper in America, for which Benjamin wrote many articles, the authorship of which were attributed to men of eminence. The newspaper was quite independent in tone, and for a political article that offended the Colonial Legislature, James Franklin was put in jail for a month, and Benjamin was threatened with imprisonment.

In October, 1723, Benjamin left his home in Boston, and went to New York. Unable to find employment there as a printer, he went to Philadelphia, after a trip of thirty hours without food and with little drink. He landed in Philadelphia on a Sunday morning, cold, bedraggled, and friendless, with one Dutch dollar in his pocket. But he soon found employment in a printing office, earned some money, made a few friends, and took comfortable lodgings in the home of a Mr. Read, with whose daughter, Deborah, he proceeded to fall in love. In an effort to secure assistance to establish himself in business in Philadelphia, he went to London, but his efforts failing, he went to work as a journeyman printer in a London printing house.

Before leaving Philadelphia he had betrothed to Miss Read. He now wrote her that it would be long before he should return to America. After working in London eighteen months. he returned to Philadelphia, in 1726, and established himself in business as a printer. He became editor and proprietor of the Pennsylvania Gazette, which brought him a splendid income. He married Miss Read on September 1, 1730, and they lived most happily together until her death on December 19, 1774.

As Franklin grew to maturity he became noted for his public spirit and an interest wide and keen in human affairs. He established a debating society called the "Junto," for the discussion of questions in morals, politics and natural philosophy. For many years Franklin was the life of this club, which developed, in 1743, into the American Philosophical Society. In 1731 Franklin founded the Philadelphia Library, and in 1743 he projected the university that was afterwards the University of Pennsylvania. In 1742 he invented the "open stove for the better warming of rooms." Ten years later he showed that lightning is a discharge of electricity, and in 1753 he received the Copley Medal from the Royal Society for this brilliant discovery. In 1736 he was made clerk of the Assembly of Pennsylvania, and in 1737 postmaster of Philadelphia. In 1753 he was made deputy postmaster-general for the Continent. Franklin brought forward the first coherent scheme ever propounded for securing a permanent Federal Union of the thirteen colonies, and in 1757 was sent to England to plead the cause of the colonial assembly. This business kept him in England five years, and he was detained there sometime after on important business for the colonies.

In May, 1775, on the eve of the American revolution, Franklin returned to Philadelphia from England, to find that the shedding of the first blood had just begun. He was then elected to the American Congress, was a zealous supporter of the Revolution, and the Declaration of Independence.

Franklin spoke fluently the French, Latin, Italian. Spanish and English languages, and in 1776 was sent as minister to Paris to secure the cooperation of France in the Revolution. He was received in Paris with a grand ovation.

Franklin, on February 6, 1778, negotiated the signing of the treaty in Paris which ultimately secured the independence of the United States. Franklin was so admired for his personal and diplomatic qualifications by the King of France, that the King presented him with his picture set with 408 diamonds, which Franklin at his death bequeathed to his daughter, Sarah Bache.

Franklin's last diplomatic achievement was the negotiation of a treaty with Prussia.

In 1785 Franklin returned to America and was at once chosen President of Pennsylvania. He was re-elected in 1786 and 1787. In the summer of the latter year he was a delegate to the immortal convention that framed the Constitution of the United States. His last public act was the signing of a memorial addressed to Congress by an anti-slavery society of which he was president. This petition, which was presented on February 12, 1790, asked for the abolition of the slave trade, and for the emancipation of slaves. The Southern members of Congress were very indignant, and Mr. Jackson, of Georgia, undertook to prove the sacredness of slavery by the use of Scripture. On March 23, 1790, Franklin wrote an answer, which was published in the National Gazette. It was an ingenious parody of Jackson's speech, was one of the most amusing articles he ever published, and was written within four weeks of his death. He died on April 17, 1790, aged eighty-four years and three months.

The abilities of Franklin were so vast and so various, he touched human life at so many points, that it would require an elaborate essay to characterize him properly. He was at once philosopher, statesman, diplomatist, philanthropist, moralist and wit, while as a writer of English he was surpassed by few men of his time.

In accordance with his wishes, Franklin's remains were deposited beside those of his wife and daughter, in the yard of Christ Church, at the corner of Fifth and Arch streets, Philadelphia, under a plain marble stone inscribed: "Benjamin and Deborah Franklin." In early life he had written a fanciful epitaph for himself, which was published in the New England Courant, and has become famous:

"The body of Benjamin Franklin, printer, like the cover of an old book, its contents torn out, and stripped of its lettering and gilding, lies here, food for worms. But the work shall not be lost, for it will, as he believed, appear once more, in a new and more elegant edition, revised and corrected by the author."

Lost.

At the branch post-office, located on the corner of North Capitol and I streets northeast, on the morning of January 17, 1905, four five-dollar bills, inclosed within an improvised purse made from a pay envelope. The finder also found a receipt inclosed for $1 by the G. P. O. Mutual Relief Association bearing the name and post-office address of the loser. He will hardly be able to excuse himself on the plea of ignorance, nor can he justify himself as an honest man by longer refusing to return the property in person, by messenger, money order, or registered letter. OFFICIAL ORGAN CENTRAL LABOR UNION, WASHINGTON BRANCH, AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

Vol. IX. No. 33. WASHINGTON, D. C., THURSDAY, JANUARY 26, 1905. Price, 3 Cents.

THE CENTRAL LABOR UNION

Address on Free Public Lectures to the People Well Received.

UNFAIR THEATERS STILL OUT.

Resolution Adopted Concerning Proposed New Building for the Times—Hod Carriers' Grievance Settled—New Union Store Discussed—Other Important Business.

The regular weekly meeting of the Central Labor Union was called to order at 8 p. m. on Monday evening by President Dickman.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

The Grievance Committee reported progress on several matters, and recommended the return of $5 to Hod Carriers Union, as grievance of that Union with A. B. Stannard had been settled by Council of Allied Building Trades. The recommendation was concurred in.

CREDENTIALS.

Credentials were received from the following Unions, and their representatives accepted:

Local No. 1103, Brotherhood of Carpenters.

Carpet Mechanics, No. 1.

Journeymen Plumbers Union, No. 5.

Musicians Protective Union, No. 161.

Washington Lodge of Machinists, No. 193.

Elevator Constructors, No. 10.

Bartenders League, No. 75.

Barbers Union, No. 239.

Soda, Mineral Water, and Bottle Beer Drivers Union, No. 372.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Pressmen Union, No. 1, stating that they had withdrawn their delegates from the Central Labor Union. Referred to Organization Committee.

From Hod Carriers Union, No. 21, calling attention to error of Financial Secretary Schmidt in sending union a notice of delinquency when it was it good standing. Placed on file.

From Carpenters Union, No. 1103, indorsing action of Central Labor Union in placing Academy of Music on unfair list.

From Upholsterers Union, No. 104, of Baltimore, Md., asking for assistance in keeping the firm of Hurlbutt & Hurlbutt, of Baltimore and Washington, fair. Referred to Upholsterers Union.

From Alexandria Trades Council, extending an invitation to the Central Labor Union to attend a mass meeting in that city on Saturday, January 28. The invitation was accepted.

From Louis A. Sterne, guardian of Stenographers, Bookkeepers and Assistants Association, presenting bill for work done for central body, and thanking the secretary for opportunity accorded the members of the new union to do this class of work. Placed on file.

Communications were received from Senator Fred T. Dubois, Senator R. J. Gamble, and others, in reply to resolutions respecting several bills before Congress. Referred to Legislative Committee.

Bills amounting to $17.50 were read and ordered paid.

President Dickman announced the following committees:

Organization—Fox, Zottoli, O'Brien, Kearney, and Brahler.

Grievance—Sherman, Weber, McKenna, Nelson, and Diggins.

Contract—Parsons, Bachrach, Johnson, Rom, Considine.

Credentials—Helmuth, Howdershell, Scherer.

Press—Winslow, Spohn, LeClair.

Mrs. John Milton Gitterman was accorded the privilege of the floor and spoke on free lectures to the people, asking the co-operation of the members in securing the passage of Senate bill No. 6735. Referred to the Legislative Committee.

CALL OF UNIONS.

Delegate Pfau addressed the union on the proposed new union store, and stated that $20,000 worth of stock had been sold, and asked co-operation of delegates in making the enterprise a success.

Musicians called attention to the fact that Kernan's Lyceum, the Academy of Music and Lafayette Square Theaters were unfair, and requested all delegates to see that members of their unions remained away from those houses.

Hod Carriers reported that their trouble with A. B. Stannard, contractor, had been adjusted by the Council of Allied Building Trades.

Carpenters introduced the following resolution:

Whereas Frank A. Munsey intends to construct a building on the site now occupied by the Lawrence Hotel; and

Whereas He intends to use the building for the purpose of printing and publishing his paper (The Evening and Sunday Times); and

Whereas The main support of the aforesaid newspaper are the laboring organizations of the District of Columbia; therefore

Be it Resolved, That a committee of three from this body wait upon Mr. Munsey for the purpose of inducing him to use union labor exclusively and all wood-work excepting rough lumber to bear the label.

Request granted.

Clerks requested all members and families and friends to ask for union card from clerk and see that the union store card is displayed.

Adjourned.

SAMUEL GOMPERS, President American Federation of Labor.

FREE PUBLIC LECTURES.

Series of Lectures for the People to be Given This Winter

By arrangement with the Board of Education a series of lectures will be given for the people at Eastern High School, Seventh street between Pennsylvania avenue and C street southeast, every Friday evening at 8 o'clock until the close of the winter season. On the same night and at the same hour a lecture will be given at the Public Library under the same auspices. In addition to this a course will also be given at Shiloh Baptist Church, L street near Seventeenth street northwest, every Thursday evening. These lectures are for adults, and children under sixteen years of age will not be admitted.

On Friday evening of this week Dr. Hodgkins, of George Washington University, will deliver a lecture on "Light" at the Eastern High School, which will be illustrated. At the same time and on the same evening the Rev. D. W. Skellenger will lecture at the Public Library on "Rips in the Rockies," showing magnificent views of Colorado Canyon, Pike's Peak, and other points of interest.

As these lectures were made possible through the efforts of Mrs. John Milton Gitterman, who secured the passage of the appropriation in the last Congress to aid in giving the course, it is expected that the workingmen and women, for whose benefit this work has been undertaken, will show their appreciation of the advantages extended to them and attend the lectures in order to guarantee a continuance of the course each season. Should the lectures fail of patronage through failure of those interested not attending them the appropriation for next year and subsequent years will have little chance of passage in Congress.

As organized labor should feel an interest in this matter an effort should be made through the unions to secure the passage of Senate bill No. 6735, which has for its purpose the creation of a board of commissioners to take charge of the lectures. The text of the bill is as follows:

That for the purpose of providing for free lectures to the people, in the public schools or such other halls as may be designated, under the supervision and control of a commission of five residents of the District of Columbia, there is hereby appropriated the sum of three thousand dollars, one half to be paid out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated and the other half out of the revenues of the District of Columbia. The members of this commission shall be appointed by the President for the term of two years, and shall serve without pay. The free use of the public school buildings shall be given for this purpose, with heat and light and attendance.

Columbia Union Meeting.

An adjourned meeting of Columbia Typographical Union was held last Sunday to consider the report of Committee on Laws.

After adopting a rule limiting debate on a proposition, Article V, Section 3, paragraph 6, was adopted as read.

A motion to strike out paragraph 7 was defeated.

The Union then got down to business and considerable progress was made with the report, discussion being had on an attempt to reduce the compensation of delegates to I. T. U. convention. The old law was reaffirmed.

The Union, after disposing of considerable of the report, agreed to meet next Sunday for further consideration.

The President read the following:

MR. SEIBOLD: Please kindly express to the Union my sincere gratitude for the gift of last Sunday. You can do this better than anything I can write. Heaven bless yon all for helping me so generously in my trouble.

R. C. WALTON.

Moved to adjourn. Carried.

Textile Workers Subscription.

Secretary Seibold, of Columbia Typographical Union, reports a further subscription of $8.60 from the Job Room of the G. P. O., through J. K. Davidson, making the total of that subscription $134.70.

PLATE PRINTERS BANQUET

The Money Makers Have a Distinguished Body as Their Guests.

PRESIDENT GOMPERS ADDRESS

A Splendid Entertainment—Hon. T. V Powderly, Fraternal Delegate Wignall, and Others Make Addresses—A Feast of Reason and the Flowing Bowl.

Plate Printers Union, No. 2, in accordance with a custom for several years past, had as its guest of honor at its annual banquet on last Saturday night President Samuel Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor.

Washington Light Infantry Armory was well filled with over five hundred members of Plate Printers Union and their friends to show due appreciation to the good things provided for the occasion, mentally and materially.

With President Gompers, the fraternal delegate to this country from Great Britain, James Wignall, who is en route home from the recent American Federation of Labor convention, and Hon. T. V. Powderly, late Commissioner of Immigration, shared the honors of the evening, and as special guests E. L. Jordan, editor of the Plate Printer, of this city; John B. Dickman, president of the Central Labor Union, and many other representatives of local organizations, were present.

A splendid programme of musical and entertaining features was carried out, and addresses were made by several of the invited guests.

President Beach, of Plate Printers Union, No. 2, presented President Gompers as the principal speaker of the evening.

In responding, President Gompers said:

I wish I were possessed of the power of expression to adequately convey to you what I think and feel.

While seated here within the last five minutes, one of your dear friends, one of my dear friends, in his own endearing manner, placed his hands upon my shoulders and said, "Don't be so serious." The words made a very deep impression upon me, and I really did not know that I had been serious. But, after all, his remark called to my mind the fact that, though this is indeed intended, and has been, a great jollification, in all earnestness it has been a very serious one to me. I want you to imagine for a moment any one of you placed as I have been placed to-night, honored beyond my deserts, given tributes that I cannot bring myself for the moment to believe are half deserved.

I have taken occasion at other times when kind expressions have been given utterance to in reference to myself, to say, and I want to say it now to you, and I say it in no spirit of false modesty at all, that no man, no matter who he may be in this world of ours, can become very powerful or great unless it is based upon the power and greatness of the movement itself. I have been serious perhaps because I have been overwhelmed with the kind expressions that have been uttered here this evening, and I can only express the hope that I may so conform my conduct in the future as to give you no cause to regret that you have been more than kind and generous to me.

This movement of ours, this labor movement, means so much. It is the present expression, the highest expression, the most intelligent expression of the discontented masses of the people with the wrongs that have been too long borne, and the demand for the rights which have been too long denied.

In some form or other from the time of the earliest history of the human family this movement of the discontented masses against injustice has found its expression in revolution against tyranny; sometimes in bloodshed, and yet making for human progress.

As we are assembled here to-night there is in progress a movement of the people of Russia that bodes no good to the tyranny of that country.

I have been asked on several occasions why I am a trades-unionist. To answer that question adequately would take more of your time than I am sure you would be willing to give to-night; more time than I would care to impose upon you, but I will say this, that I am a trades unionist here for the same reason that I would be a trades unionist in Great Britain, for the same reason that I would be a revolutionist in Russia.

The people of Russia have too long borne the tyranny from which they have suffered. In Russia, without the freedom of speech or of the press, the avenue of the discontented must find its vent somewhere or somehow, and we find it to-day when Russia is stirred from center to circumference, in the demand of the people there for human rights.

We are trades unionists in the United States, we are trades unionists in Great Britain, because opportunities are afforded for free association, for free speech, the free assemblage, and the free press, and because we have these guarantees of freedom we find in our movement in the United States, as well as in its counterpart from which our honored friend, Mr. Wignall, comes as a fraternal delegate, the opportunity for evolution rather than revolution.

When our forefathers gave to the world the Declaration of Independence they not only created a new nation, but they gave to the world a new meaning to the rights of man. They declared that men are endowed with certain unalienable rights, the right to life, the right to liberty, and the right to the pursuit of happiness. I am conscious that there are some men in our day who believe that those parts of the Declaration of Independence, in so far as the assertion of these rights are concerned, are mere glittering generalities. If there be any who entertain that notion, let me say that the organized labor movement of America proposes to make them the living practices and actualities of our every-day life.

We recognize that under the changed industrial conditions, with the wonderful development of industries and concentration of wealth in few hands, and the management within and under the direction of few, that man's individuality as a workman or artisan has disappeared; that man is but an atom in the great industrial modern hives, and that the better method, or rather the loss of opportunity for the individual to assert his independence, is restored and regained by the associated effort afforded by our trade-union movement.

Liberty is but an empty phrase when the workman as an individual is pitted against a great corporation in the matter of the purchase or sale of his power to labor. The better opportunity for the exercise of the liberty of the citizen, for the liberty of the workman, is in the collective bargaining, for the sale of the labor of the workman in and by the union.

It is a mistake for anyone to believe that the purpose of the labor movement is to tear down. There is nothing on earth worth preserving that the trade union movement does not aim to maintain, but it does propose to go deep down, delve deep down into the abyss of misery, of poverty, and almost despair among the submerged of mankind, and help lift them up.

We do not wish to dwarf the wonderful heroism of our great soldiers or sailors; we sing their glory whenever opportunity affords, but we do not believe that the men who fall upon the martial battle-field shall be regarded as the only heroes of the world, and that the men who fall upon the battle-field of labor shall be regarded as the hoboes of the world.

It is not enough alone to know how to die; it is better to know how to live. Men in the spirit of enthusiasm or anger may throw themselves upon their antagonists and meet death fearlessly; but the men who work and struggle, who in their cool moments calmly and deliberately enter into contests that may mean months and months of slow deprivation and almost starvation, to their heroism is due a greater tribute. I could not if I would, and I would not if I could, take one leaf or flower or sprig from the laurel wreath of those who have battled for our country, or for the countries of the world; but, my friends, I do not believe that any of them have done more for humanity than have poor twenty-five thousand textile operatives of Fall River who have been on strike.

My heart is wounded when I see the suffering of any man, woman or child, aye, even the poorest and most despised of our dumb animals. Aye! my heart was wounded and I was much affected by the sufferings and hunger endured by the textile operatives of Fall River, but they made the good fight against the deterioration of their trade; they threw themselves into the battle and declared that conditions had gone far enough in their downward course; that if they must die they would rather die by the process of starvation, still protesting, than to strive and work and yet be slaves. It is one of the greatest sources of gratification, not only for the labor movement of America, but for all our people, to observe the protest that the textile operatives of Fall River have made. They have checked the license and greed and avarice that have made the textile worker a serf to his condition. I am confident that out of the result of that contest will come a better time, a better day for the textile operatives of America, and that the past of their history has been the worst.

The labor movement—the trade union movement—is a movement for higher and better things for man. The producers of the wealth of our country are entitled to better results as a reward for their efforts. The labor movement instills higher integrity in men; it inspires them with better and nobler thoughts; it instills in them independence of character, and yet, with all that, we should realize that man is dependent upon his fellow-man, and ought to help in sharing the burdens of his brother.

The labor movement, though it has made vast progress within these past few decades, is, in this country, still in its infancy. It will require all our energy, all our combined efforts, and the best intelligence of which we are capable, to keep marching forward and onward. It is written upon the wall that the labor movement is founded upon justice and right. The labor movement to live must progress.

You speak with kindness and generosity of whatever efforts I have been able to put forth. Let me say to you, brothers in labor, that it does not depend upon one man, no matter who he may be; it devolves upon the masses of labor that they be true to their union, true to themselves, true to each other, and true to the cause of their fellow-man. Do not expect that your organization or any other can long succeed if it devolves upon one man alone. We aim in the labor movement to bring about the great democracy of labor. The time is about to come to an end when an aristocracy shall prevail, or one man, no matter who he may be, shall be the one to whom all shall look up. Bear in mind that so long as such a condition of affairs obtains, so long as the masses look up to one man, depend upon it, that if that one man has absolute sway, he will look down upon the masses.

What we want to do is to be more faithful than ever to our unions. What we want to strive to do is to be more active in our union affairs. What we should constantly apply our efforts to accomplish is to make our organizations more effective every day of the week, every week of the month, every month of the year, every year of the century, and every century of the lives of our people.

May I for a moment depart from what may be regarded as the line of thought, and to mention a fact that has not been generally acknowledged nor generally understood. I want to call your attention to the fact that the organized labor movement is not only improving the material condition of the workmen and their families, even when pouring the light of the sun and the gleam of hope into the homes and hovels that were dark and gloomy, but it gives the opportunity of education to the masses; it gives them the opportunity of sending their children to the schools instead of to the factor es and workshops where their very lives are ground out of them. The matter to which I desire to call your attention is the fact that through the efforts of organized labor we have established in a number of the cities of our country free lectures for the people in the public schools.

During the last Congress organized labor, with the assistance of a few friends, secured from Congress an appropriation of $3,000 to establish the free lecture system in our schools in the evening. These lectures are given every Friday evening on the corner of Seventh and Pennsylvania avenue southeast, and also on the same evening and time at the Carnegie Library; every Thursday evening they are delivered in the Shiloh Baptist Church. The reason I mention this fact is that, despite all the possibilities for good by these public lectures in the schools in the evening, the movement is about to be thwarted by some who want to divert the attention of the people. To you who are residents of the District of Columbia, I was about to say citizens, but there are no citizens in the District of Columbia, you residents of the District of Colubia, you know that the government of the city is so far removed from you that you have very little voice in either shaping legislation or preventing unfavorable legislation.

May we not, however, express the hope, or take some action to voice our sentiments, that these "universities of labor," the free lectures in the evening in our public schools, may be continued so that you and I, who in our youths were forced into the factories and workshops, may have an opportunity now to gain and reap some of the advantages that will come from the lectures of those who have studied subjects so near the needs and welfare of man.

There is so much to say and so little time to say it that I fear that I must have bored you even now. I want to say one word to the Plate Printers, whom I have reserved in my remarks until the last, not that I regarded them of the least importance; those of you who know me, know such would be farthest from my intention or purpose. Between you and me personally and officially has existed the warmest ties, the kindest feelings, most intense friendship and earnest expressions of fraternity. Plate Printers, members of No. 2, I wish that I could express to you all of the appreciation that you raise and have raised in my heart. I wish that I could pay you, I wish that I could compensate you in some way, I wish I could return to you in some way, all the gratitude I feel toward you. You have been more than kind, more than generous to me.

If I have been of some assistance to you in the past it was because you were workmen with great danger of a great wrong that was about to be perpetrated upon you, and I felt that in trying to serve you I was not only serving you but all my fellow-men. My only regret is that, after all, the opportunities are so few. If our other fellow-workmen come within the fold of unionism within the next decade as they have in the past, and I am confident that they will, depend upon it that the march of progress toward not only amelioration but emancipation, will come with giant strides to the realization of that day for which poets have sung, philosophers have dreamed, and the common people have struggled from time immemorial. In that hope, in that conviction, under the benign influence of the flag; dominated by the spirit of the Declaration of Independence, the guarantees of the Constitution of our country, let each and all of us gird on our armor, instilled with greater determination to continue the struggle of the human family, and go on and on in the great work to bring about that day in the full noontide of which we may be helpful to our fellow-workers the world over, and when that time shall have come man shall to his fellow-man be a brother the world over.

G. P. O. Council's Entertainment.

With the most inclement evening of the season, Government Printing Office Council, National Union, had an attendance at National Rifles' Armory last night to be proud of. Nothing shows so well the popularity of an organization of the character of the National Union, too many of the members of which become such merely for the insurance feature, as the attendance at the purely social occasions, in which none can show such results as G. P. O. Council. The reception committee, composed of fifty-one members, of which C. T. Hendler, president of the Cabinet (the "grand body") of the District, was chairman, in evening clothes, received the guests of the evening and looked after their comfort, presenting to each lady a bouquet of choice flowers. The success of the occasion is due to the competent work of the committee of arrangements, composed of Capt. H. T. Brian (chairman), T. A. Bynum, Joseph Dierken, J. S. Graves, and Thomas L. Jones, the latter having charge of the musical programme, which was as follows:

Selection—"Dolly Varden" (Langey), Rebew Orchestra, H. W. Weber, conductor.

Address of welcome—Charles T. Hendler, president D. C. Cabinet, N. U.

Selection—"Yachting Glee," (Culberson), National Quartette (Messrs. Chas. E. Myers, first tenor; Thos. L. Jones, second tenor; R. R. Rodrick, first bass; Dana C. Holland, second bass).

Contralto solo—a "The Slumber Boat" (Gaynor), b "Goodbye, Robin" (Moir), Mrs. Blanche Muir Dalgleish.

Tenor solo—"For All Eternity" (Mascheroni), Thos. L. Jones.

Coon songs—George H. O'Connor.

Selection—"Sequidilla" (Holst), orchestra.

Baritone solo—"Bedouin Love Song" (Pinsuti), R. R. Rodrick.

Recitation—Selected, Miss Violet Pierson.

Soprano solo—"Heart's Delight" (Gilchrist) Mrs. Edith D. Bayly.

Selection—"Gay Hearts" (Macy), National Quartette.

March—"Flavius" (G. J. Weber), orchestra.

Mrs. Thomas L. Jones was the very capable accompanist, a class of work which has much in common with proof reading—one only notices it when it is bad—and the work of Mrs. Jones contributed in no small degree to the success of the vocal programme. The instrumentation of Prof. Weber's Rebew Orchestra shows the careful training he has given it, and nothing requires greater patience and hard work. The vocalists were all at their best, both soloists and quartette doing themselves full justice. As usual with G. P. O. Council's entertainments, this was a pronounced success.

Death of Authur M. Jacobs.

Arthur M. Jacobs died to-day (Thursday) at his home, 301 F street northwest. Mr. Jacobs was an employe of the Government Printing Office for the past eight years and was attached to the Second Division at time of his death. A widow and two children survive him. The remains will be taken to Hamilton, Ohio, his former home, for interment.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

I have been handed a copy of The Zion Banner, of Zion City, Ill., edited and published by the Rev. John Alexander Dowie, and it's a hot rag, and a very decently printed one at that. A note accompanied it saying:

Some iconoclast has said that a printer would be lonesome in heaven for lack of all acquaintances. But what of it, with the knowledge that the First Apostle was divinely inspired while specificationing in a California prison and now has established a miniature heaven in Chicago?

The paper is devoted to the local interests of the celestial city from which it is dated, but has numerous allusions to the First Apostle.

Why is it that an able religious fakir can collect a larger crowd of followers that any other? It must come from the universally taught dogma that this world is only the theater of a constant warfare to escape the pains and penalties of hell. But those religious fakirs seem to fare best who exact a good share of their followers' earnings as belonging to the church. That is what makes the Mormon aggregation the troublesome problem which it has been for more than half a century—troublesome because they made a certain kind of lawbreaking a tenet of their faith, namely, polygamy, which was expected to have a twofold advantage—offering inducements to enter the church by pandering to the animal passions, and abnormally increasing its population as a result. I never could see any reason why the good people of this country should get red in the face and worry over the particular crime of polygamy among the Mormons, any more than over the scoundrelism and oppressions of the great trusts and the election frauds of politicians—not so much, for the latter affect them personally—but the mails are burdened with petitions against the suppression of this particular crime, which wrongs no one but the participants. But I started to say that the strength of the Mormon church lies in the exaction of tithes from its members—one-tenth of each man's earnings or profits belong to the church. Whether the very rich among them escape taxation, or the greater portion of it, as with us, I don't know, but I suppose they do, basing my belief on the common consent everywhere that this class shall not be compelled to contribute their share. The 10 per cent rake-off is the peculiar graft of John Alec Dowie as well—not that he mulcts his followers any more than the average workingman is mulcted in the ordinary way of industrial life—and he has good Scriptural authority for it. That is one of the great beauties of the Scriptures—they are so handy to prove the righteousness of things by. With the great funds accumulated in this way John Alec is able to establish business enterprises for the employment of his people, the profits of which all belong to the church, which is John Alec. With its 10 per cent rake-off the Mormon church is able to keep missionaries in all lands, drumming up recruits for the church, and to stand off all the moves our legislative solons are capable of devising for bringing them within the manners and customs of the rest of the country, Money being stronger than Right in contests before the law any time.

I don't know that anybody is really any the worse off for the two institutions named, as the average man is born to be robbed by somebody all his days and doomed to die as poor as he was born, but they serve as object lessons to show how gullible mankind are. John Alec being the whole church, it will die with him, with a large stink and a grab game for the spoils, while the Mormons are constructed on more durable lines, the payment of tithes—the soul of the church—being provided for no matter who is at the head.

Any man who can put up a good bluff that he alone holds the keys to heaven will have no trouble in collecting a fine aggregation of suckers, and they will not inquire uncomfortably closely into his possession of them, taking his word for it. A red-hot, relentless hell is the largest asset in the capital of any religious enthusiast, except in the arctic regions, where it is necessary to make it an equally fierce freezing abode, and most converts are actuated more by a fear of going there than by a desire to go to heaven.

I have been given The Devil from Atlanta, Ga., that being the name of the paper issued as a programme of the Franklin Birthday celebration of Atlanta Union, which is as well devoted to a history of that union, by Ed. L. Sutton; a brief account of the life of Franklin; the famous printer-author, Joel Chandler Harris, by Edwin Johnson; the Atlanta Federation of Trades, by W. S. Wier; the Typographical Union, by Julian Harris; the pitiful woes of the proofreader, by Eugene George; some funny mistakes of the printer, by W. C. Henderson; portraits of Ed. L. Sutton, Benjamin Franklin, Joel Chandler Harris, Miss Connie Whites, Joe Hewitt, Jerome Jones, Wade P. Harding, Printer-Mayor James G. Woodward, W. C. Henderson, and S. Einstein; several cartoons, and a number of short articles. It is well executed, and the programme included reception, dancing, addresses, music, and vaudeville.

Not being entirely satisfied with the sense in which the word "trite" has been used by correspondents in THE TRADES UNIONIST lately, I have copied the definitions as given in Webster's International and the Standard Dictionaries, and venture to print them for what they may be worth. Of course, it is not what a man says, but what he means, that should be taken into account. These are the several definitions:

TRITE: Worn out; common; used until so common as to have lost novelty and interest; hackneyed; stale; as, a trite remark; a trite subject.—Webster.

TRITE: 1. Used so often as to be hackneyed; made commonplace by frequent repetition: as, a trite remark; a trite simile.

2. Worn out; frayed.—Standard.

But, come to think of it, I don't know who delegated to Mr. Webster or Mr. Standard the authority to say what words mean any more than the rest of us. Their ideas of the best writers and speakers, upon whom they shove the onus for their decisions, may differ from ours.

I paid a visit to the bachelor girl apartments of Maud S. last Sunday afternoon and spent a very agreeable hour. The artistic taste of the occupant has been given the freest rein in the way of decorations, and all the celebrated artists' work is represented on the walls, each having the different specimens of his work grouped together. I could not attempt to mention all the great names whose works adorn the boudoir walls, but the selections, both by subjects and artists, show that the artistic has reached its highest development in the fair young Bohemienne.

The work done at the union meeting last Sunday shows how much better we get along when we are not hampered and delayed by a lot of blathering speech-making. There are few subjects on which the average member cannot say all that is necessary to be said in three minutes, and I have listened to twenty-minute efforts which might have been boiled down to two minutes without leaving out any of the salient points.

"Washington Souvenir Calendar" for 1905 is one of the handsomest calendars that I have seen, for which J. H. Irwin, slug 58, Fifth Division, G. P. O., or 23 Third street northeast, is agent. It contains views of all the noted public buildings of this city, splendidly executed, and nothing finer can be imagined to send to friends to give them an idea of the city. The price mailed is 50 cents, but if you call at his frame or his house Mr. Irwin will supply them for 35. It would be a splendid thing for you to get and send back to that haw-eating town that you came from to make good the bluffs you have been making as to the magnificence of Government buildings.

The deviltry of the Mollie Maguires of a quarter of a century ago was charged to trades unionists by uninformed and prejudiced people. I hope that of the Sadie Maguires will not be held against the organized labor of this day.

A friend asked me the other day: "The bookbinders get up entertainments and make money out of them. Why can't we? Are we not as intelligent as the bookbinders?" A great deal more so, my boy; a great deal more so. The bookbinders furnish their own talent and enjoy it. That is because they don't know any better. We are too bright to enjoy anything as common as our own talent, though others do when they get an opportunity to hear it. In the way of music nothing short of grand opera or a symphony orchestra is worthy of our attention. For histrionic entertainment we are satisfied with nothing but the best. When the binders give an entertainment, practically the whole membership buy tickets and attend. When we give one, about 10 per cent will lower themselves by being seen there. That is the whole state of facts, my boy. Being to a man connoisseurs in art, we can brook nothing but the greatest. This condition of affairs is no reflection on our own entertainers, but is one of the misfortunes of an education beyond the point where "fairly good" will answer our requirements.

I should like to see a financial cooperative institution formed by employes of the office on the lines laid down by Mr. Donath, with shares at $1 per pay day, permitting each to take as many as he pleased. I believe the foundations for a strong business could be thus laid, without an expense to anyone that he would feel. I would like to see some one who has the time make a canvass for members. Many a great institution has had as small a beginning.

There are rumors floating around that the Evening Star contemplates issuing a Sunday morning paper. I would like to see it done, but I confess I haven't much faith in the rumor.

THE QUESTION.

In pleasant farmhouse on a winter's night
A little family sat by fireside light;
The father, who had been to town that day,
Told of things that happened on the way.

The day was "fine," the sleighing "very good,"
And he had got fair price for produce and for wood;
Had sold the colt and bought some cows,
And paid insurance on furniture and house.

He said that next he would insure his life
For benefit of children and of wife;
When this was done he then would feel secure
That he had made their future welfare sure.

But while they talked of what that day had passed,
A simple question by the youngest asked:
"Dear papa, have you insured your soul?"
Brought very solemn stillness on the whole.

And when for night the little group did part,
The question deeply sank in father's heart;
Nor could he from his mind the burden roll
Till he that night also insured his soul.

The slaughter of innocents and the cruelties practiced at St. Petersburg run parallel with the crimes of Homestead, Hazelton, and the more recent military outrages in Colorado, directed by the notorious Peabody and the no less notoriously infamous Bell, at the instance of mine owners and the so-called "Citizens' Alliance."

While some of the learned college professors and others pessimistically inclined are striving to prepare the public mind for a bloody industrial revolution, the trade unions are pointing the way of escape by limiting the hours of toil and suggesting other measures which will bring contentment by giving to labor its rightful share in all it produces.

A most notable feature connected with the present labor troubles throughout the Russian Empire is the conservative tone of the associated press and the editorial comments by leading American newspapers, which, by innuendo or by directness, usually impugn the motives of labor bodies here and by misrepresentation and by every means at their command exert their great influence to thwart purposes intended to bring about more wholesome industrial conditions; but perhaps we should be thankful that the censorship which stultifies the American press at home has no binding force over conditions which may prevail elsewhere.

Organized labor the world over has long been conscious of the indignities suffered by the peasantry and industrial poor of Russia, and will welcome any tidings which promise the utter annihilation of systems which render proper industrial conditions impossible in that misgoverned Empire. If the present uprising is to be a repetition of all the horrors of the French Revolution it were better so than a continuation of servility to the bureaucracy, who have too long spurned the appeals of a suffering people, and for this deserve the severest penalty as an act of just retribution.

It is a good omen when even trained Russian soldiers hesitate to execute the command to "fire" upon unarmed men whose greatest offense is that they have the temerity to assemble and ask for a wage sufficient to render life endurable and to raise them above the condition of groveling servile subjects. If in their power the Parryites of this country would extend to the American workingmen the same consideration that the bureaucracy of Russia extend to their subjects.

GOSSIP FROM THE G. P. O.

First Division.

Mr. Rockwell, a temporary, has got away from slug 13 and performs on 128.

By last Sunday's Times we notice that F. A. Coggswell, of the Job Room, has been dreaming.

Did you notice that a busy set of men on the "Y" do overtime stunts about six night per week?

Chairman-elect Davidson made his first business call on pay-day. It cost us money. Glad we had it to give, eh?

You are not in it if you have not had the grip, a cough, cold; or generally speaking, if you feel good you are not in it.

On Saturday morning Wm. H. Bright, who had resigned from the night bill force, was reinstated and assigned to slug 54.

Workmen are engaged in removing the shutters on the first floor of the old building and substituting iron bars. Nothing like being secure.

After an absence of several days, Geo. H. Ellis reported for work on Monday. He was warmly greeted, but says he didn't feel 18-carat by a whole heap.

John N. Cobb, who has been employed in the ring alley for a number of years, was transferred to the Agricultural Division at the close of business on Saturday evening.

During the week a fire-alarm box with a quantity of hose has been placed in a good location. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. We will take the prevention every time.

By conspicuous notices in various parts of the building the night employes are informed, by Paying Teller E. S. Wilver, the exact time at which they will receive their wages on pay-day afternoon—commendable idea.

Have you handed your name to Fred. H. Berger for the TRADES UNIONIST's list? No better month than the first one in the new year. Remember, it is the only strictly eight-hour paper in the District. For that reason, if no other, it is deserving of your patronage. The price certainly ought to cut no ice.

The universal prevalence of an epidemic of colds, coughs, sore throats, hoarseness, etc., among the employes of the G. P. O. is certainly a tax and drain on the various relief associations. But then we are mighty glad there are so many of them, and goodness knows money could not be devoted to a worthier cause.

Mr. J. A. Bell, helper on the night force, having received an appointment as a carpenters's boss in Panama, has resigned, and left on Tuesday for his new field of operations. Mr. Bell comes from Virginia, and was first employed in this division through the Civil Service Commission. He proved himself an efficient employe, and carries with him the best wishes of his friends.

On Thursday of last week, W. Marden King, compositor, was transferred from the Superintendent's Division and assigned to slug 15. For a number of years Mr. King was a watchman, not only in the Union Building, but in the old building across the way. Previous to that he was an imposer or floor hand on the Spess, and subsequently worked in the old Document Room under Assistant Foreman Spottswood. His many friends are glad to see him back at the case.

ROUGH WRITER.

Third Division.

R. H. Pegues, slug 61, was at home nine days sick with the grip, returning the 13th.

C. J. MacMurray was confined to his home with a slight attack of grip on the 12th and 13th.

John A. Ray came back to work about a week ago, after a two weeks' siege with pneumonia.

W. J. C. Greevy informs me that his brother, M. J. Greevy, was last week elected Secretary of the Nebraska State Senate.

S. H. McCarthy was with us for the week ending the 23d, acting in place of Messenger John F. Warner, who has been sick.

George A. Seaman, transferred temporarily two weeks ago from this divison to the Treasury Branch, has been made a regular of that force.

D. A. Taylor, who went with the first detail to the night force, came back to this division on the 12th, having asked for the change on account of his wife's ill health.

Francis P. Williams, formerly slug 4, was lately transferred to the Sixth Division, and is now making himself generally useful, occasionally getting a chance at the keyboard.

James E. Myers, who worked on frame 12, has gone to Harrisburg, Pa., to take a night job on the linotype for the Harrisburg Publishing Co., who have the contract for printing the Pennsylvania Legislative Record. Mr. Myers is well liked here and will be missed.

It is with genuine regret that I am compelled to record the fact that Miss Nellie H. Shipman was, on the 18th instant, transferred to the Sixth Divison. Her new companions will find her pleasant and likable, as well as a most industrious worker. She has our best wishes for her success.

Last Friday night, at a down town alley two teams from this division, one captained by Sherman and the other by Lehman, tried conclusions at bowling, with the following result:

	1	2	3		1	2	3
Sherman..	147	137	126	Lehman...	194	147	141
McCarthy.	131	163	199	McAloon..	210	180	128
Hallock ...	98	95	117	Garner....	131	95	139
Branham .	104	126	130	Kitzmiller	89	93	100
Saltzman .	162	103	137	Childress..	168	132	169
Total....	642	624	709	Total....	792	647	677

Teams from other divisions in need of a little exercise, will find in the above list foemen worthy of their steel.

Sixth Division.

Take a few shares in the new G. P. O. Building Loan.

The Sixth Division is now composed of seventy-three people.

Something like $14 was subscribed in this division for the relief of Arthur Jacobs, of the Second.

Miss Nellie Shipman, of the Third, has joined the coterie of ladies now employed in this division.

H. C. Town, of this division, has been called to New Orleans, on account of the serious illness of a sister.

George E. Plummer, who returned to work some ten days ago after a week's illness, is again confined to his bed.

Chairman J. E. Hogan had a busy afternoon on Monday. His collections for this division reached near the $200 mark.

Those assigned to this division from the night Record last week were D. W. Corkins, Arthur Coykendall, Sam Solomon, and H. T. Young.

Ex-Secretary William M. Garrett was heard to good advantage on the floor of the union last Sunday. At present he is connected with the Weather Bureau service.

A time limit of three minutes is placed on speeches during the discussion of the constitutional amendments. Better time might be made if certain members were not allowed to take the floor but once during three minutes.

George E. Bauuer, known as the "Professor," who was an instructor with with the Mergenthaler force before the machines were turned over to the Government, was in town the early part of the week, looking after machines in a down-town office.

Edgar Meritt's motion, last Sunday, to pay the vice-president $12 per annum, will hardly entitle him to a place with the frenzied financiers. However, as Edgar has occupied the vice-presidential chair himself, he was in a good condition to set an estimate on its value.

Among those in attendance at last Sunday's union meeting was the generally faithful attendant, F. N. White head, chairman of the printing committee. In explaining his absence of the previous Sunday "Whitie" said that he had attended an oyster roast in the morning and had just reached the singing point at 2 30 in the afternoon. And that's a good excuse.

Last Sunday's special meeting of the union was well attended and full of interest. From start to finish President John R. Berg found plenty of business to keep him busy, something like forty sections of the laws being considered and passed during the three-hour session. Among the amendments adopted was one granting a salary of $12 per year to the vice president. Now, ye candidates, get busy.

The mention of baseball in the last issue among Treasury items by "Subscriber," leads me to the belief that "Subscriber" is none other than that prince of baseball fans, George Healey. When this division league was in force three years ago George could work till 4 30, play the game till 6.30, ride a wheel to Langdon, hoe a couple of acres of potatoes, read the evening paper, turn into bed, and get up feeling like a two-year-old. As an advocate of the strenuous life he is what Simon Pocher would call a bird.

I would like to ask all members of this chapel or of any chapel, who would like to invest a dollar or two a week in our association, to be formed for the purpose of the purchasing of real estate on the lines laid down by August Donath last week, to leave their names with me at once. I believe an association will be formed the stock of which will increase 50 per cent in value within a month after its formation. After a list of names of those interested is procured I presume a meeting will be called for the formation of the association.

Official Gazette.

The appearance of Fred Davis on Thursday last was a signal for pandemonium to reign. The boys shook his hand and slapped him on the back, and the girls showered him with rice. His desk had been decorated with marriage bell and tinsel, old shoes and American flags, till it resembled a transformation scene. Fred adjusted himself to the occasion admirably, and when the whistle blew seized his pencil and commenced the nefarious task of marking other peoples' proofs. Later in the day a large box of candy was passed around by order of the newly-wedded Fred. Their friends in the Gazette Division presented Mr. and Mrs. Davis a sugar spoon and a dozen teaspoons.

In naming the officers and committees of the Womans Auxiliary appointed by the president, Mrs. A. C. Webb, in last weeks TRADES UNIONIST, the name of Mrs. S. M. White was inadvertently omitted. Mrs. White was appointed chaplain. She was president of the Womans Auxiliary of Baltimore Typographical Union and always displayed a lively interest in auxiliary work. Washington Auxiliary is to be congratulated on the acquisition of members of this kind. The Washington Auxiliary has a splendid record of achievement for the two years of its existence.

The female operatives of the Lanston Monotype keyboard were the guests of H. H. Snell, chief machinist of the Lanston Monotype Company, at a theater party and banquet Saturday evening, January 14, and from all reports we gather that the event was a very enjoyable one for all the participants.

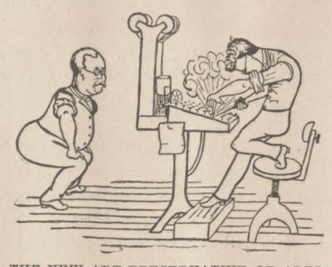
The ladies assembled at the Columbia Theater, where they witnessed the musical play entitled "Little Johnnie

OH, DEAR ME!



Jones." At the conclusion of the play they were invited to the banquet hall, and all but two responded. It was suggested that these two ladies discovered that there were thirteen members in the party, and that they objected to taking the responsibility of sitting at table with thirteen people. Mrs. H. H. Snell and Mrs. Charles Smith were members of the party. At the conclusion of the banquet the ladies were taken to their respective homes in carriages.

SPONTANEOUS PHOTOGRAPHY

The menu was first-class and was served in an excellent manner. Miss Hattie Jewett acted as speaker for the ladies, and won high praise for the manner in which she delivered a well-worded and appropriate address.

Mr. Smith, the instructor, admitted in his remarks that when he first came to Washington he was of the opinion—an opinion too commonly held by people unfamiliar with the conditions—that the Government employe was not up to the standard; but he was pleased to say that contact with them had changed that opinion and he had found, if anything, they were above the average in intelligence and capacity to learn, as the results in the case of the Monotype machine amply prove.

Remarks were listened to from several of the ladies, and Miss Gordon read a poem written by Will H. Kauffman, of the caster room:—

NINE FEMALE OPERATORS, OR OPERATORS FEM-A-NINE.

The key boards go tick-tick
As they perforate the tape.
The copy's run so quick
That Sam has to run the "slate";
And there's never any kick,
And the copy's never late,
'Less the Patent Office clique
Cause unnecessary wait.

And as we glance about the room
At the operators fair—
Some with auburn, some with gold,
Others blonde or brunette hair,
Some with roses on their faces,
Some who seem to have no care—
Can we wonder at their gladness
Cause the Monotypes are there.

There's Cornelia, who's "perfection,"
And Miss Theaker in the "Van,"
And Miss Booth, who's no connection
To the great Salvation man;
There's Miss Jewett, who can do it
Just as well as Stimpson can,
And Iowa,—Oh, My Oh A!
Olive too, and little Anne.

Then, as the key boards clatter,
As their songs they gaily sing,
We must not forget Miss Gordon,
Who is always in the "ring";
And our good and kind Instructor—
Smith's the stuff,—he is by jing!
He has helped us out of trouble,
And he's worth remembering.

Now, one man yet is missing
From this "Monotype Crew";
But his name is not forgotten
By this fema-9-al few.
He's the man behind the "Monos,"
And the man who bought this "chew."
So let this be a toast to him—
Mr. Snell, Here's luck to you.

H. J. REDFIELD.

Treasury Branch.

J. H. Wynne has been made messenger for this division.

L. C. Hay, foreman of the Job Room, was a welcome visitor one day this week.

John Mulroy, Fred I. Nobles, and Wm. A. Whitney were on the sick list last week.

Chas. T. Graff, of the main proof room, has been detailed to the printing division, Department of Commerce and Labor.

James B. Williamson ("Uncle Jimmie") died Monday night at 11 o'clock, after an illness of less than a week. On his way home from the office on the 17th he had the misfortune to fall and cut his head. His wound, which was slight, was dressed at the Emergency Hospital, and he returned home. The shock from the fall brought on a complication of diseases, Bright's disease being the direct cause of death. Mr. Williamson was the oldest living member of Columbia Typographical Union at the time of his death, having been born July 4, 1818, and was therefore nearly eighty-seven years of age. He had been on the superannuated list for a long time and had been connected with this division over two years. He was well known in the printing fraternity of this city for over half a century and in late years known to the present generation of printers as "Uncle Jimmie." He is survived by a widow and three sons, the eldest of whom is also a printer, and is foreman at Byron S. Adams office.

The funeral services were held on Wednesday at St. Patrick's Church, at 9 a. m.

The chapel adopted the following resolution at a special meeting called on Tuesday, January 24:

Whereas It was seen fit for our Creator to again present His roll call in this division, being the third time within the past two months, and this time taking from our list our friend and co-worker, James B. Williamson, who, having been the oldest employee on the Government Printing Office roll, was highly respected and won the esteem and friendship of all members of this division; and

Whereas He was the oldest member of Columbia Typographical Union, being a superannuated union printer, his death will be acknowledged among all his acquaintances as the fulfillment of a life of usefulness, in fact, embodying responsibilities that continued until death came; therefore be it

Resolved, That this chapel offer the tribute so fittingly recorded in the Scriptures, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant." And be it further

Resolved, That his passing be appropriately marked by a floral offering from this chapel, an expression of esteem for his many years of labor. Be it further

Resolved, That his aged widow and three sons be given the sincere sympathy of the chapel in their loss.

THE PASSING YEAR.

Like noisely, the wind, unseen, goes by,
To leave, when gone, a weird and wailing sigh,
Or like the memory of some sweet song
That in the past we heard—and lingers long—
Year after year in flying speed goes by
Only to leave, when gone, a song—a sigh!

When hailed they are with joyous bells and din
Hearts flurried beat that bring the New Year in.
Feelingly hands that link and eyes that blink
Gayly the glasses clink as drinkers drink—
Newer the hopes the nobler thoughts involve
Stirring the weary soul to new resolve.

Thus reared, most tenderly, just like a child,
The New Year starts its life—both mild and wild—
And goes, held by the hand of Father Time,
Through wintry storm and blast to sunny clime,
To record there the story of its youth
As told in human strife, and love, and truth.

A story that is wonderfully told,
Ere wisdom gained the Year makes very old:
Tween human virtue, human vice the war
That daily adds its victims score 'pon score,
The stealthy efforts of deceit, of greed,
To scorn the truth it never can defeat.

And, in behest of duty, noble deeds
That spring from soil of good and moral seeds,
And light creeping most surely through the dark,
Each year more bright, to reach its brightest mark—
And thus the year in knowledge grows more bold
Till the storm and strife will make it gray and old.

Then turns to merited reward—that's found
Immortal wreaths all former years have crowned.
To live in history for evermore
Swelling the eons that have gone before;
That mark the progress of the human race
Its trials, struggles, higher-destined pace.

So, when the joyous bells ring loud and clear
Hearts flurried beat that bring another year
All love, all hope we in the Old Year held
Are in the New Year's strong and newly felt—
All joys, all sorrow of the Old go by—
Leaving but memory of song—of sigh!

"KICKER" ON THE FAIR SEX.

Endeavors to Make a Case Against Them, But Fails Utterly.

EDITORS TRADES UNIONIST:

I have heard it said among some members of the male sex, that the kicker wasn't fair; that he jumped all over the men for not marrying and said nothing about the young woman who encourages a young man to spend his time and money on her when her intentions were not to marry him. Maybe my critic was right, and perhaps the girls have a swift knock coming to them.

Now, girls, Pard Bloomer said a few weeks ago that some one else said some time ago that when a stone is thrown in the dark and a dog yelps, it is a pretty safe bet that that pup has been hit. So, don't begin to protest that that mean old kicker don't mean you, let the Miss whom the bonnet becomes wear it.

The dear creatures (I say dear creatures advisedly, Mr. Editor, for I was raised in a house full of them, have married two of them, raised three from the age of pigtails and short dresses to the age of pompadours and traveling skirts, and can truthfully state that they are the dearest creatures I know of) are not all alike, despite the statements of some novelists to that effect. Some are different; sometimes the same one is different.

Girls, as a rule, know more about the game at sixteen than a man knows at sixty, and therefore they ought to have more consideration for the other party than to obtain attentions under false pretenses. Indeed I think this offense ought to be indictable, like obtaining goods or money under false pretenses. If not before a court of law then before Cupid's court. But who would be the prosecutors? I know one guzzled veteran of life's battles who was sorely worsted in an encounter with one of these feminine slayers in his youth, who now declares that he is glad he was defeated then, for the lady who afterward led him to the altar is one of God's angels on earth. And I suppose there are others who are similarly situated. They were once fooled, then found the right girl, and are glad they were not successful in their first battle.

Exceptions prove the rule, it is said, and this is as true in the man hunt as in other cases to which rules apply.

It is generally supposed that any woman can marry any man she wants, and under ordinary conditions all authorities on the subject agree that this is true. This being the case the huntress should have mercy on those she does not intend to slaughter, and should not chase them merely for the pleasure of seeing them run. She should single out her quarry and, confining her efforts solely to that one animal, convince him that he might, with a great deal of persuasion induce her to confirm her original decision to make him the happiest of men.

Mr. Editor, I started this letter with the intention of registering a kick on girls, but I find that I can't find anything to hang a kick on. This grieves me, too, for by my kindly (?) ways and cheerful knocking I have earned a brilliant reputation among those who work with me. I have been asked in solicitous tones if I were sick, and on replying in the negative and inquiring why I was asked, received a stunning solar plexus blow in the assertion that I wasn't kicking about anything. And now, after patiently and painstakingly cultivating such a reputation as that and trying earnestly to live up to it, and then to find myself unable to frame a kick on such an apparently easy subject is disheartening.

But I have but just risen from a dinner table upon which, as Dooley says, appeared all the indelicacies of the season. This feast I was informed was in commemoration of the fact that I had this day passed another milestone on my journey from the cradle to the grave. I am not going to tell you what the number is on the face of this stone. I hate to acknowledge to myself that I have left so many of them behind me. But the table contained the fruits of the labors of wife and daughters, and each had contributed of her skill in preparing a feast for me. I may mention here, Mr. Editor, the singular fact that no matter how hungry I may be after about thirty minutes at table I lose all desire for food, despite the fact that it is well prepared, properly seasoned, and no fault can be found with it in any way.

This occasion was no exception to the rule, and a spirit of deep content and satisfaction pervades my being. I can even forgive the fellow who called my last speech at union meeting "a commedianne contortion."

So, upon realizing the countless blessings woman bestows upon us after she has succeeded in effecting our capture, I feel that any adverse criticism would be biting the hand that feeds us, which even a cross-grained dog is supposed to be incapable of. Nothing doing in the kick line.

Perhaps tomorrow when the results of this too square meal makes my stomach a Gehenna of torment, and I have found out what schemes for new lingerie, drapery, or millinery this kindness veils, I may be able to say some mean things of woman. If I should in the agonies of dyspepsia write anything derogatory to the fair sex, I beg you, dear editor, to quietly drop it in the waste basket and draw the veil of forgetfulness over the fact that you received it.

Council of Allied Building Trades.

At the last meeting of the Council of Allied Building Trades the committee appointed at previous meeting to secure a hall for the proposed entertainment and ball reported that they had secured Pythian Temple for the evening of Thursday, March 2, for the occasion of the first entertainment of the new organization. The Council is proceeding rapidly in the work of upbuilding the organization and is meeting with marked success.

East Gun Carriage Shop can now boast of a diplomatic committee consisting of Bro. Tom Carroll, Fred Brennan, J. Hengsler, Price Haller, with Geo. A. Connor as judge advocate. money consideration. Russians and Japs take due notice thereof and govern yourselves accordingly.

The wife of Wm. Bean, of the Erection Shop, died January 22. Mrs. Bean died of heart disease.

In the next issue I will endeavor to give the history, of the several relief associations in the Yard and their beneficial results.

Wm. H. H. Cissel, an old employe, has passed over the river. He had been an invalid for several years. He was formerly employed as a boiler maker.

Isaac Scott, a machinist employed in East Gun Carriage Shop, met with an accident yesterday while at work. He was conveyed to the Emergency Hospital for treatment.

Mr. P. Allen, chief clerk Construction Department, is at home very sick with la grippe. The good wishes of every one in the Yard go out to him daily, as he is universally loved.

Will Carlton, who served his apprenticeship under the supervision of your correspondent several years ago, died this week of consumption. He was a good union man; what better can I say of a man. Peace to his ashes.

Bro. J E. Gilbert, of No. 174, is in the hospital suffering from shock and a broken leg caused by being struck by a car on the avenue. I fear there is no chance for his recovery, as he is advanced in life. We hope, however, for the best.

An examination of applicants will be held at the Navy Yard, commencing January 26, for the following position: Draftsman, salary, $1500 per annum. The examination will be open to all comers who can give evidence of sufficient experience in architectural and steel work.

I regret to announce the death of the wife of Price P. Haller, the chairman of Press Committee Columbia Lodge, No. 174, which occurred last Saturday. She was an intense sufferer. A good woman has gave to her reward. The sympathy of all his shopmates go out to Bro. Haller.

I find there is no truth in a rumor that the Stork visited the homes of Captain Jimmy Matheson and Dr. Edgar Baldwin and deposited twins at each residence about Christmas time. It was only a joke perpetrated by Dr. Caciac. The truth of the matter is that it was Santa Claus who presented each of these youngsters with a doll as a remembrance of Auld Lang Syne.

A serious accident happened to the venerable Joseph Keefe, of East Gun Shop, a few days ago, owing to the habit he has contracted of rubbernecking. Captain Daddyeman and Lieutenant Kennedy were escorting a body of maidens through the shop. Brother Keefe, who has a keen eye for observation, mounted his machine, preparatory to a mash. Leaning forward, he overbalanced and fell to the floor, spraining his ankle. He was attended by Doctors Camp and Caciac. Moral — Don't elevate yourself when you are rubbering, unless you are sure of your foundation.

Archemet Giovonnonia, an apprentice in East Gun Shop, met with a serious accident one day last week. While oiling his machine his arm was caught and terribly mangled. He was immediately conveyed to Providence Hospital for treatment. The probabilities are he will lose his arm. This is another lesson proving the necessity of having a liability act passed by Congress. I trust the Legislative Committee of Columbia Lodge will now take up the matter and endeavor to secure such legislation as will give some recompense to a workman when he is injured.

Bro. Jack Stewart is celebrating a happy event, which took place one day that week. Jack has been married several years, but no cherub came to this happy couple to cheer them in their loneliness. We are told that perseverence accomplishes all things, and it seems that it has proven true in this case, as the Stork took pity on Jack and brought to him and his spouse a lovely little daughter. I am informed that Jack will invite his friends to help him celebrate the event at Reuter's one night shortly. Tim extends the courtesies on his good luck.

The call of charity to the suffering is never passed by when it is a worthy case. A few days ago it was reported that a man who lived close by the Yard had died and left a blind widow with several small children.

The following will explain without any further remarks:

One by one the old landmarks are disappearing. Mr. James T. Cross died at the residence of his son, Captain F. E. Cross, on Tuesday last, aged 81 years. He was better known to every man, woman and child in East Washington as Grandpap Cross. For twenty-eight years he felt his way through our streets, blessing God for the sunshine which his eyes could not see. For many years he was engaged in the Yard, when ship building was in vogue, as chief sawyer. Contracting a cold it affected his eyes, which ended in total blindness.

How like a "flower that comes forth and is cut down" is the brief period of life, beautiful emblem of our earth existence. We come into this world, our faculties expand like the smiling bud; they burst into loveliness like the opening flower, and for a while all is life and beauty. But the flower is not perpetual; it blooms to die. With all our majestic powers and all the glory of our nature, how soon we decay and fall. Like the lovely flower we pass away; and this change is also necessary for the fruit to mature, that mortality may be swallowed up of life. Like as the crimson strawberry succeeds the fallen flower so also shall it be with us. The glories of humanity will depart, the flower will fade and fall, but this change is the preliminary of golden harvest. And it is well that God has thus ordained. Better that our earthly existence cease, that the flowers should decay, than that heaven, the ripened fruit, should never be obtained. Murmur not then at the loss of friends. The fruit is more desirable than the flower, heaven than earth. Mourn their loss; this is right, but not as these who mourn without hope. While the flower is fading let us rejoice in prospect of an exuberant harvest, a blessed immortality, a reunion with those we love, a reunited family in heaven.

JUST EVERY-DAY LIFE.

To my mind it would be a paying proposition for Columbia Union to donate a handsome sum to the Hebrew fair and bazaar, to be held in this city in the near future. We have been pleasantly and substantially remembered by the Hebrew merchants of Washington on numerous occasions, and it is merely a repetition of the proposition, "We are for Arthur because Arthur is for us."

All aspirants for honors presidential of No. 101, so far as I am able to ascertain, have bottled their ambitions for another twelfth month, leaving a clear field for Mr. Berg.

The moving of Mr. Munsey's Times to the avenue plaza marks the erection of another giant structure in a desirable center. The lot extends to a wide alley in the rear of the National Theater, and being just across the street from the proposed new municipal building makes the site an ideal one. After having possibly as many business managers and managing editors as there are months in the calendar I feel safe in saying that the Times is to-day on a substantial financial basis, and that Mr. Munsey's investment will bear fruit for many generations.

With the announcement of the name of Frank Smith for delegatorial honors no small factor enters the contest. Mr. Smith hails from the home of a number of successful politicians—the Keystone State—carries a clever story at his tongue's end, and will leave the post freighted with many assurances of success.

Grocery Clerks, No. 533: L. B. Marmaduke, George F. Joachim, Thos. L. Smith, James Thompson, and John D. Schamel.

Electrotypers Union, No. 17: P. C. Schultze.

The credentials were accepted and delegates-elect present were obligated.

Bills amounting to $6 were read and ordered to be paid.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Frank Morrison, secretary American Federation of Labor, asking if Mill Workers' Helpers Union, No. 11485, is affiliated with Central Labor Union, and stating that a protest had been filed against that union for attempting to secure contracts to operate machinery. The secretary was instructed to furnish information.

From Hon. Samuel W. Smith, Hon. C. E. Alden, and Hon. Edward Morrell, relative to desired action on labor bills before Congress.

CALL OF UNIONS.

Plumbers stated that nonunion plumbers were employed by the contractor employed by the Connecticut Pie Co.

Brewery Workers request an arbitrator in case of Brewery Workers against National Capital Brewery Co. for violation of contract.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Delegate Rom tendered his resignation as a member of the Contract Committee on account of other pressing duties.

President Dickman reported work done on street railway bill and effort to adjust differences of Painters Union with Navy Department on pay of painters at Navy Yard.

NEW BUSINESS.

The following committee was appointed to devise ways and means to secure the erection of a labor temple in this city: Spohn, Heisley, Ross, Nothnagel, Riordan, Rom, Grady, Winslow, Brattier, Pfau, Brennan, and Stein.

On request of Order of Heptosophs, an exchange of halls was made for the night of February 27.

Delegates Spohn, Ross, Winslow, Roche, and Pfau were appointed a committee to draft resolutions protesting against the action of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia in reporting favorably on the bill granting an extension of franchise to the Capital Traction Company over the proposed route of the Old Dominion Railway Company.

The Whistling Wind.

WILLIAM TIPTON TALBOTT.

O'er frosty eaves the whistling wind
Wrestles with furious shapes of snow,
While at each door and window dinned
His menace shrill is heard below.

But they who seek the fireside nook,
Where none the wintry clamor dreads,
Hear echoes still of bird and brook,
And fair the leafless landscape spreads.

And thus the soul by love kept warm,
When all around seems desolate,
Hears kindly voices through the storm
Despite the whistling wind of fate.

The Curtis Publishing Co.

An inquiry relative to the standing of the Curtis Publishing Co, of Philadelphia, publishers of the Ladies Home Journal and the Saturday Evening Post, as to their status with the unions in the printing industry, brought out the following correspondence:

INTERNATIONAL TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION.
INDIANAPOLIS, IND., January 5, 1905.

Mr. WILLIS L. HALL,
826 Twenty-third Street N. W.,
Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SIR:

Referring to your communication of November 9th relative to the alleged boycott of the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders on the Saturday Evening Post, I enclose herewith copy of a communication from the president of Philadelphia Typographical Union, No. 2, which is self-explanatory.

With regards, I am,
Yours fraternally,
JAMES M. LYNCH.

[COPY.]

PHILADELPHIA TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION, NO. 2.
PHILADELPHIA, January 2, 1905.

Mr. J. W. BRAMWOOD:

DEAR SIR: In answer to your request of over a month ago regarding the Curtis Publishing Co. and the card circulated by the local bookbinders' union, let me say that the entire matter came as a surprise to everyone in the local printing trades.

When the circular and card were read at the November meeting of the Printing Trades section of the Central Labor Union, one of the bookbinder delegates said it was sent to the secretary of the Printing Trades by mistake.

The only three firms on record as unfair locally are the National Publishing Co., Altemus and Stuart Bros. After the storm caused by the circular and cards had somewhat subsided, the bookbinders' executive committee (who were in session in a nearby hall) were summoned to our meeting and admitted that they acted on their own responsibility, and assured us that if a committee were appointed by the Printing Trades to visit the Curtis Publishing Co. no more cards or circulars would be issued pending our action. This was promptly acceded to, although I doubt whether it stopped the sending out of cards.

Everything in the mechanical department—composing room, press room, electrotype room, photo engraving—is union, except the bindery, and the bookbinders admit that there isn't a bookbinder in it. The work is all done by special machinery, and the bookbinders don't want any of the help, outside of seven men who are running cutting machines. The executive committee of the bookbinders admitted that they did not know the names of one of these men and had never made a personal effort to get them; although they had once called on the superintendent of the plant and asked the firm to get the men to join, and were met with the reply that, as they were not bookbinders, they (the Curtis Publishing Co.) did not see why they should join.

I volunteered to go with the bookbinders' business agent to see the superintendent about it any time. We went and found out that the men were getting $14 per week (scale of the bookbinders is $15). He told frankly that the firm did not object to the men going into the union, and would not discriminate against them if they did, only he preferred us to see them at their homes. We got their names and addresses; the business agent of the bookbinders visited them all, and at the end of two weeks arranged for a meeting of the seven. Some of them must have been indiscreet in talking about it, for the day on which they were to meet us the unskilled help (without an hour's notice) went on a strike for an extra dollar on their wages—and got it. This so scared the cutters that we have since been unable to land them. They failed to turn up that night and we haven't even seen them. I might say that at the time of our first interview the Curtis people knew nothing about the cards or circulars.

By referring to your archives you will find an abortive attempt was made some three or four years ago to organize the bindery of the Curtis Publishing Co. This was such a miserable bungle that it has soured a great many of the people now in the bindery and has made them leary of unions. It is too bad the Curtis Publishing Co. have had the experiences with organized labor that have come their way. On at least two occasions the pressmen have acted unwisely; they were the worst kind of victims in the electrotypers' strike, and they have been caught several times as non-combatants in other troubles. They are the only firm in town with which No. 2 has a signed contract. They are not now, and never have been on any unfair list, as far as Philadelphia is concerned. It is an outrage that through lack of care and discretion a firm as upright and fair to its employees as the Curtis Publishing Co. is should be made the butt of a boycott when all around organized labor's enemies go unpunished. Some time ago, Mr. Boote tells me, he had the floor of the I. T. U. convention to satisfy the delegates as to the standing of this firm.

Respectfully yours,
ALFRED D. CALVERT.

Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SIR:

I herewith acknowledge receipt of your favor of January 20 relative to the difficulty between the Curtis Publishing Co., of Philadelphia, and the Philadelphia Bookbinders' Union, a detailed statement of which I forwarded you some time ago. In connection with this matter you say:

"As all proper effort has been made by the concern to make its plant union, I can see no objection to it receiving our patronage. I shall endeavor to make the facts known here so justice can be done."

I believe that all of the facts in this matter should be communicated to our members whenever and wherever possible in order that no misunderstanding may exist.

With best wishes, I am,

Free Lectures to the People.

General George B. Loud will give an illustrated interesting talk in the course Free Lectures to the People on the evening of Thursday, February 2, at the Shiloh Baptist Church, entitled "Stars and Stripes," and on the following evening Friday, February 3, the general will deliver the same lecture (8 o'clock) in the hall of the Public Library of the District of Columbia, Mt. Vernon Square.

On Friday, February 3, Major Horace L. Piper will deliver a very interesting lecture on the life-saving service of the United States: "Brave Men and Brave Deeds," "Bad Spots on the Coast," "Life of the Surfman," "Limit of Rescue," "The Most Wonderful Example of the Life-Saving Crew," will be his theme. These subjects will prove interesting and instructive, and the audience will be held spellbound, as the Major is a graphic portrayer of incidents through which these brave men of the life-saving service pass.

COLUMBIA UNION MEETING.

The Union Concludes Its Work on By-Laws at Last Meeting.

Columbia Typographical Union held an adjourned meeting last Sunday to further consider the report of the Committee on Laws.

The Union took up Article X, section 1, relating to membership, and amended it by making the initiation fee $5 instead of $15 as now charged.

Article XI, monthly dues, occasioned some discussion, an amendment offered to make the dues $1 per month being put and defeated.

Article XIII, section 2, was amended making it obligatory on the president to depose a member for failing to perform duties assigned as a committee.

Section 12, Article XII, was taken out of position and Section 94, General Laws, I. T. U., inserted in its place.

At this point Mr. Kreiter, from Committee on Label on Text Books, asked unanimous consent to make a report from that committee, which was granted. A communication from the Board of Education of this city, accompanied the report, which was ordered sent to the I. T. U. committee.

Article XVII, relating to apprentices, was passed, as the subject-matter contained in the law is now in conference with the local typothetae.

Article XVIII, death benefits, brought out some good points on the liberality shown by the union toward its members.

The report of the committee being in the nature of a departure from present plan of paying passive members and apprentices the full death benefits, a motion to substitute the old law for the one reported by the committee was lost, as was a proposition to reduce length of membership for eligibility to local death benefit from one year to six months.

Article XX, section 2, was amended, requiring the presence of chairmen at all union meetings unless excused by the president.

An attempt to require chairmen to report state of trade and other data was defeated.

In paragraph 13, Rules of Order, an amendment was adopted, permitting the union, by a majority vote, to limit debates.

The union having completed consideration of the constitution, by-laws and rules of order, a motion was made to adjourn to Sunday, February 12, for consideration of scale of prices, which was agreed to Entertainment and Dance.

The entertainment and dance to be given under the auspices of the Woman's Auxiliary of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, on the evening of February 10, promises to be one of the best ever given by the Auxiliary. The committee in charge of the affair has provided a fine musical program, which will be followed by dancing.

Refreshments will also be served. As this will be the second anniversary of the Auxiliary it is hoped that the members of Columbia Union will encourage the ladies by accepting the invitation to be present on the occasion. The invitation is extended to all members and their families.

G. P. O. Temporaries.

The Civil Service Commission will publish a circular within the next week to be sent to all temporaries in the Government Printing Office and eligibles on the list, instructing them relative to a blank to be submitted for the purpose of keeping up their enrollment in accordance with recent ruling made whereby the necessity of new examinations yearly was dispensed with.

Death of David A. Gillin.

David A. Gillin, for many years a pressman in the G. P. O., died last night (Wednesday) after an illness of about a year. Mr. Gillin was a Past Commander of Phil Sheridan Post, No. 14, G. A. R., and very popular with his associates. The funeral will be at 2 o'clock next Sunday, from his late residence, Congress Heights, the interment to be in Congressional Cemetery

Brand The Convict-Made Goods.

Labor unions throughout the country are asking the legislatures of the various states to enact laws making it compulsory to brand convict made goods with the words "convict made." There is no good reason why the request should not be granted, and many reasons why it should be. Congress was quick to come to the aid of the dairy industry and cripple the oleomargarine industry, and certainly the free laborers of the country are as much entitled to protection against convict-made goods as the dairymen were to protection against the competition of the oleo manufacturers. If people want to buy convict made goods because of their cheapness, well and good; but people who do not want convict-made goods at any price are entitled to have some distinguishing mark that will enable them to avoid these goods.—The Commoner.

Union Printers Home Minstrels.

The residents at the Union Printers Home had a minstrel performance recently. The programme was headed "First and only appearance this season of Deacon's All-Star Minstrels. Tenebrosity Tenaciously Tackled by the Home's own Troupe of Titillating Titans. 20—Count them—Twenty—Hear them—20" Part first of the programme is a regular olio, with double bones and tambourine, and one of each a lady. There are a round dozen of vocalists named, four of whom are ladies. The son and daughter of Superintendent Deacon were of the talent. Part second was composed of specialties. Then there was a wind-up consisting of the levee scenes, "Where is Bill Bailey?" with the following cast:

Bill Bailey	Frank Gutierez
Sue Bailey (his wife)	David Pollock
Ephraim Williams (dock hand),	L. T. Whitson
Skinny Bones	Gail Hoding
Si Higgins	Wm. Wagner
Skaty Bowlegs	Chas. M. Loughlin
Bud Weiser	Sebastian Leis
Birdlegs Crabtree	Carlos B. Tomlin
Rastus Smith (prank-playing kid),	Master Proctor Deacon

Among the "incidental musical numbers" of the sketch is the song "Ain't it a Shame?" by Carlos B. Tomlin, the choruses being rendered by the Home Kangaroos.

The Hebrew Fair.

The Hebrew Fair, now on at Washington Light Infantry Armory, is being well attended. The object of the Fair is to aid in creation of a building fund for the New Temple. A program of entertaining nature has been arranged during the continuance of the Fair that is highly enjoyed by all visitors.

Next Tuesday night has been set aside for the wage-earners of the city and will be known as "Organized Labor Night," Frank Morrison, secretary of the American Federation of Labor, and John B. Dickman, president of the Central Labor Union, will make addresses. All trade unionists are earnestly requested to be present.

Are Boycotts Effective?

Recently came the news that the Washburn-Crosby flour mills at Minneapolis, the greatest milling city in the world, are to be closed for an indefinite period. The only reason given is as brief as it is significant, "poor business." It is only a few months since this concern made a determined effort to stamp out unionism, and organized labor retaliated with the boycott. Just at the moment when this announcement came, the local Minneapolis papers say that other mills in the great flour center can not keep up with their orders.

One of the striking things about this case is the complaint made by the salesmen of the Pillsbury-Washburn mills, who say the grocers, although knowing themselves there is no boycott against the latter institution, are afraid to buy flour that has the name Washburn about it for fear the public will confuse the two. They prefer something entirely distinct. This is one of the unavoidable misfortunes of business, but what convincing proof that the boycotts do hurt!—Spokane Record.

There is nothing of real or permanent value in the mean things that men do for money.

There are more schemes nowadays suggesting the investment of dollars than there are dollars to invest.

***

There are a few things which money cannot buy, and these are often possessed by the poorest of God's poor.

The dollar in support of charity has performed a greater service than the dollar which creates subjects for charity.

The loss of even a street car transfer means a great deal to the person who is in a hurry, without money, and many blocks from home.

***

Money goes so fast that it is only once in a great while that one gets a glimpse of the inscription, "In God we trust," on the silver dollar.

The proposition before Congress to raise the salaries of school teachers in the District of Columbia went through with a rush—that is, it fell through.

It would be a real favor if these people with philanthrophic gold brick suggestions would ease up a little until we can afford another waste-basket.

Plain ordinary people are not worrying themselves about the District smoke law. Their chief anxiety has to do with the probability of securing that next ton of coal, smoke or no smoke.

***

The children of future generations will read with surprise and as a fairy tale that there lived in the twentieth century a man who amassed a fortune so great that he was constantly annoyed lest the natural increase of his wealth would be more than he could dispose of, and that at last he would be compelled to suffer the disgrace of those who die rich, and this while suffering and poverty was the portion of millions of the class who had contributed to his earthly gains.

CYCLE.

Death of Major A. H. S. Davis.

Major A. H. S. Davis died on Wednesday at his late residence, No. 1306 Thirteenth street northwest. He was best known to employees of the Government Printing Office as Foreman of Printing for a short period in 1877. He was a newspaper correspondent for several Western papers, and was in the employ of the District government at the time of his death as an inspector of street work. Funeral Friday at 2 p. m. at Glenwood Cemetery.

America Leads in Coal.

It is estimated by experts that the area of American coal fields at present opened to mining is more than five times as great as that of the coal fields of England, France, Germany or Belgium, the great coal-producing countries of Europe. A writer in the Success magazine says: "While practically all the available coal areas of those countries have been opened to mining, ours have scarcely been estimated. When we take into consideration the fact that coal is one of the great motive powers in the manufacturing world, it is evident that this immense wealth of coal will be of such an advantage to the United States as to be beyond any man's calculation."

ALLIED PRINTING TRADES UNION LABEL COUNCIL WASHINGTON 2

Only Eight-Hour Union Office in Town.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1905.

The Proposed Labor Temple.

The action taken by the Central Labor Union in appointing a committee to look into the advisability of erecting a labor temple in this city will meet with the hearty approval of all progressive union men. It is to be hoped that the committee will get down to work on the proposition and be prepared to report a plan that can be followed out to the end.

There is nothing that shows the stability of an organization in the business world better than the possession of its own building. It places the organization in a class to be considered a part of the business world. Aside from the mere fact of possession is the great saving that can be accomplished in unnecessary expense for halls for meeting purposes, which at best are not adapted for the purpose used.

Let all unions affiliated with the Central Labor Union give the central body their undivided support in this project.

The Philadelphia Situation.

SHELBY SMITH, in The Trades Union News, the official organ of all the unions of Philadelphia, is giving considerable space in showing up the I. T. U. Executive Council in its course toward Philadelphia Typographical Union, No. 2, on extension of benefits voted to it at two last conventions of the I. T. U.

While this may be necessary to sustain a contention, it is giving too much valuable space to the subject. To anyone reading between the lines the action of the Executive Council is clearly wrong. When the vote is taken on the appeal of Philadelphia Union there will be such an overwhelming majority for Philadelphia that the wonder will be that the Executive Council could ever have made the mistake in believing that the membership at large would stand for such reactionary methods as now practiced on Philadelphia.

It is all well and good to accept an interpretation of I. T. U. law when the occasion warrants it, but to put a club in the hands of the enemy and let him pound you is not good politics. The publication in the I. T. U. Journal of the position of the Executive Council in its attitude toward Philadelphia was poor judgment to say the least, for it gave the Inquirer management an opportunity to say that the Executive Council did not sustain Philadelphia Union in its fight.

If it is the intention of the Executive Council to insist that any funds sent to Philadelphia should be spent as it desires, it places the local committee at a disadvantage, as they are supposed to know what is wanted.

And again, if we have to pass up any proposition, let Los Angeles go by the board, but Philadelphia must be saved to keep intact the unions in that zone of printing industry. T. M. R.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

I watched with great interest the recent debates in Congress on the subject of increasing the salaries of school teachers in this District, and was not surprised to learn that many of the unskilled and even menial occupations in the Departments are more remunerative than that of school teacher. In looking over the biographical sketches of public men, especially Congressmen, one will find that an astonishingly large number of them have been school teachers at some period in their lives, and the thought has occurred to me many times that no man will remain a school teacher who is fit for anything else, except the few, of course, who are able to get the few really respectable salaries. In the country districts the educational qualifications necessary in a school teacher are very low, but worth fully all that is paid. Occupations draw skill and ability in proportion to their remuneration. Make the compensation of conductor and motorman on street railways three times what it is now and the professions would be depleted by the rush for these positions. Make the compensation of school teachers what it should be—at least equal to that of a first-class mechanic, and it should be equal to that of the skilled draftsman, the electrical engineer, the analytical chemist, or any other of the occupations requiring ability and application—and the vocation will attract and retain bright minds, instead of being used by men as something to tide them over until a position worth having is attainable and by women until marriage relieves them from it.

But how can this ideal condition be brought about? It can be brought about in the only way that great good for great numbers is ever accomplished—by organization of the teachers in their own interest. "But they are organized," you will say. Yes, they are organized in the interest of their employers, while my suggestion was, "in their own interest." They hold teachers' meetings—teachers' institutes, I believe they are called in some places—at which, directed by the few well-salaried leaders, they discuss how to render the greatest amount of service for their beggarly pittances. Why do they not discuss means for getting better remuneration? Because they are not wanted to do so by the superintendents; and besides, they would be too much like a trade union, which they are taught to abhor. There are none so poorly educated as those who are educated to avoid thinking for themselves, and the average college professor, I am sorry to say, is the highest type of this product of ultra education. He knows more and can advance stronger arguments why the humble shall not be exalted and why the proud and lofty shall not be brought low than all the practical minds daily brought in contact with the question.

Let the educators—no, they are the upper crust, those who get what few salaries are worth having. Let the school teachers organize for the bettering of their own condition, each civil division having control of teachers in one union—yes, you had better call it a "union," for then you will form part of the great chain of trades unions that is becoming the strongest element for resistance of oppression in this country, and thereby gain its sympathy, aid, and cooperation. Disabuse your minds of the idea that "union" and "strike" are synonymous terms, for nobody strikes against governments, whether national or local. There are better and easier ways of accomplishing results. Dismiss from your counsel all those who are interested, in whatever way, to keep you from rising. Disregard all that anyone says against trade unions, especially if you can find aught in his education, associations, or interest to prejudice him against them. Work by organization—not to enable you to render better and more service for your poor stipend; you and your kind have been doing that all your days and of what advantage has it been to you? Work by organization to make your positions worth having, and by that means you will achieve the greatest end that can be accomplished in the interest of education, by attracting to and retaining in the work those who can render the most efficient service in it, instead of making it, as now, a stepping stone to something better or to marriage, which is at least something different. You are but toilers. He who wields a piece of chalk on a blackboard for a salary is no less a toiler than he who wields a hammer over an anvil for wages. Then resort to the means that have been resorted to by the more effectively educated wage-earner for getting a larger share of his due. "Join or die!" was the cry at the formation of this Republic. "Join or be a slave!" is equally true now.

Mr. Frank Morrison, secretary of the American Federation of Labor, has given me some figures showing that in some sections of the country the school teachers are realizing the necessity of organizing on trades union lines and are giving in their allegiance to that great organization. There are four teachers' unions chartered by the A. F. of L.—two in California, one in Texas, and one in Illinois, one of which secured an increase of 15 per cent. in salary almost immediately. The school teachers of Chicago are organized, as a result of which they have already received favorable legislation at the hands of the State Legislature.

Mr. Union Man, suppose you let your kid carry this issue to his teacher. It might make him or her think, though the Lord knows I don't want to do anything to overwork anybody. But if the thinking is done in school hours maybe it won't be so hard on them. Thinking is good exercise, anyhow.

As about his last official act Carroll D. Wright reports on the Colorado horrors. With cheerful inexactness, he fails to distinguish between the lawless acts, if any, of individual members of a law-abiding organization (the Western Federation of Miners) and the authorized crimes of an organization formed for the purpose of committing crime (the Citizens' Alliance). If members of the former organization were guilty of crime, there was all the machinery of the law for their punishment. There was but one reason for the formation of the Citizens' Alliance, and that was to break up the Miners' Union by a series of crimes never exceeded by savages, without which they could not reduce wages and increase hours, in which they found a willing tool in a governor who showed his character by trying to remain in office after being repudiated by a majority of 30,000 in his State. The Star, of this city, says that Governor Peabody "was called upon to do things, and he did them." That is true; he was, and he did. He was called upon to commit crimes by the use of the militia, and he did them so effectually that every newspaper in Christendom shuddered, except the Star. What the mine owners' organization did in its efforts to break up the miners' union in Colorado is a fit companion piece for the horrors of the Cœur d'Alene, where, by the destruction of their own property in order to charge it against the miners, the mine owners were able to get even the troops of the United States to assist them in destroying a union of workingmen. There has never yet been a crime of sufficient savagery against a labor union or individual workingmen to incur the criticism of the Evening Star.

A postal card received by Col. George H. Hayden, of Alexandria and the Congressional Record, from Sam Musick, dated "Saigon, French Indo-China, December 13, 1904," indicates that he is having a good time on his leave of absence from the Philippine Government Printing Office. The card contains a picture of the Theatre Municipal de Saigon and was evidently written between the acts."

* * * *

I'm awfully disposed to take another throw at the poets. But what's the use? Their efforts seem to be worse after each swatting.

* * * *

The Evening Star of last Saturday consisted of forty pages, the largest number for an ordinary issue of that paper that I remember having seen and only exceeded by its great semi-centennial issue two or three years ago. The Star is one of the most generous papers in the country in its treatment of its employees, from managing editor to youngest apprentice. I wish it were as fair in its opinions as in its practice.

* * * *

By the death of Arthur M. Jacobs ("Jakey") last week one of the most generous, lovable little fellows in the world has left us forever. Always good-natured, of a happy disposition, quick to respond to the distress of others, a big man's wealth of the better part of humanity existed in the diminutive, frail body God gave him with which to battle with the world.

* * * *

It has been suggested to me that I will have the bookbinders in my wool for my gentle allusions to the difference between the way they and the printers treat their own entertainers. Which convinces me that at least one man failed to see the point. There is nothing that stands so much in need of a diagram as an attempt at sarcasm.

* * * *

I believe that if the "Kicker" would put in one week kicking himself the act would be generally approved. He would not be hurt if his efforts were no more vigorous than those of last week. Now kick me.

* * * *

I am not sure that the word "trite" as applied by "Subscriber" to the writings of my friend "Cycle" a couple of weeks ago was so much of a blunder after all.

* * * *

Ernest Kreft, a popular and well-known printer of Philadelphia, prominent in the labor movement, has taken charge of the advertising department of Shelby Smith's Trade Union News, and I hope that under his management the paper will prosper like a green bay hoss. Philadelphia has long been in need of a good labor paper, and Shelby Smith and T. J. McCaffrey are the men to make one for her if they get half the support they ought to have. But papers, even labor papers, cannot live on good wishes alone. They need a plenteous and continually coming supply of the long green, and the workingman is blind to his interests who is not doing his share in that direction.

* * * *

Sadie Maguire says I am quite right, which I admit, but the logic by which he attempts to prove it is faulty. Says he: "Now, for instance, there is James G. Blaine, William J. Bryan, Sadie Maguire—all knockers; all occupying vacant spaces." James G. Blaine was not a knocker, but he has been dead for a dozen years, which Sadie's present tense singular verb would seem to deny knowledge of, and he fills a grave and men's memories. William J. Bryan is not a knocker; he does things, and he fills a warm place in the hearts of those who believe as he does. Sadie is a knocker, but I should not say that the space he occupies is vacant. Sadie forgets that law of physics which makes it impossible for anything to occupy a vacant space; not even Sadie can do that. But Sadie is not always a knocker, for I read that at election times with thrifty impulse, he sometimes assumes the character, in a political sense, of course, and for the money in it, of the gilded youth who, admitting that he might have faults, thanked God that he did not sell whisky.

* * * *

I received a letter from David Pollock the other day, inclosing the programme of Deacon's All-Star Minstrels' entertainment, which I have epitomized elsewhere, and which was a great success. He says: "Charles Maxson Carter, whose name appears in the programme, was chairman of the New York delegation to the Washington I. T. U. convention. Tomlin and I are improving nicely. I have gained 22 pounds here. This is a great institution, as you know. An old friend of yours, O. B. Williams, of Chicago, an inmate, often asks about you."

* * * *

I have never known one of these professional knockers of the Sadie Maguire stripe who will not stick his tail between his legs and break kiyiing for the tall timber when he gets a dose of his own medicine. If Editor Bramwood would come down to Sadie's level, as I have done, and throw a few into him, his yelps would be heard at the Golden Gate as fast as his legs could carry them there.

* * * *

A letter from Col. A. W. Tebbetts, of National Soldiers' Home, Tenn., which is a post-office all by its lonesome, states that he is as well as usual and he asks that his regards be given to the few he knows at the G. P. O. Thanking some unknown friend for THE TRADES UNIONIST, which he says is read by all the other old-soldier "typos" at the Home, he asks that his address be changed, etc.

* * * *

Sadie Maguire whines dismally, charging that Editor Patton played "a yellow trick" on him by refusing to let him batter me with my own club—a paper that I have been connected with as a writer longer than two of the three proprietors have owned it. Mr. Patton has been a very sick man for several weeks and I doubt if he ever heard of Sadie's soggy sobs. But Sadie's sense of decency would not be affected by a thing like that, for he evidently prefers to attack those who can not or will not go back at him, like the professional backcapper that he is.

* * * *

The glad news reached me that Mr. James T. Huggins, of the Proof Division, is a candidate for delegate. Now I'll get that pipeful of whiskers.

* * * *

Charles E. Hawkes and Ernest Kreft came over from Philadelphia yesterday and visited friends in the office last night and this morning. No, I don't know what their especial business was—anyhow, it isn't polite to ask visitors who they came to do—but they principally talked Philadelphia Union matters. They were to have returned home this afternoon. Mr. Kreft is the gentleman spoken of elsewhere as in charge of the advertising department of the Trades Union News. Both show by their affability and suavity of manner the advantage to be gained by close association with Shelby Smith.

* * * *

I believe Sadie Maguire thinks I am knocking him. I knock nobody, but I do deprecate in my mild way, unfair knocking in others.

GOSSIP FROM THE G. P. O.

First Division.

Slug quotation—47 to 33—on this side of the room.

We are glad to note that Chas. Danenhower has recovered from his recent illness.

Cheer up, fellow-toiler, but if you cannot do so, endeavor to be as cheerful as you can.

We noticed a solitary delegate candidate passing up the main aisle the other noon hour.

The two busy B's—Bruce Bielaski and Jas. E. Bright—up in the front row on North Capitol street.

Did you get one of those handsome calendars that John B. Dickman was handing out the other day?

Not a word of truth in the report so industriously circulated the other day with reference to the chairman, poodle and stamps.

H. J. Redfield, the wide-awake correspondent of the Gazette division, is the newly-elected vice-president of the G. P. O. Council, 211.

An accident to the engine of an early passenger train on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad caused three of our Baltimore typos to lose thirty minutes on Monday.

On Monday Bankman H. S. Gunn received a new piece of furniture from the carpenter shop. It is serviceable, and will no doubt prove of incalculable benefit in storing away the furniture, etc., in almost hourly use.

Did you ever notice how invariably we get busy when the four o'clock mail arrives on Saturday afternoon? "It was ever thus," remarks the funny man over our shoulder.

Well, where are all the candidates for delegate? Too early, did you say? Well, we might defer the announcements until after the inauguration of President Roosevelt.

Where are you going on the Twenty-second of February? 'Tis mighty near a safe wager that some of the toilers in the great big G. P. O. will labor on that anniversary occasion.

Arthur J. Symonds, an old ex-employee of this office, having received a temporary appointment, was assigned to slug 21, our side of the room, and in the same alley with Geo. H. Ellis.

"They say" that the newly elected president of the G. P. O. Council, 211, National Union, Mr. J. E. Colton, created a most favorable impression in his introductory remarks at last Saturday night's meeting.

Did you see the picture of our popular foreman of printing, Mr. Oscar T. Ricketts, in Sunday's Post? Mr. Berryman can be classed as an expert, of which we have almost daily reminders, and surpassed by few.

How about a copy of the Public Printer's Annual Report, just out? Very interesting reading, and while you can not see how much you will earn this year, you can find out to a dead certainty how much you received the last twelve months.

The extreme strenuosity on the "Y" keeps up. However, Mr. Leavitt's bunch is equal to any emergency. At the other end of the room Dick Richards, of the supply division, and Messrs. Wetmore, Latham, and two laborers are playing an overtime engagement. After inauguration day it will be all over, we are sorry to write.

The numerous friends of Mr. W. A. Hartman, of the Job Room, will regret to learn that he sustained a severe stroke of paralysis while at work on Monday afternoon. He was at once taken to the Emergency, but later on removed to his residence. For several years past Mr. Hartman has been closely identified with the Peoples' Mission, on Pennsylvania avenue.

That time-worn shop phrase, "Few die and none resign" didn't go in this division last week when J. J. Sullivan (slug 68) resigned at high noon on Wednesday of last week. We understand "Jerry" has been appointed to a $1.200 clerkship in the Labor Bureau. Mr. S. has been employed in the G. P. O. and its branches ten or twelve years. The New York delegation were pleased to hear of his promotion.

Of course, you will not forget to attend the Hebrew Temple Bazaar, which was opened most auspiciously in the Washington Light Infantry hall, on Fifteenth street, on Monday evening, to continue two weeks. Our Hebrew friends invariably most generously patronize Columbia Union when it calls for assistance, hence it will not only be reciprocating an act of kindness, but assisting a most laudable and worthy project.

At a meeting of the Second Division Chapel, G. P. O., the following resolutions on the death of the late Arthur M. Jacobs were adopted:

Whereas it has pleased an all-wise and all-powerful Creator to call from earth our late fellow-craftsman, Arthur M. Jacobs; and

Whereas the said Arthur M. Jacobs was a member of this Chapel; therefore be it

Resolved, That it is with deep regret and profound sorrow that the members of the Second Division, Government Printing Office, learn of his death. The Chapel has lost a faithful and trusted friend, and the craft a diligent and painstaking workman; be it further

Resolved, That this Division extend to his bereaved ones its sincere condolence in this, their great sorrow, and that as an evidence of the high esteem in which his memory is held a copy of these resolutions be transmitted to the family of the deceased and a copy be furnished THE TRADES UNIONIST for publication.

ANOTHER MENACE TO LABOR.

From the Milwaukee Free Press.

Martin V. Seeley, a prune orchard proprietor of San Jose, some time a resident of Central America, conceived the idea while there of training monkeys to pick fruit. He has now made arrangements with a man in Panama for the shipment to him of 500 tame monkeys, which he intends to train to pick his prune crop.

Let him do it. We don't have to buy monkey-picked prunes, do we?

Maybe some of our friends are claiming credit for the "knocker" that rightfully belongs to the "kicker." The kicker is always willing to assume responsibility for what he says and does. Perhaps Pard Bloomer can be induced to point out the difference clearly. We are on the eve of a union campaign, and the senseless knocker should be eliminated from consideration by the voters.

The prize winner of the dream contest might be a member of the Gazette force if realism were the essential thing to success. Our dreamer came limping into the office on Tuesday morning and, on being interrogated as to the reason for his limp by sympathetic friends, told the following story: "I had a dream, and in it I thought a big, burly furniture mover had my nice, heavy dining-room table at his tender mercies. He had it out in front of the house, and he was hurling it from the pavement to the middle of the street; then he dashed it back again to the pavement with all the force he could muster from his big muscles. I endeavored to prevent his vandalism by all the forceful language I could command; but it was of no avail to talk—language was not potent enough to reach him. He seemed to redouble his efforts to smash my beautiful table. Now, I am a peace-loving man and am not inclined to use violent measures to enforce my views on anyone, but I became so indignant at this fellow's conduct that, as he came within reach, I raised my foot with the intention of kicking him into 'kingdom come.' * * * * * When I awoke—quite suddenly—I was sitting on the floor within two feet of the wall nursing my right foot, the great toe of which felt as if it had been driven back to the heel."

Bindery Notes.

Many thanks, kind friend Pard Bloomer. Yes, we bookbinders attend our entertainments, furnish the talent from the ranks of our Local, and applaud our members who strive to entertain us. We think it better than being entertained by the representative of the Lanston Monotype Company.

BINDERS IN THE PROFESSIONS.

Dr. H. R. Perry, of the Bindery, is practicing in the northeast section of this city and looks very prosperous and happy.

Dr. S. O. Graser, of the Bindery, has opened dental parlors on Ninth street, and is doing work for several members of the Legations.

Dr. Chas. McNamee, formerly of the Bindery, and who resigned a number of years ago, is one of the successful business men of this city.

Damon H. Binkert a short time ago resigned from the Bindery and has opened one of the finest equipped dental establishments on F street.

Gustave Wiegand, of the Bindery, graduated with high honors from the Columbian Law School and is now contemplating hanging out his shingle.

Dr. John Tracey, who resigned from the Bindery some years ago, is now the leading physician in the city of Springfield, Mass., and a popular man of the town.

Our friend, Dr. Chas. J. Mooney, of the Bindery, has opened offices on New York avenue. His patients speak very highly of him and his future looks bright.

Wm. B. Reilly, who some years ago resigned from the Bindery, and opened law offices in this city, has quite a lucrative practice, and we hope some day to see him hold some important judgeship.

Franklin Phirman, of the Bindery, resigned and has opened law offices at Wardner, Idaho. Franklin will always remember his first case, which was a celebrated one, and held before the Local Union. Wm. C. Connor was the opposing counsel in the case.

Dr. Daniel McFarlan, who joined the Journeymen Bookbinders Union in March, 1854, and who resigned to practice dentistry forty years ago, and opened an office at Fourteenth and New York avenue, and who has now retired from business, was present at our entertainment and acted as chairman of the reception committee.

The following bookbinders expect to graduate in medicine this year: Edw. J. Gunning, E. L. Osborn and Daniel P. Bush. A. L. Wood, Joe McManus and John Ring are graduates of law colleges of this city.

Keep it up, boys you deserve great credit. Pay no attention to the vaporings of idle critics.

Chairman Brockwell.

Mention having been made in a recent issue of the TRADES UNIONIST of the election of a chairman of a large and important chapel of this jurisdiction (citing the fact that the chairman in question, by persistence, coupled with good generalship, met and finally overcame almost insurmountable odds), has provoked inquiry as to why the Record Proof Room chapel never hears of itself or its chairman.

The Record Proof Room is the latest star in the grand galaxy of chapels, and revels and gloats over the possession of a chairman in whom all of its members are well pleased; and when I say that he was virtually chairman before the chapel existed I don't mean to insinuate that he possesses a pronounced proneness for the premature. It is merely judicious initiative on his part.

He is chairman in his own right (or might, as the case may be), without heat or opposition, and entirely stainless of campaign sweat. He merely saw a vacant chairmanship, and the vacancy ceased to exist.

How he did it and why he did it "It never has been written, and it never will be sung." No kidney-footed muse has ever set him to verse, and as for saying anything about it himself—well, innate modesty and self-effacement look like counterfeit bills alongside of our chairman.

After the adjournment of the second session of the 58th Congress a chapel, duly organized, legalized, and designated as Proof Room No. 2, was launched. On the day it was launched—a sweet sunny day in the gladsome springtime, when the hum of bees could be heard in the early blossoms, when birds sang from every bough and while the rest of us were out to lunch—Mr. Brockwell became chairman. If he heard the birds and bees he didn't say anything about it. I am not even sure that he knew it was a gladsome spring day. But when we came back to work at 12:30 he was chairman.

It was a short-lived chapel. It ceased to exist along in the last days of November. Its members were transferred to the Main Proof Room, the chairman being cut down "with budding honors thick upon him." Come to think of it, the phrase is not applicable. They were not budding honors. They had bloomed.

Some of the members of the defunct chapel, the then ex-chairman being of the number, were transferred to the Record Proof Room on December 3. I distinctly remember the date, because it was the same night that Cap. Goodrell lost a handsome mug. Of course, I don't wish to be understood as insinuating that there is any connection between the transfer and the loss of the mug. It is none of my business about that mug, anyhow. Besides, Frank Smith was transferred the same night.

But I am digressing. After the transfer, it was next in order to organize a chapel. We then had "judicious initiative" in the amplified form. It seems almost like a dream to me, but this matchless, incomparable wizard, as though with a magic wand, aided by a flow of language unequalled in its beauty and rythm, coupled with an imagination as boundless as the pipe dreams of George Hayden, led us through the mazes of the most delightfully weird decision that was ever handed down in a chapel meeting. His words seemed to sift down on us like the gentle fall of snow. By lunch time it had percolated through the hair of most of us that we had merely been enjoying a siesta—that as Proof Room No. 2 chapel we had gone to sleep and that we woke up as the Record Proof Room chapel.

Mr. Brockwell is still chairman.

He walks like a chairman, talks like a chairman, and acts like a chairman. Otherwise he is as orderly and well behaved as any of us.

I learn from some of his friends that he has been employed in the G. P. O. for a number of years. None of them know just how many. And he won't tell. He has been chairman a few times. But he was never foreman. Nor assistant foreman. Nor yet a time keeper. In fact, he has never been in charge of anything more absorbing than two weeks' pay. I have heard it said he wouldn't accept a foremanship. I don't know. I was in Missouri last summer.

Speaking seriously, he is a good man; he is an excellent chairman; he is a tireless, conscientious worker as a committeeman of Columbia Union; he is a true, sincere union man 365 days every year, and when that mystic scribe comes down and writes in the book of gold the names of those who love their fellow-men, Brockwell's name may not lead all the rest, but he will be in the running with that class.

I would be greatly pleased if his picture could be placed at the head of this article, but I am unable to provide it for this issue. However, he bears a strong resemblance to the governor of Massachusetts, and, as the governor's picture has been so universally published, readers of the TRADES UNIONIST will have little difficulty in recognizing the chairman of the Record Proof Room chapel.

Merry-Go-Rounder.

Echoes from the distance indicate that typographical elections will soon be on the boards. Why not start the ball rolling here? The time is rapidly approaching. Will the time-worn precedent of electing our president for the second term prevail again this year? Will Mr. Berg want a second term? If so, his record during the present administration will command attention. If he has had enough it can be said that the time is ripe for a down-town man to fill the chair. Prevailing conditions seem to justify the assertion. Good men have been defeated for no reason other than their typographical location. Let's survey the down-town field. It may be a waste of time, but it's worth the effort. C. C. Thompson was a candidate a few years back. The vote he received was not in keeping with his fitness for the office. T. C. Parsons' ability was recognized by President Lynch at the last convention. Harry Knapp is another worth mentioning in this connection. There are others, too. But three nominations for one office is about enough for one scribe to propose. To go further would suggest that the writer is after the chairmanship of the Laws Committee, no matter who's elected. Can either of the three above named be prevailed upon to enter the contest? With reasonable encouragement one of them no doubt could be. Will the band now please play? You "saider fox." If you don't understand the quotation ask an Illinois Egyptian to interpret it for you * * *. Miss McDonald made many friends last year, and by withdrawing from the race for delegate, thereby strengthening Miss Wilson's chances, won the admiration of the latter's friends, both male and female. It was expected she would be a candidate this year. If so, will Miss Wilson's friends come to the rescue? Joseph C. Whyte, chairman of the Star chapel, is likely to enter the field. With two equally popular candidates for delegate this year—well, no others need apply.

Rumors are flying fast in newspaper circles. One story is to the effect that the Star will soon issue a Sunday edition. A companion to this—an old story—is that the Post will soon launch an afternoon paper. No reliable information can at this time be imparted. It can be said that there's something doing on the Star. Not necessarily a Sunday edition, however. Measurements are being taken to rearrange the machines with a view to better utilize the floor space so as to make room for more machines. That's the extent of my information. These rumors may have originated in somebody's imagination. The Times' newly acquired building site will no doubt suggest other possibilities. Speaking of what imagination will do reminds me of a conversation overheard on a street car some time since: "* * * "The machines are being installed in the G. P. O. merely as an experiment. The printers are glad to see them come at this time. The typesetters will soon prove inferior to hand work and will be thrown out. Then the men will feel secure in their places." Of course it was none of my business, or I would have said something. The conversation then drifted to the machines on the Star and what the operators' compensation was. The visionary individual, who was doing most of the talking, then said: "The operators on the Star get $26 a week. The scale is only $24, but the proprietors are liberal, and, realizing that the machine will break down a man in a short time, they pay over the scale." If the Star operators could only have access to this man's pipe, what a happy lot they would be. But unfortunately the amount received is not that which the "wise man" said it was, neither is the scale $24. I am informed the chapel, through a committee, petitioned the front office for a raise and that the men entertain some hope of getting it.

A Printers' Club.

EDITORS TRADES UNIONIST:

Having read in the last issue of the Journal of the printers in Detroit forming a club, composed exclusively of printers, the idea occurred to me that it would be a wise move if the printers of Washington would follow their example and establish one here. Considering our superior number to the Detroit printers, I think we could establish a club here which would far surpass the one in Detroit, which, from all accounts, is one of which they can be justly proud. The benefits to be derived from such an organization are many. In the first place printers, as a rule, like to congregate among themselves and talk "shop" and local topics; then again there are a number of places in this city which are kept up almost exclusively by the patronage of printers. Instead of congregating in these places and spending our money, from which we derive no benefit whatever, why not form a club where we could meet our own craftsmen and play a game of pool or billiards, or roll a game of ten pins, or read a good book, or listen to a good talk by one of our own number, and which would be of great benefit to us both morally and physically?

Now, let some one like Pard Bloomer, August Donath, or J. Monroe Kreiter, who always has the welfare of the printer at heart, take up this matter and push it to a successful termination.

JUST EVERY-DAY LIFE.

Here is one the daily papers overlooked, although it appeared as the first article, first page, display head line and New York date, in the Baltimore American Wednesday last:

Arrangements are well-nigh complete for the publication in Washington of another newspaper—one to be run on modern lines and with plenty of financial backing. The paper will have three daily issues—one, it is understood, in the morning; one at noon, and the third about 4 or 5 in the afternoon. In this way it will seek to cover the whole news field, and will prove a novelty in the journalism of the national capital. The full service of the Laffan Bureau has been secured for the new paper, and it will start with a very complete equipment. According to the latest reports the first issue will appear within a very short time. Its promoters feel assured that it will be a success from the start.

A correspondent, "Kicker," consumes a column of valuable space in the last issue of THE TRADES UNIONIST, when he might have condensed his diatribe into four words. Ringing door bells at Buffalo, during the Pan-American, in search of a lady, I found the door of a flat, with a key hanging in full view. Looking up the elevator boy, I inquired, "Don't you think, Johnnie, that means a caller should go in and await their return?" "I don't know, boss; you can't guess 'em," was his reply.

NAVY YARD ITEMS.

Assistant Foreman Fred T. Myers, who was assaulted by a discharged colored employe, has sufficiently recovered to resume his duties. The grand jury has indicted his assailant.

The seventh annual ball of the Naval Gun Factory Apprentices at the National Rifles Hall, was the success of the season. The hall was crowded with the boys and their sweethearts. Several officers and members of the supervising force were present to encourage the youngsters.

Chief Clerk H. H. Brogden, on account of extended illness, has exchanged places with F. H. Bronaugh, second clerk. While I rejoice in the advancement of Mr. Bronaugh, I regret that advancing years compels Colonel Brogden to step down a grade. He is one of our old style typical Southerners who are fast disappearing.

Archy Giovonnonia, who was hurt so seriously last week, is improving. The physicians are grafting rabbit flesh to his arm, thus attempting to build up a new arm, as the flesh was almost all torn away. I earnestly hope they will be successful. In the meantime the boys have not forgot him financially, as the following will show:

Received of Mr. Harry Wilson, Master Mechanic Secondary Mount Shop, the sum of $267.60, less sixty dollars paid for six weeks' treatment at Providence Hospital, so generously contributed by his shopmates in the Naval Gun Factory.

Gratefully, his mother,
MRS. T. GIOVONONNIA.

Barney Fitzpatrick, while working an air radial drill, was the victim of a peculiar accident one day last week. While drilling a casting the machine slipped a joint. Barney attempted to escape, but the machine was the faster sprinter. It caught him just under the coat tail, and quicker still, it left him with as much clothes on as a South Sea Islander usually wears. Not yet satisfied the machine kept up its gyrations until it had worked more hieroglyphics on Barney's lower extremities than a "Civil Service examiner" could interpret, or a "sundowner from the Health Office" could diagnose in a month. Barney appeared next day in a new suit, but is still lame.

RELIEF ASSOCIATIONS.

Where there are large numbers of men employed under the supervision of a particular head, there is consequently a feeling of mutual interest in the welfare of each other. This interest is shown more forcibly when one of our fellow workers is overtaken by sickness or accident. For many years it was the custom among the employes of the Navy Yard to aid a stricken brother by voluntary subscription. This system at last became obnoxious, as many were relieved who it was afterward discovered were not worthy. To overcome this objectionable feature it was suggested to organize a relief association similar to that so successfully carried out at the Government Printing Office. A meeting was called November 15, 1891, and the result was the formation of an association known as the Ordnance Mutual Relief Association.

From this parent stock many other associations have been formed until the Yard is honey-combed with its progeny.

The officers of the Ordnance Mutual Relief Association are: President, B. G. Ladd; Vice-President, E. P. Barbour; General Secretary, George R. Holmes; Treasurer, H. M. Escaville.

The membership December 31, 1904, was 670. It has not only a sick benefit, but also a death benefit. The dues are 50 cents per month, with sick benefits for six weeks in a calendar year. The death benefit is $150, for which an assessment of 20 cents is levied at each death.

William Mathis, the retiring treasurer, who has filled the position since its formation until this year, was presented with a handsomely bound volume of engrossed resolutions as a token of the esteem in which he is held by the members of the Association.

The annual meeting of the Mutual Relief Association of the Washington Navy Yard was held on the 17th inst. The report of the General Secretary showed the following as the result of the year's business just closed:

Receipts from all sources	$7,666.02
Expenditures for administration, sick and death benefits	5,217.66
Leaving cash balance in the treasury	$2,448.36

Which was returned to the members who had not drawn benefits during the year at the rate of 46 cents per month, making the net cost to members 54 cents per month.

The Association was organized April 4, 1899, with a membership of fifteen, and has steadily increased until at the close of 1904 the membership had reached 561.

The following named members were elected as officers for the year 1905: A. J. Berres, president, re-elected; S. D. Cole, vice-president, re-elected; J. L. Yackel, general secretary, re-elected, sixth term; M. A. Lynch, treasurer, relected sixth term.

Since the organization there has been received from all sources $31,883.17.

The expenditures for administration, death and sick benefits for same period have been $20,053.26. The amount of $11,829.91 has been returned to members in pro rata dividends.

This very encouraging showing speaks well for the management and financial officers of the Association. By their untiring interest the members have received full value for their investment, and conferred untold benefit upon those who have received the aid for which the Association was organized. It well deserves the support of all employees eligible to membership, as it has had the test of time to prove its value. The Association pays $12 per week for a period of eight weeks in a calendar year; dues, $1 per month. It also has a death benefit of $150 for which the members are assessed 30 cents each death.

The next association formed was the Mutual Benefit Association of Secondary Mount Shop.

This Association was organized in January, 1904, with the following officers: Ezra Gould, president; Samuel Cross, vice-president, and R. H. Cowan, secretary and treasurer. The Board of Control was Chas. E. McDonald, J. L. Williams, H. J. Kane, and F. J. Buckingham. The dues of this Association are $1 per month, the benefits being $12 per week for six weeks.

This Association, like all others, at the end of the year divides the surplus pro rata to all members who have had no benefits. It is steadily increasing in membership and its prospects in the future seems assured.

The rebate last year was $8 92 out of $11 paid into the treasury, which is proof positive that the members are constitutionally strong.

The next to fall in line was the Erecting Shop Mutual Relief Association, which was organized December 26, 1904, with the following officers: Geo. W. Dunn, president; Chas. H. Lewis, vice-president; Charles E. Swigert, general secretary, with E. T. Offutt as treasurer. The Board of Control are L. Paul, H. T. La Clair, H. M. Franke, C. C. Love, Benjamin Frick, J. W. Kindle and H. H. Gamble. Finance Committee: J. H. Raub, J. H. Uhrbrock and J. H. Kates.

The dues of this Association are $1.00 per month, with $12 benefits for eight weeks. It has no death benefit.

East Gun Carriage Shop, becoming jealous of her sister shops, called a meeting of the employees on January 7, and organized an East Gun Carriage Relief Association, with the following officers: W. D. Culleen, president; Price P. Haller, vice-president; Frank O'Connor, treasurer, and Andrew Johnson, jr., general secretary. The membership is limited to one hundred members. Dues $1 per month; benefits $12 per week, permitted to eight weeks. This Association has no death benefit.

Last but not least is the Eureka Relief Association, just organized. Its dues are $1 per month, with $12 weekly benefits, limited to eight weeks per year.

Although recently organized (less than a month) it has passed all precedents, now having a membership of 200, and applications still coming in. It is limited to those who have failed to pass the Eastern Gate.

The officers are G. o. P. Aitcheson, president; A. Drummond, vice-president; J. Walter Edelen, secretary and treasurer. It also has a Board of Governors consisting of nine members, elected annually, whose duties are to pass upon all claims, etc.

In connection with the Associations just enumerated, I wish to state that no employee in the Yard who has passed the age limit of 55 years is eligible for for membership, with the exception of the Eureka.

It is the duty these men owe to themselves who did not become members before arriving at the age limit to organize an old employes' relief association.

This will alleviate the embarrassment of taking up collections when they become sick or die, by becoming independent of charity, through their organizations. Think this over old comrades; it is for your benefit not mine.

THE CENTRAL LABOR UNION

Retail Clerks Union Disclaim Any Interest in the New Store.

POPULAR CONCERTS APPROVED

Plumbers Grievance Against Connecticut Pie Co. Goes to Grievance Committee—Special Committee on Action of District Commissioners on Street Railway Bill.

The regular weekly meeting of the Central Labor Union was called to order at 8:15 p. m. on Monday evening, President Dickman in the chair.

The minutes of the last regular meeting were read and approved.

CREDENTIALS.

From Amalgamated Society of Carpenters, Branch No. 1, certifying W. C. Brunger, G. A. Adams, A. Feldwick, W. A. Philips, and F. W. Parks.

From Journeymen Tailors' Union, No. 188, certifying Ignatius Geraci, H. Eskin, H. Staffell, B. Cohn and W. Ilg.

From Paperhangers' Union, No. 420, certifying to Charles Whitehurst, M. Upperman, J. W. Barnes, H. J. Wells, and L. Brown.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From International Union of Flour and Cereal Mill Employees, calling attention to the fact that the product of the Washburn-Crosby Milling Co. is still on the unfair list, and asking for renewed efforts to bring that corporation to terms. Placed on file.

From Retail Clerks Union, No. 262, enclosing copy of a resolution recently adopted by that Union. The resolution read as follows:

Whereas The impression prevails in the minds of the merchants of this city that a certain new enterprise known as The Union Outfitters to Men Company is under the auspices of and controlled and fostered by Retail Clerks Union, No. 262; and as this opinion is calculated to work to the detriment and injury of the organization; and as it is only just that this Local should be placed in its true and proper light in the estimation of the public and that its prestige may not be impaired, it owes it to itself to issue a public statement to this effect.—

That this Local, known as the Retail Clerks Union, No. 262, is in no way even remotely connected with either the store known as The Union Outfitters to Men Company or its management.

From Harry W. Barney, clerk committee on the District of Columbia, House of Representatives, acknowledging receipt of communication requesting a hearing on the child-labor bill, and stating that same will receive due consideration. Placed on file.

From Plumbers Union, No. 5, asking that the Connecticut Pie Co. be declared unfair on account of employment of non-union plumbers through a master plumber who is a stockholder in the company and does all its plumbing work.

Referred to Grievance Committee.

The Special Committee appointed to protest against action of District Commissioners in indorsing the bill granting a franchise to the Capitol Traction Co. to take up the proposed route of the old Dominion Railroad Co., made a full report.

The seal of approval was placed on the proposed concerts for working people to be given at National Rifles Armory on the first Saturday in each month.

Adjourned.

FOR SALE.—Linotype keyboards—same make as those used in G. P. O. Address C. W. Burnett, 56 I st. N. E.

Popular Concerts.

We desire to call the attention of our readers to the series of popular concerts for the people, to be given at National Rifles Armory, on the first Sunday of each month, at 8:15 p. m.

The concerts are to meet a desire to give the highest class of music at a minimum price, and the promoters are not actuated by any desire to make the concerts a success financially, but to give the wage-earner an opportunity to hear first-class concerts at a price just sufficient to bear the cost of giving them.

It is not necessary to own stock in the Columbia Credit Co. to secure credit with them. See the Secretary, Chas. H. Gove, or anyone mentioned in their circulars for particulars.

DIDN'T KNOW IT WAS LOADED.

Mr. Post Gets Himself into a Tangle With Organized Labor.

Mr. C.W. Post, of Battle Creek, Mich., manufacturer of "Postum Cereal" and "Grape-Nuts," during the past month has inserted in many daily papers throughout the country a four-column advertisement, headed "Result of Boycott," in which he charges members of labor unions with assault, dynamiting and murder, predicts a general uprising against organized labor, and calls upon employers everywhere to form "Citizens' Associations" and fight the unions.

At the beginning of his lengthy advertisement, Mr. Post complains that his "Postum Cereal" and "Grape-Nuts" are being boycotted by workingmen everywhere. Then follows about three columns of abuse directed at the head of union men. Near the close, Mr. Post makes this statement:

"Salt only hurts sore spots. So, the honest, law-abiding union man is not hurt when the criminals are denounced, but when you hear a union man 'holler' because the facts are made public, he has branded himself either as one of the law-breakers or a sympathizer."

Using Mr. Post's own logic—that salt only hurts sore spots, and that those who are hit do the "hollering"—it is evident that the salt of unionism has hit the sore spot in his pocket-book, else why all this "hollering" upon his part?

Some months ago organized labor respectfully requested Mr. Post not to aid the Los Angeles Times in its unfair fight. The fact was pointed out that, as a business proposition, fighting labor does not pay.

Of course, Mr. Post will deny that his business is now on the decline; he would be foolish to make any such admission; yet his public utterances do not indicate that his defense of the Los Angeles Times has been of benefit to his business.

Bloomer and The Bible.

EDITORS TRADES UNIONIST:

In a recent issue of your paper there is the usual weekly contribution from the pen of Mr. Bloomer, written in response to the request of a friend for the "elucidation of the much—controverted question as to the 'first' and 'seventh' day of the Biblical week"—whatever that may mean. Mr. Bloomer's article contains, it seems to me, so many outrages of the plain facts of history, the simplest rules of logic, and the most elementary principles of English grammar that it should not be allowed to pass unanswered.

Now, regarding the observance of the Jewish Sabbath, it is the simple historic truth to say that it had its origin in the command of the Almighty, "Remember thou keep holy the Sabbath Day," which, when the command was given, was the seventh day of the week. There is nothing in the command itself to indicate in what manner the day should be kept holy. So it was left for the Jewish Church, the church of the old law, to prescribe the manner of keeping the Sabbath holy, and the principal manner among the Israelites was by resting from labor. Moses, the great lawgiver of the Jewish people, named other days besides the Sabbaths—for instance, the passover, the day of atonement, and the feast of tabernacles—and the Jewish Synagogue enjoined certain religious exercises in addition to abstinence from work.

These facts are plainly recorded in the Scriptures and are historically indisputable. Such was the origin of the Sabbath observances, and these observances were followed by the Jews when our Lord began his mission. These facts are mentioned here simply to show the state of Sabbath observance at the coming of our Savior, and there can be no reasonable doubt as to their truth.

Now we come to the important question—the qestion which (without intentional disrespect be it said) Mr. Bloomer appears to be utterly incompetent to answer. That question is: when, why, and by whom was the observance of the Jewish Sabbath set aside and the observance of the Christian Sunday substituted? There is nothing in the Scriptures to show that the Almighty ordered the change. Neither is there any record that our Saviour ever spoke concerning it. History, then, must answer the question, and that answer is vastly different from Mr. Bloomer's "elucidation."

Mr. Bloomer says the change was made "at the real establishment of the Christian Church, about four centuries after the birth of Him on whom it was based." What does he mean by the "real establishment?" Was the church established more than once? Was there an imaginary establishment at one time, followed by a real establishment at another? Evidently so. If Mr. Bloomer knows the meaning of words and wrote what he meant, then we are presented with the theory that the Christian Church was established twice at least. The testimony of history, sacred and profane, is the very opposite of this. Christ came to establish His church, through which all men might be saved. That church, once established, was to last for all time. Our Lord actually did what he came to do, and He did it only once. Such is the testimony of the Scriptures, which Mr. Bloomer, in his opening paragraph, says he has studied. When was this establishment made? Mr. Bloomer says "about 400 years after the birth of Him on whom it was founded." For all practical purposes the date of the establishment of the church is historically as clear as the date of the battle of Bunker Hill. If the testimony of the gospels is to be believed, that church was founded by our Saviour just before His death at the age of 33 and began its active work on the very day of Pentecost, when the Holy Ghost descended upon the apostles and disciples of the Lord. This, too, is true history, and it is sadly in conflict with Mr. Bloomer.

Lastly, why and by whom was the change made? Mr. Bloomer says: "I can only account for it as an expression of the eminently human desire to do something different from what had been done." It is differently accounted for by the Christians themselves. The first day of the week was observed with the desire to honor that day on which the Lord rose from the dead, the day which he chose for His appearance among them after His resurrection, and the day upon which the Paraclete descended. And they lovingly called it the "Lord's Day." No merely human desire to "do something different" animated them. Higher motives account for it. Thus we see that the Christian Sunday dates from Apostolic times, was originated in honor of the Lord, and had for its warrant that church which was to be His representative to all men. In spite of Mr. Bloomer's dictum, there is no "blessing" in having "a hundred different religions" based on the words of the Bible. Neither is the country of one religious faith always intolerant, bigoted, persistent in persecution," etc. No man who can reason correctly can justify more than one religious faith. Christ founded only one. He speaks of "one fold and one shepherd." He sent His church to teach "one faith and one baptism," and He commanded all men, under pain of condemnation to hear that one church. These words are plainly recorded in Holy Writ, as even Mr. Bloomer can not deny. In this matter our Lord was against Mr. Bloomer and his "blessing." There are other faults in Mr. Bloomer's letter. Logic and grammar have been done to death. Compared with his "history" these are minor faults. Rules of logic are not known to every man, and violations may be readily excused. But one engaged in the honorable profession of proof-reader has but slight justification for violence to the "King's English," and what might be overlooked in other men is almost unpardonable in him. But let this suffice for the present.

Respectfully,
R. E. ADIRAG.

THE EIGHT-HOUR WORKDAY

A Well-Known Labor Writer Gives Some Interesting Statistics.

LOCAL CONDITIONS COMPARED

The Date Set For Eight-Hour Day in the I. T. U. Jurisdiction—Large Fund to Be At Disposal of Unions—Practically Conceded in New York City.

On January 1 began the preparations by Union printers throughout the United States to put into effect on January 1, 1906, the eight-hour workday for all printers employed in book and job offices. This movement is one of progress, and judging from the large vote cast in its favor when the proposition was submitted to a popular vote, together with the raising of a large fund to be used as "ammunition" in case of a fight must be made, the movement cannot be otherwise than a success.

Of the 42,000 Union printers in the United States, fully 25,000 already enjoy the eight-hour day, in many cities a seven-hour day being in force in newspaper offices, among which are Washington and Baltimore. Here in Washington, of the 2,000 members of Columbia Union, about 1,400 (in the Government Printing Office and the TRADES UNIONIST office) have the eight-hour day; 200 (on the Star, Times and Post) have the seven-hour day, and the remainder, about 300, are working nine hours a day in down-town book and job offices.

Taking the entire United States, 25,000 Union printers have the eight-hour day, and the fight is to be made for the enforcement of the eight-hour law for the 17,000 Union printers who are working nine hours.

The 25,000 Union printers who work but seven and eight hours receive wages ranging from $3 to $7 per day, the vast majority averaging from $4 to $5 a day. Among these are included all the newspaper men, machine operators and floor men.

The 17,000 printers who work nine hours a day are in the book and job offices, and they receive wages ranging from $1.50 to $3.50, the vast majority averaging $2.25 to $2.50 per day.

Note the difference in both hours and wages: Here is the International Typographical Union with 42,000 members; 25,000 work short hours and get high wages; 17,000 work long hours and get low wages. Why the discrepancy? Because the 25,000 have been aggressive all the time, and the 17,000 indifferent. The highest wages of the 17,000 nine-hour men are the lowest wages of the 25,000 eight and seven-hour men. The condition of things being so, it is the least that could be done for the 17,000 that the hour be taken from their workday, reducing it to eight hours, even though their wages still be lower, to the extent of a dollar or two a day, than those who already have the shorter workday.

The entire membership of the International Typographical Union, consisting of 42,000 printers, have joined hands and issued a declaration that the 17,000 of their number shall have the eight-hour day on January 1, 1906; that in all offices which refuse this demand, work shall cease. Not only was this declaration issued by referendum vote, but also by popular vote they have assessed themselves and are now accumulating a "war" fund at the rate of $4,000 a week. This "war ammunition" will amount to $180,000 before January 1, 1906. Not only is plenty of money being collected to pay all men out-of-work benefits who may have to strike, but the International officers and organizers and the officers of all the local unions are waging a campaign that will gather in every non-unionist and make him a soldier in the Union Army before the fight comes. The employing printers of New York have conceded the eight-hour day to take effect on the date fixed, which is a good indication.

Every member of the union should consider himself an organizer, and arouse the enthusiasm of all members of the craft for the eight-hour day. It must and will come, regardless of the cost.

OPEN SHOP A FAILURE.

The Cole-Davis Shoe Co., of Chicago, Indorses the Label.

After six months' trial of the "open shop" policy advocated by the Chicago Employers' Association, the Cole-Davis Shoe Co. has withdrawn from the Boot and Shoe Manufacturers' Association and signed a closed shop agreement with the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union. Edward M. Cole, president of the company, said that he had taken the step for business reasons, because he had found out that it paid to have the union shop.

"We never had any serious trouble with the union," said Mr. Cole, "and discontinued the use of the stamp in common with the other manufacturers in the city six months ago. At that time all the shoe manufacturers combined and declared for the open shop. I find that many of our best customers demand the union stamp, and I do not propose to lose their trade through standing for an abstract principle that means nothing for me.

Out of the 200 shoe workers whom we employ I do not suppose there are one dozen who are not paid up members of the union. They will have to get in line with the others or quit, as I have signed a union agreement and will carry out its provisions. I have no criticism to make of the policy of my competitors. They can suit themselves, but I want the union stamp in my business and have taken the necessary steps to get it."

Labor News

There are 90,000 musicians in the United States.

Of the 385,770 wage-earners reporting to the New York Bureau of Labor Statistics, there were, 9,175, or 2.4 per cent. who were idle throughout third quarter of 1904.

An official of the Schenectady, N. Y., plant of the American Locomotive Company says that the plant will soon be running with its full force.

The National Tube Company's mill at Lorain, Ohio, in all its departments resumed after six weeks' idleness. Two thousand men will go to work.

Almost 375,000 miners and quarrymen are represented by ten organizations and eighty-two delegates in the Trade Union Congress of Great Britain.

At the annual meeting of the Commercial Travelers' Association of Canada, the proposal to reduce the mortuary benefit fund was defeated by an overwhelming majority.

Contracts have been made with Belgian foremen to teach Chinese workmen the management of the machinery and the most improved European methods of glass-making.

The International Union of Steam Engineers of Philadelphia, Pa., promises startling disclosures at the hearing started in order to enforce the law that engineers shall be licensed.

During the past year 125 unions have affiliated with the California State Federation of Labor, and more than twenty Locals have been organized through the direct influence of the Federation.

The Jacksonville labor unions are on a boom. Every trade is thoroughly organized and work is plentiful, there being no strikes or talk of any. The building trade is especially on a boom, and there is work for more men.

Chief Factory Inspector Delaney, of Pennsylvania, has prepared a new bill to govern his department to present to the State Legislature, which will greatly enlarge his powers.

An inventor of Springfield, O., has perfected a screw-making machine, which will perform the work of nearly a score of the present screw machines and increase the output and decrease the cost proportionately.

The request of the Western Maryland trainmen for shorter hours and an increase in pay and payment for overtime, has been refused by the company. General Manager H. G. Clark told them the earnings of the road did not warrant such concessions.

A new wage agreement for 12,000 bridge and structural iron workers throughout the United States has been decided upon by the executive committee of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers. The scale provides for 35 to 45 cents an hour, according to locality.

D. I. Murphy, Secretary of the Panama Canal Commission, has sent out a notice to the laboring men of the country to be on their guard against so-called labor exchanges which are holding out promises of employment on the Panama Canal and exacting a fee of a dollar for each applicant.

A conference of 200 labor delegates from all parts of the Transvaal recently met at Pretoria, South Africa. Ex-General Botha sent a resolution sympathizing with its efforts to make the Transvaal a white man's country, as embodied in the motion, which recommended the prohibition of Asiatic immigration.

In Minnesota wages in the flour and grist milling industry range from $3 to $36 a week. The day varies from eight to twelve hours. Ten hours is the maximum in the metal and foundry workers, and the compensation is from $3 to $35 weekly. The same hours apply to the laundry workers, with the wages ranging from $2 to $25.

A movement is on foot to consolidate the three organizations of wood-working crafts in England. The Associated Carpenters and Joiners' Society have decided in favor of the amalgamation project by a vote of 1950 to 513. The resolution declaring the absolute necessity to the interests of the trade that an amalgamation of the three existing societies should take place was adopted in the summer at a joint conference of the other two organizations, the Amalgamated Society and the General Union of Operative Carpenters.

Many Thanks for the Compliment.

To M. G. R: In the language of the old colored woman, (partly): "I don't know who yer is," but would be pleased to have you make yourself known to me. I willingly relinquish all claim to the presidency of Columbia Union to my successful opponent of last year's race for delegate—T. C. Parsons (the people's choice), and the able foreman of the Washington Post, Mr. Chas. C. Thompson. But—when you come to mentioning a few of the down town people for delegate to Toronto—remember, that although defeated last year (and by a thoroughbred), I am not dismayed, and will, when the time comes, hand around my little "cardboards." The vote tendered me at the last election, warrants, I believe, my entering the contest again this year with the hope that the number will be materially enlarged, and I herewith, provided you think the same on both propositions—appoint you one of my "working force." Downtown candidates for delegate have been slow in announcing themselves this year, but as soon as the snow and ice disappear from the streets and pavements, and the "bee" begins to buzz—look out. Hoping to locate you at some future time,

I am yours, fraternally,

Industrialism.

We have received a communication from WM. D. HAYWOOD, who is secretary-treasurer of the Western Federation of Miners, and one of the leaders in the attempt to secure an organization of all trades unionists on industrialist lines, with a political program in the background. There is no doubt that the intention of leaders in this new movement, who met in Chicago last month, is to create a strong central organization that will permit of political action and a propaganda in keeping with the radical ideas of its founders.

It seems to be in bad taste at this time, when a representative of the Western Federation of Miners has awakened interest in the struggle of the miners of Colorado against the corporate interests controlling the mines in that State and the appeal for aid being responded to, to start a movement which means a virtual throwing down the gage of battle to the American Federation of Labor, while taking aid from its members through its subordinate bodies. It may not be fair to assume that any funds collected for aid to the miners of Colorado may be diverted to aid the new organization which is endeavoring to make its advance in the Eastern States, but it is not good taste to say the least.

The communication referred to is as follows:

DEAR SIRS AND BROTHERS:

If possible, we would like to obtain two copies of your subscription list if you have the same in type. The object of this request is that we desire to send to every individual we can reach a copy of the manifesto issued in Chicago, January 4th, 1905, in behalf of industrial unionism. Experience has taught us to obtain results there must be unity of action, solidarity of all workers on the industrial as well as the political field. Recognizing the fact that your subscribers are progressive, we ask you to co-operate with us as far as possible, at least, to the extent of enabling us to present this living, vital question to your readers if not through your columns to them individually.

Trusting that you will be able to comply, and assuring you that we will be pleased to reciprocate,

I remain,
Yours fraternally,
WM. D. HAYWOOD,
Chairman, Executive Committee.

A Level-Headed Movement.

We have noted with much interest the attention commanded by the discussion in our columns of the advisability of starting a company, to be composed of wage-workers, who shall pool their savings and employ them in purchasing property for cash, and thus make for stockholders the additional profit that cash money generally commands.

The idea was first suggested by A. F. BLOOMER, and was so warmly indorsed by Mr. AUGUST DONATH that he was called upon, both by Mr. BLOOMER and others, to lend his efforts—devote his known experience to the furtherance of so practical an object.

We are glad to note that Mr. DONATH has responded to this invitation, and with his usual energy has entered upon the work. He has secured the co-operation of a number of active men, who are now canvassing for subscribers to the stock of the proposed company, and their success already reported has justified Mr. DONATH in calling a meeting for next Tuesday evening at Secretary SEIBOLD'S office, Typographical Temple, the object being a thorough canvass of the situation and the organization of the company.

We believe efforts of this sort, in capable hands, pay financially and in other ways. They increase not only the resources, but the influence of those participating, and influence in the Capitol City is sometimes a very essential quantity.

We heartily indorse the enterprise, and wish it success beyond the fondest dreams of its promoters.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

"Uncle Ike" Williamson told me one the other day about Sylvester Norritt ("One-eyed Jersey") that I had not heard before. "Jersey" was a noted character from several years before the war until probably twenty-five years ago, and almost every printer in that day knew him, for he was a most persistent tourist. As the story goes, "Jersey" had the misfortune, a couple of years before the war, to be arrested in Philadelphia for the usual offense among printers of that day and was brought before a magistrate, of whom there formerly existed many, who ordinarily let printers off with a lecture. The Judge looked him over.

"A printer, eh?" said he.

"Yes, sir," said "Jersey."

"Yes, yes, a printer," said the Judge. "Well, I guess I'll have to let you go; but it's a pity you drink so."

"Yes, sir," said "Jersey."

"Now," said the Judge, "if, whenever you feel like taking a drink, you'd take what it costs—the few pennies—and put it away, in a little while you'd have a barrel full."

"Yes, sir," said "Jersey," and feeling through his pockets, he fished out two coppers. "I've got these to start with. I guess I'd better go out and get the barrel."

If he didn't get a barrel before the day was over his luck was different on that occasion from what it usually was.

I don't like to be deprived entirely of the use of my friend Brockwell as a source of anecdote, notwithstanding there has been some protest. Said he the other evening, being, as usual, in reminiscent mood:

"One of the funniest things I ever saw happened in Raleigh when I was a young fellow. A man named Bill Staver had got into some sort of trouble—I don't remember what it was, and it don't make any difference, for it has nothing to do with the story—and a policeman came up into the office to arrest him. Bill had a "take" of society news or telegraph or something on his frame and was hustling up the long primer to beat mice a-fighting when the policeman told him he wanted him.

"'All right,' said Bill; 'wait till I finish this line and I'll come.'

"'Oh, I kain't wait for you to finish lines,' said the policeman; 'shut up your box and come on,' and he reached up and turned the capcase upside down over the lower case."

"We had a little yaller barber in Raleigh at that time," pursued Brockwell, "and he was blooded clear through. A big, raw-boned mountaineer came into the shop one day, and before he got into the chair he took a six-shooter about a yard long out of his hip pocket, which he laid across his lap as he sat down.

"'Now, looky-yeer, you mis'able yaller coon,' said he, 'I want you to shave me, and ef yo' draw a drap o' blood I'm gwine to bore a hole through yo' 'at a deer'd git lost in. Hyah me?'

"'Yassah, yassah,' says the barber, 'Ah hyahs yo'.'

"The shaving went on all right and when it was over the mountaineer said:

"'Boy, wasn't yo' sca'hed while yo' was shavin' me?'

"'Nussah, Ah wasn't,' said the barber. Ef Ah'd a drawed a drap o' blood f'm yo', sah, Ah'd a seed it fust, and den Ah'd a made a gully in yo' throat as big as a turpentine trough, so's to keep yo' f'm shootin' an' sca'hin' de neighbors.'"

I received a letter from Frank B. Mercer the other day. He will be remembered by many as a compositor in the office and later as a proof-reader on the Record, but went West about fifteen years ago and settled as a rancher on what are now the outskirts of Spokane, Wash., though the city is growing up so close to him that he can hear the gongs of the electric cars. He has solved the problem, How to be happy though married.

Charlie Thompson and Tommy Shober paid a visit to the G. P. O. one night last week. "Finest I ever," was their verdict after inspecting the linotype plant. Indorsing what a correspondent said last week, I should like to see Mr. Thompson president of the Union—not necessarily this year, for he is young yet, but in the near future. And speaking of presidential possibilities. I have heard Judge Charles H. Ennis spoken of favorably—not necessarily this year, again, for he is still younger.

I have recently received a copy of the the Pacific Unitarian, accompanied by a note as follows:

Unitarianism is a convenience for certain college professors and others of independent thought, realizing, under the prevailing opinion of society, the necessity of professing a faith, yet reluctant to confess the semi-barbaric dogmas of orthodoxy.

I remember hearing the Unitarian and Universalist doctrines contrasted many years ago, it being stated that while the latter believe that God is too merciful to damn any of His creatures, the former hold that all mankind are too good to be damned. An extract on the title-page from the last sermon of the Rev. John White Chadwick, of that church, before his death, being the last sentences of the sermon, seems to bear out this latter idea, for everybody thinks he is doing as near right as he can under the circumstances, and probably is. The extract is in the following beautiful language:

A certain stout sincerity—that is the way of life alike for the individual and the group, urban, State, or national. There is much inevitable confusion; there are voices that mislead; there are paths that promise flowery pleasantness, and beguile to jingle or morass. But given a steadfast wish and will to know, the better way, though it be hard, and walk in it, though it be long, then in despite of our mistakes and failures we shall be worthy to be counted on the side of those who are not the enemies and hinderers, but the friends and helpers of mankind. And there is no other great divide which is so great as that which parts asunder those who must be assigned, however roughly, to one or the other of these mighty and opposing hosts.

A sufficient number of shares having been taken to warrant an organization of what my friend Donath persists in calling my child—the investment company which I have advocated a number of times in this column—a meeting will be held in Typographical Temple next Tuesday evening, at 7.30 to perfect an organization. If you want in or want any shares, let us have your name, and attend the meeting if you can. The shares are to be $1 a month or a pay day, I forget which; but neither will cripple one to any great extent, and it will be astonishing how soon we will have a sum with which to operate. An association formed on the lines I advocate less than a year ago now controls four pieces of real estate and receives the rent therefrom, and all at less than the ordinary cigar-bill expense of the members. Mr. Donath is an astute business man and one to whose probity and integrity every old member of Columbia Union can testify. With him to advise there can be no failure. About two hundred shares are taken already, and it is probable that the number will reach a thousand. This is not intended to be a principal place of investment for members, except the few who choose to make it so, but a side issue, in which will be invested such small sums as to be scarcely noticeable when paying them, but the whole of which, with earnings, will be quite considerable. Let us handle our own money, instead of letting the capitalists do it for us, and reap the usufruct.

I have received from "Silent Reader" an ironical disquisition which presumes to define the aims and objects of the "Knockers." The color of the skim is nature's racial line of distinction, but character, as the higher consideration, frequently shines forth in such abundance from those of the "inferior" races that lines of physical demarcation are eliminated or lost sight of. This is the tribute paid to honest worth and their recognition exalts rather than harms anyone. A local druggist recently related to me an experience met with during the holiday season. A young colored man came into his store with face beaming with gladness and produced a package of bills amounting to about $400. He was directed to the place by the name on the package. The clerk having the money in charge and on his way to the bank had placed the package in his hip pocket and was proceeding on his wheel when the loss was discovered. His surprise at finding the money on his return to the store may be imagined. Both he and the proprietor are to be congratulated that the money was found by an honest colored man rather than by a dishonest white man. CYCLE.

GOSSIP FROM THE G. P. O.

First Division.

Did you get a box of cigars?

Geo. Schoeneman returned to office on Tuesday.

Did you ever witness one of the bowling contests? If not, you are a loser.

The "fruit" lady is a delightful innovation, and we presume is liberally patronized.

Frank M. Lloyd being temporarily detailed on the "Y," has been rated up. W. A. Beasley is on the rule job.

Have you attended the Hebrew fair in Washington Light Infantry Hall? If not, you are missing great opportunities.

Sorry to report on the sick list during the week, our friends, Ashley and Follett, of the "Y" and Oscar B. Bellinger, of the ring alley.

Mr. E. Heidingsfeld, "folio" man for make-up Haworth, has been absent in New York, this week, occasioned by the illness of his mother.

Glad to learn that J. H. Babcock, of the proof-room, is getting along nicely and will be able to report for duty soon. Joe has hosts of friends.

Did you see those Carlisle Indians pass through this division on Saturday? Maybe our Carlisle Indians didn't know them. Don't you believe it.

"They say" that Mr. C. W. Sower, the recently elected chaplain of Government Printing Office Council 211, to succeed Mr. J. C. Haas makes a fine official.

The handsome young lady at the lunch counter the other day subbing for the "steady-lady" attracted the undivided attention of all the sports.

Last Monday's Star had a fine half-tone of our fellow-workman, John B. Dickman, the active representative of more than a half dozen organizations.

An infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Schoeneman passed away since our last letter. Mr. S. has been employed on the "Y" for a number of years.

"They say" that there is a compositor in our division who resembles Hon. Chauncey M. Depew. We are not a good guesser, since Saturday so we don't know.

No, it is not our say this time. We have reference to that bowling contest the other night with the Third. We were outplayed fairly and squarely, and that's all there is to report.

Have you heard the morning Carol on the other side of the room? Hutch says it is a dandy. We would not like to either spell out, or put in figures the combined ages of the vocalists.

Did the ground-hog see his shadow on the anniversary day? We know he did. Let us hope that the usual prediction with reference to six weeks continued winter weather will not prove true.

Did you know that there is a decided improvement in the elevation service? Have a little patience, don't get in a bad humor, and remember that the sudden changes in the atmospheric surroundings will jar anything; even yourself.

A liberal subscription was taken up in this division during the week for Frank H. Rose, of the night force. Owing to continued ill health Mr. Rose is obliged to leave this climate. He is well-known, having worked in this division while we were located in the old building.

It must certainly be very gratifying to the management of this printing establishment to note the large number of daily visitors, dispite the weather. Captain Harris's efficient corps of assistants, invariably guide them through this wonderful first division. Did you ever hear their "wonderful story?"

Didn't the three imposers, Messrs. Burnside, Garrette and McFarlane have a strenuous day on Monday? Hardly took time to pay their compliments to Pay Clerk Wilver and receive their envelopes. They, certainly were very busy, and just working as hard as ever when the whistle blowed at half-past four.

"They say" it would be a genuine source of satisfaction to discover the individual who indulges in the daily, filthy habit of moping his dirty, inky hands on the clean towels in the wash room. There is neither occasion or excuse for the foul practice, and an example will surely be made of the slippery cuss—when he is detected.

Recent advices from Memphis, Tenn., contain the gratifying news that Dr. James D. Bridger has already acquired quite a lucrative practice. Doctor B. has an army of admiring friends in the G. P. O. who will be pleased to know this. We are told that his first work in the G. P. O., was in alley 2, of the old Document room. You can't keep a good man down.

Glenn W. Buckingham, of this division, was one of the successful contestants in the recent Evening Times guessing contest on the total number of votes cast for the Republican and Democratic candidates for President at the November election. I believe he came within a hundred thousand, more or less, which was mighty good guessing. We saw the check for the prize, the best evidence that he was a winner.

After getting a peep at the corrected time-slip for the present fortnight, we note the following slug changes; might add the market was fairly active. We lost two good men from our side of the room—slugs 42 and 53 to the bill room side, assigned to slugs 93 and 97. Slug 97, Billie Lentz to 116, ring alley. That alley, adjoining the "cage," is represent by Colonel Bentz and Captain Lentz. There now, where's your poets? There's the subject.

Saturday's Post, in an extended notice of Grace Reformed Church, on Fifteenth Street, between Rhode Island Avenue and P street, wherein President Roosevelt has attended service ever since he has been in Washington, gives Nelson P. Moyer, the Precentor, a flattering notice. Mr. Moyer is now an imposer in the Fourth Division, but was formerly employed in this division, and is classed among the ex's on the S. G. C. A good half-tone of Mr. Moyer appeared with the article. Oh, I tell you, some of these Pennsylvania boys can sing, and Mr. Moyer is a "stand-patter" when it comes to the high notes.

Mr. John McVicar, ex-President of the I. T. U., passed through the office the other afternoon, accompanied by ex-delegate Philip S. Sleele. Mr. McVicar not only formed many new acquaintances, but had the pleasure of renewing old friendships made more than a quarter of a century ago. We understand that he and his wife have just returned from a European trip. After a brief sojourn in Washington they will return to their home in Detroit, Mich.

Henry J. Frank, one of the most polite and unassuming members of this chapel, was selected to escort a young gentleman from one of the principal cities of Germany through the Government Printing Office. We understand that the gentleman visits the United States for the purpose of obtaining ideas, plans, etc., to be used in the construction of an extensive printing establishment. The visitor was not only most appreciative of Mr. Frank's entertaining efforts, but was amazed at the immensity of this establishment. Before returning home the cities of Philadelphia, New York and Chicago will be visited.

Always with us in "bill season," or during a session of Congress—we mean our handsome friend Kelley—not Hubert—but John J., pressman. By the way Mr. Kelley is an expert pressman on the presses used exclusively for printing bills, and all other printed work appertaining thereto. When the "Bill section" gets to cracking near the close of the short session, several presses are employed, and it just makes you nervous to see how the work is gotten out. Just jot it right down that this division—night or day— is equal to any and every demand upon it which has been fully demonstrated times without number.

Third Division.

Joseph J. Doyle was transferred to the Sixth Division Tuesday morning. Joseph has our best wishes.

Chairman Goodkey is pretty quiet just now. It is always very quiet just before a thunder storm. The wise man, like Brer Rabbit, will lay low.

Victor O. Baker, of Baltimore, who was in this room last winter and has been in the Spess for some months past, has resigned to accept a first-class situation in his home city, leaving Washington Friday, February 3.

Frank Smith, of the Night Proof Room, announces himself as a candidate for delegate to Toronto. I have it on good authority that Mr. Smith is apt to get some votes on election day; in other words, he is looked upon as a winner.

There is a lot of hot air talk floating around at present about who is to be the next Public Printer. If anybody tells you he knows anything about it, you are safe in informing such a person that he knows not whereof he speaks. When the President speaks we shall know, and no sooner.

Last Tuesday, deep in the hurry of a "committee hearing," one of the boys showed me his take, in which this sentence occurred: "Then that will make the tribe probably, I don't know in round numbers, but it will add I don't know just how many—" And then the chairman of the committee interrupted the witness. And well he might have.

Look at the matter in whatever way you will, the down-town folks have a logical candidate who, if nominated (and she will be if her consent can be secured), will surely be elected. I refer to Miss Teresa McDonald, who won golden opinions from everybody by her graceful and generous action in turning her friends to the support of Miss Wilson a year ago. It is not too much to say that Miss McDonald would poll a large part of the Wilson vote. Many of her friends hope that she will consent to run.

The Department proof reader occasionally unearths some singular errors on the part of those Prides of the Printery located in the main proof room. Our consul at Havre, France, Mr. A. M. Thackera, in speaking of the output of automobiles by French manufacturers as compared to the American product, used these words: "With their unbounded resources, with their indomitable energy—" The intelligent compositor set up the sentence so as to make it read, "with their automobile energy," and it went through the black man, the blue man, and the red man, and again through the reviser, finally landing in the hands of the reviser at the Department of Commerce and Labor, who was able to mark in the correct word.

A spirited contest at tenpins took place on the 2d instant between teams representing the Third and First Divisions, which resulted in three straight victories by the Third Division team.

The score follows:

It isn't pleasant to have your case denuded of valuable sorts by the "night man." But it is a happening that, we have been told, is impossible to avoid, as the night men cannot stop in their mad rush to distribute. Expecting their incursions, we try to bear philosophically what must be endured. But we emphatically protest against having our private property stolen from our frames, which is a nightly occurrence, especially if the property consist of any sort of fruit, or medicine in the form of tablets. A friend was robbed of a jar of ointment for chapped hands a short time since. "Anything eatable or portable" seems to be the night man's motto. I suppose that when some tender-hearted people read this, they will say, "You shouldn't say such harsh things about your fellow-workmen; they are pretty decent fellows after all." My friends, you can't reach the conscience of a sneak-thief by any such course as that. A man who would steal an orange, or an apple, or a box of medicine out of your drawer, would steal a house if he could carry it off and exchange it for a drink. I have no sympathy for such people, or with their apologists.

A Bookbinder's Dream.

As I completed reading the TRADES UNIONIST last week I fell off to sleep and I dreamed a dream:

I thought I was again present at an entertainment of the Bookbinder's Union. The Rifles Armory Hall was brilliantly lighted; the stage settings all that could be desired; all the old favorites, Holt, Esterly, Spellbring, Ludlow (of New York) and all the others were there in their best form, seemingly.

As I looked about the hall I saw most of my bookbinder acquaintances, many of whom were accompanied by their wives and daughters, while others were there with their best girls. This all tended to increase my joyful anticipations, for I felt certain that with all the usual accompaniments the show could not fail to be a good one.

After a bit, however, I noticed that each joke as it was "sprung" fell entirely flat and was followed by a painful silence which was only broken by the sound of a deep groan coming from the rear of the hall.

"What can be the matter?" I found myself saying. "Who is that groaning in the rear of the hall?"

I arose from my place feeling very uncomfortable and considerably crestfallen at the failure of the jokes, and proceeded to the rear of the hall determined to make my escape rather than endure it longer, when at once the whole matter became plain to me. There stood "Pard" Bloomer, the author of all the jokes the bookbinders could not understand nor appreciate. Then I woke up,

The moral of all this is obvious: "Wake up."

PIKELETS.

"MAN WANTS BUT LITTLE."

'Mid grasping for riches and ditto for fame,
'Tis hard to conceive, at this stage of the game,
That mortals there be who, as thro' life they go,
Want little indeed in this vale here below;
Yet, as to the weather, man must be a hero
If he wants more than little here below-zero.

A SYMPOSIUM OF SUCCESS.

With apologies to Pard Belcher, who's stated odd times, that never (well, scarcely ever), takes he kindly to rhymes.

"What is the secret of success?" asked the grim-visaged Sphinx;
"Push!" said the Button, heedless alike of nods and of winks;
"Take pains," said the Window, as in the bright sunshine it shone;
"Never be led," said the Pencil, "make a mark of your own,"
"Keep cool," said the calm, crystallized Ice, frozen firm in a block;
"Be up to date," said the Calendar, sustained by the Clock;
"Your head never lose," said the half empty Barrel with a whoop;
"Make for things greater," said the Nutmeg, still out of the soup;
"Make much of small things," said the Microscope, never so gay;
"Do nothing off-hand," said the Glove, in an off-handed way;
"Reflect well, as I do," said the Mirror, with face beaming bright;
"The work you're 'sooted' for do," said the Flue (soot out of sight);
"Strike while iron's hot," said the Hammer in smithy employed;
"Blaze well your way," said the Coal, and all sin, dear (cinder), avoid;
"Get a pull with the ring," said the Doorbell, chiming for life;
"Be ever sharp in your dealings," said the keen Butcher Knife;
"Find and stick to a good thing," said the Glue—guess it was right;
"Trust to your stars for success," said the calm, star-studded Night;
"Strive a good impression to make," said the Seal (motto profound);
"Turn all things to account," said the Lathe, in its merry-go-round;
"Make the most of your good points," said the Compass—it knew it;
"Always look out for a snap," said the Camera—"I do it;"
"Be ready a good turn to do," said the Crank in its turn;
"Soak evr'y cent," said the Sponge, "and you'll have money to burn."

WILLING TO "DIVVY."

The man with a million is willing to share
The title he holds as a rich millionaire,
For though "million" he keeps, he's not apt to care
How many poor mortals live largely on "aire."

PATCH AND DISPATCH.

In some things, perhaps, Brother Patch may be slow
(This is conjecture as we really don't know),
Yet in filling a case he has scarce a match,
'Cause the "dis" that Patch does is done with "dis"-Patch.

MUCH AT "STEAK" HAS THE VEAL-ON-US BEEF TRUST.

Somebody has said—it may be he has vowed—
That the Beef Trust at last is utterly cowed
And cowed it should be in its efforts to steer
A great bull-dozing scheme by making beef dear;
Yes, and not only cowed, but sent hiking to —well,
Where Trusts can't rob the poor in the products they sell.

BE A MAN.

JOHN HENRY MALEES.

Suppose this life be weary and the heart is somewhat sad.
You can mend it if you only will but try.
Suppose the coat is old and worn, if the heart beneath be glad,
Comfort will come, and it does no good to cry—
Just be a Man.

When trouble comes too near you and the bell tolls soft and low;
When sorrow fills the heart and within you feel the pain,
Just gather up the fragments, as the days they come and go,
Fall in line without a murmur and go marching on again—
Thus be a Man.

What though the passion seize you and you're tempted to do wrong,
Just turn around and go the other way.
When the heart is sore and troubled and, within there is no song,
Then it is the time when you should say—
I'll be a Man.

Let us seek not to best our neighbor in the struggle and the strife,
Remember we are brothers one and all.
Rather try to make it pleasant while passing through this life
For we do not know how soon will come call
From the Great Man.

CHILD LABOR.

Shut them from the light of day.
Dividends! Dividends!
Rob them of their youth and play,
Dividends! Dividends!
Stunt and dwarf the coming race,
Flabby limb and bloodless face—
Prison mill the infant's place—
Dividends! Dividends!
Steal their freedom and their joy.
Dividends! Dividends!
Sacrifice the girl and boy,
Dividends! Dividends!
Foolish, blind, impotent state,
Sowing dragon-teeth of hate—
Save the nurslings from this fate—
Dividends! Dividends!

STORM-TOSSED.

Sometimes when pressed by trials sore,
We almost lose our trust in God,
And feel we cannot love him more
Unless he spares the chastening rod.

When storms of sorrow round us sweep,
The Father's hand we cannot see;
When scenes of anguish make us weep
We doubt if he can pitying be.

And some, alas, give up the fight,
To keep their faith no longer try;
Nor care if it be wrong or right,
By their own hands they choose to die.

Oh, sad and stricken soul, still trust,
Believe thy Heavenly Father's love;
If bear more sorrow still we must,
We shall know why in realms above.

And if through tribulation we
Among his chosen people stand,
From pain and sorrow then we'll be Forever free at God's right hand.

The Mirth Moon.

The most interesting event of the year in the astronomical world was the discovery of the ninth moon of Saturn. The credit for this discovery belongs to Professor Pickering, of Harvard. The new satellite has been named Phoebe. Professor Pickering's investigations were made the basis of a series of predictions of Phoebe's position during the latter part of the year, and his predictions have been practically verified. Phoebe is supposed to be about 200 miles in diameter, and makes a revolution about Saturn in eighteen months. —Epworih Herald.

NAVY YARD ITEMS.

Commander R. G. Davenport, chairman of the wage board in the Yard, has been detailed for temporary duty at the Mills Building as a member of the naval retiring board.

* * *

S. E. Tilton has received a temporary appointment as a third class architectural draftsman in the Department of Yards and Docks.

* * *

C. H. Kindle, expert ordnance machinist, has returned from Cramp's ship yard, where he was detailed temporarily in connection with fitting the 8-inch guns on the U. S. S. Colorado.

* * *

W. B. Stone and J. W. Kindle have been promoted to leading men in Ordnance Department.

* * *

John H. Mills and B. F. Toulotte have secured appointments through the civil service as messengers in Ordnance Department.

* * *

J. E. Price, having served his probation, has been permanently appointed as a first class ship draftsman in Construction and Repair Department.

* * *

The ordnance time clerks have moved into their new quarters in the Yards and Docks building lately occupied by the seaman gunners.

* * *

The large locomotive crane for use in the coal storage and handling plant made under contract by the Browning Engineering Co., of Cleveland, Ohio, is expected daily. It will find plenty of work on its arrival.

* * *

The various improvements designed by and under the supervision of Yards and Docks, are at present at a standstill owing to the extreme cold weather. This necessitates the laying off temporarily of many workmen.

* * *

After receiving the approval of the Bureau of Equipment, the Construction and Repair Department will construct a telegraph house on board the Dolphin. A perfect system of wireless telegraphy will be established on board, previous to sailing to the West Indies.

* * *

The board appointed to examine candidates for the position of draftsman, Yards and Docks, examined the applicants, but none of the applicants came up to the standard required.

The Bureau of Yards and Docks has submitted to Congress, through the Secretary of the Treasury, an estimate for an additional $100,000 for this yard for new buildings. It is hoped that this will be but a beginning of the estimates furnished by Captain Pendleton, which called for nearly $3,000,000 for new shops and machinery.

* * *

Robert Slaughter, a colored employe of the Yard, not having the fear of the law before his eyes, thought his wage did not balance his labors, so he concluded he would make up the difference by purloining bronze castings. He has awakened from his pipe dream and will no doubt think unkindly of Judge Kimball, who held him under $500 for the grand jury. It is a shame to Slaughter a coon for such a trifle as a hundred pounds of brass.

* * *

John F. Van Horn, who for many years has been leading man in ordnance, died last week of heart failure.

* * *

The death of H. G. Forsberg causes many thoughts of Auld Lang Syne among the older employees of the Yard, as he and his business associate, Mr. Murray, both served their apprenticeship in the Yard as machinists.

* * *

John M. Mitchell, who for many years has conducted an undertaking establishment on the Navy Yard, passed over the river last week. At one time he worked in the Yard as a cabinet maker.

* * *

There is much sickness in the Yard at present and the different Relief Associations are taxed to their utmost to meet the demands upon them. Columbia Lodge, No. 174, I. A. M., also feels the severe drain on its treasury.

* * *

Columbia Lodge, No. 174, held its regular meeting last Wednesday night and was well attended, although the weather was zero. The debate for the evening: "Resolved, That woman is the weaker vessel was participated in by Brother G. W. Price in the affirmative, who, in an exhaustive argument, attempted to prove that woman was simply an appendix, a mere adjunct to man—something thrown in to fill up a vacancy. The negative was sustained by your correspondent, who, at the conclusion, invited his opponent to accept a cigar from the box voted to the defender of womanhood.

* * *

A new poet has sprung into existence in the Yard, which will necessitate my taking to the tall timber. I cannot as yet determine if it is a spontaneous combustion or a deliberate attempt to outdo Kipling.

For the benefit of the boys I will give his first effusion:

GUNS.

Guns! Guns! Guns!
I'm sick o' making of guns,
Cylinders, mounts and slides;
Pivots and gears and guides;
Levers, and locks, and lands;
Jackets, and yokes, and stands;
I wish the whole lot would go to pot
And rid us forever of guns.

Guns! Guns! Guns!
We'er making a million o' guns,
Hammer and file and chip;
Lay off, machine and fit,
Fiddle, and work, and sweat;
And thank the Lord if you get
The job that you do, to come out true
And finish one more of our guns.

Guns! Guns! Guns!
We build 'em by thousands of tons;
We turn 'em and bore 'em,
We mount 'em and store 'em;
Won't we ever get through building guns?

JIM BROWN,
Secondary Mount Shop.

* * *

In an interview with a prominent Senator, who has been many years in public life and who will soon retire, I asked him if he would leave the Senate fully satisfied with his record He stated that few men who were active in public affairs ever quitted the stage without a feeling of profound discouragement "Whether successful or not, as the world would judge them, a sense of sadness or disappointment seems to prevail over every other sentiment. They have obtained so few of their objects; they have fallen so far short of their ideal; they have seen so much more than ordinary men of the dangers and difficulties of nations and of the vice and meanness of public men. Power is a heavy burden and mankind a hard taskmaster to him who struggles virtuously against their passions and their errors. Success itself can not wipe out the sorrowful impression which originated in the conflict and the weariness contracted on the scene of action is prolonged even in the bosom of repose. I will always believe I might have done more for my country."

The New Investment Company.

I have been asked to call a meeting of those interested in the formation of a company that shall operate along the lines laid down in my late communication to the TRADES UNIONIST. The number of shares already subscribed seems to make the undertaking assured, and in order that something tangible may be arrived at as soon as possible, I take this method of requesting all subscribers and those who are considering the propriety of becoming such to meet at the Secretary's office, in the Typographical Temple, on Tuesday evening, 14th instant, at 7:30 o'clock. The meeting to be for the purpose of hearing fully what it is proposed the company shall do, for the recording of subscriptions to stock, and for the organization of the company. Payments on stock will not be expected at the proposed meeting, the date for such payment to be then determined. I hope every one, especially members of Typographical Union, No. 101, who believe in intelligent co-operative effort of this sort, will attend.

AUGUST DONATH.

A MESSAGE FROM THE STARS.

Lo, the prophets have arisen,
Men must halt and pause—
They will break the bonds of prison
Trim the tiger's claws;
Men may stifle, men may trifle
With the nation's laws,
But the prophets have arisen
In the people's cause.

Once arose a mighty Master
To unmake the laws,
And avert a world's disaster,
Save men from men's maws.
Then the pulse of life was frozen,
False, and full of flaws,
But the Master worked the faster
In the people's cause.

Can you hear the message, brother,
Sent for thee and me;
Do not hope the voice to smother,
Still the prophecy.
For the nation may be throttled
By sham laws and flaws,
But the prophets will revoke them
In the people's cause.

THE TRADES UNIONIST.

OFFICIAL ORGAN CENTRAL LABOR UNION, WASHINGTON BRANCH, AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

Vol. IX. No. 36 WASHINGTON, D. C., THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 16, 1905. Price, 3 Cents.

THE CENTRAL LABOR UNION

Members Smoked a "Sam Wilson" Cigar, Now Union-Made.

M. F. DORSEY OFF UNFAIR LIST

Cincinnati Cooperage Product Now Fair—Supply Houses Want to Furnish Material For New Building—Special Committee on Kernan Case Discharged.

The weekly meeting of the Central Labor Union was called to order at 8:10 p. m. on Monday night, President Dickman in the chair.

The minutes of the last regular meeting were read and approved.

Bills amounting to $25 were read and ordered paid.

Grievance Committee reported that a meeting of the committee had been held, but no aggrieved parties had appeared.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Stone and Building Laborers' Union, No. 46, inclosing copy of agreement adopted by that Union. Referred to Contract Committee.

From Carpenters' Union, No. 884, replying to communication from Secretary Winslow, of Central Labor Union, stating that subject matter contained therein will be presented to Carpenters Joint District Council. Placed on file.

From West Coast Company, of Chicago, stating that they would like to quote prices on rock gravel and other roofing for proposed labor temple. Referred to Committee on Building.

From Harry W. Barney, Clerk Committe on District of Columbia of House of Representatives, acknowledging receipt of resolutions favoring passage of cross-town railway bill, and that communication would receive due consideration.

From an anonymous writer, offering a site for purposed labor temple, location being Nos. 622-626 Eighth street northwest, now used as livery stables. Referred to Committee on Building.

CALL OF UNIONS.

Brewery Workmen: Stated that the Cincinnati Cooperage Co. had unionized its plant, and the difference with National Capital Brewing Co. on that account had been adjusted and the services of an arbitrator would not be needed.

Bartenders: Requested that M. F. Dorsey be removed from the "We do not patronize list." The request was granted.

Cigar Makers: Called attention to the Sam Wilson cigar, samples of which were distributed earlier in the evening, stating that it had been an unfair product for the past five years, but was now a strictly union-made cigar.

Musicians: Desired information about the proposed Working People's Concerts, and information was given by the chair.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Special committee to act in conjunction with Musicians Union relative to Kernan's Theater was discharged with thanks.

Adjourned.

Ladies' Dining Room. R. A. Driscoll, N. Cap. and G. Oyster pan roast, 10c.

Popular Concerts.

The first concert of the first series of popular concerts for the people will be given on Sunday, March 12, instead of Sunday, March 5, as previously announced. The remaining two concerts of the first two series will be given on the first Sunday in April and May, respectively.

The concerts will be given at National Rifles' Armory at 8:15 p. m. on dates above-mentioned, and will be of a high order of merit. The purpose of the promoters is to give the popular price concerts at a price as to reach the means of all who desire to attend.

Series tickets for the first three concerts (30 cents) can be secured at this office.

WANTED.—Ten men in each State to travel, tack signs, and distribute samples and circulars of our goods. Salary $75 per month; $3 per day for expenses. KUHLMAN CO., Dept. S, Atlas Building, Chicago. M18

A VALENTINE.

PARD PURSUING THE POETS.

The censor with his ruthless scythe
Hath laid our poets low.
We sadly miss their songs so blithe;
Our hearts are filled with woe.
—H. J. R.

LINES TO PARD.

"DEAL GENTLY WITH THE POETS, PARD."

Deal gently with the poets, Pard,
And let them brightly flit!
Their hides are much too thin to guard
Their souls from shafts of wit.

When sweetly sad they skim the sky,
Don't blast them with your curse!
Remember how in days gone by
You, too, got gay in verse.

Oh, Pard, let piping poets soar
Unstricken by your thrust,
Or, better still, get gay once more
And join the poet trust.
—ADAM BUGG.

A TRIBUTE TO BLOOMER.

Pard Bloomer is going to mow down the poets
Who write not according to rules;
From McPike and Malees, even down to Bugg-Talbott
He thinks they are nothing but fools.

T. A. R.. with his eye in a fine frenzy rolling,
Has no charms for this censor of verse;
Tim Tickle's bon mots only make him more frantic,
For he feels that there can be no worse.

His ideals are high, he fights for the right,
And he "gets thar" about once a week;
If you dare once to differ from ought that he says
Your figurative nose he will tweak.

Then all hail to Pard Bloomer, the reaper of trash!
True poets have no cause to fear
The swish of his scythe as he kills a bad rhyme;
Hats off as we give him a cheer!
—J. W. B.

Benefit for Wayne F. Byers.

On next Monday, at the Opera House, in Alexandria, a number of friends of Mr. Wayne F. Byers, a former linotype operator on the Washington Post, who was paralyzed about two years ago, propose tendering him a benefit. A drama will be presented and promises success.

Mr. Byers is an old member of Columbia Union and is now in a position to need the assistance of his fellow-members—something he has never asked and still refuses to accept, as a subscription or charity.

The entire seating capacity of the house is sold, and from a financial standpoint the presentation is already a success.

Tickets can be had of George H. Hayden, chairman of the Congressional Record chapel, and the prices are 25, 35, and 50 cents. Those who cannot attend the entertainment might want to purchase a 25-cent ticket, and thereby help a worthy cause, as there will be no soliciting.

The Washington Post of yesterday says: "Tickets have been placed on sale at Warfield's drug store for the performance of "Ten Nights in a Barroom," which will be given at the opera house by amateurs next Monday night for the benefit of Mr. Wayne Byers, a member of Washington Typographical Union, and who is an invalid."

THE PEOPLE'S VOICE.

INAUGURATION THOUGHT.

If in this land of brave and free
And fertile soil of liberty
There is a shout, prolonged and loud,
Have we not reason to be proud?
Has not the people's voice been spoken,
A voice which ne'er may cease to speak;
That higher voice of which the token—
The bulwark of the low and weak?

First here, to lift humanity,
Was heard that voice of liberty,
When to the breeze our flag unfurled
Amid the plaudits of the world—
And ever since, anon has spoken
For justice, righteousness and peace,
Shall stronger speak, the sound unbroken,
Till warfare cruel and strife shall cease.

And when the men of destiny
To guide the helm of liberty
It called: Brightly and glorified
These names shall shine—the true and tried,
Who with unswerving, pure devotion
Served well their country and their land,
Are dear to countrymen and nation,
And gratefully remembered, stand.

Then if here in this land of free
And fertile soil of liberty
There is a shout, prolonged and loud,
We have reason to be proud—
For here the people's voice is spoken—
A voice which ne'er may cease to speak;
That higher voice of which the token—
The bulwark of the low and weak.
—ALFRED DIETZ.

Personal Mention.

J. L. Rodier, special organizer in the field for Philadelphia Typographical Union, No. 2, was in the city over Sunday. Mr. Rodier reports conditions in Philadelphia improving in labor circles owing to the vigorous fight being made against the Inquirer.

James Wood, a member of the legislative committee representing Cigar makers International Union, has been compelled to undergo an operation on account of injuries received over a year ago at Tampa, Fla., during the big strike of cigar makers. Mr. Wood was assaulted by hired thugs of the bosses association after being warned to leave the city. It is expected his arm will have to be amputated. He is in Columbia Hospital, this city.

Stock Exchange.

We call attention of our readers to the advertisement of Havenner & Kennedy, stock brokers, 22-25 Home Life Insurance Building, Fifteenth and G streets northwest.

The active movement in stocks at this time of the year is given in daily reports from this establishment, who represent one of the most substantial firms in the country.

Mr. Kennedy, who is well and favorably known as a member of Columbia Typographical Union, branched out in the business world and is making a success of it.

Due Appreciation.

EDITORS TRADE UNIONIST:

The generous response of the employees of the Government Printing Office to the appeal for Aid for the Blind, made through Miss Smoot, was greatly appreciated by the inmates of the Home for the Blind and the Board of Directors, who wish to extend their thanks through the medium of your paper.

Matinee Euchre.

Woman's Auxiliary, No. 13, of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, will give a Matinee Euchre at Typographical Temple, Monday, February 27, 1905, at 2 p. m. As the one on the 13th inst. was well attended and proved a very enjoyable affair, it is proposed by the committee to give another one on the 27th inst. Tickets can be had of any of the committee or at the hall on the above date. Membership tickets, 25 cents.

THE CURTIS PUBLISHING CO.

Bookbinders Union, No. 2, of Philadelphia, Insists it is Unfair.

We publish a communication from Bookbinders Union No. 2, of Philadelphia, and desire to say that any space heretofore given in this paper was for the purpose of determining the status of The Curtis Publishing Co. with the Philadelphia printing trades.

We have shown that the firm is fair to members of Philadelphia Typographical Union, No. 2, and the subjoined commuication shows clearly how Bookbinders Union of that city hold that firm:

LOCAL UNION NO. 2, INTERNATIONAL BROTHERHOOD OF BOOKBINDERS.
PHILADELPHIA, February 13, 1905.

EDITORS TRADES UNIONIST:

I was very much surprised to see in a recent issue of your paper an article headed "Curtis Publishing Co.," and wish to state some of the facts therein are not true, and our Local Union here thought that our Washington brothers had settled in their minds that the aforesaid firm was and still is on the unfair list in our organization, not only locally but Internationally also.

In your issue of March 17, 1904, there appeared an article from our Local stating how we stood on that firm in answer to one published by you March 10. We still stand in the same position.

Our Local has never interfered with any business of Typographical Union, No. 2, and how they came to get into this I cannot tell.

Brother Calvert has made it appear that this Union does not know how to carry on its business.

In the first place the following firms are unfair in this city:

National Publishing Co.
Henry Altemus.
Stuart Bros.
Pawson & Nicholson.
Curtis Publishing Co.
George T. Lasher.
George Barrie & Son.

Mr. Calvert says there are but three firms.

The committee that visited the meeting of the Printing Trades Section, upon request, did not say that if they were assured of a committee going to Curtis Publishing Co. they would not send cards out.

Mr. Calvert stated he would go and see Mr. Curtis, and thought he would have no trouble to get the cutters an increase of one dollar, which would make it our scale, which is $15.

Afterwards a committee was appointed, and I said I would not send out any more cards pending a settlement, and I kept my word for two weeks, after which our Local got tired waiting for the settlement, which never came, and ordered me to go ahead again, which I did.

Mr. Calvert has also tried to make you believe that cutters are not eligible to our organization.

We claim jurisdiction over cutters according to our International laws.

The Curtis Company have five Brown & Carver machines and four Duplex machines.

Mr. Calvert also claims our executive committee said we did not know the names of one of the men working for the Curtis Company, and had never made a personal effort to get them. This is not true. Our Local had a committee call on the firm's manager in July or August and made a report at our next meeting that the manager said the firm would not pay the increased dollar, but they were satisfied for the men to join the union.

The men were approached and refused to join, as they were afraid.

The committee also reported that they had called so as not to have the Curtis Publishing Co.'s name on our unfair circular.

This shows that we tried to patch this affair up, and finding it could not be done, we done the next best thing.

Our business agent has since tried to organize the men, but they did not show up.

I would ask that you publish this fully in your paper, as we have the right to be heard.

Our Local is surprised to think than an outsider would go against her without consulting it first.

In this fight we have never said a word against compositors, printers, or in fact anyone working in the employ of the Curtis Publishing Co., but I can say have helped Typographical Union more ways than one, and why Mr. Calvert throws mud at the Bookbinders, who never done him any harm, is a mystery to our members, and especially as we called ourselves the Allied Printing Trade Council. I think a change of name would suit better.

I regret greatly that I have to again ask space in your paper for our Local, but I hope that once and for all that it will be understood that the Curtis Publishing Co. will stay on our unfair list until the cutters join our Local, and more circulars and cards will fill the country.

Thanking you very much for the space, I remain,

Fraternally, yours,
[SEAL.] ALBERT E. HURST,
Secretary Local Union No. 2,
International Brotherhood of Bookbinders.

The New Investment Company.

Pursuant to the invitation extended in last week's issue of THE TRADES UNIONIST, a considerable number of thrifty men assembled in the Typographical Temple on Tuesday evening last for the purpose of launching on the financial sea a company to be composed of, and to be conducted by, those who earn their daily bread by labor of hand and brain.

The meeting organized by the selection of Mr. F. Homer Melick as temporary president, and Mr. Andrew McGarraghy as temporary secretary. First in order was the statement by Mr. August Donath, of the purpose of the proposed organization, which is briefly the aggregation of savings with a view of buying real estate, or securities based upon real estate, for spot cash.

After the statement had been made, fully discussed, and unanimously approved by the meeting, those present recorded their subscriptions to the stock of the company. The number subscribed was very encouraging, and there is now no doubt that the success in obtaining subscriptions will fully meet the highest hopes of those who have urged this method of co-operation.

Upon the completion of the canvass for stock among those present, the stockholders proceeded to elect officers for the ensuing year. This is the list: President, F. Homer Melick; Vice-President, Z. Hunt; Secretary, August Donath; Treasurer, B. W. Bonney; additional directors (the officers just named being directors ex-officio): J. W. Doocy, A. F. Bloomer, Edwin S. Clarkson, Andrew McGarraghy, and M. E. McQueen. Besides the foregoing, Messrs. Watts, Payne and McCann were elected Auditors.

It was determined to limit the number of shares to 500, the par value to be $100, payable in installments of one dollar a share on the 1st and 15th of each month. The first payment on stock is to be made on or before the 1st of March next, from which date the active operations of the company will begin. Subscription to stock will be received by any officer of the company, and from the interest manifested it is reasonably certain that by the end of the month the full quota of stock will have been placed.

A TIME FOR ALL THINGS.

There's a time for all things—
When the winter winds blow
There is sleet on the pavements,
In the air there is snow.

There's a time for all things—
When the mercury's low
The speed of the street car
Is awfully slow.

There's a time for all things—
The coming of spring,
When the trees are a-budding
And the birds on the wing.

There's a time for all things—
When election is near
And all thing are a-humming
On all sides and rear.

There's a time for all things—
When candidates know
The next is Toronto
And they want to go.

There's a time for all things—
And that time is now,
For those who'll make the run
To come forward and bow.

Free Lectures to the People.

President J. O. Spencer, Ph.D., of Morgan College, Baltimore, will give an interesting illustrated lecture on "Russia and Japan" in the Shiloh Baptist Church on February 16, at 8 o'clock. As President Spencer lived for fifteen years in Japan and has traveled extensively in Asia and Europe, he will speak from experience and personal knowledge. The social contrast of the East and the We stwill be shown. The peculiar growth and active adaptation of Japan will also be discussed, and her recent diplomacy traced.

February 17th, Colonel J. A. Goulden, M. C., will give a splendid lecture on "Gettysburg's Famous Battlefield" in the Hall of the Public Library of the District of Columbia, Mt. Vernon Square.

February 17th, Rev. John Van Schaick, Jr., will give an illustrated lecture also for the Volunteer Committee Free Lectures to the People in the Hall of the Eastern High School, entitled "Vacation Days in Scotland."

Rev. S. M. Newman, pastor of the First Congregational Church, will deliver a lecture in the Course Free Lectures to the People on the evening of February 24 in the Hall of the Public Library, and will take for his subject: "Venice."

All are invited to attend these lectures.

I see no reason why "M. G. R." should not become a constant contributor to THE TRADES UNIONIST. On many of his suggestions I look with favor, among others his proposition for the formation of a printers' club. He can rest assured of my earnest co-operation.

With a few more Pous and Babcocks on District of Columbia Committees in Congress vestibuled street cars for Washington would be a thing of to-day, not next month or next year. Many features of the proposed measure looking to the relief of the motormen are in operation, I understand, in Wisconsin and other Northern States.

It would be a safe wager to bet that the Post will issue an afternoon paper in the near future. At the same time it was hard to hammer into my comprehension that the Star would put out a Sunday morning paper until my eye encountered a late edition of the New York Times (after running in a rut for nearly a century), with its short stories, art supplements, and streaks of yellow. After this I am prepared for any innovation in newspaperdom.

Items of Interest to Workers in the Big Workshop of Uncle Sam.

The Boston Club will give its first grand ball on March 2, at Masonic Temple.

Jacobus Hales discovered a "sun spot" just after pay day. That all he discovered.

Bill Holt is taking piano lessons and expects to do a stunt with McCarthy at the next show.

The New Yorkers will entertain their friends upon their arrival the night previous to Inauguration at Masonic Temple. All arrangements have been perfected and a good time is assured.

Many persons think theJ Riedl took that snap shot of the G. P. O. through opera glasses and that he looked through the big end. Willie has now traded his camera for a dog, and, thanks be to the Lord, the dog died.

Every mail was watched last Tuesday and many a peal of laughter rang out in the Bindery as some favored one received their Valentine. Jack Hamby, the Adonis of the Finishing Room, received one with a number of the fair sex flying to his arms; Bill Johnston, who is noted for his black terrapin dinners, received a large number, and placed them up for his friends to enjoy; John Noonan was not forgotten. His was a remembrance of Old Erin. Walter Roche, better known as "Little Jumbo," was sad when the first delivery came. Nothing doing for Walter. But, Oh my, he was in it later. The afternoon mail had its full complement for him. Roy, Heffernan, Weigand, Fallon, and Davis were remembered. Assistant Foreman W. C. Connor received a nice one; also a very hot one, which he placed on exhibition and seemed to enjoy. Billy Hyde received his with a large pair of shears, and to the wastepaper bag they made their way unopened. Harry Ashion received a half a dozen, and the selection was very poor, as none of them were suitable. A large number of the ladies received some very pretty ones, no doubt from some of the Willie's you see once a week at the box office.

The Cairo Flats Accident.

In the death of the painter, HAMBY, on the Cairo Flats, the first conclusion reached was that the death of the painter was due to a plot to kill him on the score of his being a non-union man.

The scab foreman on the job related an incident where the ropes used on another building by his boss had been cut, leaving the inference that it was due to enmity of the Union.

As a matter of fact the Union man has nothing but pity for the man who is compelled, through ignorance of his craft, to remain outside the pale of the Union, but has nothing but contempt for the scab who violates his word of honor and stays near the pay roll when the test comes.

The members of Painters Union, No. 368, of this city, are far above the average as men of skill in their calling, and resent the implied charge that the Union or any of its members are in any way responsible for the death of HAMBY.

As usual, after an accident of this kind, an investigation of conditions under which men in dangerous callings are forced to work is discussed, but that is as far as it goes.

To look into the matter closely might disclose the fact that the contractor who employs cheap labor also uses cheap material in construction and as an adjunct to his work, and the investigation in this case may prove that the rope that sent HAMBY to his death may have been troubled with dry rot.

In these days of Citizens Alliances and PARRYS, the popular idea that Unions are destructive and anarchical seem to be taken up by certain classes in the event of any trouble involving the Union.

We witnessed recently in a Western city the arrest of the International Secretary of an old staunch Union—the Iron Molders—after a struggle with PINKERTON men to place the cause of explosions in the foundries on the Union, and this officer was honorably discharged.

But who shall say what shall be the penalty for those who trump up false charges against officers of Unions and its men, at the instance of an Association having for its object the breaking up of all Unions irrespective of the means employed. And in this as in every other case, the PINKERTON thugs were invoked to create trouble and endeavor to fasten the various plots carried out on the Union.

That State laws are ineffective to halt the invasion of this band of Hessians is a commentary on free institutions and a menace to the well-being of the community.

If there is a shadow of a doubt as to the commission of a crime in connection wiih this accident the members of Painters Union, No. 368, court full and free investigation.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

It is always with more or less diffidence that I discourse on anything of a religious character because of the disposition of sundry pious gentleman, in replying, to discuss the author of what displeases them, instead of what he says, and my courageous friend "Readirag" proves no exception to the rule. At least, he dwelt with more force on the violence I did to "the simplest rules of logic and the most elementary principles of English grammar" than on the question before the house. Possibly I did err grammatically; I haven't reread my article to see—if I could tell. If I did I have great company in this world. But let us inject a new question into the discussion. Why is it that they who rush to the defense of the particular faith of which they constitute themselves the defenders are so lacking in consideration of the decencies which should always be maintained between man and man? Why are they so impatient of doubt regarding things of which there is no clear proof? The history of the first three or four centuries of the Christian religion was so obscured by the mists and ignorance of that time that nothing authentic is known regarding it. No one can dispute this by authority, bringing recognizable proofs. That there is doubt in the minds of thinking men as to the authority for the substitution of the first for the seventh day of the week has been evidenced by discussions in the newspapers during the past two months. If anyone could bring forward indubitable evidence that our Lord and Saviour desired or directed the change of day made, would he not do so at once and end the discussion? Is there any reason to think that the first day was kept as the Sabbath, instead of the seventh, in the first three centuries of the Christian religion? It does not make a thing true for "Readirag" to say it is true, nor even for a church to say it is true; there must be undoubted documentary evidence, and not something cooked up a few centuries afterward to suit the occasion and prove what is wanted to be proved. It is unfortunate that the facts are obscured; but mere assertion cannot supply the deficiency. But all the discussion in the world will never have the slightest effect toward changing the opinion of anyone on this subject, and as I have said before, I deem it of small importance what day is kept as the Sabbath. It is of much importance that each shall be permitted to keep it according to his own conscience.

It is true that I am employed in the more or less honorable business of proof-reading, but if I were indulging in nice criticism of language I should not speak of one as "engaged in the honorable profession of proof-reader," preferring to make the latter word "proof-reading." Though I do not profess much, I do not profess "proof-reader" at all. But this is descending to the level of my critic; with greater frankness, however, for instance what offends me, while he only scolds by innuendo.

I am not an enemy of the Christian religion, but am a firm believer in and follower (at a great distance) of Him who died on Calvary. But the most discouraging evidence of the inefficacy of His religion in His most devout followers, to me, is the lack of any portion of that charity for others which actuated Him in all the acts of His life of which we have knowledge. No denunciation of those with whom they differ is too cruel for them; no ascription of ignorance or vile motives in those who dare express opinions at variance with theirs is beneath them. I cannot believe that any part of His grace has ever entered the heart of any man or woman who does not try to give some evidence of living the religion which he or she professes. A bad liver is sometimes mistaken for inward grace.

I should dread to think that "A Bookbinder" represented the opinion of any considerable number of the bookbinders in his dream of last week, for it is as a joker that I imagine I shine, and the appreciation of my bookbinder friends is among my most highly prized laurels. It is true that some of my jokes are deep and subtle, and while I have known printers to stumble and flounder in their mazes, I have never known a bookbinder to fall down on one before. Would it be any help in this solitary instance if he were to change his dream dope?

* * * *

I did not get to meet I. T. U. President James M. Lynch face to face on the occasion of his visit to this city last week, but he squared himself by calling me up over the 'phone prior to leaving. He does not have to hunt for friends when he comes to Washington, nor anywhere else in all this broad country, though, like all really big men, he has a lot of little enemies. He is a conspicuous mistake who has not.

The Typographical Journal for February is one of the best numbers that have ever been issued. In it the editor shows the animus of the Mudthrower of the Missouri in a way that will appeal to the clean element of the unions—thank Heaven, much the larger portion of them! All the editorial matter of the Journal is well considered, its news of the labor world even tempered and therefore reliable, the miscellaneous matter well selected, and the correspondence fully covers the field. Union printers may well be proud of the Journal, the best of all the trades periodicals.

A recent Philanderjohnsonism in the Evening Star had something to say of the wife who had something to be economical with since Charlie stopped playing the races, the particular way in which it was expressed not affecting the point of the moral, which is, as I have once or twice suggested in these columns, that our dear ladies are very economical in the expenditure of money, rarely, however, permitting motives of economy to control their actions so far as to impel them to refrain from spending it at all. I have seen the dear creatures make a nice, pleasant home for Charlie's $3.20 per, and when his pay was raised to $4 his home was just as comfortable; but in neither case was there a cent left. Economy is a pretty, fat little word.

If you put your money in a savings bank you get a beggarly 2 or 3 per cent for it, while the bank makes probably twice as much out of it, and the discrepancy of profits is greater in any other kind of a bank. Why should not working men combine their money and make all the profit out of it? Nothing makes money in this world but money. That is what I have in view in advocating financial associations composed of workingmen in their own interest—that by a small investment every pay day a vast financial institution shall be built up; but I do not contemplate that any of us will get rich on an investment of $4 a month—only that by such an unfelt payment we will do much more in that direction than we are doing.

Flavius Barnhart, of eight hundred and something F street northeast, was up before the police court one day early n the week for not cleaning the ice and snow off his pavement. But he knocked the wind out of the prosecution, as well as the testimony of the policeman, by bringing his neighbors to testify that his pavement was cleaned, clinching the matter by bringing in the boys who had cleaned it. Thus was justice vindicated by our brother of the Bill Proof Room, who wasn't named Flavius for nothing; and it served them right for omitting the "H." that rounds out his name.

From a private letter and a copy of the Labor Clarion, of San Francisco, I learn that—

San Francisco Union has decided to send but one delegate to Toronto.

Senator Henry C. Hansbrough, of North Dakota, is an ex-member of San Francisco Union. His name first appears in "Old Eureka's" records in 1869.

James K. Phillips, for the first time in fifty-two years, recently withdrew his card from San Francisco Union to go to work in the State Printing Office at Sacramento.

In January the California State Federation convention was welcomed to Sacramento by Printer-Mayor Hassett, elected on the Union Labor ticket. A San Francisco printer was assistant secretary, another was elected delegate to the American Federation of Labor convention at Pittsburg, and a third was elected secretary-treasurer.

At the time of his accidental death a year ago Will Copeland was president of San Francisco Union, the Allied Printing Trades Council, and the Central Federation of Labor. The latter two offices then scattered. By the election recently of Will French as president of the Federation the three offices are again held by one printer.

If anyone has indulged in any fragrant fancies that the linotypes are not equal to any emergency, he should have been present last Friday night, when they got out a Record of 174 pages, nine-tenths of it being six point—what we in our young and vulgar days called nonpareil. It is true that they did not do it in eight hours, but it is for just such occasions that we have more than that number. It is also true that one speech was put in that was not set on the machines, but it is equally true that they set three speeches the same night that did not go in that Record. The boys set the finest proofs of their happy young lives, and Foreman Berg didn't get "rattled" for a minute. The machines will not be taken out for inefficiency. Not yet.

The real estate investment baby is born, and it is a lusty youngster. A report of the organization will be found elsewhere in this paper, and we believe we have a company whereby the workingman can reap the advantage of the earnings of his money instead of getting a small slice of them. It is not intended to be anyone's main or sole investment, but a side issue, wherein his payments will be small, a large capital to be accumulated before returns can be expected. At least that is my idea of i. It will furnish a place to put the small amounts that one does not save at all at present because they are really of too infinitesimal a character with which to get into big propositions. Let us have your subscriptions, boys and girls, and let us see what we can do, and don't get in too big a hurry and expect us to to doit all all once.

* * * *

I am glad to see Harry Knapp "shy his castor" into the delegate ring for Toronto. He made a fine fight last year, but he was up against too hard a hitter. More luck to him this time.

* * * *

It doesn't seem to be much of a secret that the Star will put forth a Sunday morning edition before the bluebird whistles again. I shall not be surprised if that eventuates in a daily morning edition of that paper and an evening issue of the Post, and possibly the Times will again issue a morning paper. Banzai! We need more papers in Washington—speaking as a printer first, of course—and the city is really large enough to support more of that class of literature.

* * * *

James Monroe Kreiter called on us in the Record on Monday evening. I think he is hunting something new to scrap about, now that the laws revision job is about out of the way.

* * * *

I feel it in my bones that I have got to have further trouble with the poets, though I am controlling myself as well as I can. There are limits to human endurance, you know.

* * * *

Joe Babcock has sufficiently recovered to be removed to his home, No. 603 Second street northeast, where, as he will not be out for some time yet, he will be glad to see his friends. He is making a happy recovery.

The Humane Society put to death 162 cats and 7 dogs during the month of January, and now, judging by the noise in this particular neighborhood each night, the dogs that escaped have chosen the month of February as a season for rejoicing.

Last year, when prospective candidates for president were lining up, there was an intimation that rotation in office would apply thereafter, beginning with this year. Remember it is not claimed that there was a specific promise, but it was intimated that consent of that sort might be given.

The hired men of the different newspapers followed Machen and the Groffs to the penitentiary. Their reports vividly described the difference between well-to-do criminals and the other kind. It seems that one is received as sort of a guest of the institution, while the other fellow gets all he guessed and more too.

It is characteristic of some small boys to snivel and make ugly faces and call for the services of the bully "big brother," because the proprieties of the game do not allow them to swipe all the marbles. The selfish boy may not learn to respect the rights of others until he some day meets the other fellow's "big brother;" but the lesson will come to him some day in some way.

It was the 13th day of the month, bleak and cold and "snowing out." The last hod of coal was in the grate. Only the skeletons of a measly mess of dried herring and a solitary rind from a stale loaf of bread remained to satisfy the hunger of an out-of-work husband, a sick wife, and a cluster of little ones who were huddled and crouched and shivering around the slowly-dying embers, when lo! a knock at the door and from the hand of the postman was received an envelope of large size, within which was a message—the promise of a fortune—from a get-rich-quick concern conditional only upon the advancement of a small sum of money in the nature of an investment. Imagine, dear reader, if you can, the joy of that household! Oh, this would be a barren and cheerless world only for the philanthropists who are stationed here and there.

With a great many people "knocker" and "kicker" are synonymous terms, while with others there seem to be honest differences of opinion as to the exact status of each and the relationship of one to the other. Perhaps the mule furnishes as good an illustration of the "kicker" as anything that could be suggested. That beast of burden is a reminiscent and aims only at things past or directly behind, while the "knocker" looks straight ahead and his blows are directed with a purpose at things met with day by day and year by year and such as impede progress or are a hindrance in the consummation of those things devoutly wished. To knock, therefore, implies a desire to do—to accomplish something—so that each day and year will show a record of advance camping grounds as the result of insistent knocking. The "knocker" strenuously seeks to improve present conditions and presses forward, while the "kicker" sulks and finds it more congenial to remain behind and kick and bray.

GOSSIP FROM THE G. P. O.

First Division.

No changes in the quotation of slugs.

Were you lucky, and did you get a valentine?

"Two by one" is the latest order at the upper elevator.

John Crowe, temporary on 134, is holding copy in the Main Proof Room.

C. B. Whipper, temporary on our side, representing slug 73, has been dropped.

You just can't guess what evening you will be detailed for work. It all depends.

Did you see Jack Burnside's Chinese Calendar? Neither did we. He says it is a beauty.

"They say" the handsomest and best dressed man in this Division is a temporary and he is married.

A subscription paper for the Associated Charities was passed around on Monday morning by Chairman Davidson.

Advices received from Hot Springs, announce the death of Frank E. Rose, a member of the First Division (night) chapel.

Another liberal subscription taken up the past week for a temporary compositor in the Fourth Division. A brother, we understand of Miss Laura B. Gordon, of the Gazette chapel. His poor health compels him to leave this climate.

"They say" that Foreman Bundy, of the carpenter shop, is a superior cabinetmaker, cannot be surpassed, and is a hustler too.

A very successful affair was the reception at Typographical Temple last Friday evening under the auspices of the Woman's Auxiliary.

First Division had its inning the other evening in that bowling match with the Third. Won two games out of three, which certainly was decisive enough.

For a successful sprinter, we place our long green on ex-Delegate Judge Holeman. Did you see that 10-yard dash up the main aisle at the lunch hour last Saturday?

"Jack, the Smearer," is still at work with the clean towels in the washroom, in the east end of the Division. You can't blame it on the night force. It is done in broad daylight, and so far this week in the forenoon. O, for a—but what's the use.

Lieutenant Gaither, the tallest person in the room, and a veteran of the Spanish-American war of recent years, has charge of the "dairy" in the absence of F. Burns. You can purchase cream, sweet milk or buttermilk any day after the whistle blows.

Next Monday—pay day for First Division, day and night, together with several other Divisions—will be card day; i. e., you must pay your dues in the Union. Get busy, Chairman Davidson. Let's see two or three subscriptions to collect, also. Who wouldn't be a chairman?

Did you ever notice how regularly every day, almost to the second, the two "hot sawdust" men begin their rounds. About five minutes after half-past two, or twenty-five minutes before the departure of the Royal Blue for Philadelphia, New York, and points North and East.

This week it was Make-up Lesher who received a much-needed new cabinet. By the way, Mr. Lesher, who was "Sonney" Jim's right-hand man for a long time, is mighty near a past master on "plates." No reference to dinner plates, but the variety in use in all first-class printing establishments.

President Lynch, of the International Typographical Union, accompanied by Mr. J. J. Sullivan, an expert official in the Labor Bureau, recently a member of this chapel, made a pleasant call during the week. The funny man to my left says there is a striking resemblance between President Lynch and Charley Sheldon, of the Job Room.

On Friday last, Abner C. Proctor, slug 160, owing to his nervous condition, resigned. Mr. Proctor has been a member of this chapel two or three years, and, we understand, was transferred from the Navy Branch, where he held the position of imposer. He has been a terrible sufferer, and has the heartfelt sympathy of all. Mr. Proctor has been an employee of the office for several years.

A gentleman in this Division informs us that a letter from J. J. McCarthy, located for the present at Denver, Colo., says: "I am getting along as well as could be expected, but the climate here is very severe. In fact, this section of the country is very much overrated." Mac is well-known to many employees of the G. P. O. We are told that while a member of this chapel he was popular and was repeatedly re-elected chairman without opposition.

"They say" that Thomas A. Bynum, of the Main Proof Room, everybody calls him "Tom" for brevity, is not only Grand Chancellor of the Knights of Pythias, but closely identified with a number of other leading fraternal organizations in this District. Incidentally we have heard his name "tangled up" with the candidacy for the Presidency of 101. Tom would doubtless make a good run; of course it would require a count of the ballots to learn if he was a winner.

Did you know that our Fred Berger, who serves the TRADES UNIONIST, and collects the price later on is an expert in several callings? 1. In penmanship. 2. In drawing specimens. 3. In stenography. 4. Typewriting. 5. In general office work, and six, we do not desire to enter into further details. By the way, did you notice the attractive card on the bulletin board calling attention to the pound party for the Institution of the Blind? The handiwork of Mr. B. Have you subscribed for the only sure-enough eight-hour labor pages in the District? Hand him your name.

Yes, the bee is buzzing. We mean the delegatorial or Toronto bee. Rumor committee has it that Philip S. Steele, of this Division, will be a candidate. Frank D. Smith and James F. Huggins have been announced. Mr. Harry Knapp, is willing to serve as a down-town representative. In last week's issue of the TRADES UNIONIST Mr. Bloomer announced the candidacy of Charles S. Gunn. We have also heard the name of Mark H. Barnum, of the Job Room favorably commented upon, and that he would make a successful run. With regard to the presidency the committee on rumor is busy trying to "dig up" two or three candidates, but thus far their efforts have proved unavailing.

ROUGH WRITER.

Try oyster pan roast, 10c. Ladies' Dining room. R. A. Driscoll, North Capitol and G street.

Third Division.

Rough Writer says: "They were just working as hard as ever when the whistle blowed at half-past four."

The columns of THE TRADES UNIONIST still continue to furnish justification for all that has been said about the so-called "poetry" printed from week to week.

A. K. Williamson, long a member of this Division, was transferred to the Sixth Division last Saturday morning. It does seem as if a good many of our shining lights were emigrating machine-wards of late.

R. E. Adirag took a column and a half to say what could have been condensed into one-quarter the space and didn't get through talking at that. Looks as if he had a spite against Bloomer and wanted to nurse it as long as possible.

The morning after the tilt in the House between Sullivan and Hearst, a number of us listened until "the whistle blowed" while Pard Julian told us how he and Bill Hearst used to travel together twenty-five years ago. Maybe you don't know that Pard used to be deputy sheriff in Nebraska. Don't you try to play any tricks on the sheriff, either, for if he once draws a bead on you, your a goner. Sure thing!

Dear Brother McPike, it is hard for me to accept your "apologies," knowing as I do you meant to say, "In spite of" instead of "With apologies to." Permit me to commend your ingenuity. I could never hope to equal you at the peculiar style of composition which you "emphemistically, but doubtless in perfect good faith, call poetry." (That quotation is borrowed from the Washington Post.) Go it while you are young. I will try hard to bear it.

Apropos of the habit of some of us to tell stories heard from Brockwell, here is one that I heard that celebrated individual tell about a year ago: An appeal for aid was circulated throughout the office on behalf of an aged employee who has since died. When the subscription paper reached the Record Proof Room, somebody objected to "going down," saying that the beneficiary had nine or ten rooms full of furniture and paid $40 rent a month. Whereat a bystander remarked that the very fact that our aged brother paid such a large rent was reason enough why he should receive aid from his fellow-workmen, "for," said he, "I don't see how on earth he could get so much furniture into a smaller house."

Last week the bowling contest between the First and Third Division teams resulted in favor of the First, they winning two out of three games. And thereby hangs a tale. After the first evening's play by the two teams, in which the Third won all three games, the First were unable to play any more "because they were working overtime." This reason did not hold, however, when Lehman, one of the Third's strongest men, went off sick. The First then challenged their opponents to another meeting, which challenge was accepted by the Third in spite of the fact that the team was crippled. That the First won two games out of three on this occasion was due, so the Third's team say, solely because they, the First, were unwilling to play under equal conditions. They simply waited until the opposing team was weakened by the temporary loss of one of its best men. In short, the Third accuse the First of a lack of sporting blood in declining to play against their team as originally constituted. But this is not all. Since the victory by the First, the Third have challenged them to another evening of three games. This challenge has been turned down on the old ground, "working overtime." As a matter of fact, Lehman is back to work and is able to put up his regular game. "And that fact," said one of the Third's team, "made 'em crawfish." Gentlemen of the First Division Bowling Team, are you crawfishes? If not, wherefore this seeming effort to escape your responsibilities as sportsmen? Let us hear from you.

J. W. BELCHER.

Sixth Division.

Present events are proving that President John R. Berg has as much Sunday business on hand as a preacher.

Joseph J. Doyle and A. K. Williamson are the latest additions to the Sixth Division. Both are from the Third.

At this writing it is reported that Geo. A. Plummer is recovering from his illness rapidly, and will soon return to work.

"There are 90,000 musicians in the United States," says a labor exchange. I wonder if that includes the Marine Band.

The rumor committee will be compelled to hold night sessions in order to complete the business before nomination day.

"Rough Rider" says there is a man in the First Division who looks like Chauncey Depew. I can guess that one. Its Phil. Nachman.

The ladies of the Auxiliary gave a matinee euchre on Monday for the benefit of those employed at night. I am informed it was a dee-lightful affair.

W. H. Cornish, of this Division, has taken fifteen days leave, and is spending the time at his home in Newark, N. J., where his father lies dangerously ill.

Speaking of candidates, Vice-President Billy Love will make the chase this year for those twelve plunks, recently provided as the vice-president's salary.

From the amount of poetry in last week's TRADES UNIONIST, I will not be surprised if the esteemed writer of "Flotsam and Jetsam" fails to respond this week.

For a while last Sunday it was James Monroe Kreiter against the field. However, at the hour of adjournment I saw no indications that Jim was about to hoist the white flag.

Paul B. Greegor has been detailed from the Bindery to the position of messenger for Foreman Mundheim. He was recently operated on for appendicitis, but is recovering rapidly.

There is one thing certain. If this Division does disband (with the emphasis on the if) after March 4, it will pass into history as one of the most liberal groups of printers ever gathered together. Papers for relief have been numerous lately, but each have been subscribed to liberally.

Fifteen young lady members of No. 101 attended the meeting on Sunday, the occasion being their interest in the welfare of a sister printer who had appealed for admission to the Printers' Home. You will please note in this connection that I say young, as most of the old ones stayed at home, owing to the inclemency of the weather. This don't go.

The tribute paid to the lady printers by President Mrs. Webb, of the Auxiliary, at the annual entertainment last week, was not only beautiful but a deserved compliment. The Auxiliary is now strong and probably able to exist without these lady compositors, but it is really gratifying to know that their hard labor in the past, and their interest in the organization's welfare is duly appreciated by those now in control.

Five thousand ems per hour for twelve hours was the speed attained by two of the Record operators on last Friday night. When one considers the close proofreading on Government work and the peculiar style on the Congressional Record, the record made by L. D. Weeks and Will Mattox is one they are justified in feeling proud over. It also goes to show what speed the average man may hope to attain after he has fingered the keyboard a sufficient length of time.

People who have the idea lodged into their toppiece that employees of the Government are slower in their work than those of private employers may find something in the following statement to interest them: On arriving for work on Saturday morning the machine force of this Division found the entire plant of thirty-five machines set for six and eight point Record measure. Twenty-five minutes after the whistle blew thirty of the machines had been changed to eight and ten point document, which necessitated the changing of one magazine, and two molds on each machine, and the many other changes necessary for the transformation of a machine from one measure to another, the operators beginning work as fast as each "mill" was completed.

CHAS. S. GUNN.

The failure of printers at times to have the label placed on their printed matter makes me think of one evening when I climbed into a barber's chair with a request for a shave. The barber looked my head over, run his fingers through my hair, and said: "Better let me cut that hair, sir. Needs it mighty bad." "Its not as long as yours," said I. "Why don't you have your own cut?" "Well, you see, I'm the barber," he replied. Now I'll admit I am a little thick-headed, but I fail to see where he got a license to wear long hair, at the same time insisting that mine be cut.

FOR RENT—505 M st. n. w. furnished rooms and board; private family.

Specification Notes.

Sill and Light play a neck-and-neck game of checkers.

There are now seventy extras employed on this force.

The Lanston took its first chew of live "Spess" on Tuesday.

What has become of the poets, and why this neglect of "the beautiful snow?"

Printers are little interested in railroad rebates, except such as come in the form of "rings."

There are as yet no candidates for delegate in this Division; at least so far as we are informed.

Frank McDermot has the chair of timekeeper Hymas, who is on leave at his home in North Carolina.

Dr. S. D. Poole is no longer on the list of eligibles, he having recently joined the grand army of benedicts.

The beauties of rural life and landscape are vividly portrayed by those who fail to make 8 o'clock connections.

It is learned that Harry Colestock, late a compositor on Specifications, is employed as school teacher at some point in Pennsylvania.

"Judge" Davis, of Anacostia is giving shelter to seventy-five rabbits, which have come to him from the woods for food and protection during the recent severe weather.

This chapel dispensed about $80 by subscriptions for charity during the two weeks ending February 11. This is not said in a spirit of boasting, but rather is cited as a matter of common occurrence.

Missives from St. Valentine were plentiful on Tuesday and of the usual variety. Some were as pleased as if they had received a letter from home, while others were more or less insulted and may never get over it.

The wife of our fellow-craftsman, Mr. J. F. Hauer, died suddenly at her early home in Frederick, Md., last week. The visitations by death, in each case the wife, have been strangely numerous within the past month or two. Greater cause for sorrow hath no man than in the loss of a good wife.

It is expected that the work of this Division will be greatly augmented by the operation of the law which will give greater incentive to those who seek protection through the trade-mark. At present the number averages about twenty-five per week, but under the new law this number may be increased to an average of one hundred or more.

The cars on the H Street line became tangled or stalled in front of this office during lunch hour one day last week, when a crowd of printers gathered around and tendered such valuable advice that the trouble was soon over. What the "Spess" folks do not know about slits and slots and the ups and downs of railroading is hardly worth the while of motormen and conductors to try to learn.

Benton endeavored to secure bets on the prospects of holiday on Lincoln's birthday, February 12, but his expected prey consulted the calendar and found it fell on Sunday.

The sudden changes of weather we have experienced in the last few weeks have been severe on a number of the force. Scott Young lost his little grandson by pneumonia, contracted from exposure at an open window for a few minutes.

A specimen of alliteration given me by a friend: "Bill boasted a bill-board and a board-bill; but the bill-board and board-bill bored Bill, so Bill bartered the bill-board for the board-bill."

Miss Marion Booth and Miss Anna C. Wilson left Washington Wednesday evening for a five weeks' vacation. They will visit Miss Booth's home, Biloxi, Miss., and will then join a party of friends in Havana, Cuba. After seeing Havana and its beautiful environments the ladies will visit St. Augustine and other resorts in Florida, finishing their trip in New Orleans in time to behold the wonders of the Mardi-Gras.

The officers of G. P. O. Council, No. 211, National Union, were installed Saturday evening, January 28, by the installing officer, J. E. Bright, assisted by J. S. Biddis, and those who were not present missed a treat.

It is not necessary to mention in detail the able address of the President of the Senate, C. T. Hendler, as the membership will be made acquainted with the statistics he used later on.

Mr. Biddis spoke at great length, and convincingly, on the subject of fraterna' insurance, and it is to be regretted tha the whole membership did not hear the statements made in relation to this matter.

The second anniversary of the Woman's Auxiliary to Columbia Typographical Union was celebrated Friday evening, February 10, at Typographical Temple. The stage was profusely and beautifully decorated with palms and a fine program was provided, every number of which was well received.

As the guests arrived they were introduced to the officers of the Auxiliary.

Mrs. A. C. Webb, the president, made a short address of welcome, after which the evening's entertainment was taken in charge by the chairman of the entertainment committee, Mrs. C. L. Nace.

The Rebew orchestra, fourteen pieces, donated their services, and dispensed sweet harmony several times during the evening.

The statement was made in one of the daily papers that the Rebew orchestra furnished the dance music. That statement is incorrect. The orchestra does not furnish dance music.

WANT THE PAPER.

We received the following from a former member of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, who still desires to keep in touch with his friends of other days:

COLUMBUS, MISS., December 22, 1904.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

GENTLEMEN:—I believe my subscription is about up, and I therefore inclose P. O. money order for $1.00, for which please continue THE TRADES UNIONIST to me for another year. Being once a member of No. 101, I am still much interested in its doings and the news of the "boys," and always read its columns with a great deal of pleasure.

It is nearly two years since I resigned from the G. P. O., and "struck out" for myself, and I have come to the conclusion that it was the best move I ever made.

My kindest regards to Brother Patton, with whom I read proof under Harold Benedict.

With best wishes for THE TRADES UNIONIST and all the members of 101, I remain,

Very truly yours,
R. E. JOHNSTON.

Mr. Johnston is a member of the firm of Johnston & Caine, wholesale druggists, Columbus, Miss. His last work in the G. P. O. was done on Specifications, and his many friends will be pleased to hear of Mr. Johnston's success in the business world.

The following was received from E. F. Hazle, who has gone North for his health. We all join in the hope that Mr. Hazle will get what he seeks in health and happiness.

GLEN ORCHARD, MUSKOKA, CANADA. December 16, 1904.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

GENTLEMEN:—We are rusticating in this land of snow and sunshine with a view to restoring our health relations. It is a wonderful country, everything bright and sparkling, with old Sol in evidence every day. The only thing we miss is THE TRADES UNIONIST. Send it to the above address for the next four months, and I will call and settle on my return home.

E. F. HAZLE.

BUCKHANNON, W. VA., January, 7, 1905.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

GENTLEMEN:—Find inclosed $2, for THE TRADES UNIONIST to July 15, 1905. I have bought the managing interest in this office, and you can tell any of the boys who inquire for me that it looks as though I am here to stay.

Wishing you continued success, I am,
Yours very truly,
OTTO H. BARNES.

NAVY YARD ITEMS.

Joseph Webb and James Brest, old timers, are reported sick with la grippe.

Professor Charles T. Stanley, ex-director of the Naval Gun Factory Band, has been critically ill for several weeks. I hear he is now convalescent.

Admiral and Mrs. Higginson gave a dinner at their quarters last Tuesday. Among the prominent guests was Assistant Secretary of the Navy Darling, who will retire shortly.

H. T. Standcliff, clerk with the General Storekeeper's Department, is to be transferred to duty under the Isthmian Canal Commission at an increased salary. This is proof positive that water will find its level. Keep climbing up, Harry.

An examination of applicants will be held at the Yard February 17 for the position of assistant electrical expert in the Bureau Construction and Repairs. The salary attached is $5.40 per diem. Those who have done service in the Navy have the preference.

E. J. Harrison, first class copyist ordnance draftsman, has resigned to take effect January 27. I understand he has secured a more lucrative position with an outside corporation. Just the way, the Government educates and the outsider gets the benefit by paying larger salaries.

The examining board for minors under instruction have concluded their labors. Seventy boys were passed as qualified. From this list will be filled forty-six vacancies to learn the different trades. Notices to that effect were sent out by the Labor Board and forty-six youngsters will, on the 10th inst., start in their mechanical life.

The Chicago Journal has the following ad.: "Wanted 114 heiresses to wed the 114 young gentlemen who have just graduated from Annapolis; references required. Address the Secretary of the Navy." If the 114 heiresses above mentioned desire husbands who will fill all the particulars, they cannot fail to find them in the Navy Yard. I will be only too glad to act as a mediator between the parties.

The board appointed to finally pass upon the papers of candidates for acting gunners and acting boatswain have concluded its duties, and their report is safely housed with the Navigation Bureau. Four of the instructors to the Seaman Gunners Class, are anxiously waiting, hoping that lightning will strike them all. I trust they will not be disappointed, as they have worked hard for promotions.

The Seaman Gunners Class gave their ball Friday night last. As usual, the ball room was crowded with their friends. The officers and their wives encouraged the lads by their presence This ball was to have been held the week previous, but was postponed on account of much sickness in the Yard. While your correspondent had not the honor of leading the grand march, he was voted the prize as the best dancer on the floor. Some people never will grow old.

* * * *

Some weeks ago the Superintendent of the Naval Gun Factory forwarded a letter to the Department recommending that, when necessary, that minors under instruction be transferred from the shops to the Drafting Room.

The following answer has been received:

NAVY DEPARTMENT,
WASHINGTON, D. C., January 31, 1905.

SIR: The Department has to acknowledge the receipt of the letter of the superintendent of the Naval Gun Factory of January 11, 1905, recommending from time to time when it may be desirable to obtain copyist ordnance draftsmen, minors under instructions who have served two years or more in the Naval Gun Factory, and who have shown a special aptitude for drawing, be examined as to their fitness for detail in the drafting room.

The Department approves of the recommendation of the superintendent of Naval Gun Factory and authorizes the examination of six minors under instructions for the ordnance drafting room.

Very respectfully,
CHAS. H. DARLING,
Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

To the Commandant Navy Yard, Washington, D. C.

Columbia Lodge, No. 174, I. A. of M., was the scene of pleasure last Wednesday night, it being the farewell visit of Congressmen Wynn and Livernash before retiring from Congress.

International President James O'Connell and his assistants from the Grand Lodge were present to welcome the Labor Congressmen.

After routine work was completed the Lodge was turned over to Brother Tucker as chairman of the entertainment committee who, in his characteristic style, introduced President O'Connell.

President O'Connell was in good fettle, and not only gave good advice to the members present, but poured hot shot into those who have neglected to pay the assessments levied by the Grand Lodge for the benefit of the Chicago and Sante Fé strikers. He said that it was an established fact that could not be disputed that comparing the International Association of Machinists with other associations during the past year it would be seen that the assessments levied by the other associations were many times greater than among our own; and while the other associations had been almost annihilated by the Parryites in Chicago, the International Association of Machinists were still standing in front of the enemy undismayed.

While his criticisms were severe, they were just, and no doubt the assessment kickers will, after being advised by President O'Connell as to the true status of the case, step up and apologize to Secretary Cowan for their negligence.

I do not always agree with President O'Connell, but in this case I know he is the right man in the right place. If he would come often and be loaded for bear each visit, possibly some of the kickers will be transferred into workers.

Congressman Wynn on being introduced stated that as we had heard him so often he would cut his talk short. However, he gave us about ten minutes of good sensible advice and invited the whole Lodge to visit him in San Francisco.

The star of the evening was Representative Livernash, who held his audience from start to finish. He told his story without embellishments. "Brothers in a common cause," said he, "don't imagine that a Republican Congressman is any worse than a Democrat or vice versa. So far as the wage-earners is concerned they are all of one feather. I want to tell you this evening, on the eve of my departure from public life, that there is a vast difference between a Congressman before election and after. Before election he is Dr. Jekyl in presenting his case before the wage-earner; after election he is a veritable Mr. Hyde. Nothing too good for the workingman before election, and nothing for him after he has secured his certificate.

"I often wonder," said Mr. Livernash, "if the time will ever come when the bone and sinew of this country, the brawn and muscle, will awaken to the fact that every two years they absolutely throw their power away, by electing to Congress men who stand on the floor of Congress and pleads the cause of 'The Brotherhood of Man,' and the next hour in the cloak room denounce the wage-earner as a demagogue; who, on the floor, publicly advocates a measure for their protection, and in committee not only cringe before the captains of industry, but bend the knee that thrift might follow fawning.

"My experience of two years," said he, "has been such that I have no desire ever to engage in public life again; but as long as life lasts I will, by my voice and pen, use the powers that God has given me in the uplifting of Humanity.

"Brothers," said he, "hold to and perfect your organization. By that sign you will conquer.

Last but not least was the music by the Naval Gun Factory Band, under its new director, Professor Joyce. From beginning to end he showed conclusively that a master mind was in control. Under his guidance the band is steadily forging ahead, and will in a short period of time equal if not eclipse many of the older institutions'

Success to you, Professor.

THE CENTRAL LABOR UNION

Saks & Co. Asked to Employ Union Tailors on Their Local Work.

J. M. STEIN & CO. ARE AGAIN FAIR

Credentials Received—Communications—Stone Laborers Agreement Goes to Contract Committee—Heptosophs Tender Thanks For Courtesy in Exchange of Hall for Next Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Central Labor Union was called to order at 8:10 p. m. on Monday by President Dickman.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

CREDENTIALS.

From Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, certifying Joseph C. Whyte, vice Joseph H. Babcock, on sick list.

From Bakery Wagon Drivers Union, No. 33, certifying to F. W. Amrein, J. F. Hagan, and Charles Schenck, vice T. C. Fox, J. T. Jenkins, and J. R. Bussard.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From M. H. Perry, of Howard Perry Conclave, No. 836, Improved Order of Heptosophs, thanking the Central Labor Union for courtesy extended in granting use of hall for evening of February 27. Placed on file.

From Woman's Auxiliary, No. 13, of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, indorsing advertising matter for Puck's Soap. Placed on file.

CALL OF UNIONS.

Hod Carriers asked when Auditing Committee would meet to go over their account. Informed that time would be at next quarterly meeting of Auditors.

Journeyman Tailors called attention to name of J. M. Stein & Co. being still on "We do not Patronize List," and the Secretary was directed to have it removed from the same, as the firm is now fair.

The Tailors also requested that the Contract Committee be directed to call on Saks & Co. and request that they have their work done in Washington and by Union tailors. The request was granted.

The Contract Committee reported favorably on agreement of Stone Laborers Union No. 46, but an amendment prevailed that the agreement be referred back to the Contract Committee and the organizations interested in the matter be notified to appear before the committee.

Legislative Committee reported progress on several measures now pending before Congress.

Special Committee on Building reported progress.

Adjourned.

The Investment Company.

EDITOR TRADES UNIONIST:

I ask permission to state through your columns that the "National Mutual Finance and Investment Company" begins operations on Wednesday next, March 1. Shares are One Hundred Dollars each, payable at the rate of one dollar on the 1st and 15th of each month for fifty months. Subscriptions for five hundred shares only will be accepted, a large proportion having already been subscribed. In most departments of the Government Printing Office a canvas is being made for subscribers. Subscriptions may also be handed to the President, Mr. F. Homer Melick, Specification Room, and to me, at No. 1328 Eighth street northwest. The Company, as was stated in the last issue of THE TRADES UNIONIST, is fully organized, and the first payment on stock must be made by March 1. Subscriptions on which payment is deferred may be cancelled if the number of shares applied for exceeds the limit fixed. The conduct of the Company is—I say it with due modesty—in conservative and experienced hands, and my expectations is that we shall earn at least double the rate of interest generally realized on safe first mortgages.

AUGUST DONATH.

WANTED.—Ten men in each State to travel, tack signs, and distribute samples and circulars of our goods. Salary $75 per month; $3 per day for expenses. KUHLMAN CO., Dept. S, Atlas Building, Chicago. M18

THE EIGHT-HOUR DAY.

Many Cities Have Secured It In the Printing Industry.

In a recent article in THE TRADES UNIONIST on the eight-hour day the writer stated that the International Typographical Union has 42,000 members. This was an error. The number should have been 46,700. In the past four years the International Typographical Union has increased its membership more than 40 per cent. Per capita tax to the American Federation of Labor for the year 1900 was paid by the printers on 32,900 members per month; in 1901, on 36,500 members; in 1902, on 39,300 members; in 1903, on 43,500 members; and in 1904, on 46,700 members. The printers will continue this year even more aggressively the successful organizing policy of the last four years.

From this time on all efforts of the printers will be centered on the establishment of the eight-hour day for the book and job men on January 1, 1906. However, from present indications, the majority of cities will have secured the eight-hour day by the time that date arrives. Note the following:

The eight-hour day went into effect in the book and job offices of Scranton, Pa., on January 1, 1905.

Beginning April 1, 1905, the eight-hour day will be in effect in the book and job offices of Colorado Springs, Colo.

The employing printers of Batavia, N. Y., have conceded the eight-hour day, to become effective January 1, 1906, with the scale of wages to remain as at present.

On January 3, 1905, the book and job printers of Fresno, Cal., put in effect the eight-hour day. Not one proprietor protested against the shorter Workday.

Charleston, W. Va., employers have conceded the eight-hour day, operative on January 1, 1906.

All offices in Cairo, Ill., have just agreed to the new scale of Cairo Typographical Union, which provides for the eight-hour day on January 1, 1906.

Indianapolis, Ind., has already secured the eight-hour day.

Here are more cities where the eight-hour day has become effective through the efforts of the Typographical Union: Hagerstown, Md.; Danbury, Conn.; Schenectady, N. Y.; Eureka, Cal.; Ogden, Utah; Boise, Idaho; Albuquerque, N. M.; Alton, Ill.; Pocatello, Idaho; Windsor, Ontario'

The eight-hour day has been conceded in New York, and Chicago will put it into effect on July 1, 1905.

Here are twenty-one unions, including New York, Chicago, San Francisco and Indianapolis—four of the largest unions in the International—that have already secured the eight-hour day.

In addition, St. Paul and Minneapolis, Minn., have fixed October 1, 1905, to put the eight-hour day in effect.

Here in Washington, of the 2,000 members of Columbia Union, only about 250 will be affected, the eight-hour day having been in effect here in all except down-town job offices for some time. It is anticipated that the men affectd by the eight-hour order in Washington will secure it without friction.

The eight-hour movement is a movement of progress, and is so recognized by all enlightened people. When we look around and see all other skilled tradesmen working but eight hours, and the book and job printers working nine hours, it is time to establish the eight-hour day. The Cigarmakers' Union established the eight-hour day in 1886, and for eighteen years have had it in effect. The Granite-Cutters' Union, some ten years ago established the eight-hour day in that trade. It is interesting to note that the union granite cutters, under the eight-hour system, are among the highest paid mechanics in the United States and Canada. Good wages go hand in hand with the eight-hour day.

So it is with all the trades. And the printers, by enforcing the eight-hour day, are only doing what the other skilled trades did ten years ago. It's time we had the eight-hour day, and realizing this fact, the 46,700 members of the International Typographical Union have issued a declaration that it shall come to pass, and may it be ushered in as unanimously as is the sunshine on a bright spring morning.

COLUMBIA UNION MEETING

Resolutions Adopted Tendering Aid to Philadelphia Union.

A VERY INTERESTING MEETING

Several New Members Admitted—Vice President Love Goes to Philadelphia Conference—Publishers Ask for a Conference—Laws Committee Report Near Completion—Meeting Next Sunday.

The regular weekly meeting of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, was called to order at 2:30 p. m. last Sunday, President Berg in the chair.

Reading of minutes of meetings of January 15 and 22 approved and dispensed with the reading of subsequent meetings.

Traveling cards received since last meeting were read and accepted.

The Nominations Committee made a lengthy report covering applications for membership, which were disposed of as follows:

John D. Coiner and C .W. Denham placed on superannuated list.

On request of Boston Union to initiate Alfred J. Boyer. Request granted.

On request of Curtis C. DeNeane, for waiver of time governing term of his apprenticeship, on recommendation of committee the request was granted.

On recommendation of committee, Joseph P. Puetz and Thomas J. Brashears were rejected.

Favorable action being recommended on application of Miss Ethel M. Fenner, Mrs. Ruby A. Myers, Oscar J. Homer, R. H. Landis, J. T. Percival, Joseph Oliveri, and W. W. Satterfield, they were duly elected.

Further time being asked on applications of George W. Collett, Wm. S. McDonald, and George F. von Ostermann, for full membership, and Cliff S. Newsom, an apprentice member from St. Louis, who desires full membership, the request of the committee was granted,

On application of F. H. McKevitt and C. E. Deloe for apprentice membership action being favorable, they were duly elected.

On application of French Osthaus, to have his term of apprenticeship extended six months, the request was granted.

Bills amounting to $68.25 were read and ordered paid.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From International Union, indorsing Circular No. 10 on eight-hour day, and Open Letter on Philadelphia Situation. Placed on file.

From Philadelphia Union, asking that a representative of No. 101 be sent to a meeting to investigate conditions in regard to the Inquirer matter in that city. Vice-President Love appointed delegate.

From Allied Label League, requesting that delegates be named to represent No. 101 at the meetings of that body. The delegates to the Central Labor Union were instructed to attend the meetings.

From Indianapolis Union, No. 2, asking indorsement of resolutions adopted by that Union regarding Philadelphia Union's fight against the Inquirer of that city, and pledging money each month in support of same. To come up under new business.

From Publishers Association, asking appointment of a committee to confer with a committee from that body for the purpose of formulating a scale covering afternoon papers issuing a Sunday morning edition. On motion, a committee of three members, one from each daily newspaper chapel in the city, was agreed to, to be chosen by the three daily newspaper chapels.

Mr. T. Frank Hall, from Allied Printing Trade Council, reported that he was directed to call attention to the fact that tickets for entertainments not bearing the label had been offered for sale by members of the Union, and asked that the label be insisted upon.

The president reported four deaths since last meeting. He also reported that at a conference with the Typothetae the question of charging double price for work done on holidays and Sundays, after regular hours, was agreed to.

The president announced the appointment of Joseph C. Whyte, of the Star chapel, as delegate to the Central Labor Unions in place of J. H. Babcock, who is ill.

Under new business the resolutions received from Indianapolis Union, No. 1, was taken up for consideration.

Mr. Kreiter introduced the following:

Whereas it is a well-known fact that the conditions in Philadelphia, from a Union standpoint, are a menace to unionism in the printing business throughout the country, and particularly jeopardizes the success of the pending eight-hour movement; and

Whereas the Executive Council refuses to grant adequate support to Philadelphia Union, No. 2, to carry on the work outlined by the Organization Committee of that Union against the open shop and nonunion newspapers; and

Whereas the Executive Council also refused to submit a proposition to the membership, indorsed by fifty unions, for the payment of a sum deemed sufficient to carry out the plans of said Organization Committee in pushing the fight now on; therefore be it

Resolved, That Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, if the same be acceptable to Philadelphia Union, No. 2, pledges itself to donate the sum of $70 per month for the continuance of the fight against the non-union newspapers and the open shop in Philadelphia, said donation to continue until further orders.

The resolutions were adopted as read.

The Union then took up the further consideration of the Committee on Laws, the Article governing apprentices being the unfinished business of the committee.

The discussion on this Article was somewhat spirited, but with the exception of several minor changes the report of the committee was adopted.

During the debate a motion was put and carried to adjourn until next Sunday at 2:30 o'clock.

Prior to adjournment an effort was made to have the Union assume the payment of funeral benefit to the widow of the late J. Thomas Miller, but as Mr. Miller had not been a member for a sufficient time (one year) in this Union the Union denied the relief.

The G. P. O. Veteran Club.

The Government Printing Office Veteran Club, now entering upon its fourth year, has come to be of good proportions and is firmly established as an organization with its sole aim directed to social features for ex-soldiers and their families, who seek a closer acquaintance by frequent meetings, when entertainments are given to which friends of members are invited, thus enlarging their circle of acquaintances and establishing more firmly the bond of comradeship by association during the few years remaining.

Meetings are now regularly held at Pythian Temple on the first and third Saturdays of each month. On last Saturday evening an exceptionally fine program was presented, which consisted of a vocal solo by Miss Kate Ellis; recitations by Mr. Charles F. Weston, and Mrs. Reed, of Minnesota. Instrumental music by the Nordica Mandolin Club, Prof. Walter F. Holt, director, was a pleasant feature, and little Helen Wetzel won the hearts of all with encore by song quite adapted to her years and graceful movements.

The crowning feature of the evening was the recitations, by the inimitable Col. Will L. Vischer, a veteran journalist and former colleague of Bill Nye, who kept the audience in merry mood from start to finish. There were also present the Hon. George R. Patterson, Member of Congress from Pennsylvania, and Mr. John McVicar, ex-President of the International Typographical Union. The latter spoke briefly but feelingly of his association with printers, and declared those the proudest years of his life when he was honored by that body and when he carried a Union card. He still has an abiding interest in the success of trades union principles everywhere.

Supper followed and the membership were unanimous in the expression that it was one of the most enjoyable of any in the Club's history.

Union Label Goods.

The advent of a store in this city where union-made label goods can be found on sale, marks a new era for the Union workingmen of this city.

The Union Outfitters to Men Company will throw open the doors of their new store on Wednesday, March 1. All goods in the house will bear the label of the craft that makes it, and it is expected that the demand for goods of this kind will receive an impetus that will be gratifying to all wage-earners who advocate the use of the label.

JUST EVERY-DAY LIFE.

The instinct for the scenting a story or the studying of a type, once acquired, is ever strong. While in Bloomington, Ill., I received a letter from a little lady, dated Toledo, Ohio, saying she was ill in a hospital and that she hoped I would make tracks in that direction. Four days later I was ringing the door bells of the Toledo hospitals in a vain quest. With the permission of the assistant postmaster I scanned the carriers' lists with a like result. Finally, every device exhausted, I sought the chief of police. 'It's a nice, sunny afternoon," he said, "you stand down there on Summit street and if she is in the city she will come past." He was right; in ten minutes she came tripping along In October last I was in the fringe of an incident involving the hurry up wagon, a midnight visit to headquarters, a name pronounced, a fleeting face in the dark and over and above all, forming the background for the picture, was the ennobling spectacle of a wife's fealty and devotion. With this slight clue I searched city directories and departmental rosters for twelve years past. Sometimes the trail was cold; at others warm. I mailed more than one dummy letter and then on its return studied the several inscriptions placed thereon by the carriers. That directing power by many denominated a subconscious force—which so often proved effective, now persisted in being absent on every roll call. I remembered the instructions of the chief, and during the holiday season took station on F street. In a few minutes here comes a lady. I stepped up. "Isn't this?" It was.

When the little girl says, "We all love pictures," she preaches a sermon, simply because pictures appeal to and portray the sunny rather than the shadowy side of life. By the same token, the man who drags into the hallowed precincts of the home the sordid cares of the business world skates on the thin ice. Tired of listening to the incessant drubbing, there may be found a fellow at the other side of the line, quick of wit and gift of gab, who can paint a pastel with the Melnotte query: "Don't like the picture lady?" The painter who said he was looking for a "female" a wasn't far from wrong. In the woman is found the character, etc., of the man accentuated. Find the female who does not like pictures—and such faith have I in the sex that I pronounce it a task herculean, and you find a subject for dumping the river before dire disaster can be communicated to posterity.

Why, in this age of art—and I hail it as a power for good—the school child on the corner discusses understandingly of Asti's and Bryn's and Rondell's. Remember, in the words of one whose name could be employed as a synonym for brains:

Into the statue that breathes the soul of the sculptor is bidden
Under the canvas that throbs the heart of the artist is hidden.

While on the ex-delegates excursion to the big show at St. Louis in August last I put in "Ajax" hours. At the I. T. U. convention hall, on the intramural, through the several concessions, or down the pike I trotted, until the capillaries in the soles of my feet beat a tatoo equal to the snare drum of the orchestra. Exhausted, into bed I would fall, waking a few hours later to find the beating ceased, which told me it was time be up for another round. I was carrying a human alarm clock. The same conditions prevail in these frenzied nights on the Bill Force—

Where the keep busy sign hangs out every night
And we ne'er go home till broad daylight.

When the annual appeal for aid from the Board of Associated Charities for the District of Columbia is passed under the nose of over 200 members of the G. P. O. Night Bill Force chapel, each drawing a salary in the neighborhood of $5 per night, and nets a total of $1.25, there must be something radically wrong. Some time since the family of "Dummy" Welty, an aged deaf and dumb printer (since made by the management a laborer) applied to that institution for relief and were curtly told "The Union will look after you." It is not a surety that the Union will so do; but one thing can be stated with a degree of certainty: The members of the Union will not look after Mr. Welty or other commendable cases of relief and the Associated Charities at one and the same time.

H. S. SUTTON.

Governor Hoch, of Kansas, on Labor.

Organized labor in Kansas has a staunch friend in the person of Governor E. W. Hoch. At the annual convention of the State Society of Labor and Industry, held in Topeka recently, Governor Hoch delivered an address in which he said:

"No fair or reasonable man in my judgment and I choose my words, can object reasonably to the organization of laborers for mutual aid and protection. Everybody else organizes—farmers, newspaper men, and many others—workers from all classes, and they do it for mutual protection. It is not only right but wise that the men who earn their bread by the sweat of their brows should also organize. There may be excesses as in other organizations, there may be unwise leadership as in other organizations, but the trend is in the right direction, and it has done much, and very much to ameliorate the conditions of laboring men in this country."

These were the words of the governor in his address of welcome, and the delegate-packed hall resounded again and again to the vociferous applause and cheering.

"I come to you with no cut and dried speech. I simply come to you as the official representative of the State to bid you welcome. I have come to this hall for years and looked into the faces of Kansas legislators, and this is a better looking lot of men than any Kansas Legislature. If this be treason, let the present Legislature make the most of it.

"I feel very much at home. I am a practical printer. I learned the business as a boy—the first year $50, the second $75, and the third $100. This was my wage. I am proud to say that the very day I was drafted governor I was setting type in my printing office.

"The overwhelming majority of Kansas people earn their bread by the sweat of his brow. Here there is no ban upon brawn.

"What has labor accomplished? It has tunneled every mountain, navigated every ocean, and has done everything worth doing. In the last analysis everything resolves itself to the fact that it springs from labor. The chief value of things is the value of labor.

"Kansas has appreciated its laborers perhaps more than any other State. We have put more law upon our statute books for laboring men than any other State in the country. So well have the laborers been cared for that you send but few requests to the Legislature to-day. The requests you make are so reasonable and just that I think they will be granted. The Senate has passed the child labor law and I hope the House will also pass it.

"I want to speak of the protection of miners from mine explosions. I hope the Kansas Legislature will not stop for cost when it comes to the protection of human life.

"In behalf of the State I present a cordial welcome, and then personally I extend to you an invitation to bring your wives and visit us at the governor's residence."—Labor Record.

James M. Downtain Dead.

James M. Downtain, a clerk in the Pension Office, died in Florida on Sunday last, where he had gone for his health. Mr. Downtain, known to his fellow-workers as "Big Jim," was a Union printer and subsequently a publisher of a weekly newspaper in West Virginia. Some thirty years ago he was a member of Cincinnati Typographical Union, No. 3, and was well known as a staunch unionist. He was a veteran in the late war and has been in the Government service in this city for the past five years.

ALLIED PRINTING TRADES UNION LABEL COUNCIL WASHINGTON. 2

Only Eight-Hour Union Office in Town.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 23, 1905.

WITH the adjournment of Congress in sight the friends of the various measures in which organized labor is interested have no cause for feeling elated, while many bills intended for use of corporate interests have received due consideration. It may not be amiss to remind trades unionists that if the principle involved in the initiative and referendum governing the testing of prospective candidates on measures that they are interested in was put into operation generally the results accomplished would redound to the credit of a organized labor.

THE labor troubles in Russia and its dependencies mark the dawn of a new day in that country. With laws that forbid associations of any kind of toilers the strikes now on in Russia are a source of surprise to those who have a knowledge of past conditions in that country. The wage-earner and the patriot are together in insistence on reform of the laws and a more liberal form of government.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

One of the gentlemen of the Night Bill Force, Mr. Long, recently handed me a copy of the Rockingham Register, of Harrisonburg, Va., which contains a a letter from Winchester, Va., giving an account of the death, at that place, of Joseph K. Smith, who was for about ten years an employee of the G. P. O., with a lengthy review of his life. He had published papers at a number of places in the South and was a ready and versatile writer. Mr. Smith was about 70 years old.

The alleged cartoon in last week's issue of which I am presumably the subject has awakened a variety of emotions in me, as it has in others. All the other correspondents pass me by with noses in the air, but generally ask, before getting out of earshot, "How much did it cost you?" showing that they contemplate applying for similar notoriety if it can be secured within the diminutive sum which their thriftiness permits them to expend at one time. Frank Smith, candidate for delegate, said he would pay $50 for such a representation of himself mowing down his competitors; but I think his bid is too low, considering the value it would be to him. Maud S. seems infatuated with it, and if you see his generous proportions similarly portrayed in the near future you can guess where his salary for two weeks has gone. Harry Knapp looks important and suggests that there are others whom a 44-inch belt fits. Charlie Gunn is indulging in suggestions that embonpoint is no indication of brains. Jimmie Huggins stroked his Galways and spoke of bare-faced egotism. Mark Barnum sent me assurances of his "sym." Johnny Ottinger looked unutterable things, but as yet has said nothing. It was considerate of the "poets" to furnish specimens to show the provocation I have had for my crusade.

* * * *

I have received, with the compliments of William Kenworthy, "Hear the Sleighbells Jingle, for mixed quartette; words by William Kenworthy; music by Bert S. Elliott," and though I have not yet had the pleasure of hearing it rendered, I doubt not that it is an enjoyable piece of the lighter sort, as indicated by its title. Come to think of it, how would a sleighbell song sound to the music of the quartette in Semiramide or the Priests' Chorus in Tannhauser? Of course it has to be light. Both gentlemen are G. P. O. printers.

* * * *

Two or three people have hauled me over the coals for my reference last week to the performance of the Mergenthalers in getting out our 174-page Record, accompanied by invitations to tell what I got for it, which shows the venal state of their minds. In being "sangowine," as a former well-known doorkeeper of the G. P. O. used to call it, these people remind me of a Mexican named Brassler who once worked in the office, Senator Pomeroy being his "floo." After that statesman met his Waterloo through misplaced confidence and money in endeayoring to be re-elected—which, by the way ,gave to the world Senator Ingalls—Brassler looked forward with unwavering faith to the return of Pomeroy to the Senate, for the improvement of his own fortunes, and his constant salutation to fellow-Kansans was, "Pomeroy come yet?" My friends are equally solicitous in asking, "Have the machines been thrown out yet?"

* * * *

It is a pity that some men are so constituted that they can see only dishonesty of purpose and wrongdoing in anyone who disagrees with them and fight their own officials harder than they fight the common foe if the officials construe the law differently from what they do. We have need for the conservation of all our energies for the contest that is to be inaugurated in about ten months from now, and bitter warfare among ourselves in the meantime can only weaken our forces. Let us agree to do everything calmly and legally, and whatever differences of opinion may exist can be decided by the convention to meet in Toronto in August. The rule or ruin policy on the part of those not chosen to rule generally results in ruin.

My friend "Cycle" has a different conception of the respective meanings of the terms "kicker" and "knocker" from what I have, and from what I believe are the generally accepted definitions. The "kicker" is one who "kicks" against conditions which displeases him, while the "knocker" is one who "knocks" those whom he dislikes. The one is the class who work for the rectification of what they consider abuses; the other class are the common scolds, slanderers, and backcappers who stand around and "throw the knife into" those with whom they disagree. Look into it, "Cycle," and see if that is not nearer right.

I recently had a letter from Billy Wilkinson, of Austin, Tex., in which he mentions that early in January, while on his way to work, he was held up by a voice, half command and half entreaty—"Oh, Bee-yull!"—and waiting for that which had produced the sound to approach, he found its source to be my sometime Boston friend Billy Moorhead, whom he had not seen for a matter of twenty-six years. Moorhead has a cattle ranch in the Pecos ("Paycos" Wilkinson tells me is the proper thing) country, and had come to town to get a branding outfit, and, incidentally, work awhile till the grass begins to grow. On Wilkinson's introduction he was provided with a job. There are a few old-timers still living who will remember both these old gentlemen from having met them either in the habitable portions of the globe or in Texas or Arkansas.

A great portion of the money in the United States passes through the workingmen's hands once a year. But they give it all back, with their work thrown into the bargain, for the privilege of living. Why should they not keep and operate with a portion of it? If they haven't the business ability of those who live without work, they can acquire it. If they would save and keep in their own hands 10 per cent of their wages they could supply all their own wants in a brief time. As it works at present, what they save they put into the other fellows' hands to do business with, lending it to the banker at 2 or 3 per cent and paying 8 or 10 in one way or another for what they need to borrow.

There is a fight against the reappointment of State Labor Commissioner McMackin in New York, who is alleged to be either incompetent or grossly neglectful of his duties, and the friends of William S. Waudby, for twenty years a special agent of the U. S. Labor Bureau and lately a candidate for Commissioner, are pushing him to succeed McMackin. Mr. Waudby is very popular among the trades unionists of the State.

My friend Joseph C. Berry, President of the Trades Council of Bellefontaine, Ohio, recently presided over a workingman's meeting in that city held for the purpose of listening to addresses on the labor question, one by the Rev. Jesse Swank, pastor of the M. E. Church, and the other by A. F. of L. General Organizer C. F. Davis.

Col. Charles H. Slack occasionally sends me a copy of his Bristol (Tenn.-Va.) Courier, which I appreciate. Here are a few editorial Slack wads:

The grass widow is perennial, but hardly evergreen.

Talk is about the cheapest way in which to remember the poor.

Only a goose would lay golden eggs when the ordinary hen variety is selling at 40 cents per.

The only excuse the ice man will have for high prices next summer is that he needs the money.

Thomas Jefferson called the Senate the saucer in which hot tea can be cooled. Few members of the House have an aversion for "cold tea."

I have received copies of the Kansas City Labor Herald, in which Charles W. Fear, secretary of the Label Committee, is running an interesting department under the headline of "Of interest to Printers," into which he injects a good deal of his virile personality. We need strong writers to interest readers in labor papers—men who do not indulge too much in long homilies, but who have the faculty of writing interestingly.

Something over thirty years ago the question of "taking the Government Printing Office out of the Union" was chewed to a frazzle, and in no unmistakable terms the printers of that institution made known their desire and intention to stay in. Within the last few weeks a very energetic "downtown" man has been agitating toward that end again, but I do not believe he will get even a serious hearing. No good and nothing but evil could come to either end of the town from such a consummation. I do not think the agitator is looking to improving the conditions in the G. P. O., but has selfish ends in view; but if I am wrong in that let him look at Government workshops in which the unions amount to little or nothing and see how nearly on union principles they are conducted.

I notice by the stock reports that Lanston stock is slowly climbing up. Artistically it is one of the finest machines, if not the finest type machine ever made, owing to the facility and ease with which proofs can be corrected and tabular matter composed. I have no means of knowing whether it is an economical success or not, but it certainly does artistic work. There is something fascinating to me about the ingenious casting machine as it slides forth the lines of type, all spaced and yet separable letter by letter.

Ladies and gentlemen, if you want to get into the National Mutual Finance and Investment Company, the books are now open—not only open but 300 of the 500 shares of stock were subscribed for before a line of printing was done. The par value of the shares is $100, payable $1 on the 1st and 15th of each month, beginning March 1. This will give a capital of $1,000 a month with which to operate in real estate in any and all of the ways in which an individual with that amount of money could operate. Experienced men in Messrs. Melick, Donath, and Bonney are the officers, with a board of directors the solidity and discreetness of which need no further guaranty than the statement of the fact that I am one of them. A couple of shares as a side-issue investment will not cost enough to be noticed, though one can take as many as ten shares if he desires, and the returns cannot fail to be remunerative.

I received a letter from Wiliiam E. Shields a few days ago, in which he stated that Dave Pollock had spent four or five days in Denver, going from the Home, and that he probably would not remain long at the Home. As president of the Denver Trades and Labor Assembly Shields has his hands pretty full, but is working hard to help the organization. Shields has bought himself a home and is now probably settled as a definite resident of Denver.

The Laugh Was on Nehus.

Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, attended the national convention of tailors a few days ago. An incident of the proceedings is told in this way by the Associated Press: "When Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, finished a speech of thirty minutes to the national convention of Tailors, Delegate Herman Nehus, of Pittsburg, arose and said that there was some doubt as to whether Mr. Gompers was wearing clothes with the union label, and moved that a committee be appointed to investigate. The motion caused a storm of protest, but Mr. Gompers quieted the delegates, and suggested to the convention that Nehus be appointed a committee of one to investigate. The convention shouted its approval, and Gompers advanced to the front of the platform and pointing to Nehus urged him to come forward, at the same time opening his coat, as if to display the label. Nehus remained in his seat and the delegates yelled derision. Mr. Gompers then explained that every article of clothing he wore bore the union label.

A G. P. O. Man's Book.

"The Mysteries of the Zimniy Dvoretz" (Winter Palace), a powerful Russian novel. By Charles W. Pafflow, of the Government Printing Office, seems to be an accurate and realistic picture of revolutionary life in Russia. Though the same characters remain from the beginning to the end, the work cannot be called a novel. It has no plot. You never read in expectation of what is going to happen. You are absorbed and entranced in the page before you. Every chapter has its own climax.

In rapid succession and with dramatic power the scene shifts from the Winter Palace of the Tsar to the secret assemblies of the revolutionists; from the salons of luxurious elegance to the shacks of the wretched creatures to whom hope never comes.

There is no attempt at sensation or at fine writing. The narrative is carried on with the chill and rigidity of ice and steel. There is nothing subjective, no outbursts, no declamation. The fire blazes and the sparks fly; but this is from what is suggested to the reader and not from any direct appeal to his emotions. And the whole scenery and setting is seen in the light and expressed in the atmosphere of Russian thought and habit.

The personages introduced are all real characters, and some of them are still living. The events portrayed are all real events and not fictitious. Some of the occurrences as detailed are doubtless imaginary, but they are none the less true as actual facts.

The book is an actual portrayal of existing conditions in Russia to-day, and any one who desires to know what these conditions are should read "The Mysteries of the Zimniy Dvoretz."

GOSSIP FROM THE G. P. O.

First Division.

The two B's had the "sporty" boys going the other day.

Where's the individual that don't believe in the ground hog prediction?

Don't you wish you were located in the "Bill-Room" side of this Division? All answers reserved.

"They say" that Vice-President Wm. R. Love will have a clear field in his candidacy for re-election. "Billy" represents slug 95.

"They say" there are a number of expert checkers-players in this Room. How about slugs 98, 78 and 77? Or Mr. Thos. Haworth?

"They say" that Harry C. Knapp will be the down-town winner this time. Harry has lots of friends in the G. P. O., who will vote for him.

The rumor committee has W. L. Gutelius, of the Spess, on the slate as a candidate for delegate. Of course you must not believe all you hear.

Frank D. Smith, candidate for delegate, paid a hasty visit to this Division a few days ago. Presume he was locating his bearings; also his friends.

"They say" that P. S. Steele, candidate, has a stock of new jokes for the coming campaign. Better cut out the jokes and get a cinch on the votes.

Everything quiet in the slug quotation. Not even a resignation. We heartily trust that it is not the calm which frequently precedes a storm.

"They say" that slug 4, Wallace Brewer, is now pleasantly located in his new home on Rhode Island Avenue, Brentwood. Another suburbanite for the trolley line.

Chas. F. Garrette, of this Division, was one of the voters who went over to the City of Brotherly Love on Tuesday, and exercised the right of suffrage at the annual spring election.

W. A. Brooks, messenger in this Division assigned to Mr. Spottswood's Room, has taken sixty days' leave without pay. Nothing like being on time for the Inaugural ceremonies.

"They say" there will be no opposition to Secretary Seibold for a renomination to the office which he has so acceptably filled in this the first year of his incumbency. That is right.

The Associated Charities and Citizen's Relief Association have publicly acknowledged liberal subscriptions from employees of the G. P. O. I'll tell you when we all give, we do so cheerfully.

Some persons are irresistibly funny. Suppose it comes their way naturally. That comparison last week by the Sixth Division correspondent was a crackerjack. Fifty per cent of the name was correct.

The new Auditor, Mr. Bushnell, successor to Mr. West, accompanied Messrs. Bennett, disbursing officer and Wilver, pay clerk, on Monday, in their visit to the various Divisions, and had the pleasure of meeting the foremen in charge.

O, I don't know. We receive all kinds of visitors in this Division. During the week we noticed W. D. Morgan, of the Third, having in charge two Methodist clergymen, introducing them to some of the case-holders on the other side of the room.

President Melick, of the New Investment Company, paid a hasty visit a few days since, and spoke most encouragingly of the new association, and that although but a week old considerable stock had already been subscribed. A good thing and is bound to be a successful venture.

It may not be generally known that Mr. Robert R. West, Auditor of the Treasury Department for the Printing Office, resigned some time ago. Our informant says he has obtained a similar position with the Panama Canal Commission. Of course the new position calls for largely increased salary.

Not a few of the employees of this Division are partial to onions. Purchase them at the fruit stand, just the same as oranges, apples, or other fruit. Imposer Burnside, judging from appearances, would rather go without his noonday lunch, than not have his onion "on the side." Even our old friend, "Jimmy" Weaver, is a welcome guest to Jack's onion bill of fare.

On the tenth of the present month Albert M. Robinson, brother of C. M. Robinson, foreman of the Proof Room, died at the Soldiers Home, Santa Monica, Cal. Our informant states that the deceased was an employee of this office within the past twenty-five years; had a clerical position in the Job Room. Thus one by one are the ranks of the "disappearing army" being augmented.

Doubtless many of the employees will remember A. E. Townsend, a compositor in the Document Room, and subsequently a proofreader, some years ago. A member of this chapel on the other side of the room informs us that he has left St. Louis, after several years residence in that city, and has finally located in Skiatook, Indian Territory. Since leaving the G. P. O., more than a dozen of years ago, he has been successfully engaged in general merchandizing.

Third Division.

The November (1904) number of Scribner's Magazine is wanted by Mr. George L. Sherman, assistant foreman of this Division, who will gladly pay the retail price.

Don't it make your flesh creep when, with "hurried copy" on our frames, Joe marches by, stopping at each alley to intone, like the Ghost in Hamlet, the fateful words, "Work throooo-o."

The gentleman from the night side set 1,600 ten-point from frame 41, and left a note in the "e" box stating it was by order of the foreman. My frame is 39, in the same alley. I am somewhat curious to know why a note was not left in my drawer stating by whose order the gentleman stole therefrom two large red apples of the Northern Spy variety. It is a singular coincidence that the dates when sorts are missed from our cases coincide with the dates when our private property is stolen.

Albert P. E. Doyle was transferred Thursday morning to the Navy Branch. Though accredited to New York, Mr. Doyle learned his trade in Providence, R. I., and has contributed a characteristic bit of reminiscence to the semi-centennial souvenir book to be issued by Providence Typographical Union, No. 33, in 1907. He has served his country in the G. P. O. for nearly ten years and has many friends in Washington. I wish him all success in his new location.

It is perhaps due to the First Division Bowling Team to state that after my last week's matter had been sent to the Editor of THE TRADES UNIONIST, I was informed that a meeting had been arranged by the First and Third Division Teams, to take place after March 4. This would seem to remove the impression that there is any "Crawfish" in the composition of the First Division Team. It might be well to remark here that by the way the Third is getting trounced lately there won't be much of them left after Inauguration .Time alone will tell.

Monday morning eight men from the Spess marched in and were put to work. Their names and slug numbers follow: F. M. P. Montague, 12; Theodore P. C. Willis, 13; D. A. Smith, Jr., 15; J. E. Horney, 20; Clifton S. Newsom, 38; Chas. A. Calvo, Jr., 104; Thomas C. Evans, 124; George H. Birdsall, 128. Of the above, Mr. J. E. Horney is from Harrington, Del., he being the second Delaware man to be assigned to this Division in the past six weeks. This is great for Delaware. Mr. Clifton S. Newsom is a brother of Hubert Newsom, late a correspondent of this paper, and formerly connected with the Third, now in the Sixth Division. Mr. Newsom, as well as Mr. Theodore P. C. Willis, is from St. Louis. All the new recruits are temporary appointees, a fact not at all to their discredit; for, as previously pointed out in this column, there are many temporary men who are far better printers than a lot of "permanent" men that could be mentioned.

* * * * *

The following subscriptions were collected by Chairman Goodkey during the past week: Mr. Rose, $10.75; Mr. Gordon, $7.25; Associated Charities, $2.00; Western Federation of Miners, $1.00. There are a lot of chronic growlers and kickers who always put up a plaintive howl whenever a subscription paper is passed, and who seem to regard it as their duty to go about and say disparaging things to their acquaintances about any man who is so unfortunate as to be compelled to ask for a helping hand. It is true that some of those for whom help is asked have been improvident, to call it by no harsher term; but that does not lessen the fact that they are in need, often with a wife and several helpless children dependent upon them. If we all did what we ought to in this world, it would be so goody-goody that after a while some one would be forced to go wrong to add a little variety to our daily life. The point I wish to make is this: In giving but $10.75 to aid a fellow-workman whose death followed quickly, leaving a wife and three children to the mercy of the world, the Third Division showed that it gave grudgingly. The same may be said of the other items noted above. There is charity of the heart, as well as of the purse, Tom Hood well said:

Alas for the rarity
Of Christian charity
Under the sun.

* * * *

I trust the readers of this paper will accept my apology for "dropping into poetry." Observe, if you please, that I said "dropping." I fully realize the enormity of my offense and will henceforth abstain. My only excuse is, that innocently complying with a request to furnish something—any old doggerel will do—for a valentine to the great and only Pard Bloomer, I was led into my first "poem," and the "embattled newspaper press of the country" (Adam Bugg) accepted and published it. And think of the glory of having one's verses placed cheek by jowl with those of the justly-celebrated Bugg! I am in momentary expectation of receiving letters from all the principal publications of the country asking for poetical contributions, but shall be under the embarrassing necessity of refusing all offers, knowing as I do that I only shine by the reflected light of Bugg. With Silas Wegg let me repeat:

My eldest brother leaned upon his sword,
Mr. Boffin,
And wiped away a tear, ma'am!

Then, like Cardinal Wolsey, I will say:

Farewell, a long farewell,
To all my greatness.

Dreadful stuff? It sure was.

O. Z. Homer, Lanston machinist, of the Gazette Division, was admitted to the Union at its last meeting.

"Rough Writer" is after Jack the Smearer, the wash-room lout. Go for him brother; he has no friends.

Pard Bloomer's definition of "kicker" and "knocker" in the Typographical Journal are good. We reproduce them, just for instance—

I am afraid that some people (apropos of nothing at all) fail to distinguish between the "kicker" and the "knocker," who are birds of very different plumage and with very different objects in view. The "kicker" seeks reforms, and all his "kicks" are in the interest of reform or what he conceives to be reform. The "knocker" makes something he does not like, or pretends he does not like, the occasion for "knocking" somebody he does not like. The "kicker" is a real reformer, and he "kicks" for reform; the "knocker" "knocks" what is without having anything to substitute for it. The former is a builder up—on his own lines, to be sure; the latter is a tearer down, erecting nothing. The "kicker" "kicks" to be helpful; the "knocker" "knocks" to be hurtful.

A. J. Benton has invented a device for the Lanston Monotype machine whereby three different lugs are thrown out of action by one movement of a lever, which enables an operator to turn the paper spindle in either direction.

A box of oranges was received by the members of the "alley" in which Miss Wilson works. Not the big, clumsy oranges you buy here, but cute, little ones about the size of a grape. They are called "kumquots," and were shipped from St. Augustine, Fla., where Miss Wilson and Miss Booth are enjoying summer weather.

Miss Cornelia Brown has received information of the death of Miss Abbie Boutwell's father, at Leominster, Mass., of heart failure. Miss Boutwell was employed in the Government Printing Office about four years, but resigned to associate herself in business with her father last fall. Her many friends here sympathize with her in her bereavement.

Specification Notes.

The Lanstons were on the "make up" for a time on Tuesday.

Seventeen extras were transferred to the main office on Saturday.

Miss Jennie Fell has the sympathy of her many friends of this room in the loss sustained by the death of her mother, which occurred last Saturday.

The older printers remember the time when it would have been considered a piece of rank extravagance to make "pi" of brand new type and send it off to be recast before it was laid or scarcely soiled.

The luxurious repose of Washington's birthday was greatly enjoyed, and if called upon we could name events suitable for other rest periods until no month of the year would be without a holiday, and on a pinch could name one for each week.

Mr. J. W. Carter, in charge of copy for this Division, was advanced to the office of grand chancellor of the Pythian Grand Lodge on Tuesday evening of this week. The office of grand chancellor is the highest possible office in this domain of the order.

The artist who last week represented Mr. Bloomer with a big scythe in the act of unmercifully mowing down the pesky poets failed only in the single-gallus feature as a true-to-life embellishment. In all other respects the likeness was strikingly perfect.

In front of this office, on the North Capitol street side, there is an accumulation of congealed snow, thrown up into cakes of varying sizes, like glacier rubbish or something resembling the blocks of quartz illustrated in some of those mining circulars which have been crowding our mail the past year or so and which all have been urgently requested to "take out" on with the promise of big returns. Those people who are making a special study of other people's needs should give these blocks of snow some mythological name and turn them to account as a profitable investment to those who may be looking for an ice thing.

THE DEATH ANGEL.

At night we lock our doors, and think
That our dear ones have naught to fear;
That harm or danger cannot come
Nigh unto these we love so dear.

And seated round the fireside hearth
We plan for all the future years;
But while we talk, without our ken,
An unseen stranger in the room appears.

Comes in, and nevermore departs
Until from that once happy place,
One of the group we hold most dear
He carries in his cold embrace.

Oh cruel stranger, can it be
Thou only com'st to us in love,
And art but messenger of God
To draw our hearts from earth above?

Father, forgive, if in our tears
Thy loving hand we do not see
And try to hold our loved ones back
When thou wouldst draw them unto Thee.

At last, around Thy throne, may we
A reunited happy band
From sickness, pain and sorrow be Forever safe at Thy right hand.

—T. A. RHODES.

Langdon, D. C.

I WAS ONLY TEASIN' YOU.

If you're going to be a candidate,
And in the race to stay,
Come out and let your wish be known
So we can vote for you in May.
Don't linger in the bushes
And think you're overmatched,
For if you longer linger
You may be surely "scratched."

If you "announce" that you will run,
And set your friends to working,
Don't change your mind for any one—
In that there's danger lurking.
And when the work is started,
And you the step doth rue,
For heaven's sake do not say,
"I was only teasin' you."

Free Lectures to the People.

Prof. J. Howard Gore, Ph.D., Department of Arts and Sciences, George Washington University, will give an interesting illustrated lecture on "Holland's War with the Sea" at the Eastern High School, on the evening of February 24 at 8 o'clock.

On the evening of Thursday, February 23, in the Shiloh Baptist Church, at 8 o'clock, President Gordon, of Howard University, will give a graphic description of "Florence and its Art Treasures." This lecturer will begin with his voyage from America, landing at Genoa, and will give a short account of the description of the city, the sights in the streets, the home life of the Italians, the great men who have lived there. The strange bridge over the river; Florence in the period of its greatest wealth and power under Lorenzo the Magnificent, and the part it has played in history.

Obituary of a Labor Editor.

The stork disappears, and we look into the cradle and behold a male child. After running the gauntlet of measles, mumps and chickenpox, he enters school. At the age of 10 he is a red-headed, freckle-faced boy and the terror of the neighborhood. At 12 he is an apprentice in a printing office. At 18 he has acquired two cases of long primer and an army press and is the editor of a country newspaper. At 20 he is married. At 30 he is bald-headed, stoop-shouldered and the father of a large family. At 35 he is a corpse in a cheap pine coffin, and as 500 delinquent subscribers file past his bier for the last look they are heard to say: "He was a good fellow, but he couldn't save his money."—Ex.

NAVY YARD ITEMS.

Andrew Jackson Hudson has been appointed a draftsman in the Ordnance Department.

L. L. Irvine, machinist, W. G. C. Shop, was severely injured one day this week. After attention, he was sent to his home.

The work of driving the piling for the new quay wall fronting the new extension of the Yard, is being pushed as rapidly as the low temperature will permit.

John Shipley, an old employee in the Foundry, died suddenly at his residence in Baltimore last Friday night of acute indigestion. He was my friend. I mourn his loss.

Christopher Columbus, of the Yards and Docks, an old employee, passed over the river last week and no doubt is now enjoying the association of his illustrious name sake.

Samuel E. Tilton, of New Jersey, has been appointed as assistant architectural draftsman in Yards and Docks. He brings with him the highest testimonials as to his ability.

C. Ricks, N. C. Nelson and C. T. Conrad have been appointed special laborers, messengers boys, in the Ordnance Department after certification by the Civil Service Commission.

After a series of delays the McClintock-Marshall Construction Co., of Pottsville, Pa., have completed their contract for the steel work for the crane, runways, trestles, coal chutes, etc., in connection with coal handling in Building No. 118.

The contract with the Snare Triest Co., of New York for furnishing and erecting steel construction work in connection with building for power plant extension is being completed as fast as possible under the cold weather conditions.

The wireless telegraph station has been equipped so far as to receive time signals from the Western Union Telegraph Company's office and the time is sent out every day at noon by wireless to Annapolis, Md., and to the Bureau of Standards at the Department of Commerce and Labor, where a wireless receiving set is established for that purpose.

Wm. F. Beaumont, of the Tool Shop, leaves this week for Asheville, N. C., where he goes to try and recuperate. He is suffering with lung trouble, and his shopmates, generous boys they are, have prepared the necessary facilities that will keep him in Asheville for several months. Billy is one of the boys who never made an enemy during his long service in the Yard, as the generosity of his shopmates prove so conclusively when sickness has overtaken their shopmate. The wish of every one in the Yard goes out to Billie that he will soon return fully restored to health.

Some weeks ago the Superintendent of the Naval Gun Factory made the recommendation that the drafting force in the Ordnance Department should be augmented by the addition of a grade of apprentice, or minor under instruction, in drafting, the young men to be selected by competitive examination before a regular board of officers or master mechanics from among the ranks of the minors under instruction in the various departments. In answer to this communication the following circular has been received and posted:

OFFICE OF THE SUPERINTENDENT OF NAVAL GUN FACTORY.
February 9, 1905.

Minors under instruction who have served two (2) years or more as such in the Naval Gun Factory, having a special aptitude for drafting work, and who may desire to enter the Naval Gun Factory drafting room, are requested to send at once to the Superintendent's office their applications accompanied by supplementary statements and such letters as will show the fitness of the applicant. A competitive examination will be held of these applicants who offer evidences showing special aptitude in drafting work and from the satisfactory competitors six (6) will be selected and recommended for detail in drafting room.

Very respectfully,
E. C. PENDLETON.
Captain U. S. N.
Superintendent Naval Gun Factory.

This is a most important move in the right direction because it now gives the apprentices in the various shops the privilege that has been heretofore denied them, the right to compete with outsiders for positions in the drafting division. While this innovation should have been instituted many years ago, it is better now than never, as it will be the means of creating a desire among the boys to educate themselves in drawing so as to enable them to compete for such desirable positions with the outside world.

I have an apology to offer the Miscellaneous Shop. When writing up the various relief associations in the Yard I missed this most important department which has a relief association known as The Columbia. Its roster of officers are: F. G. Eppley, president; J. J. Riley, vice-president; W. H. Guernsey, secretary-treasurer. The board of governors are: F. A. Reilley, G. A. Lewis, H. E. Kunkle, J. O. Payne and John McGuigan. Dues are $1 per month; benefits $12 per week for eight weeks in a calendar year; no death benefit. This association was organized January 2, 1905.

In connection with the different relief associations, and particularly the Columbia, I find that the members believe in acting as a unit on all measures affecting the interests of the working classes, and acting on that principle have made the Merchants and Mechanics Savings Bank their depository, and it is safe to say that through the influence of this institution and those interested in its success many men who heretofore had not caught the saving fever are now monthly depositing their savings with this institution, which certainly not only conduces to their financial welfare but establishes within them a habit of frugality, economy and prudence. It would be well if every labor organization in the District would investigate this question and consult with the officer of the bank. If they would do this not only as organizations, but as private citizens, they will surprise themselves a year hence by having a good bank account. A word to a wise man is sufficient.

TIM TICKLE.

AFTER-DINNER DILATIONS.

The simple life sometimes calls for strenuous effort.

Government ownership and control is gaining in favor day by day.

We are glad when the days grow longer, but not so when the years would seem to be growing shorter.

***

It is a bit discouraging to know that the spring poet will claim his inning as soon as the ground hog lets go.

***

True unionism inspires true comradeship as truly as true patriotism inspires loyalty for that Government which seeks the good of all.

***

It is a trite saying that every man is the architect of his own fortune. This may be easy of belief by those who have fortunes thrust upon them.

It has been suggested that the Washington base ball club would be benefitted by a change of name. A better record would be something of a change.

It has been observed that some people with imperfect hearing experience little or no inconvenience from that source whenever a cent per cent proposition is under discussion.

A man with eyes all bleared and red unto himself these few words said: "No one would care if I were dead," and then he filled himself with lead, or, rather, snuffed the vital spark and shuffled off, when all was dark.

The sentiments contained in the following quotation from a speech recently delivered in New York, are so characteristic of the man who uttered them that the name of the author need not be here given. The message is for all men who would strive for good citizenship, who feel a duty resting upon them to help the weaker, who are ashamed to do or submit to a wrong, and who recognize the uplifting power of righteous living:

"We need good laws, we need honest administration of the laws, and we cannot afford to be contented with less; but more than aught else we need that the average man shall have in him the root of righteous living; that the average man shall have in him the feeling that will make him ashamed to do wrong, to submit to wrong, and that will make him feel his bounden duty to help those that are weaker, to help those especially that are in any way dependent upon him; and while not in any way losing the power of individual initiative, to cultivate without ceasing the further power of acting in combination with his fellows for a common end of social uplifting and good government."

In his estimate of character and in the selection of his subjects it is remarkable how nearly the judgment of the bribe giver corresponds with the general estimate of the bribe taker. It is a strange doctrine anyhow which men employ to justify themselves in wrong doing to the injury of others on the plea that the wrong will be done by some one and that it is only a question as to who will be first to do it and get the swag.

We do not find it in our heart to applaud the assassin who made mince meat of the hated Grand Duke Sergius, of Moscow. Neither is it a shock to good Americanism if this Government fails to place the flag at half-mast as an expression of sorrow when a tyrant of this type is laid low. If the Grand Duke received the summons too hurriedly the act may stand as an offset for cruelties inflicted by him upon others under circumstances affording less provocation.

CYCLE.

ODE TO TIM TICKLE.

Tim Tickle, Tim Tickle,
I'm glad you're not dead,
You're such a good fellow,
To you I am wed.

For your writings are just,
Both upright and true,
In helping your neighbor
This world to get through.

And I know you'll continue
In the very same strain,
Because you were born
With the right kind of brain.

So keep tickling, keep tickling,
And do all you can,
In helping your neighbor
And the down-trodden man.

For this intricate world
Is hard to get through,
Except you're well heeled
With a dollar or two.

So keep tickling, keep tickling,
Be brave, true and strong,
Go on with your tickling,
Though fools think you wrong.

Our Artist Depicts the Possible Consequences Attendant on Further Prolongation of Consideration of the Report of the Committee on Codification and Revision of the Laws of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101.

COLUMBIA UNION MEETING.

Report of Delegate Love on Philadelphia Situation Considered.

Columbia Typographical Union held an adjourned meeting last Sunday, presumably to continue consideration of the report of the Committee on Laws.

It developed that the delegate of No. 101 to Philadelphia (Vice-President Love) was ready to make his report, and, on motion, the regular order was set aside to hear from Vice-President Love.

The Philadelphia situation was concisely set forth by Mr. Love, and he gave a detailed account of the conduct of the strike on the Inquirer. He concluded his report by making a recommendation that Columbia Union do all in its power to aid Philadelphia Union and endeavor to secure the co-operation of sister Unions to do likewise.

Ernst Kreft, a member of the committee in charge of the Inquirer strike, and who has served his Union as its president and delegate to I. T. U conventions, was called to supplement the report of Mr. Love.

Mr. Kreft gave an interesting account of conditions in Philadlephia today and as they existed in the past ten years. He stated that he did not intend to discuss the attitude of the Executive Council in its stand against Philadelphia Union, but proved conclusively that Philadelphia Union had complied with every request of the Executive Council even to remaining quiescent when its interests as an organization were in jeopardy.

At the conclusion of Mr. Kreft's address the Union again reaffirmed its position on the Philadelphia matter by a unanimous vote, and then adjourned.

Working People's Concerts.

The series of Working People's Popular Concerts, to be given by Miss Maria Von Unschuld, president of the University of Music and Dramatic Art, will be one of the greatest educational factors in Washington. We say one of the greatest educational factors, for has not Miss Von Unschuld already established the Young Peoples Matinees, given at the High Schools every Tuesday.

The value of these concerts and matinees can scarcely be estimated. To hear the highest class of music for only ten cents is something unheard of before.

The President of the Monday Morning Current Event Club, at the last meeting, recommended to her interested listeners Miss Von Unschuld's Working Peoples' Popular Concerts.

These concerts are especially indorsed by Mr. Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, and Mr. Jno. B. Dickman, president of the Central Labor Union.

Miss Von Unschuld, court pianist to Her Majesty the Queen of Roumania, is a favorite in America and Europe, where she has done extensive recital work, being decorated with many orders.

Already the greatest interest is taken here in Miss Von Unschuld's work; no one person before has done so much for the education of the masses numerically.

Tickets for the Working Peoples Popular Concerts are selling rapidly, the first series of concerts to be given on Sundays March 12, April 2, May 7, at 8:15 p. m. in National Rifles' Armory, 918 G street N. W.

The programe will include a trio for piano, violin and cello; solos for song; solos for violin; solos for cello, and solos for piano.

The Noble Hen.

Government statistics for the year 1903 are responsible for the following interesting statistics of relative financial values:

The "egg and poultry earnings" of the United States amounted, during that year, to $290,000,000.

The total value of gold, silver, wool and sheep for the same year was only $272,434,315.

The cotton crop for the same year was valued at $259,161,640.

The 1903 wheat crop was worth $239,939,735 to the country.

The product of the United States hog market amounted to $186,529,035.

The oat crop of the same period attained a financial value of $78,984,900.

The potato output balanced the oat crop precisely.

Tobacco brought a total of $35,579,225 to its combined producers.

The entire sugar production of the country was worth only $20,000,000.

Says a writer in the Chicago Inter-Ocean: "For the sake of gaining a clearer idea of the immense magnitude of the egg product alone it may be said that the 1,290,000,000 dozen eggs produced yearly would fill 43,127,000 crates of thirty dozen each. An ordinary refrigerator car, with an average length of torty-two and one-half feet, holds 400 such crates. A train of these cars sufficiently long to carry the eggs produced in 1899—and the continually increasing number of each successive year must be remembered—would be 868 miles long, or long enough to reach from Chicago to Washington and have several miles of cars to spare. One hundred and seven thousand eight hundred and eighteen of these cars would be needed to carry the 1899 product of eggs."—Denver News.

Election of Officers.

At a regular meeting of Mail Bag, Pouch Makers, and Repairers Union, No. 10523, A. F. of L., the following officers were elected for the ensuing term: C. Green, president; H. Pacal, vice-president; L. W. Kearney, recording secretary; W. Gardner, financial secretary; W. J. Harris, treasurer; L. Nugent, inside guard; J. Dowd, outside guard.

BALTIMORE BREVITIES.

Items of Interest From the Monumental City,

Jimmie Carroll is doing well in Hoboken, N. J.

Looie O'Neil—"Chilly Billy's" old pal—is in town.

The American has moved into its new home, and a peach of one it is, too.

Charles Hawkes dropped in town for a short visit last week. Always welcome.

Bert Meehan tossed his sit on the Herald last week and left for Pittsburg, so I hear.

Tom Griffin, of the Pittsburg Dispatch, passed through this city last week and was cordially greeted by old friends.

Ed. Hirsh, proprietor of the Labor Advocate, and a printer, was recently elected president of the local Federation of Labor.

Andy Wagner, for several years on the Sun, and the hard-working chairman of the Committee on Nominations, has left town and will settle in Chicago. No. 12's loss is No. 16's gain.

The Herald has just completed the Baltimore City Directory, 2,400 pages. Quite a little job in connection with a 12-page daily and a 44-page Sunday paper. Charlie Bastian was maker-up.

Our president, Mr. Hanafin, paid a visit to Philadelphia last week to look over the labor situation in that city. He reports that No. 2 is progressing very well in its fight on the Inquirer. Also that its system of organization could not be improved on.

A duckpin league of four clubs—two from the News and two from the Herald—has been formed. Willie ("Cute") Smith is the official rooter for the Herald boys. "Glad face" Folsom, late of the American, is responsible for getting the boys together.

There are only three candidates for delegate up to the present time—Hartman, of the Sun, Steigleman, of the World, and Frazer, of Cox's. As the job offices, under our new law, must be represented by a delegate, the last-named gentleman, looks like a winner. As to the other, I'll let you know in May.

At the meeting of the Union on Sunday we were honored by a visit from owner Grasty, of the News, who was accompanied by the heads of the various departments of that paper. Mr. Grasty delivered an able address on "The Independent Newspaper." He interspersed his remarks with many amusing ancedotes, telling of his experiences in the composing room—among them the typelouse and the printing office towel. Later Billy Prescott raised a laugh by saying that in the day Mr. Grasty spoke of the towel was furnished by the proprietor, while at the present time that useful article was provided for by the employee. The visit was enjoyed by all present. Come again.

The regular weekly meeting of the Central Labor Union was called to order on Monday at 8. p. m. by President Dickman.

The minutes of the last regular meeting were read, and after correction, were approved.

Bills amounting to $1.25 were ordered paid.

CREDENTIALS.

Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners, Branch No. 2 (809): A. Hartin, A. Stevenson, T. H. Odell, I. C. Piper, and C. W. Stang.

Retail Clerks, No. 262: Charles Shannon, vice Clarence J. Tracey.

Upholsterers Union, No. 58: Frank Stumph, Henry Nolda, George Ackerman, H. Schinner, and A. Zargas.

The credentials were received and the delegates seated.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Machine Textile Printers Association of America, calling attention to the fact that the Merrimack Print Works, of Lowell, Mass., was on the "We Don't Patronize" list of the American Federation of Labor and asking for a vigorous fight against that corporation. Placed on file.

From Commercial Telegraphers Union of America, stating that owing to determined opposition of the Western Union Telegraph Co. organization of telegraphers is a hard one, and requesting that all business possible be diverted from that company. Referred to Organization Committee.

From Washington Lodge of Machinists, No. 193, stating that the National Roller and Ball Bearing Co. had been sold to The Murray Engineering Co., and that firm being fair to organized labor, requested that the National Roller and Ball Bearing Co. be removed from the unfair list. Request granted.

From Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, inclosing communication from United Cloth Hat and Cap Makers of North America, asking aid in the fight against the open shop now being made in that industry in New York City. Placed on file.

CALL OF UNIONS.

Delegate Dickman, from Columbia Typographical Union, reported that the delegates from that Union to the Central Labor Union were directed to attend the meeting on reorganization of the Allied Label League.

The secretary was directed to correspond with the President of the United States and request that he make provision for a holiday on March 4, 1905, for all employees of the Government.

Attention of the delegates was called to the opening of the Union Outfitters to Men Co. store on Wednesday.

GOIN' HOME

NELLIE ROBINSON STRETTON.

I'se a goin' home to mammy,
Don't yer wish dat me wuz you,
I'se so tired of men's pretendin'
Ob de good dey nebber do;
I'se a goin' where de blossoms
Razzle sunshine wid dere bloom,
Where de lilocks and de posies
Melt de air wid dere perfume.

I'se been roamin' and a roamin'
Up and down the crowded streets;
Watchin' all de cussed capers
Ob de fools I often meets;
But I'se goin home to mammy,
Jus' to be her chile again,
Where de red is on de roses,
And de conscience in de men.

I'se a goin' back to mammy,
Don't yer wish dat you wuz me,
I'se a toten' home her Sammy
To dat good old Tennessee;
Where de hills shut out life's troubles,
In de place where I wuz born,
Where de yeller's on de punkin
And de whiskers on de corn.

BITS OF PRINTING HISTORY.

Interesting Account of Craftsmen Society in the Last Century.

The earliest movement of the printers to better their condition and maintain a fixed rate of wages was in Philadelphia in 1768. The Freeman's Journal of June of that year publishes an account of a strike of printers against a reduction of wages from 36 shillings to 35 shillings per week. The printers resisted the reduction and maintained the former price.

The Philadelphia Typographical Society was organized in 1802, and is still in existence. This organization, like its New York namesake, is not a benevolent and charitable institution. This organization started as a bona fide labor organization, maintained a uniform scale of prices and protected its members from unjust discrimination, issued working cards to members, etc.

In the course of time its members got into business, but retained their membership, until the number of employers and their influence controlled the union and changed its character from a labor union to a benevolent society.

In the early days of this organization a membership badge was adopted. The badge was a silver rule, with the member's name engraved on one side and a press on the other. A gold rule was provided for the president. The members were required to wear the badge at all public parades and at all funerals, under penalty of a fine of 25 cents, and at one time their votes were refused at the meetings unless they exhibited the talismanic rule. Even the manner of wearing the badge was important. At first it was suspended around the neck from a black ribbon, but it was afterwards ordered that it must be attached to the third button from the top of the breast of the coat by a blue ribbon.

This matter of always having the badge in sight caused so much trouble, indeed, that in 1808 a committee was appointed to consider what could be done, constitutionally, to compel all members to wear the badge continuously, or whether it could be dispensed with altogether. The report of the committee covered two closely written pages of foolscap and treated the subject as one of "utmost interest and importance to the well being of the society." It set forth that the badge was "constitutional," and that if abolished it would be highly improper, unjust and impolitic.

The report of the committee was adopted, and a resolution adopted imposing a fine of $1.25 on all who neglected to provide themselves with the "constitutional article." This resolution was enforced to 1827, when, after much contention, the wearing of the badge was left to the wishes of each member.

After the organization became benevolent and charitable in character a peculiar incident happened that is worthy of notice.

In 1816 the directors were informally notified that W. H., a member of the society, had died, and the visiting committee was instructed to "inquire of the member's wife if her husband was really dead." The committee made "diligent inquiry," which resulted in a full conviction of his death, and it was ordered that $25 be paid to his widow for funeral expenses.

Four years after a committee was appointed to wait on Mrs. H. and demand return of the $25 paid to her by the Society, as it had been ascertained that "her husband was still in existence." The lady acknowledged the receipt of the money for the purpose specified, and could not deny her husband's existence, but claimed that the committee ought not to blame her for the error, as she had been informed of the death of her husband; that it was his business to deny the story of his death and to pay back the money to the Society.

The committee called on Mr. H. to collect the amount paid out by the society. The suppositious dead man was prompt in coming forward and giving his note for the amount due, which was paid when due.

This is the only case on the records of the society of a member paying his own funeral expenses.—The Unionist.

There is now an opportunity for some strong-minded woman to come forward and endorse the Osler method of chloroforming, thus securing like treatment for the gentler sex whenever the sixty year or n. g. limit can be ascertained. Equal rights to all has special significance in cases of this kind.

Here is another item from Major Sylvester's inaugural budget, which may be of value to the "better class" or those who constitute the greater number of TRADES UNIONIST readers: "You should be careful where you go to partake of refreshments, and if under the influence always know the number of the vehicle in which you ride." ALLIED PRINTING TRADES UNION LABEL COUNCIL WASHINGTON. 2

Only Eight-Hour Union Office in Town.

THURSDAY, MARCH 2, 1905.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

The project of an establishment for the sale of nothing but union-label goods, conducted by union capital, was inaugurated this week by the Union Outfitters for Men Company, on Seventh street northwest, between E and F streets. There is undoubtedly too much laxity among union men in demanding the union label on goods for their use, and if all trades unionists would insist on the label on everything for their and their families' use they would drive all non-union goods out of the market. Few stop to consider that in buying scab-made goods they are giving preference to unfair men over union men. When we make our union employers compete with scab employers for our trade as union men we exhibit a shortsightedness that reflects little credit on our boasted intelligence. We are willing enough to protect our own trades unionists, for I have heard a sturdy "square man," with a scab cigar between his teeth and without a union label on any garment he wore, denouncing a piece of printing because it did not bear the union label. I believe that much of this is due to lack of thought of the importance of using nothing but union goods, not from indifference to real unionism. The value of the union label is and must be exactly what we make it. If we demand it, we will find it. If we neglect it, nobody else has any interest in remembering it. Nor is it the business of one trades unionist or one class of trades unionists, more than another, to be insistent on the label. Every man has equal rights and equal responsibilities in a union, and it should not be left to a few to demonstrate for the benefit of the many the value to unionism of the label. Everything that a union man eats, drinks, wears, and enjoys can be procured under certificate that it is the product of union men, and it is the extreme of selfishness to insist that others shall patronize our label unless we are equally loyal to all other union labels. I have no intention to especially advertise the Union Outfitters to Men Company, but, believing as I do that those who fail to demand union-label goods do so more from carelessness and thoughtlessness than anything else, and from the fact that they are not duly and deeply enough impressed with the value to unionism of demanding the label, if they go to a store where they can get nothing else, their heedlessness will not be so disastrous to unionism.

According to the newspapers and common report, Mr. Oscar J. Ricketts will be appointed as Public Printer Palmer's successor in the near future. Mr. Palmer has held the office longer than any other man ever did—about thirteen years in his two terms—and no one was ever more acceptable or satisfactory to the employees of the Government Printing Office, as he has always shown the keenest interest in their collective welfare and the greatest sympathy with individual needs. Mr. Rickett's opportuniites have been such as to acquaint him thoroughly with the business of the office and its relations with the other branches of the public service, as well as to give him perfect knowledge of the details of its operations and of the personnel of the working force. He has demonstrated that he is "a man of affairs" in the responsible positions which he has filled, and he has a wide acquaintance with the officials with which the office has business relations. The employees will part with Mr. Palmer with regret, if the reports of his retirement be true, but will receive Mr. Ricketts as his successor with no misgivings, having had ample experience of his personal justness in the administration of affairs and his association and sympathy with them as a union man during his entire career.

Somebody favored me the other evening with the following lines of pupperal (it isn't even strong enough for doggeral), with the expectation, I suppose, that I would print them:

THE "TEMP'S" LAMENT,

BY A "TEMP."

Things have changed since "hobo" days,
And we lived in that careless manner;
The greatest change is in men met here
And with whom we "carried the banner."
Some of those whom we used to succor,
And whom often our money spent,
Now use us for a "Sym" sucker
By 10¼ per cent.

If any "Sym" manager ever went after my tearful friend and induced him to borrow money, he exceeded any authority he had and ought to be disciplined; but if, on the contrary, my lachrymose friend panhandled a loan out of the manager or some friend in the "Sym," with the understanding that he was to pay the same amount for the accommodation that the stockholders pay, his lament places him on a par with the calf who, having lost his money gambling, squeals for its return. But maybe the verses are only funny.

* * * *

The question arises in my mind sometimes—possibly it is unworthy—whether those rabid Socialists who are engaged in personal abuse of such men as Gompers, Morrison, Mitchell, Lynch, and other leaders in trades union work, and in denunciation of the principle of trades unionism, are not directly in the pay of the union wreckers, those who have observed so little of this world's workings as to imagine that labor organizations can be stifled. They could not be more vindictive in their manner, false in their allegations, or vengeful in their hatred if they were paid for their diabolism; and hired assassins are ever the coldest blooded. There is necessarily a certain amount of Socialism in the trades union movement, as there is in all aggregations of men to accomplish one result, but nothing makes more for a postponement and retardation of socialism than to fight the processes which are leading toward it by degrees. If socialism ever comes it must be a little at a time, not all at one fell swoop; and as the rabid temperance cranks do more to retard true temperance than all other agencies, so do the rabid Socialists do more to injure their cause than all the avowed enemies of socialism in the world.

Harry Humble handed me this one the other evening, which I think is a pretty good definition:

"Papa, what is the higher education?"

"Higher education, my son, teaches the non-producer how to get the product of the producer without letting him know he is being robbed."

William N. Brockwell, chairman of the Record Proof Room, has been quite ill since February 20 with erysipelas of the head. At the last accounts, up to Tuesday evening, he is still a very sick man, without any break in the disease. As one of the personally most popular men in the office, much solicitude is expressed for his safe recovery from this insidious, treacherous malady.

I dropped in and saw Joe Babcock at his home last Monday. He is as cheerful in his convalescence as a boy at a picnic with two pieces of lemon pie, and he gets around the house and out on the sidewalk on the handsome rosewood crutches which his friends presented him with all the grace and ease of a pensioned veteran. I think he will be able to get back to work within a month. Some of his friends have wondered that he has not been reduced to want by his long illness and the expenses connected therewith, not knowing that he has two boys at work, who, ever since his injury have brought home and put in their mother's lap every cent of their earnings. Such boys are refreshing examples in these days, when it is generally expected that the father will support the boy and keep him in cigarette money till God calls him.

The National Mutual Finance and Investment Company is progressing well in the sale of its stock and will begin operations immediately. It affords an opportunity for small savings (you can make it as much as $20 a month if you want to, but that is the limit) by which the investor will reap the usufruct of his investment, and the semi-monthly payments may be made so small as to make no appreciable inroads on income and yet the aggregate and earnings will be worthy of consideration. Experienced men have been elected officers, and with such success is assured in advance.

The Masonic Disciple, with which I had to do in a minor capacity, "passed in its chips" last Saturday, after a noble struggle of eight months under its recent management. There is no business so hard to put on a self-supporting basis as a newspaper, and in the case of a paper published for only a certain class of a community its struggle is quadrupled. Though the Disciple was a better paper in every respect than any of the similar papers coming to its table, with one or two exceptions, the management was not able to develop a support for it to warrant its continuance, and it has gone where the good papers go.

The Record has occasionally averaged 100 pages a day during the dying gasps of a Congress, but this year all records are broken. From 128 to 136 seems to be the ruling number of pages, with an occasional splurge beyond the higher number, and never yet have the mails been missed. And with it all there is no "r'aring and charging" and "going down the line." Things just keep moving and the Record comes out. But if anybody is "loafing on his job" he is a slick one."

* * * *

All of which reminds me of a remark made by an operator to me the other day. Says he, "Before I came down here from New York the boys told me that I wouldn't have much to do. They said the men in the Government Printing Office had the softest snaps on earth—not expected to work and the best wages for doing it. Well! I've worked on morning newspapers where they work, and I never worked anywhere where I worked as hard and as close as I do here and as the others do here. There is no loafing on this job, and if there are any sinecures in the G. P. O. I haven't come across any of them or seen 'em."

HON. CHARLES F. COCHRAN.

With the closing of the Fifty-eighth Congress Hon. Charles Fremont Cochran, of the Fourth Congressional district of Missouri, printer, publisher, editor, lawyer, State senator and Congressman, retires to private life for the present, though it is very unlikely that one of his sterling ability, resourcefulness and native virility can long be kept there.

Mr. Cochran is a Missourian of the Missourians, but he never had to be shown; his occupation in life has been the showing of others. Born at Kirksville, Adair County, Mo., he was apprenticed to the printing business, to which he devoted the younger years of his life, and from which he has never been able to entirely divorce himself. Drifting to Atchison, Kans., in 1860, he worked at case as a compositor for awhile, later becoming foreman of the Atchison Champion, a position which he held for a number of years, in the meantime studying law, after which he served four years as prosecuting attorney of Atchison County. He became the editor and publisher of the Atchison Patriot, a Democratic paper, in 1868, and made it one of the most influential papers of that party in the State. Devoting himself entirely to the law from 1873 to 1885, he was one of the best known and favorably regarded attorneys in that section of the State.

In 1885 he returned to his native Missouri, accepting the editorship of the St. Joseph Gazette, a paper noted for having employed many of the celebrated newspaper men of that day, some of whom afterwards made reputations as wide as the dominion of the United States. Among them was "Pete" Donan (miscalled "Pat" Donan in many of the Eastern papers), who, sub rosa, was given the credit of being the author of Proctor Knott's great Duluth speech, chiefly, perhaps, because it was in the Donan vein, and whose fame, beginning with the White Caucasian, at Lexington, Mo., extended throughout the country; Eugene Field, whose reputation was too wide to need description; Will S. Visscher, who is still in the land of the living, his voice having been heard in this city within a fortnight, and many others.

In 1896 Mr. Cochran was elected to represent the St. Joe district in Congress, and he has been re-elected every term since until the last election, when a Republican succeeded him. During his Congressional experience Mr. Cochran has made a reputation as a profound speaker, a ready debater, with a keen wit with which to turn the shafts of his opponents, and as a legislator ever alive to the interests of the country in general and Missouri in particular, never "overlooking a bet" where St. Joe could be served. Never for a moment during that time has he forgotten that he was a printer and a workingman, and his voice and vote have ever been at the service of those who toil.

On his retirement from Congress, with a lucrative law partnership offered him, he prefers to return to his early love, the newspaper, and it is his intention, on his return to St. Joe, to establish a weekly paper on lines of his own. Believing that the weekly paper, so long crowded out of its legitimate field by the immense dailies, which, touching on everything, make a specialty of nothing, is to be again in vogue, he will publish a paper devoted to certain interests. Among these are the farmers, for whose benefit he will present such matter as is of actual value to the farmer, without being swayed by the great corporate interests. Another department will be in the interest of organized labor—to give the truth of labor troubles, without losing sight of the issues really at stake or obscuring them by the incidents accompanying them. By bringing the farmers and organized labor to an understanding that their interests are identical, as are their oppressors, Mr. Cochran will do a service for both that has never been undertaken systematically. Other departments will be equally valuable to other interests.

Nothing delights Mr. Cochran more than going over the old days and relating incidents of the printers of that time, before the iron compositor knocked all the romance and most of the variety out of the printing business. One he relates occurred in Atchison. Being short-handed, Mr. Cochran wrote to a friend in Leavenworth (20 miles away) to send him two printers. On the next train came Sid Bennett and Jack Curly, both splendid printers and the former one of the most rapid in the country, both fine specimens physically and hard-hitters, the latter having once fought a regular prize fight, and both known generally throughout the country. They worked a couple of days, until the emergency was bridged over, and then Curly took a day off. There was a saloon across the street from the office, and during the afternoon a terrible racket was heard in the place. A few seconds later Curly and the big German proprietor came through the screen doors like a catapult, Curly evidently being the propelling power. Of course, the officers came rushing up, but not till Curly had extricated himself from his opponent, after which he went to the office by an alley entrance through a window. Calling his partner, he said:

"Sidney, the officers of this city are evidently inimical to our presence. Let us away."

Catching up their belongings, in the shape of a bundle of soiled linen in a newspaper, they backed and bowed themselves out with Chesterfieldian grace, and departed through the open window.

Atchison and St. Joe were two of the cities of call for the "Missouri River Pirates," consisting of forty or fifty printers who ranged up and down the river from Omaha to St. Louis, whose boast was that they knew every pawpaw "patch" between the two cities, whose idea of perfect felicity was satisfied by a "pop bottle" of poor whiskey, whose measure of happiness was the ability to get a day's work whenever they wanted it, and a tenet of whose unionism was not to want a great number of them, perhaps from fear of crowding out somebody else. Mr. Cochran knew all of them, and on the few occasions when they wanted work they always felt sure of getting it on applying to him.

COULD MOTHER HEAR?

Could loving mothers, in the home beyond,
Look back and hear the words impure,
That daily fall from lips they taught,
'Twould grieve their hearts beyond endure.

How strange that men brought up in honey,
Whose influence was pure and clean,
Would daily congregate to hear
A story vulgar and obscene.

The filthy tale is not complete
Without some words profane.
"The Lord will not hold him guiltless
That taketh His name in vain."

Oh, fellow-workmen, make resolve
To firmly stand against this thing;
Don't listen to the vulgar talk,
Against it all your influence bring.

Quit the Job.

A ship builder tells of an Irishman who sought employment as a diver in the service of one of the ship-building companies. The first job to which the Irishman was assigned was to be performed in comparatively shallow water. He was provided with a pick and told to use it on a ledge below. Mike was put into a diver's suit, and, with his pick, was sent down to tackle the ledge. For about fifteen minutes nothing was heard from him. Then came a strong, determined, deliberate pull on the signal rope indicating that Mike had a very decided wish to come to the top. The assistants hastily pulled him to the raft and removed his helmet. "Take off the rist 'of it,' said Mike. "Why, what's the matter?" asked they. "Take off the rist of it," doggedly reiterated Mike; "I ll wur-rk no longer on a job where I can't spit on me hands."—Harper's Weekly.

An Essay on Boys.

A little girl wrote the following essay on boys: "Boys are men that have not got as big as their papas, and girls are women that will be ladies by and by. And when God looked at Adam he said to himself, 'Well, I think I can do better if I try again,' and he made Eve. Boys are a trouble. They wear out everything but soap. If I had my way the world would be girls and the rest dolls. My papa is so nice that I think he must have been a little girl when he was a little boy. Man was made, and on the seventh day he rested. Woman was then made, and she has never rested since."

Couldn't Drink Out of a Bottle.

A Scottish gillie was invited by the laird to take a pull at his flask after gaffling the first fish of the day. "I canna trink oot of a bottle," protested the gillie with a frown of disapproval. "Aweel, try, Sandy," said the laird encouragingly. And Sandy tried—tried so thoroughly that he gazed in mingled awe and admiration as the whiskey gurgled and gurgled out of the flask and down the swarthy throat, until, with scarce a heel tap left in it, the "pocket-pistol" was handed back to its owner. "Hoot, Sandy' maybe, ye were richt—maybe ye canna trink oot of a bottle," gasped the laird, with a mighty sigh, "but, eh, mon, ye'd soon learn!"—Ex.

GOSSIP FROM THE G. P. O.

First Division.

No change in slug quotations.

The order "two by one" as you enter the elevator is rigidly enforced nightly.

Wm. McFarlane, imposer, and Geo. J. Woodgate, compositor, have been on the sick list.

"Nothing doing" and nothing to report; even Jack the Smearer has gone out of business.

Something gone wrong this week, as there has not been a subscription paper passed around this Division.

Well, yes, this has been a busy week. It always is so during the closing hours of every Congress, but the present one appears to have been a record-breaker in more than one respect.

Vice-President Love made a satisfactory report to the adjourned meeting of Columbia Typographical Union on Sunday, with reference to his recent trip to Philadelphia, regarding the strike situation.

Everything is quiet along delegate lines. From the present outlook the President, Vice-President and Secretary will be their own successors. Nothing like keeping in office good and efficient officers.

John B. Dickman is the representative of the new investment company for this Division A good selection. He is fully prepared to furnish all desired information on the commendable features of this new company.

Imposer Burnside informs us that he remembers when there were no trucks similar to those in every-day use in all the printing Divisions. Now there are almost three score, and the demand is for more. Why not create a new office of Superintendent of Trucks?

During the past week, A. W. Sefton, of this Division, through his attorney, Chas. T. Hendler, instituted proceedings against the Washington and Electric Street Railway Company for $2,500 damages. He claims that he was thrown to the ground and rendered unscious by the premature starting of a car at Ninth and New York Avenue in July last.

Second Division.

DEDICATED TO OUR SMILING CHAIRMAN OF THE SECOND DIVISION, NIGHT BILL FORCE, BY ALFRED DIETZ.

In all exigencies of life
'Tis well to wear a smile—
A smile to wear through toil and strife,
If lonesome or you have a wife
Will pleasant days beguile.

And with your fellows works a charm
Just like the shining rays
That breaks the clouds with sunshine warm
And scatters pessimistic storm
To optimistic days.

This smile can bring you friends and fame,
May grow into a laugh
That you may wear—well, just the same
As that great name we now proclaim
"The smile that won't come off."

May this smile bring you health and cheer
And bring a smiling wife—
And smiling children that are dear
To always keep you smiling here
A smiling through this life.

And may this smile make others smile
Through sorrows and through tear
And keep them smiling all the while
As they are overcoming rile,
To strengthen and to cheer.

R. H. Miller has been ill for several days past, but is recovering.

O. C. McCardell is acting chairman in place of the regular chairman, who is ill.

Chairman J. B. Trudgian has been seriously ill and confined to his home in Bloomingdale with inflammatory rheumatism.

The checker players at lunch time are the center of great interest. Messrs. Phelps and Pulliam are good players, as also others.

There is not much overtime in this Division just now. Still the day force is kept busy, and rush copy comes at intervals, and unfinished takes pile up on the frames.

It was decided by a majority vote at a chapel meeting held by this Division not to levy an assessment, but to rely on voluntary contributions for decorating the room. Maker-up S. S. Phelps has charge.

I have been informed that J. T. Keefer, of this Division, had the honor of planting the first American flag in the soil of Alaska. He has many interesting experiences to relate of his visit to that remote country.

That Indian file sprint to the washroom when time is called is a beauty to behold. Slugs 1 to 6 usually get the lead, but the race is sometimes, to use sporting parlance, neck and neck. A little fun after working hours hurts no one, and is a relief after strenuous labor.

Pard Bloomer is an uncommon scold. There is where he differs from the "common scold" he kicks about so much.

"Single-gallus," as applied to Pard Bloomer, does not fitly describe him. He is simply "gallus" without qualification.

Last Tuesday W. A. Kinsolving was made happy by the arrival home of hiwife and children, who have been visits ing in Texas for the past two months.

Our bowling team fell down again last week when, for the second time, the Job Room Team were the victors. Wonder if the Third is just pulling em on, as it were?

In looking over the Consolidated Index the other day, we came across "Pull-and-be-Damned Point Harbor, Portsmouth, N. H." That is equal to anything the wild and wooly West can furnish.

"A square deal for all; no more—no less." This is the motto of a man in whom all men without prejudice may see something to admire. That he is to be President of the United States for four years longer should occasion the deepest satisfaction among those who are honest and who wish to deal honestly by every other man; for that is the sort of man Theodore Roosevelt is.

I like to read Mr. Sutton's stories about ladies he has met. If everything he writes is true (and I have no reason to doubt him) he must have been a consummate lady-killer in his day. But it would manifestly be unjust to Mr. Sutton even to intimate that he is a "has-been". In all probability he has not attained the full measure of his experience with the ladies, which, if true, ought to make us congratulate ourselves as THE TRADES UNIONIST will get the story sooner or later.

The consular reports disclose the fact that in Beruit and Damascus Schlitz beer is so popular that a German firm has put an imitation on the market so cunningly disguised in appearance, even to the name, which is "Blitz," and therefore often mistaken for Schlitz, as to interfere with the trade in American beer, which, however, is nearly always asked for. Just think of Haroun-al-Raschid, Commander of the Faithful, asking for a bottle of the "beer that made Milwaukee famous!"

Charles A. Calvo, Jr., who was one of eight men transferred to this Division from the Spess on the 21st inst., was dropped on the evening of the 23d. Mr. Calvo was once State Printer of South Carolina, at which time R. M. Cheshire was one of his employees. Mr. Cheshire relates that Mr. Calvo was the victim of a cowardly assault by Editor Gonzales, who was killed some time ago by Editor Tillman, a relative of Senator Tillman, of South Carolina. Mr. Calvo was walking out of the post-office with his arms full of exchanges when Gonzales approached and hit him a murderous blow on the head with a 9-ounce cane, from the effects of which he has never recovered. Mr. Calvo carries with him the best wishes of all who know him.

One may learn much by reading—and remembering—the "Don'ts" by Edward B. Warman, A. M., published in the Sunday Post. The author aims to correct the little inaccuracies of speech of which many of us are guilty, and in this connection I must confess to having experienced several jolts as I have realized the solecisms that I have all my life been committing daily—according to Warman, A. M. But I draw the line at the following:

Don't say "custom" for "habit." "That is his custom" should be "That is his habit."

NOTE.—When speaking of custom we infer national traits; but habit has reference to individuals.

That may be all right from Warman's point of view; but the subjoined quotation would seem to indicate a different opinion on the part of one William Shakespere:

But soft! methinks I scent the morning air;
Brief let me be:—Sleeping within mine orchard;
My custom always of the afternoon——
—Hamlet, Act I, Scene IV.

* * * *

Last Monday noon I met a fellow who asserts that he worked in Alley 7 on the night when I lost two large red apples therefrom; that he looked in my drawer and saw no sign of apples there; and that I am to be "roasted" in another column of this paper for intimating that the night compositors would do such a mean thing as steal an apple left in his drawer by a fellow workman of the day force, from which the following may be deduced: Apples were left in the drawer on the evening in question. Four or five men were working that night in close proximity to said apples. It is admitted through one of their number that they looked in the drawer. On the following morning the apples were missing. Now, I wouldn't begrudge an apple or two to a friend or two.

If, instead of folding their tents like an Arab and silently stealing away, they had written a note something like this:

SLUG 39: Your apples were so tempting that we couldn't resist eating them. Many thanks.
—NIGHT MAN.

If I had found such a note on my frame the next morning instead of a vacuum where the apples had been, and stony silence as to their whereabouts, I would have thought, "Well, I hope it did 'em good; their throats must get pretty dry before morning."

At the first quarterly meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Washington Credit Association, held on the 24th inst. at its headquarters, 21 H street northwest, the reports of the Secretary-Treasurer, R. M. Cheshire, and the Board of Auditors, Messrs. W. L. Agnew W. M. Camp, and L. E. Smith, disclosed a condition of such gratifying prosperity that by a unanimous vote the shares were advanced 50 cents in price, subject to further advance as their earning power increases. Notwithstanding the advance, applications for shares continue to pour in. A report having been circulated that none but stockholders could do business with the Association, the officers desire to correct this impression. The facts are these: that the employees of the G. P. O. and others are respectfully urged to call at the office and have the Association's method of doing business explained to them, when it is confidently believed they will open an account. As far as the sale of shares is concerned, the Association has not been compelled to seek buyers; the officers and members are daily besieged with applications for stock. The shareholders now number several hundred, all of whom are deeply appreciative of the great benefits of the Association, which gives them the use of its money for almost any reasonable time without charging a cent of interest therefor. Organized originally by employees of the Third Division, its membership has spread rapidly until it now includes men and women in every Division, including all the branches, and it appears to be the most beneficent institution yet brought to our attention.

Sixth Division.

The first chapel meeting since the formation of the day Record was held last week. As a presiding officer Chairman Hogan is just about right.

In one way I was greatly delighted with the recent cartoon of my friend Bloomer. It looked to me very much as if he had swallowed the sour apple with which I was reported to have been struck with recently.

Articles of Association of the National Mutual Finance and Investment Company were distributed last week. The only thing I don't like about it is the name. Seems to me something suggestive of the printer man would have been preferable.

As a cartoonist, H. T. Redfield may consider himself half a success. Of the four men pictured in last week's cartoon big John Purvis and little Montgomery were picked out by everybody, while the names suggested for the other two varied from Happy Hooligan, Billy McGuire, etc., to King Peter of Servia. But it was a good cartoon, nevertheless.

Last Friday was accident day in this Division. Leverett B. Greegor had his fingers badly burned by hot metal; A. K. Williamson received a bad cut on the finger while attempting to cast slugs; Joseph Doyle had a finger nail mashed in a window sill, and the writer received a cut on the forefinger through misplaced confidence in the old machine. Strenuous days these past two weeks.

Frank A. Vinton, head linotype machinist, was recently made happy by the receipt of a letter from the president of the Mergenthaler Company, saying a suggestion he had offered for a new mechanical device for the machines was considered excellent, and if he would permit the company to patent the same a handsome little check would be coming his way. Mr. Vinton is a close student of the linotype and is now at work solving several problems which will add to the merits of the machine when completed.

Will H. S. Sutton never cease to disappoint his readers? Time and again I have read of his adventures and escapades with fair charmers only to be left in a bewildered and befuddled state of mind as to the final outcome. Last week I followed his movements for twelve long years through hospitals, churches and police stations, again to find myself standing in a state of wonderment at the corner of Ninth and F. Oh Maud, Maud! To all these charming romances of life are there no climaxes? Have you never been rushed upon by some jealous rival and given a hard slap on the wrist? Why conceal from us the thrilling moments in life's drama? Come, Maud, tell it all.

I was told a pretty good story the other day on Chris. McGraw, the apron man. Last week a distinguished citizen of Germany was a guest of the office, and given the services of Henry Frank, a First Division compositor, as special guide. McGraw saw the couple as they emerged from the room of the Foreman of Printing and thought it was a messenger taking a new compositor to his Division. By a few fancy side steps he secured a new blue apron with two side pockets and started for the First, where he supposed the assignment to be. He saw them in the cage and waited. At last the couple left and started for the rear of the room with the apron man a close second. To his surprise they took the rear elevator and started up. "Ah, ha," said Mc., "A foundryman!" The next elevator found Mc. in transit upward. On arrival at the Foundry he was informed the couple had passed through the room going toward the Job Room. But as the story goes. Mc. followed them through four Divisions and would probably be going yet, only he lost the trail when he left to get a white apron in case the man should turn out to be a binder.

Now that we are soon to witness a grand military pageant, composed of both regular and "tin" soldiers, my mind reverts back to a few years ago when militarism was rampant among the G. P. O. printers. It was somewhere about '92 or '93 when a company of the National Guard was organized among the printers of this office. Grover Cleveland had become President, and various names were being mentioned as a possible future Public Printer, prominent among which were those of Benedict and Edwards. At any rate the company was organized, but they had a time of it getting a name, Some preferred the Benedict Guards, others the Edwards Invincibles, etc., until finally, in view of the uncertainty as to who would land the job, they played safe and adopted the name of the G. P. O. Guards. Among the officers chosen was the late John R. Test, who landed a first lieutenancy. Test knew nothing of military tactics, but he had a commanding figure and gave promise of making good. The company secured quarters and started to drill in earnest. The captain, who was a fine drill master, soon had the boys in a state of perfect efficiency. In the meantime Lieutenant Test watched the game from the bench, and studied military art. Finally one night after the captain had thoroughly warmed the company up, he turned the command over to the first lieutenant. Test was seized with "stage" fright at once, and his military knowledge took flight. But he proved equal to the emergency. He drew his sword and took command. He made the boys right shoulder and left shoulder arms and back again. At last he gave some commands that were not down in the manual of arms, and which the company could not execute. They stood still and refused to move. Again the lieutenant gave the command, but the boys stood pat. It was an embarrassing moment for Test. His military knowledge had left him, but his wits had not. He wheeled on his military heel and saluted the captain. "Captain, I congratulate you on the efficiency of the company. Try as I will I can't fool 'em. You may now take them." And with another flourish of his sword he delivered the company over to the captain who pulled them out of the awkward position into which the first lieutenant had placed them.

Several pages have been added to the book of rumors within the past week of things that are liable to happen on and immediately after March 4th; hence all is not quiet on the Potomac.

The ex-delegates of Local No. 4—have appointed a committee to devise ways and means to entertain the delegates to the International Convention in 1906.

Dr. Osler's statement that men, when they reach the age of sixty, should be chloroformed, greatly excited a number of the ladies in the Bindery who are engaged to gentlemen of that tender age. And it is a good thing for the doctor he is over in Baltimore. They claim it is the age that men are most refined, gentle and kind to the fair sex.

William Kelly resigned February 28 to take position as clerk in the Liquor License Board of Baltimore. Mr. Kelly was first employed in this office in July, 1883. He resigned in December, 1889, and was a newspaper reporter and assistant labor statistician of Maryland. He returned to the office in October. 1897. He has been Secretary of Local No. 4 and was a delegate to the Indianapolis Convention, and is now a member of the Executive Council.

Did Belcher Have Apples?

EDITOR TRADES UNIONIST:

Last week Mr. Belcher, of the Third Division, wanted to know by what authority certain night workers "swiped" two Northern Spy apples from his frame. On the occasion mentioned we all dropped down one floor temporarily and occupied frames corresponding to our numbers in the Second Division. That placed the people of our alley in that sacred locality where Belcher performs and whence so many good men have departed.

We made diligent search for anything valuable, edible or otherwise, in that alley, and could find nothing. We don't charge poverty against those good fellows, but rather caution. Belcher may have imagined he had apples, and we are not denying a hankering for some of the juicy fruit at lunch time or any other old time; also had there been any apples buried in the awful assortment of rules and other rubbish thereabouts it is not at all likely they would have been left untouched. But we take it as a little tough to be branded as "swipes" when there was nothing to swipe. Under the circumstances we must demand proof of Belcher that he had any apples concealed about his frame and the hiding place. Then when we get a chance again we can bear the blame with full knowledge of satisfaction in advance.

NAVY YARD ITEMS.

George L. Hoffacker, bookkeeper Construction and Repair, has resigned to accept a more lucrative position.

Lieut.-Commander E. A. Anderson, who has been stationed at the Yard for some time, has been ordered to the Pennsylvania as navigator.

D. B. Asbury, R. E. Mueden, L. A. Brooks and L. P. Jackson have been appointed temporary draftsmen, subject to examination for permanent employment.

W. F. Summy, Irving Sondheimer, and S. R. Catts, clerks in Ordnance Department, have been promoted. Good boys every one of them, thanks to the High School.

Lieutenants H. W. Jones, W. S. Turpin and J. W. Graeme, have been chosen as the board to examine candidates from the force of apprentices for detail in the Ordnance Drafting Room.

N. W. Beaton, foreman steam fitter, was taken seriously ill one day this week and was conveyed to his home. This venerable gentleman, who is rated as the wealthiest employee in the Yard, is seldom absent from his post, not because he needs the wage, but simply from force of habit.

I have received so many letters of communication relative to my reply to Dr. Osler, as printed in the Star of Friday last, that I have not the time to answer them. Through the medium of THE TRADES UNIONIST I wish to thank the writers, many of whom are unknown to me.

The Navy Yard Band, which has been giving Sunday afternoon concerts, have changed their date to Monday of each week. This was found necessary on account of the great crowds attending, which packed the hall to suffocation. By changing to Monday it will preclude attendance by the workingmen and their wives. Of course, this was not intended. It never is; just happens that way.

The bill introduced in Congress by Representative Dixon compelling Government employees to liquidate their honest debts or resign their positions is a just and equitable measure. It will in no sense offend or affect an honest employee, and those who are dishonest enough to contract debts that they never expect to liquidate even when contracting them should expect no mercy. I would however suggest to Mr. Dixon an amendment to his bill to include all Government officials, not exempting Members of Congress. It is well known among business men that the hardest bill to collect is often one contracted by a Member of Congress. If this be true why should they not be included in the category of dishonest officials. I have a case in mind. Some years ago when the West went crazy over populism a member of that branch moved directly opposite to my residence. So careful of the gas was he that a light could hardly be seen at night. When the month had expired his gas bill was rendered receipted in full. He went to his agent and made inquiry. He was informed that his bills would be receipted as long as he was a Congressman. Next week the furnace was stopped and gas radiators established in every room. Thereafter his house was illumined from cellar to garret. In the strict sense of the word was he an honest official? I don't think so.

* * * *

I was a witness the other day to what I would call a case of great injustice. I refer to the case of the negro woman who was fined $5 by Judge Scott for neglecting to clean the snow from her pavement when he allowed business men, well able to pay their fine, to escape by putting up $1 collateral. They say justice is blind and it seems to me that this statement was truly verified in this case. A poor woman, who earns her bread by going out in daily service, possibly half of her wages for the month gone, by a simple neglect to clean the snow in a back street where none but the poor negroes pass with the exception of a policeman when he is looking up a case to square himself in the quarterly report. Now don't imagine I am a special friend of the negro, or the enemy of the policeman. I am neither one, but I do believe in justice and equity. To prove that I like to see the policeman do his duty I will invite his attention to a square in the Southeast bounded by Sixth, Seventh, D and South Carolina avenue, owned by the celebrated authoress. Under the old law she openly defied the police authorities to compel her to clean the snow from the sidewalks. Now if any policeman who is looking for promotion will screw up enough courage to get a warrant for this lady, he will confer a favor on the many pedestrians who pass that way, and incidentally will lose his position. Who will be the victim for his country's good?

In connection with this I see that the Commissioners have ordered that where ice is on the pavement the householder must sprinkle sawdust, ashes, or sand on same. If any interested person will take the trouble to read up the police regulations they will find that any person who shall litter any street, alley or pavement by throwing ashes, sand or other matter on same shall be prosecuted in police court. This order is like the n*gger's coon trap, catch'em coming and catch'em going. Study your book better, Mr. Commissioners.

TIM TICKLE.

A Reply to Mr. Bloomer.

EDITORS TRADES UNIONIST:

May I ask the favor of your columns for a brief notice of Mr. Bloomer's reply to my last article? I begin by disavowing any desire to be personal or disrespectful. My contention is with Mr. Bloomer's statements, not with their author, and I was careful to say in my last letter that my arguments were made without intentional disrespect to him. In this letter also I shall have due consideration for the "decencies that should always exist between man and man," while discussing candidly some of the astonishing statements recently made by Mr. Bloomer. So far as the subject of my last letter is concerned the controversy is at an end. Mr. Bloomer has fled from the arena. To my specific statements concerning the origin of the Jewish Sabbath and the Christian Sunday, to my question about the meaning of his words "real establishment" as applied to the Christian church, to my claim that everything written by me was borne out by the facts of history and the words of Holy Writ, there is not a word of dissent. The conclusion is fair and plain. Had there been the slightest error in what I wrote Mr. Bloomer would have been willing and anxious to point it out. His silence is very significant.

Mr. Bloomer would now change his ground. "Let us inject a new question into the discussion," he says. Thereupon he proceeds to "inject" not one question but many, and they bear as little relation to the original subject as they do to a problem in Euclid. What logical connection there can possibly be between the origin of the Christian Sunday and the acts of individual Christians is beyond my power to imagine.

Some months ago Mr. Bloomer wrote a "sermon." That sermon had not even the frail justification of being requested by a "friend" who sought an "elucidation." It was written, according to the author's own testimony, because he had nothing particular to write about and because he had long felt that he could write a sermon. In plain English, it was written to please its author's personal vanity. It was not an argument. It was railing, feeble and gratuitous, at some of the principal beliefs of Christianity—as well as some imaginary things that no Christian ever held. A sample sentence may be quoted. Speaking of the resurrection of the body, Mr. Bloomer wrote: "But who now believes in the resurrection of the body, or for that matter particularly desires it?" The fact that millions of people in all parts of the earth, and in every language known to mankind, repeat daily "I believe in the resurrection of the body and life everlasting" is of no importance in Mr. Bloomer's eyes. His question implies that such people are either simple fools who know not what they say or plain hypocrites who profess one thing and believe its opposite. In another article he pictured certain people as consigning to hell all others who dissented from certain beliefs and calling honest doubters "hell-hound infidels." I commend the elegance and charity of these things to your readers. Later still, he deplored the absence of a law that would give men the right under certain conditions to "hammer blue hell" out of their wives. How he reconciles his charity and the "blue hell" hammering process is not for me to say.

Now, let me notice very briefly one statement in his last article. He says it does not make a thing true because a church says so. That depends. If the church said, for instance, that three and two are six it would not make them so. But if the church, speaking upon a question of faith or morals, something concerning salvation, says that a certain belief is true or false then it is necessarily so. Otherwise Christ's promise that the church should teach His truth forever has no meaning.

Thanking you for your fair play in publishing my last, and hoping you may find space for this, I am,

R. E. ADIRAG.

THE CENTRAL LABOR UNION

Hon. T. V. Powderly Discusses Conditions of Labor in Russia.

BAKER & CO. COCOA IS UNFAIR

Mill Workers Withdraw Their Delegates—Inauguration Day a Legal Holiday in District of Columbia—Short Business Session at Last Meeting.

The regular weekly meeting of the Central Labor Union was called to order at 8 p. m. on Monday last.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

Bills amounting to $4 were read and ordered paid.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Local No. 1103, Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, stating that they decided to withdraw their delegates from this body. Action concurred in.

From Massachusetts State Branch, A. F. of L., stating that Wood Workers Union, No. 155, have been on strike for over a year with a firm at Whitfield, Mass., and that the firm (Atwood Bros.) had been placed on the "We don't patronize" list. It also declares that Walter Baker & Co., makers of Baker's Cocoa and Chocolate, Milton, Mass., have their boxes made by Attwood Bros. and refuses to withdraw their work from the unfair firm. It is requested that friends of organized labor refuse to use Baker's Cocoa and Chocolate. It was ordered that Baker's Cocoa and Chocolate be placed on our "We don't patronize" list.

From Wm. Loeb, Jr., secretary to President Roosevelt, in response to a request that all employees of the Government be given a holiday on March 4, stating that Inauguration Day is a legal holiday in the District of Columbia, and inclosing copy of law. Placed on file.

Hon. T. V. Powderly was granted the privilege of the floor and made an earnest appeal to the members of the Central Labor Union and through them to their Locals, to assist in aiding the working people of Russia.

Adjourned.

Russian Blood and Redemption.

The working people of Russia have at last demonstrated their grim determination that conditions as they have prevailed in that country must come to an end, and that a change for the better must ensue.

It is no doubt the expectation of the Czar and his advisers that this blow of blood will strike terror to the hearts, not only of the St. Petersburg workmen, but of the people throughout the domain of that entire country. The effect has been exactly the opposite, for the workmen, to the number of hundreds of thousands in the different sections of Russia, heard the moans and cries of the dying, threw down their tools of labor and joined in the movement for reform and improvement.

Jointly, the people insist that the government shall be based upon justice and the participation of the people therein, regardless of their station in life, equality before the law, inviolability of domicile, the freedom of association, of speech, and of the press, and compulsory education.

Thus, after all, out of the strikes of the Russian workmen, though many of their dear ones have been killed and mutilated, their blood has sanctified their cause and will make for good, the progress, and the uplifting of all the people of Russia.—American Federationist.

Be Consistent.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

Recently it has been something of a contagion for unions to decide to withdraw their delegates from the Central Labor Union. Whether this action be due to reasons of economy or fancied wrongs, they are nevertheless a mistake.

At this time, when there is so much antagonism to unionism, so many wrongs and misdeeds placed at the door of organized labor, without cause or reason but for the sole purpose of poisoning and prejudicing the public mind against unions, it would seem that members of the unions would be brought to a realizing sense. Not so, however, for if a man prominent in his organization can't rule the roost wherever he goes, why then he will quit, even to the point of sacrificing the best interests of his own Union.

It is high time that these small potatoes take a tumble, and if they realize that they lack the ability to argue or properly present their side as they see it, why then give way to the more capable of their Union to do so, but not get sulky and nurse vengeance in their hearts and attempt to destroy the good work of others.

Be manly and fair, and there is no question but what equal justice will be accorded to you, for the Central Labor Union is too large, too big, to stoop to little things, and bear in mind that when some little aggrieved body withdraws the business goes right on, and should ever the clouds gather about your organization you may be glad to be permitted to crawl back.

It is unnecessary to use names of organizations that are not affiliated, but simply to say to them, "recall to yourselves the great benefits you have received from the efforts of Central Labor Union in your behalf, and in behalf of labor generally in the local field, and whether you are not making a serious mistake by not affiliating."

The time for action is now. Get together. Your little Local is all right, but better still have your Local affiliated and in full membership in an organization that has an affiliation of ninety separate local unions.

Personal Mention.

R. E. Johnston, a member of the firm of Johnston & Caine, wholesale and retail druggists, of Columbus, Miss., was in the city during Inaugural week, accompanied by his wife. Mr. Johnston will be remembered as a former member of the Specification Division, G. P. O. His many friends will be pleased to know that he is prospering in business. Mr. Johnston has a warm spot in his heart for old friends and always makes it a point to call on them when here.

Chauncey Q. Winne, who is remembered as the man in charge of the proof press on the Record after Steve Caldwell left, is a partner in the New York World restaurant, and is doing a flourishing business catering to the printers on that paper.

The many friends of Jere F. McCarthy, the popular secretary of Local No. 75, Bartenders League, will be pleased to learn that he is able to be out after several weeks confinement at home with an ailment that the doctor called by a long Latin name, which in plain English means a blood clot formed in the leg.

Shelby Smith, editor of The Trades Union News, of Philadelphia, was in the city this week, on personal business. Shelby has a luxuriant growth of whiskers and an optimism that will prove fatal to the Inquirer of that city. He is elated over the warm support accorded No. 2 by sister unions in its fight with the Inquirer.

Passed It Up.

A story is told of the janitor in a Western school-house, who gave up his job because he considered that the teachers had deliberately impugned his honesty. The resignation and the reason given for it came as a surprise to the school board, and they asked him to explain. "Well," said he, "I never found even so much as a pencil on the floor when I was sweeping out that I didn't give to the principal. Nothing was ever lost. Sometimes the children, when they missed a lunch box or book, would make a note of it on the blackboard, so I could look out for it, and, by gum, I always found what was missing. About two weeks ago, however, I read on the blackboard: 'Find the least common multiple.' Not even a 'please,' either. Well, I hunted high and low, but couldn't see it. I felt pretty bad about it, for it was my first miss. But I got mad when a couple of days later I read on the board: 'Find the common divisor,' and I resigned, I couldn't find it, and didn't care to stand for the blame of having swept it out."—Selected.

THE SOCIALISTS AT WORK

American Federationist Charges An Attempt to Disrupt Unions.

PROMINENT SOCIALISTS IN IT

The Western Federation of Miners Executive Taking Active Part in Pushing New Organization—The List of Signers to the Call For a Convention.

The Socialists have called another convention to smash the American trade union movement. This is the sixth "concentrated" effort in this direction in the past decade.

Scanning the list of the twenty-six signers of this call, one will look in vain to find the name of one man who has not for years been engaged in the delectable work of trying to divert, pervert, and disrupt the labor movement of the country. Here's the list; look it over and judge for yourself:

W. J. Pinkerton, A. M. Simons, Thomas J. Hagerty, Wm. E. Trautmann, Charles H. Moyer, Geo. Estes, William D. Haywood, W. Shurtleff, M. E. White, Thos. J. De Young, C. O. Sherman, Fred D. Henion, Mother Jones, Frank M. M'Cabe, John M. O'Neill, Frank Bohn, Daniel M'Donald, John Guild, Jos. Schmitt, W. L. Hall, Ernest Untermann, W. J. Bradley, Frank Krafft, A. J. Swing, J. E. Fitzgerald, Clarence Smith.

It may not be uninteresting to note that President Moyer and Secretary Haywood, of the Western Federation of Miners, have joined the coterie in the call for this new effort to destroy the labor movement. Mark well, the Western Federation of Miners, toward whose assistance the members and unions of the American Federation of Labor contributed thousands upon thousands of dollars, and are yet contributing, as a result of our appeal in their behalf, and in response to appeals and visits from the representatives of the Western Federation of Miners now being made, are exhibiting their sense of gratitude and principles of unionism in the effort to disrupt the trade union movement. Aye, even the official journal of the Western Federation of Miners, in publishing the American Federation of Labor's appeal for financial assistance, unconsciously paid our movement a tribute by publishing our indictment of Colorado conditions and appeal for financial assistance under the following head: "The American Federation of Labor to the Rescue."

The more open and aggressive of the political Socialists recognize this time as good as any when they may make a move to renew the effort to crush the American labor movement. The citizen's alliances and the Parryites may be counted upon to be their willing allies and accomplices.

And so far as the trade union movement is concerned, it might as well have to face all its enemies, open or secret, at one and the same time. In any event, it is far better that all of them come out in the open so that we may all know whom we have to overcome. That they will be confronted and overcome is as sure as it is said, "God made little apples," and someone else has made little Socialists who launch bubbles which are filled with the exuberance of their verbosity and which explode from the flatulency of their enormous gabs.—American Federationist.

Gets There First.

Inquisitive city people in the country sometimes find small satisfaction in catechizing little country boys about their names and affairs. "A summer boarder" once said to a small boy dressed in a broad straw hat, a gingham waist, long trousers and bare feet: "Hello, little boy! What is your name?" "Same as pa's," said the boy. "What is your pa's name?" "Same as mine." "I mean, what do they call you when they call you to breakfast?" "They don't nuvver call me to breakfust." "Why don't they?" "'Cause I alluz git there the fust one!"

JUST EVERY-DAY LIFE.

Looking for something to send a friend over in the States, make it the Inaugural Souvenir, a well-printed publication, from both historical and typographical viewpoints.

Replying to critics Gunn and Belcher I quote from memory the closing sentence of the famous novel, "Shaking the Plum Tree:" "Man is borne into this world in a woman's arms; in a woman's arms he finds comfort and consolation for the strife; from a woman's arms he lies down to his last long sleep." Would'st thou, sires, make of every-day life an Adamless Eden?

There are tricks in all trades but ours. A paper was established, once upon a time, by a combination composed partly of printers. One of the proprietors desired a railroad pass, and to this end the time tables of several roads were reprinted. In the schedule of the road it was desired to work at least three errors were intentionally made in the figures, and in a few days, as was anticipated, came a request from the office of the company to "kindly correct errors as marked." Then the railway management was waited upon with a request for a pass. The passenger agent went in the air. "You know," he yelled, "we never do business with a paper until it is a year old. Who gave you the order for that advertisement, any way?" The request to make correction, was produced, and after some further discussion the pass was secured.

Another leaf from the chapter of experience: On one occasion there was prepared for the editorial page of a newspaper an article commendatory of a gentleman who had climbed to the chair of the chief executive of a great State. When the managing editor read the proof thereof he recognized its merit, but did not think the paper could stand for it in its entirety; so he inserted an asterisk (*) about one em from the last line, indicative of its being a communication. He had the last shot so far as the proof was concerned, but when a goodly portion of the edition reached its readers they found an artistically perforated pin hole occupying the place of the star.

Injunction Legislation.

For several years an important, reasonable, and just bill, limiting "government by injunction," and doing away with its notorious abuses, has been before Congress.

Recently Chairman Jenkins, of the Judiciary Committee of the House of Representatives, introduced a bill which some friends have led to believe would obviate the wrong and abuse in the issuance of injunctions in labor disputes. It has been heralded broadcast by its authors, and we understand that the bill meets the approval of President Roosevelt, Attorney-General Moody, and Corporation Commissioner Garfield. From the first, however, we were confident that though the intention of the authors of the bill may have been of the best, the bill itself was not only ineffective to remedy the abuse and the wrong, but contained actual statutory authority for the issuance of injunctions in labor disputes.

Organized labor has repeatedly declared, and its sincerity should not be questioned, that it seeks no immunity from the law, and that if any of its members or votaries are guilty of any offense against the law they should be apprehended and dealt with in accordance with law, exactly as any other person or association of persons.

Labor protests, and justly, against being subject to court decisions and court-made law which are not applied to others than workingmen engaged in a controversy with their employers.

Organized labor is engaged in a lawful and humane effort to obtain better material, moral, and social conditions for the working people, and for all the people. It makes for the uplifting of the human race. It is not necessary to resort to any unlawful conduct or pursue an unlawful course to attain success. It asks that it be accorded fair and equal justice before the law; that its movement shall have lawful protection, and particularly that it shall not be the subject of special class decisions, as typified by the cruel, oppressive, and distinctive injunctions issued against none of our people other than themselves.

Labor will continue to organize and avail itself of all the rights to which it is entitled under the law; it will work for the good, protesting against wrong and error. As a result of the campaign of organization and education, it will yet secure from Congress and the courts the constitutional guarantees of equality before the law.—American Federationist.

Union Movement in Sweden.

The growth of the economic organizations of Sweden has been phenomenal in the last year, 1904. The number of workers organized in the progressive unions has increased from 74,500 to 92,000, that is an increase of 17,500 in membership. The strongest increase was recorded in the national organization of unskilled and factory workers, whose membership went up from 10,000 to 14,000; the largest of the national industrial unions, that of the Metal Workers' Association, has now a membership of 18,000, two thousand more than a year ago. Those central organizations united with the general federation of unions had at the beginning of last year a membership of 47,820, at the end of 1904, 76,069. There were during the year 1904, 157 labor troubles, 119 were strikes and 35 lockouts; 10,800 workers participated in these fights. The number of strike-and-lock-out days amounted to 320,000, and 600,000 crowns were paid out in strike benefits. The largest and longest in number of days was the lockout of the stone cutters in Bhuslaen, in which 1,500 employees were engaged, lasting 32 weeks; the men won the fight.—Brauer-Zeitung.

In the days when dentistry was not the science it is now, the pounding of a hickory plug into the space between the teeth taking the place of modern bridge-work, the elder Judge Peckham, who was noted for his picturesque flow of profanity, visited a dentist. The work had hardly started when the judge began to swear. When the tapping of the hickory plug increased in force, his language became torrid, and when, in time, the dentist gave the final blows, the patient arose from the chair and fairly shattered the atmosphere with a weird, terrible torrent of profanity. As the judge passed out, the dentist remarked to a waiting patient: "Wasn't it beautiful? It wasn't really necessary to pound half so long but I did so enjoy his inflection that I almost pounded the hickory plug into splinters. Wonderful command of language the judge has!"

There seems to be a general agreement among the cognoscenti, or whatever you call them, that our H. S. Sutton violates the rules of the game in failing to bring his fervid tales of passion to a definite conclusion. Let us hope that our erotic friend will take the hint and that in his next romance the "black-eyed devil" will not wind up in a literary blind alley.

Another printer looms above the horizon in an ambitious work. Mr. Charles W. Pafflow is the gentleman in question, and his book, "The Mysteries of the Winter Palace," takes rank with the best which have been inspired by conditions in Russia. It is a thrilling story, which moves in direct narrative style to the end, without needless philosophizing or superfluous details in the way of description. In addition to its literary merit, it has considerable value as a semi-historical picture of some phases of the great problem of Russia's future development.

W. N. Goldstein, now a prosperous merchant in New York, was in the city during the Inauguration. "Goldy" has got out of the printing business for good.

W. C. Hinton, an estwhile Washingtonian, now a full-fledged New Yorker, where he holds forth on the Mail and Express, called on old friends during the past week. "Billy" loves New York like a native, but he may come back some day.

Hoyt Raymond, one of Chicago's leading business men, was in the city during the Inauguration. Mr. Raymond is a brother of Billy Raymond, who needs no introducetion to printers of a decade ago. Hoyt reports Billy as doing well.

The Third Regiment Band, from Duluth, Minn., serenaded Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor on Tuesday. Mr. Gompers made a short address of welcome and entertained the band at a luncheon after the concert.

Peter Schoeffler, a former worker in the G. P. O., which he vacated some four years ago, was in town with the Republican County Executive Committee. Pete is with the Methodist Book Concern, and while he has a lot of good religious workers about him there is still no fear of his becoming a Seminarian. He is the same old "Pete."

George W. Harris, late of Chicago, Ill., now of Winchester, Tenn., where he conducts The Franklin County Truth, attended the Inaugural ceremonies. Mr. Harris is well known typographically as the editor of the Chicago Federationist, a paper that was a tower of strength under his capable management. The wonder to most of his friends is why he chose to live in prosaic old Winchester after a strenuous life in Chicago.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

I think my friend "Readirag" must reason himself about in this fashion: "This fellow Bloomer is too cocky in expressing his opinions, when he doesn't belong to 'The Church,' and I'll just hide behind this hedge and put a few crimps in him with brickbats." I figure this out from the fact that he speaks of "The Church," as though there were not at least forty churches, every one of which is "The Church" to its own adherents and to none others, and from the further fact that he doesn't sign his name to his attacks, but uses a ridiculous nom de plume. There is nothing in anything that he has ever said throwing any light on the question as to the authority for the change from the seventh to the first day of the week in the observance of the Sabbath, except that his "The Church" observes that day; and that was his excuse for butting in. "Disavowing any desire to be personal or disrespectful," he is both in almost every line, and with the zeal of the true religious bigot he wilfully distorts what I have said in his efforts to misrepresent me. Notwithstanding that "millions of people in all parts of the earth, and in every language known to mankind, repeat daily, 'I believe in the resurrection of the body and life everlasting,'" I am constrained to doubt that many believe the first clause of it. I also doubt whether many say it in Hebrew or Arabic. That was an article of faith when the creed was manufactured, and they still repeat it, though why they should feel called upon to reiterate it every day, if they truly believe it, I cannot understand. I must agree with his badly expressed opinion of the "elegance and charity" of those who call honest doubters "hell-bound infidels," however, though he did not mean it that way. And I do think it would be much more charitable to "hammer blue hell" out of a certain class of wives occasionally than to abandon them and throw them on the world, possibly to "go to the bad." But there is no use wasting time on a carping "The Church" bigot, whose faith is equal to that of the child, "If mamma says it's so, it's so, even if it ain't so." He may think such faith is sublime, but I think it is the faith of an imbecile.

Ellis G. Darnell, formerly a proof reader and for a time page revisor on the Record, who has for several years been postmaster at Lebanon, Ind., was one of the Inauguration visitors and called at the office to renew acquaintances. He was sufficiently thoughtful to telegraph Dr. Johnny Atkinson, who is from the same city, in advance of his coming, so that no particular shock was experienced. Darnell comes to town every time we have anything big.

Charles W. Pafflow, of the Proof Division, whose book, "The Mysteries of the Zimniy Dvoretz"—as true a picture of Russia at this day as of that of the half century ago which it depicts—is put on the market when everything pertaining to Russia "sells like hot cakes," has been placed in charge of the newly created "Foreign Department" of the Inland Printer. His intimate acquaintance with all European languages amply equips him for the work of reviewing technical journals and for epitomizing matters of interest in connection with printing occurring in Europe. He is an able writer and has given much study to matters pertaining to the printing business of that country, and has engaged in much correspondence with printers on the Continent. I have no doubt that the "Foreign Department," under Mr. Pafflow's supervision, will be a valuable addition to that greatest of all the magazines of printing. Earl R. Baxter, of the Times composing room, is the local agent for the Inland Printer.

I would suggest to my good friend "Cycle" that "a brace" means two and not a quartette—this being occasioned by his reference last week to Redfield's cartoon of the Lavatory Quartette of the week before. I wouldn't do such a mean thing had he not slapped me real hard on the wrist by intimating that I am a "knocker". "Cycle" would be awful devilish if he did not restrain himself.

In a number of places the jealousy of the correspondents crops out because I was cartooned. We may yet have one of Belcher and McCann scrapping over the "Pastoral Symphony" and another of Gunn after being hit with a sour apple. Belcher mourning for his apples and weeping because they are not—that would make a corker. The Dreaming Bookbinder having a nightmare over one of my jokes might be too horrible a subject. "Cycle Prying out a Paragraph"—how would that do? "Neadirag Standing Up for The Church"—but no, I can't recommend a man who hides behind a pen name. ("Cycle "don't count, for he is a marked man.) There are any number of good subjects for cartoons.

There are many readers of this paper who learned with sincere grief of the death of Maurice Guiheen, which occurred in St. Louis on February 17, at the age of 62 years. A personal note from George P. Nichols, of Baltimore, brought me the first intimation I had of it, in which he inclosed the tribute of Martin R. H. Witter to his dead friend, published in the Typographical News, of St. Louis, which I will append. Mr. Guiheen came to Washington I. T. U. convention of 1879 as the elegate from St. Louis, but his seat was contested, with the result, according to my recollection, that that Union was unrepresented. I remember him as a big, splendid-looking man, genial, whole-souled, and hearty, of whom every one seemed the friend except the delegation which came to antagonize him. The following is Mr. Witter's tribute:

By the death of Maurice Guiheen, Typographical Union No. 8 has lost a most useful as well as an old and honored member. None but those old enough to remember the low ebb which unionism in St. Louis had reached in the early seventies—the state of disorganization, of suspicion one of another, the crimination and recrimination which existed at that period—will be able to justly estimate the services of the handful of staunch men who stood by the cause when success seemed hopeless and an organized town a dream. Of this small band was Maurice Guiheen, who had recently come to St. Louis from a Virginia country town and had at once allied himself with No. 8—from choice, not from necessity. From that time forward he was an active member and rendered invaluable services. As I recall, he was chosen President four times, and represented No. 8 three times in the International body, and he never held a commission which he did not execute for the benefit and honor of the Union. In later years advancing age somewhat abridged his activity in public affairs, but he never lost interest in the progress of the Union. But his public and official career was the smallest part of his service to the cause. It was privately—as an office man, as a man among men—that he exemplified the character which every member ought to strive to achieve. He was loyal to the Union, but faithful to his employer. He was firm, but fair. He formed close friendships and had strong dislikes, but in the discharge of his duties he knew no difference between men, and with him duty was the first consideration. His judgment was calm and clear and he was an admirable adviser.

As a man his character was unique. He was open and frank to the highest degree. In an acquaintance with him of about thirty years I have never known a deviation from the straight path of truth and honor. His generosity was boundless, as many a needy brother and brother's family well know. His daily walk was marked by unfailing courtesy and consideration for others and by an exuberance of good humor that was infectious. His society was a delight to all about him. The shock of his sudden death is too recent to permit of more than this brief summary. Spoken of such a man, words fall meaningless. I can only measure my affection for him by the sense of his loss.

Maurice Guiheen belonged to the Old Guard, now diminished to a remnant. Let me express the hope that the men of to-day, from the vantage-point of to-day, will perform their part as well as did the veterans departed and soon to depart.

M. R. H. WITTER.

My friend M. D. L. Shrope, of the Easton (Pa.) Journal, has formulated an I. T. U. ticket, and he believes its election would result in the restoration of harmony. It probably would result in placating the men who are breaking the harmony. This is it: President, Charles E. Hawkes, of Chicago; First Vice-President, Frank K. Foster, of Boston; Second Vice-President, W. J. White, of San Francisco; Secretary-Treasurer, A. D. Calvert, of Philadelphia; the Third and Fourth Vice-Presidents to be left to the election of the delegates to the next convention. He also suggests the creation of a "detective force" or "board of general supervision," to which he elects Frank A. Kennedy, of Omaha; John W. Bramwood, of Denver; Ernest Kreft, of Philadelphia; A. F. Bloomer, of Washington, and J. F. Healey, of New York. Wow! Brother Shrope only imagines that there is general dissatisfaction with the present administration and the present scheme of electing officers, located as he is in the shadow of Philadelphia, where all the trouble originates. The present Council is too big a dog to be wagged by its tail. Let's continue to let all the membership run the I. T. U., Brother Shrope, just as we have been doing. If the Executive Council has violated the law, the convention will probably discover it; and if they are right in refusing to let Philadelphia Union make them violate it, that will be easily brought out.

The Daily Gleanor, of Fredericton, New Brunswick, of February 27, contains an account of the death of John Henderson, at Toronto, at the age of 67 years. Mr. Henderson—"Jack Henderson" to everybody acquainted in the composing room of the New York Herald—went from Toronto to New York in 1859 and went to work on the Herald, in which he rose through all the intermediate grades to foreman and superintendent, after which he became night editor, in which position he remained until he resigned ,in 1896, when he returned to Toronto to live in retirement the remainder of his days. In the early seventies he was assistant foreman on the Herald—this was the period of my connection (in a "sub" capacity) with that paper—and he had a carefully concealed geniality beneath a rough exterior. He could make a new "sub" wonder what he ever wanted to go to New York for, but he was not as bad as he sounded. I have before related in this paper that upon one occasion he "fired" me for going home leaving a proof uncorrected. Not desiring to leave the office so soon, I accepted the next invitation to work, and along about 10 o'clock Jack came by to my frame and espied me. "You've got a hell of a gall," said he. "I need it," said I. This laconic conversation closed the incident. He was a good fellow at heart and was really liked by the men, though on one occasion the chapel made him apologize for his rough language, the meeting being called in the busiest part of the night.

I took a look through the establishment of the Union Outfitters to Men Company a few days ago—also invested in some raiment, as my friends, who are all proud of my general neatness of attire, will not question—and found a very well equipped emporium. Go and see them, boys! Think how selfish it is to demand the label on your printing, when you haven't it on your clothing. Nothing but union work for union men—let's make that our cry.

A. H. McKnight told me the other evening that their gold-mining company is to be financed in a short time and that active production will begin. That is a line of investment I am not "up" on, but if there is anything in the abiding faith of good people, success is just over the hill and coming at lightning express speed. Why shouldn't we make money mining gold as well as other people?

Tom Lawler, ex-vice-president of Columbia Union, for several years in the G. P. O. and on the Post, for the past half dozen years proprietor of a hotel in Sunbury, Pa., came to the Inauguration and incidentally looked up his old friends. I have related herein how, when they formed a union in Sunbury, Tom was elected president. Among the first demands that the union made was that the pay of a young lady compositor should be raised to equal that of the men. "Why, certainly," said the proprietor, who was also Tom's landlord, "I'll raise her pay, and I'll just add the amount to your rent." Tom has been paying it ever since, showing that he is a true union man. He is the same old good-natured Tom Lawler.

Trade Unions and Trusts.

A common method of attacking the trade union is that of damning it with faint praise by likening it to the employers' association, and sometimes to the trust. This method has the merit of enabling those who use it to make an apparently strong case against the trade union, while pretending friendship for that institution. The argument in favor of the trade union based upon the presumption that the trade union is a trust is like the argument in favor of a red-handed murderer based upon the presumption of his innocence—merely a piece of fiction. That argument gives the prosecutor in both cases an opportunity to pose in a disinterested capacity; but the result in both cases, i. e., conviction and sentence to death, is equally a matter of foregone conclusion.

The trade union needs no defense at this late day. Certainly, it needs no defense of the sort here noted, namely, that as a "trust in labor," it is no worse than the "trust in capital." To those who have no better word than that to say for the trade union we would suggest that they keep silent, or, better still, that they come out openly on the side of the opponents of trade unionism. The trade union emphatically disclaims any sympathy with, or similarity to, the trust or other form of organization among employers. In particular instances these bodies may resemble each other, but we are now speaking of the general rule. Of course, we recognize that in asserting the essential difference between the trade union and the employers' association some dependence must be placed upon an assumption of common agreement between honest and intelligent men regarding the ethics of these respective bodies. We have no fears upon this score. That which we do fear is that dishonest and unintelligent men may secure the public ear to a greater extent than the friends of trade unionism are able to do, and thus secure a verdict in their own favor—that is, in favor of the claim that the trade union is a monopoly and therefore properly subject to all the limitations and disabilities imposed by law and public opinion upon that form of government. However, such verdict, if obtainable at all, can only be temporary. We have every confidence in the ultimate victory of the view that, notwithstanding any similiarity in the external workings of the trade union and employers' association, these bodies differ from, and in fact oppose, each other in their morals and fundamentals, the former being designed to embrace the greatest number and thus strengthen the weak, the latter being designated to exclude the greatest number and thus aggrandize the strong; the former conforming to the law of human progress, the latter to the law of human retrogression.—Coast Seaman's Journal.

Try It On the Hog.

A professor in an agricultural college had a hobby. He believed and preached on all occasions that the food of animals should be cooked, just like that of human beings. One day, while out driving in the country, he passed a farm, the owner of which was standing in a pen near the road feeding to a drove of swine generous quantities of corn in the ear. This caused the learned theorist to stop and forthwith hail the violator of his theory: "My friend, don't you know it is wrong to give those hogs feed that has not been cooked? Don't you know that if you would cook that grain before issuing it they would digest it in just one-half the time it takes them as it is now eaten?" "Waal, stranger, suppose they would; I'd like to know what in the —— time is to a hog!"

Baron Graham once asked an epicure how many oysters he should eat in order to create a good appetite for dinner, and was told to eat away until he became hungry. The baron, who never saw a joke, ate ten dozen, and then plaintively remarked: "'Pon my word, I don't think I am as hungry as when I began."

Miss Iowa Hampson had the pleasure of visit from her brother, who resides in Denver, Colo., during the Inauguration time.

There are Lanston Monotype schools in Philadelphia, New York, and Chicago, and I understand that it is necessary to have a Union card in order to enter these schools.

R. E. Johnston, of Columbus, Miss., formerly a compositor on the Official Gazette, dropped in on us a few days ago and renewed old acquaintances. Mr. Johnston is now established in the wholesale drug business under the firm name of Johnston & Caine, Columbus, Miss.

At the last meeting of the Union T. Frank Hall called attention to the fact that our membership seemed to think they were doing their whole duty by the label if they had their printing done in a label office. They seldom thought to request that it be placed on their printed matter, and thereby aid the effort to bring the label into general use.

Andrew Turnbull received a very fine piece of printing, in the form of a banquet souvenir, from the Courier-Citizen of Lowell, Mass. Mr. Turnbull served his apprenticeship in this office, and he says the proprietors organized the union in that place and believe they are benefitted by reason of its existing. At the present time they employ over 100 people and use both linotype and monotype machines.

GOSSIP FROM THE G. P. O.

First Division.

Did you labor on Inauguration Day?

The only change in slug quotations were: 54 to 141, 78 to 75, and 83 to 127.

The many friends of Joe Babcock were glad to see him upon his return to office.

Messrs. McFarlane and Woodgate are still on the sick list, the last named being reported very ill.

James E. Harper and Frank F. S. Miller were transferred to the Treasury Division on Monday.

Another week has passed and we have heard nothing new relative to candidates for the approaching election.

Col. Jno. H. Peake, of Cody, Wyo., brother of Charles and Millard F. Peake, visited the G. P. O. on Tuesday.

We understand that the output of work in the "Bill Room" end of this Division the session just closed far exceeded any previous year.

J. A. Oldfield, Esq., St. Mary's, W. Va., formerly a compositor in the old Document Room, visited the office during the week, and received the "glad hand." We are pleased to note that he is prospering in the practice of his profession.

At the close of office hours on Monday sixteen of the temporary compositors who have been employed in this Division, were dropped. This is the one regrettable drawback at the close of each session of Congress. Of course we all know that this is the summing up of the situation so far as our temporary friends are concerned. It is a matter of favorable comment that the force laid off in this Division were excellent workmen; a few of them, indeed, can not be surpassed. They carry with them the very best wishes of all and with the earnest hope that they will be returned when the next session of Congress convenes, if not earlier.

Ladies' Dining Room. R. A. Driscoll, N. Cap. and G. Oyster pan roast, 10c.

Second Division.

A. T. Maupin, of the Proof Room, has been ill.

J. E. Colton had a severe hemorrhage of the lungs, but has recovered.

Chairman Trudgian had a relapse and is still confined to his home with illness.

The gold ring advertised as lost still remains at the desk. Property can be had for asking.

C. P. Boss won the watch fob on which hung pendent a likeness of President Roosevelt.

Those lamb's tails which adorned various members of this Division on the third of March caused considerable hilarity.

The decorations of the room were tastefully arranged by Messrs. Phelps, Allen, and Walters, and certainly did credit to their artistic ability.

On account of the reduction of the temporary force, about twenty or half of the remaining temporaries of this Division, were laid off Monday evening.

One of the tallest men in the United States, if not in the world, was a visitor in this Division the day before Inauguration. Everyone was amazed to see such a curiosity.

Former compositor Goldstein visited the office Thursday of last week. He is engaged in the clothing business in New York, where he went after resigning his position in the office.

Slug 42 posted up a notice that he had lost $25. The amount remains unrecovered, and I learn that he has met with a second loss. Hip pockets are not a safe deposit for money. The conservative method is a solid financial institution.

Third Division.

William H. Belcher, Mayor of Paterson, N. J., and brother of the undersigned, was a visitor in Washington during the Inauguration.

J. A. Horney, who came to us a few weeks since from the Spess, resigned Monday morning to accept the position of manager for the Berlin, Md., News.

W. J. Greevy, late a temporary in this Division, will resume work for the Evening News at Williamsburg, Pa., where he was foreman for ten years before he began working for the Government. The News was started as the result of a strike, and every employee, from editor to errand boy, is a Union printer.

William N. Goldstein, formerly chairman of this Division, now of New York, came to shake hands with the boys last Friday. He is now a member of the firm of Goldstein Brothers, owning the clothing department in Steinhardt & Strasburger's department store, Eighty-sixth street and Third avenue, New York City.

The subjoined quotations are calculated to show that Warman's dictum on the use of the word "custom" is not final:

Age cannot wither her, nor custom stale
Her infinite variety.
—Antony and Cleopatra, Act II, Scene 2.

"They have no manners, and their customs are disgusting."—Sailor's description of the Patagonians.

Notwithstanding the fact that the chapel voted down the proposition to raise money for decorations in honor of Inauguration Day, Chairman Goodkey took up a voluntary contribution, with the proceeds of which (about $6.50) he fixed up the room very prettily. Mr. Goodkey deserves great credit for his untiring exertions on behalf of the chapel, and will probably receive due recognition on election day.

Robert J. Mears, for fourteen months past a temporary in this Division and the Official Gazette, took his leave of us Monday night. Mr. Mears has several plans for the future, but has not decided which one he will adopt. Although "only a temporary," he was one of the best compositors in the Room. He was at one time reading clerk in the Delaware State Senate, and published a paper in Dover. Whatever he does, we may rest assured he will "get there."

Local Union No. 4, International Brotherhood of Bookbinders, has published in neat booklet form a list of books printed at the Government Printing Office, most of which may be obtained through one's Senator or Representative. These booklets have been freely distributed; but should there be a desire for more, they may be obtained through any member of the Bookbinders' Union. It may readily be seen that the more these books are distributed among the people, the more likely we are to have the job of printing them again.

It is again my duty to chronicle the fact that the Third Division has lost one of its pillars in the person of Charles S. Davis, who has presided at the slug and lead racks for nearly two years. The scene of his activities was on Thursday, March 9, transferred to the Geological Survey Office, 1330 F street N. W., where he will hold the position of editorial clerk under Philip C. Warman, editor-in-chief of Geological Survey publications. Mr. Davis is fully qualified for his new post by experience and inclination, and it is confidently anticipated that he will do himself and his friends full credit.

As was expected, all the temporary men in this Division, who had completed or exceeded their six months' term, were dropped from the roll Monday night, owing to the cessation of work caused by the adjournment of Congress. Their names are: Robert T. Bray, Walter L. Brooks, Joseph Cohn, W. E. Drenner, R. W. Gray, W. J. Greevy, Otto Wm. Harke, Elmer Hollis, J. R. Lehmann, J. H. Lemmon, Wm. T. Martin, Henry T. McConvey, Robert J. Mears, Jarvis B. Moulden, John A. Ray, C. E. Sikken, Robt. F. Simms, George Terwilliger, John H. Wheeler, Edgar O. Whitman. They are all good fellows, and we wish them success in whatever they may undertake.

Walter L. Brooks, who was Slug 25 in the ring alley, didn't let the grass grow under his feet when the temporaries were dropped. He went to work Wednesday morning for the National Publishing Co. on Louisiana Avenue. Here is an example of a man who, though his percentage at the civil service examination was only a fraction under 90, and who by that fact was rated as a temporary, was nevertheless one of the most capable printers in the building. By discharging him the Government loses a faithful, conscientious, and intelligent workman, and they might try a hundred times over in the civil service examination lottery before they would find his equal. The same is true in the case of other temporary men throughout the building. That the law often compels the Public Printer to discriminate against good workmen while poor workmen are kept upon the roll is clearly apparent. It is to be hoped that an amendment may be made that will allow of an intelligent solution of this difficulty.

Oh, I don't know. Maybe we haven't got an association in the Third Division that can give pointers to anything ever evolved by Donath and Bloomer. Briefly put, ten or fifteen of us have selected a plan of a house with six rooms and bath, big cellar, furnace heat, etc., that can be built for a very reasonable sum. Anyone owning a lot, or who will buy a lot, and who pays a pro rata share of the expense—say $2—can have a copy of the plans. The association purposes to get bids from various contractors for building a house for each contributor, and it is thought that the price can be made so low that almost anybody can afford to have a domicile of his own. Those who have a hankering for sitting under their own vine and fig trees may get further information by applying to E. C. Saltzman, bankman, who will show them the plans and receive their subscriptions. The subscribers to date are as follows: E. A. M. Lawson, George L. Sherman, E. C. Saltzman, Will E. Soult, J. W. Belcher, Edw. J. Wood, D. B. Hallock, W. A. Kinsolving, R. A. Julian, H. W. Kitzmiller.

General Superintendent Randall, of the Mergenthaler Linotype Co., of Brooklyn, was a caller on Monday. Mr. Randall expressed himself as greatly pleased with the working condition and appearance of the plant.

The day Record force is still doing business at the old stand. The "Back to the Mines" order, however, is liable to be posted any time.

According to Cartoonist Redfield, "Judge" Chas. Ennis, of the Laws Committee, will make a mighty handsome old man when his whiskers reach full bloom.

Among the callers on Monday was the genial Chris. Auracher, of the Night Bill Force, accompanied by his three daughters, who are visiting in the city from Buffalo.

Vincent F. Howard, of this Division, was called away on Monday by the receipt of a message announcing the death of a little nephew, the son of Mr. Howard's brother, who resides in the northeast section of the city.

E. E. Richards, of this Division, was disappointed on Saturday in not securing a good position from which to take views of the Inaugural parade. And his disappointment is our own, for had he succeeded we would have been able to have secured first class views, not taken and finished for the purpose of mere profit.

The Linotype Bulletin, published by the Mergenthaler Linotype Co., this month reproduces from THE TRADES UNIONIST my recent poem entitled, "The Operator's Dream," and for which the writer of "Flotsam and Jetsam" intimated a sour apple had overtaken me while facing South. Get thee behind me, Bloomer!

About twenty men of this Division composed an emergency force which stood at their posts until 12 o'clock noon on last Saturday. A large number of young ladies from the Press Room took advantage of the occasion and called in inspect the machines. Those of us who remained found pleasure in entertaining them.

The Record Division was tastily decorated last week, and admired by hundreds of visitors as well as many of the office employees. The night and day forces united in the effort, and have every reason to feel proud of their achievement. Contributions for the cause were voluntary, the sum of $26 being used in the work.

First payments into the National Mutual Finance and Investment Company were made this week, Mr. August Donath making the collection. Hereafter some one in one or two divisions will be selected to whom semi-monthly payments may be made. Mr. Donath is now casting his realestate eye over the field, and getting ready to advocate the buying of the first good thing that turns up.

Through an oversight the committee in charge of decorating this Division placed a picture of President Roosevelt over each entrance to the cage. It only took the Indiana delegation about two minutes to set up a howl that would make Seth Bullock's cowpunchers appear as novices in comparison. Needless to say, the picture of Vice-President Fairbanks was soon placed in proper position.

Not since the day when the little son of President Roosevelt inspected the machines has more commotion been created than was caused by the visit to this Division last week of General Otis, of the Los Angeles Times. No matter how much or how little the allied printing crafts may differ from the General's views on union matters, as a guest of this office he was welcomely received and shown every courtesy. His nephew, Charles Otis, of the Proof Room, accompanied him.

The other day I saw our esteemed little lady operator, Miss May White, passing down the room. Suddenly she stopped, seated herself on a high stool, and with a pleasant expression, gazed heavenward for about five seconds. Naturally I inquired into the whys and wherefores of such a move. She told me it was the manner in which she cured hic-cups—that is, sit down and think of some one whom she loved, and if they loved her the hic-cups would cease. The remarkably quick time in which a cure was affected in this case, leads me in the belief that Cupid is working overtime on somebody's heart.

Looking over the recent issue of the Linotype Bulletin, I find a few sentences of advice which might be given careful consideration by the operators employed in this Division. The two which appeal to me most are: "Don't cuss the machine—its all right," and "Don't lose your head—keep cool and work." The past few months' experience in this room has convinced me that those who cuss the machine most are those making the least progress in the art of operating. Nine times out of ten when a machinist is called to a machine and finds the operator raving like a madman and cussing the machine, the fault can easily be traced to some careless act on the part of the cussor.

Jerry Oldfield, a former employee of the G. P. O., during the present Public Printer's first term, but now practicing law in West Virginia, was a caller on Tuesday and received the glad hand from many of the older employees. Aside from Mr. Oldfield's ability as a printer, he possessed a good knowledge of watch-making, and a good deal of Government time in those days was consumed in overhauling watches for the boys. The story is told on him that shortly after his arrival in the office he was called up by the powers that be and informed that some of his proofs looked to be the work of a genuine blacksmith, to which Jerry replied that he was aware they were bad, but that he hoped those in authority would not expect too much of him as his long suit was watch-making. Anyhow his fame as a watch-maker spread, and his frame up in the bill corner of the old First Division generally bore the appearance of a jeweler's shop.

Specification Notes.

Twenty "extras" were dropped on Monday evening.

Timekeeper Hyams returned to his desk on the 3d inst., after an absence of one month with friends in North Carolina.

Mr. R. E. Johnston, formerly employed on Specifications, now of Columbus, Miss., was a welcome visitor here this week. Mr. Johnston reports that he has a prosperous drug business at Columbus, a fact pleasing to his many friends of the G. P. O.

The street fakirs seem to regard this particular locality as specially good territory for the sale of their wares. The latest victim of record purchased a needle-threader, which he took home as a glad surprise. It may be that some of these threaders will work only in the open air under the most skilled performers. Lewis thinks that possibly the one he bought may be of that particular kind.

Twenty-six prodigals returned home yesterday from a winter's frolic on the night force, as follows: Ira T. Bryant, H. H. Brayton, R. W. Kendall, W. H. Carpenter, John C. Euler, G. A. Rinehart, Jesse M. Clark, F. M. Claflin, W. S. McKean, Jr., John B. Weitzel, R. W. Burgess, William F. Tappan, James E. Brooke, Jeremiah O'Connell, E. A. Hutchison, R. W. Burkhart, J. C. The Solons in Caricature.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

Redfield's happy illustration of the Laws Committee in heated session gives to the Solons of 101 the appearance of a deliberative body, outclassed only by the first assembly of the original and impetuous "Sunflower" Populists. The speaker who is represented as faced with his back to the wall is easily recognizable from the bald surface exposed and by the masterful use of that index finger which points to a point not altogether obscure, while a breathless silence on the part of his auditors is evidence of acute weariness or suspended animation. The Chairman of the Committee would seem to be waiting for a favorable opening to explain something or to introduce an unthreshed proposition. Meanwhile he too is accummulating an unusual growth of whiskers and sacrificing good looks for the glory of the thing. The occupant of the Chair is represented with mallet in clinched fist and half inclined to register a "knock"—if such an expression is permissible. May we not confidently believe that the worst is over and that before the robins nest again the orators will get all that is coming to them? Mr. Redfield is certainly doing his share toward relieving the monotony.

NAVY YARD ITEMS.

Clarence E. Mackey and James H. Brown, employed in Yards and Docks, were injured at work one day last week and received attention at the dispensary.

Chief Electrician W. E. Bean, who has been at the Yard for temporary duty in connection with the wireless station, has returned to the Brooklyn Yard.

A successful test has been made in which the lightning rod of the big smoke stack of the new boiler house was used for receiving messages from Annapolis by wireless telegraphy.

A friend of mine, stopped to watch
A patent cigar clipper.
He wondered if his fingers were
Not quicker than the clipper.
(They wasn't.)

The handsome bouquet thrown at me by J. A. J. was scented with the attar of roses. It was appreciated, because it came from a sincere heart. The poetry of the world-renowned Colonel will live in the hearts of all true Americans when the memory of Tim Tickle will be forgotten.

Some years ago we had a foreman in the Yard who never was known to laugh. Indeed, there was a standing reward to anyone who ever caught him with a camera in the act of smiling. It was even said of him that his wife never bought vinegar; all that was necessary was for her husband to look over the table and everything soured. The only smile I ever saw on his countenance was when he was in his coffin. The thought has often occurred to me. Will he awaken on the resurrection morn with that smile or will he take on his natural appearance? Will some reader answer this question.

Colonel John Wesley Bradbury seems to be the most popular employee in the Yard, judging by the number of valentines he received. I am informed that with two exceptions every widow on the Navy Yard regardless of age, remembered the Colonel. It is reported that he is considering a proposition transferring the whole batch to the National Museum. The Colonel being a widower is very discreet relative to his age, but his chums say, he was old enough to "cut bait" when the British burned the Navy Yard bridge. I am not responsible for the accuracy of the above statement. I give it as verified to me by his two chums, Joe Williams and Reggie Persing. Of one thing I am sure, the Colonel is well preserved and no doubt will at an early day lead one of these dashing widows to the altar. Congratulations.

The decorations of the shops in the Navy Yard in honor of the Inauguration of President Roosevelt outclasses not only the other departments in the city, but places Pennsylvania Avenue in the shade. Never in the history of the Yard has such a magnificent spectacle presented itself as witnessed by the thousands who thronged the shops before and after the Inauguration. Each shop vied with the other in their endeavors to present the most elaborate costume. By mutual consent the honor was given to East Gun Carriage Shop. Every machine, through its beautiful decoration, echoed the sentiment of the mechanic, be he Democrat or Republican. Teddy, the terrible, is on every lip and in every heart. If the President could but visit the Navy Yard shops and see these testimonials to his worth by the gun builders I am sure that when the wage committee of Columbia Lodge visits him he would without a moment's delay place us on the same wage plan as Bureau of Engraving and Printing and the G. P. O. All hail to Teddy, is the honest sentiment of every employee in the Yard.

The grand opening of The Union Outfitters to Men Co. on March 1, was an ovation to the master minds that conceived this institution. Notwithstanding the inclement weather the store was crowded during the day. Secretary Pfau, the Chesterfield of Labor, with Manager Bloch, assistant by his corps of clerks, welcomed the guests.

Beautiful flowers, gifts of admiring friends, added to the magnificence of the establishment. The Union boys were out in abundance with their mothers, wives, and sweethearts, particularly Columbia Lodge, No. 174, I. A. of M., who after their regular meeting visited the store in a body. Every one seemed happy. Everybody enjoyed the music, even to the store cat who wore a Union collar, and would not associate with a scab companion who came uninvited.

By wearing a collar I do not mean to infer that the clerks wear collars. Now I have done it. What would a clerk look like without one? I know the married ones do, and I am told they all are married but one. No, girls, I will not tell you which one. Oh, Pfau, don't ask me. I cannot; just take your beaux up to the store and order them to purchase thier spring outfit and they will come away both jealous of this young Adonis and pleased with their purchase.

Notwithstanding that Congress was in night session I noticed several members present. I cannot understand why they were there, as it is generally understood that they do not wear such garments as their critical eyes feasted on. Possibly the momentary effect will be lasting. If you meet a Congressman in a new suit you will at once recognize the fact that reformation has taken place.

The labor leaders were also there and by their presence gave encouragement to the management. Secretary Pfau, knowing my ability as an after dinner speaker, invited me to make a few remarks before closing. Just as I started in my most pleasing manner to say, "Ladies and gentlemen, I take great pleasure in welcoming you here tonight," a motherly old soul remarked (sotto voce): "Land sakes, I do believe that is Reuben Parsnip from Piscataway."

Of course this disconcerted me for a moment, but taking a fresh inlet of gas I started out again, but only got as far as the welcome when my chum Tucker kindly asked the band to play "Home, Sweet Home," which brought the opening to a close.

* * * *

"Speaking of dangerous places to live," remarked Lieutenant Kennedy during the noon recess, "some years ago my chum and I secured a position in a ship yard on Long Island. We secured board at the Bayside Hotel and was given a rear room which extended out on the pier.

"The first week was uneventful; after that our troubles began. One night in particular a heavy fog enveloped the Island. Vessels passing were tooting their whistles to such an extent that it seemed that bedlam had broken loose. We tried to sleep without avail. Suddenly a shock was felt that threatened to demolish the building. Out of bed every man jumped to discover that a steamer had rammed the hotel. A council of war was held. What to do to prevent another collison was the question. My chum suggested that we gather all the alarm clocks in the hotel, wind them up alternately every few minutes, place a man in charge, and again retire. Thus we put in the night."

"Why did you not place a light in the end window?" inquired Ike Curran.

"Never thought of that," said the Lieutenant.

Just then the gong struck to resume work and the Lieutenant remembered that he had neglected to muster, which necessitated his appearing before the Captain to explain his negligence. He has now swore off and no doubt his pipe dreams will vanish.

OLD DADDY POSSUM.

I'se a good old yaller possum,
Just a climbin' ob de tree;
I'se a kinky, winky possum,
Just as possum as can be;
I'se a scrumptious, bumptious possum,
Startin' out to cut a figger,
While I climb de branches higher,
Just to 'scape some hungry nigger.

I'se an honest, daddy possum,
Raisin' chilluns by the score;
Nebber did steal no man's chicken's,
Cause he lock de hen-house door.
I'se a wiley, riley possum,
Wid de ladies cut great figger,
Till I hears de comin' footsteps
Of some possum eatin niggar.

I'se one good old sassy possum,
Just a climbin' ob de tree,

A Child's Logic

Logic sometimes triumphs over dogma, as is illustrated in the case of a little girl who had been brought up a believer in Christian Science. She was visiting her aunt, a non-believer, and in the course of the afternoon fell down stairs, whereupon she began to cry lustily. "Are you hurt, dear?" inquired the aunt. "No," was the sobbing response. "Then," said the aunt, not without a touch of wicked enjoyment, "why do you cry?" "I'm crying," was the reply, "because I can't feel that I aint hurt."

THE TRADES UNIONIST.

OFFICIAL ORGAN CENTRAL LABOR UNION, WASHINGTON BRANCH, AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

Vol. IX. No. 40. WASHINGTON, D. C., THURSDAY, MARCH 16, 1905. Price, 3 Cents.

THE CENTRAL LABOR UNION

Committee Appointed to Aid Upholsterers in Conspiracy Case.

OUTFITTERS STORE A SUCCESS

Credentials From Registered Drug Clerks Received—Retail Clerks Want Card of Clerk Shown—Joseph Mathy Still on Unfair List—Other Business Considered.

The regular weekly meeting of the Central Labor Union was called to order at 8:10 p. m. on Monday by President Dickman.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

CREDENTIALS.

From Registered Drug Clerks, No. 240: A. Klinger, S. J. T. Wells, S. Deckman, W. E. Hunt, and F. T. Hafelfinger.

From Hoisting Engineers, No. 77: C. B. Falbush, D. T. Taylor, R. A. King, T. Saunders, J. A. O'Brine,

The credentials were received and delegates seated.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Volunteer Committee, Free Lectures to the People, announcing that on Thursday evening, March 16, Captain George Anson Smith, will give a stereopticon lecture on "The Making of a Newspaper." Placed on file.

From Registered Drug Clerks, No. 240, inclosing list of officers elected at last meeting. Placed on file.

CALL OF UNIONS.

Columbia Lodge of Machinists: Request that the reply to a communication sent to the President of the United States relative to granting a holiday to Government employees on Inauguration Day be turned over to the delegates of Columbia Lodge. Request granted.

Retail Clerks requested all union men to demand the clerk's card when making purchases.

Sheet Metal Workers called attention to Joseph Mathy being on unfair list.

The chair appointed T. R. Boyd a member of the Contract Committee.

Upholsterers Union: Reported that an indictment had been returned by the grand jury against members of that organization charging conspiracy. Upon request Delegate Spohn was added to the committee to co-operate with that organization.

Attention was called to the financial condition of the Merchants and Mechanics Bank; also to Union Outfitters to Men Company store.

Adjourned.

A. F. of L. Executive Council.

The Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor has been in session this week. Every succeeding session of the Council has shown an increase of work outlined by the conventions. A proposition that cannot be be disposed of by a convention is sent to the Executive Council, with the result of giving that body an enormous amount of work to dispose of.

The jurisdiction disputes constantly arising in the manufacturing trades, due to change of methods and use of a new product for manufacture gives rise to endless trouble where an existing trade has been engaged in working up the material entering into the new product.

The Council also received a financial statement of the conditions of the Federation, which shows a substantial increase, and the growth of membership very gratifying.

The Council will conclude its labors on Friday.

Fly-Leaf Verses.

CHAUCER.

Herein the breath of quiet days
Stirs flower and leaf, uplifts and cheers;
And strangely sweet are battle lays
Mellowed to quaintness by the years.

He wisely loves the beautiful
Who sweetly sings, because he must,
The artless songs of nature's school
As Chaucer did with child-like trust.

SHAKSPERE.

Mirrored within these pages bravely throng
Shapes of a dying past at parting ways,
The cheery fife-notes of prophetic song
Shrilling above the din of strenuous days.

The page, the clown, the maid, the buxom lass,
The swaggering man-at-arms, the knight, the squire,
Loom life-like in the pageant as they pass;
Here sings the cricket by the winter fire.

On windy wastes at night are heard strange cries;
A throneless king lacks shelter in the storm;
Swords clash; the jester sings. With steadfast eyes
Through all benignant moves the master's form.

AFTER-DINNER DILATIONS.

Some would-be delegates are apparently waiting for their numbers to be called or wondering if their names are written there.

* * *

We fear that Mr. Bloomer has already jeopardized the opportunity which at one time gave promise of a chance to go forth and preach.

* * *

Some one a long time since discovered that there is greater profit in working others than themselves, and now a "good thing" is born every day.

* * *

It is learned that the first part of the prescription has been written, and that the rest will be filled in with directions in time for use by the electorate in May.

* * *

People went in numbers last week to see "The Curse of Drink." A good many who did so experienced the real thing in their own homes with admission free.

* * *

Just now there is unusual activity among those who hold that Socialism is the one thing needful and the last thing of consequence to happen before the ushering in of the millenium.

* * *

There is a great hurrah about "boosting" those who are already up and too little heed given to those who occupy a lower plane and would be benefitted by a friendly hand from above.

* * *

The "dangerous classes" are those who protest and become restless while the bureaucracy or safe and sane people by reason of their commanding position are perfectly satisfied to let well enough alone.

* * *

Objection is made by Mr. Bloomer to our use of the word "brace" as applied to Mr. Redfield's group of songsters. Here, for once, is where we two-embrace, sir. Now, pray, what is a "bracer?" Two in one?

* * *

Mr. Bloomer objects to pen names, but we venture the opinion that he would not hestitate to indorse the statement that some very good reading appeared for some time in THE TRADES UNIONIST over the pen name of "Understudy."

* * *

Mr. Kreiter recently achieved fame by one stroke of his fervid pen in the use of these six words: "If you can't boost, don't knock," and straightway he said and wrote something that gave special significance to the advice of another: "Don't do as I do, but do as I say."

* * *

Mrs. Chadwick's nerve failed her when the jury returned a verdict of guilty on all the seven counts of the indictment. In some respects we have sympathized with this woman on account of her many trials, but it now seems like sympathy wasted, since through her attorney she asks for another trial.

* * *

The aggregate of monies dispensed each year by the membership of 101 in aid of those who are sick or in any way distressed is a credit to the generosity of individuals and more than aught else is an index of that spirit of fraternalism which should everywhere prevail and is readily recognized as a distinguishing feature or cardinal principle of trades unionism.

* * *

The latest scheme to enrich the public by a small investment of money is being sent broadcast over the country in printed form by a company who are patriotically interested in raising the ill-fated "Maine." As it is first necessary to raise the money—that being the main thing—those desiring to part with their surplus will exepdite matters by sending on at once.

* * *

No gentleman can excuse himself nor hope to command the respects of his fellows who employs opprobrious epithets which in the least compromise the fair name of mother or sister.

* * *

Up to within a day or two, so far as the public were aware, the chances for Presidential possibilities in 1908 were all with champions of the old school of politics, but the startling though welcome information is received that Mr. Charles Vaden Barton, now of the Bindery, G. P. O., D. C., formerly of Butler, Pendleton County, Kentucky, has resolved to enter the race as an independent candidate and as "the only man who knows how to bring about the Millenium—that is, to make perfect peace and happiness on earth." What is most commendable in Mr. Barton is the fact that he has taken the dear people into his confidence by the promulgation of a platform which to be appreciated must be seen and to be seen requires only the outlay of two cents, which will secure a copy of the Millenium with full instructions and indicating the locality of the band-wagon. Nothing since the Carl Brown-Coxey oncoming has taken such hold on the electorate of the District of Columbia as this, and it is bound to spread.

"SADIE MAGUIRE" REPLIES

The Editor of the Western Laborer Gives a Roland for an Oliver.

HOT STUFF ON I. T. U. MATTERS

The Story of the Donnelly Campaign—Kennedy Gives Some Pointed Facts—Shelby Smith Gets in With a Few Remarks on a Mythical Organization.

In the current issue of the Western Laborer "Sadie Maguire" takes Secretary Bramwood, editor of the I. T. U. Journal, to task for an article that appeared in the Journal last month, and which was a general reply to all that Frank A. Kennedy had charged against John W. Bramwood and a little gentle roast of Kennedy by Bramwood.

As a rejoinder Mr. Kennedy endeavored to have an article from his pen appear in the Journal, but Mr. Bramwood refused the space.

As we were not asked to give space to the full article sent out by Mr. Kennedy, not being in full favor with that gentleman for failure to do as he requested on a like occasion to the one in question, we give a portion of the reply to Mr. Bramwood, assuming that our readers who are more or less interested in the controversy have read the Journal article:

Editor Typographical Journal:—Under the heading of "The Policy of the Journal and Kindred Subjects," in the February Journal more than four pages was devoted to a refined and well-written roast or knock on an "editor-member." There is one paragraph in the article the "editor-member" wishes to reply to. It is:

This editor-member would have us believe that he is always actuated by purely disinterested motives in urging his so-called reforms, or the election or defeat of candidates for International office—that he seeks the advancement of union interests alone. But our members may view this saint-like attitude with suspicion. The editor of the Journal is familiar with at least one instance in which the pure-minded patriot levied tribute by submitting a bill to a candidate who was seeking re-election to an important office in the I. T. U., asking payment for matter published in the printing trades columns of his paper favorable to the interests of said candidate, and its circulation throughout the jurisdiction. And there may be many others. Our opinion was asked regarding this bill when it was presented during the campaign a few years ago, and we did not hesitate to denounce it as "a hold-up, pure and simple." We are not likely to forget this incident, and can make affidavit to it and present corroborative evidence, if necessary.

There is no occasion to get any affidavits to corroborate the only charge in the four-page article. I plead guilty to sending a bill to the gentleman referred to. It was a "dead horse," but not "a hold-up." If there was any "holding-up" in that case it was done by "Editor-Member" Bramwood. Had Mr. Bramwood permitted the gentleman to have used the Journal to defend his official acts just as Mr. Bramwood has done in the February issue, he would have been re-elected to the office for which he was a candidate.

It will be recalled that the other knockers in the I. T. U. were mercilessly bombarding him all over the country. The Pittsburg fiasco, or runaway, was all charged up to him. The country was flooded with printed matter attacking his official acts, and you, Mr. Bramwood, would not permit him to defend those official acts in the Journal. He was compelled to put up a defense elsewhere. He requested The Laborer to print his statement, which filled four and one-half columns front page space, circulate the same and send him the bill. He did not buy the space and you knew it when you wrote that lie in your article.

I know it is contrary to the ethics of some unions and union men to pay a labor paper money for doing anything.

For instance: The I. T. U. has spent $26,000 in the fight on the Los Angeles Times. For two years letters were sent to all the labor papers containing the best possible knocks on Otis and the Times. There are about 150 labor papers in the country and the space occupied by those letters cost each editor an average of fifty cents for composition; that would be $300 per month; $3,600 per year, or more than $7,000 for the two years this campaign was kept up. Of the $26,000 spent on the Times fight the labor editors, who were doing all the advertising, did not get one cent. Why? Simply because it has always been the notion among union men that labor papers are run to print what official organ editors lack the moral courage to print for fear of making enemies and jeopardizing their jobs.

During the eleven months' strike of the Union Pacific shopmen The Laborer printed 250 columns of matter in the interest of the strikers; and, come to think of it, the official organ of the Machinists' union pursued the same dignified policy during that long struggle as our own Journal has pursued for the past two years. It was loaded to the guards with pipe dreams and "moon beating" stories, while the labor paper was putting itself on the railroads' blacklist, receiving resolutions and kind words—and burning soft coal at the editor's home.

Do I understand you to mean, Mr. Bramwood, that it is a crime for a labor editor to charge for composition, press work, paper, postage and mailing? Because you refused to permit this I. T. U. officer to defend his official acts in the official paper, does it necessarily follow that the editor of The Western Laborer is bound to print his statement and pay the expense of the same? Did you ever do that for any candidate, Mr. Bramwood? Is it a virtue for you, Mr. Bramwood, to accept $2,200 per year for editing the Journal and a crime for a labor editor to ask pay for anything he might print in his paper?

I am interested in seeing the union win the eight-hour day. I paid no particular attention to the policy of the Journal until after I had learned the game of the Parryites. They mean to destroy every union in America if they can. They destroyed twenty-four unions in Omaha in less than six months, because the unions were caught unprepared and knew nothing about the new enemy. The Parryites have learned our tricks in carrying on a fight and improved on them in many respects. They can whip the I. T. U. in the eight-hour struggle if the unions pursue the same tactics in use previous to the organization of the Parryites. Yourself and Mr. Lynch cannot win the eight-hour strike. The victory will be won or lost by the local unions, because no one expects you to do anything but count money, and Mr. Lynch cannot be on a hundred battlefields at the same time, and you both cannot "con" a victory from the employers with your dignity. You know, or ought to know, what the Parryites are doing. So ought every member who reads the Journal. I never felt as sure of anything as I do that the information you have of the Parryites, if given to the members, will make them grit their teeth, save their money from now till January 1, 1906, and then every man of them would fight to win.

Shelby Smith, in The Trade Union News, throws additional light on the Donnelly campaign, alluded to above, and evidently knows how the opposition won out, for it is within the memory of all good union men that the campaign mentioned was the worst ever conducted in the annals of latter day I. T. U. history.

We quote from Trades Union News:

The incident referred to in the letter which Mr. Bramwood characterized as a "hold-up" was in the matter of the publication of a defense of Samuel B. Donnelly, president of the I. T. U. in 1900, and a candidate for re-election, and was a reply to the infamous falsehoods circulated—chiefly through the columns of the Chicago Federalist—by Lynch, Bramwood and the balance of the inside bunch who had nominated Lynch at their caucus in Detroit.

It will be remembered that the "secret" archives of the I. T. U., in custody of Secretary Bramwood, and to which Lynch as a member of the Executive Council had access, were "stolen" and furnished to the Associated Press. The records were so garbled that President Donnelly was placed in a false light before the membership, and contributed largely to his defeat and Lynch's election.

Publishers of the Chicago Federalist were sending thousands of copies of that paper containing the most infamous slanders against Donnelly and in the interest of Lynch week after week all over the country.

It was in Donnelly's defense that the Laborer published several articles, at Donnelly's request, says Kennedy, and a considerable number of papers furnished and mailed, for which the bill alluded to was presented.

Death of E. Dunbar Klopfer.

E. Dunbar Klopfer, a member of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, died at noon Thursday, after a comparatively short illness. He was on the temporary roll of compositors in the G. P. O., and was well known down town, where he spent the best days of his life.

Deceased was one of the sons of the late Judge Klopfer, well known as an old resident of this city.

Victims of the Russ-Jap war are now numbered by hundreds of thousands. And it is a source of considerable satisfaction to reflect that this remarkable slaughter has taken place with scarcely any infraction of the rules of civilized warfare.

There are some critics who think that Charles W. Pafflow should have chosen a purely English title for his thrilling tale of revolutionary life in Russia. But they will at least admit that "By Zimniy Dvoretz!" may be put to good use as a substitute for bad language in an emergency.

Among the things likely to reflect glory on the Roosevelt administration will be the general recognition of the short work-day as an essential feature of American civilization. And this is no jest.

Sutton's reply to Gunn and Belcher would seem to indicate that the "black-eyed devil" would like to roam at large as the Adam of an Eden full of Eves.

General Sherman Bell has been making further anarchistic remarks about what he has done and what he is ready to do as a strike-breaker. It is hardly necessary to add that Bell is cracked.

Men who do things seldom pose as professional critics.

It is quite likely that Dr. Osler would have taken a sober second thought if he had been familiar with the Swampoodle School of Literature.

Having recovered entirely from Bloomer's vicious dig, Charley Gunn (as McPike would remark) now sings a sweet apple chorus weekly.

Old Geronimo feels hurt because he is not permitted to return to his boyhood's happy home. And really, now, honest Injun, it does look rather tough to keep him separated from that loved spot when we consider the fond recollections and sweet and holy associations which cluster around it.

Election time is drawing near, which suggests the thought that it is a pity that candidates —at least some candidates—are not as pleasant and genial all the time as they are during the strenuous struggle for votes. If the wreathed smiles and glad hands and unctuous flattery and kindly deportment generally of all Christian gentlemen who seek the bubble reputation at the ballot-box could be spread over the whole year, Paradise would just about exist right here and now.

At all events it is to be hoped that the business of building the Panama Canal will be conducted on the level whether it is a sea-level waterway or not.

* * *

As a further evidence of his cleverness and versatility A. F. Bloomer has written the words of a song set to music by Professor Bischof, entitled "Hurrah for the Man Who Dies!" And it's not a swan song, either.

There will be nobody to object to making April 30 Inauguration Day. The change will add to the comfort and pleasure of those desirable for sanitary reasons. And furthermore it may add to the jocundity of the inaugural poets.

ALLIED PRINTING TRADES UNION LABEL COUNCIL WASHINGTON. 2

Only Eight-Hour Union Office in Town.

THURSDAY, MARCH 16, 1905.

A Lamentable Failure.

The recent attempt to win a strike on the New York elevated and subway roads proved disappointing to the leaders of the strike. One feature of the conduct of the strike that stands out in bold relief was the refusal of the International officers of the bodies represented to sanction the strike while agreements with the company were still in force. It has taken time and a fund of patience to instill that principle into the wage-earner that large employers of labor will never recognize or respect an organization that violates an agreement.

It may happen, and possibly very frequently happens, that the employer breaks an agreement, but it is no reason why the Union should not maintain its credit and honor by living up to all its agreements.

Another feature of the recent strike is worthy of passing notice. The strike-breaker is being displaced by the man whose place he filled not entirely to the satisfaction of the company. His inefficiency is always his greatest stock in trade. A wreck of humanity, he preys on the misfortunes of his fellow. Opportunity to him only presents itself when trouble stalks in the land. And like a cast-off garment, when the employer who uses him as a tool to destroy the effect of an endeavor on the part of his employees to rise above the conditions that encompass them, he is then thrown aside to be called for at another time. The dupe of so-called employment agents, who fatten on his duplicity, taking the lion share of the corruption fund given to destroy the spirit of independence among men, the strike breaker goes back to his hole like a jackal to wait the call of opportunity to feast on the vitals of his fellow.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

We are not alone in our credit associations, for Boston has one, composed, as ours are, of printers; in fact, their membership is limited by their constitution to the Allied Printing Trades. Their capital stock consists of 400 shares of $25 each, of which no member may own more than two, each share to have one vote at meetings. The members may borrow money of the association at 5 per cent per month, and indorse for non-members upon assuming full responsibility for the payment of the loan. It gives orders upon merchants, having a regular scale by which payments shall be made weekly. In January and July of each year dividends are declared of profits. Of course no interest is charged upon orders upon merchants, the latter paying a percentage upon purchases. It thus combines the business of credit association and "sym," as the money-loaning associations are known here. The ability to get in debt is a drawback to some men, but the accommodation it provides in general more than makes up for this evil. Long experience has shown that some means must be provided for salaried people and wage-earners to anticipate pay day. If not by associations charging moderate interest for loans and by other associations assuming responsibility for collections for goods bought on credit (in the Boston case both businesses are combined), the Shylock is resorted to, with the blood-sucking rapacity that must accompany unsecured loans, on the one hand, or too often unliquidated indebtedness for goods bought on credit, on the other. I regard both classes of business as advantageous to wage-earners, considering conditions as they are and not as they ought to be, and an evil only to the class of irresponsibles whose normal state is that of debtor, who buy more than they ought to, and who would fall into worse hands were these means not available. By the way, I have little sympathy with the man who is always complaining of the extortion of Shylocks, for the reason that the debtor is the one who makes the application to get into their clutches; he borrows their money on their terms, and only realizes the enormity of their rapacity when paying or evading payment. A money lender who makes loans without security at less than 10 per cent a month would not last six months. He must make those who pay, pay for those who do not, harsh as it sounds.

A list of the officers of the Printing Trades Purchasing Association of Boston will doubtless interest the Bostonians located here. It is as follows: President, Percy B. S. Thayer, Herald; vice-president, Edward E. McDonald, Post; treasurer, Albert V. Losea, Globe Building; secretary, Julian C. Cutler, Post.

* * * *

Dr. Osler is a fool
When he his dictum hurls!
Has he ne'er been to opera
And seen the ballet girls?

Has he ne'er seen the giddy star
Of English opera bouffe
Whose kick is only limited
By distance to the roof?

Has he ne'er heard the Wimodaugh-Sis sisters bind in spell?
Knows he no lady journalist?
No eighteenth-season belle?

The Mothers' Congress knows he not—
That noble, noble band
Whose product is the nation's hope
To populate the land?

Nor yet the ladies of the choir,
Who sing grace into souls,
Then graduate into opera
Ere old age o'er them rolls?

But hold! What Dr. Osler said
He only said of men;
He merely of the old cock spoke,
And never of the hen!

So we may keep our ballet girls—
Our bouffistes need no go!
But get thee hence, bald-headed men
Who sit in the front row!

There are few, I imagine, of the readers of THE TRADES UNIONIST who have any idea of the magnitude of the business which has been built up by the International Textbook Company, of Scranton, Pa., known as the International Correspondence Schools, which teaches all branches of industrial science by mail. There are branch offices in every large city of the United States, besides some in foreign countries, and in almost every village and hamlet the company has a representative. Each one of these offices uses from 1,000 to 25,000 pieces of special advertising matter every month, besides that furnished in a regular way from the main office at Scranton, a fact which is of interest to members of our craft, in connection with which the following order in a circular letter issued by the president of the company to the field force will be interesting:

All printed matter that superintendents are authorized to have done from time to time, and all printed matter that they have done for themselves, bearing the name of the International Correspondence Schools or the International Text-Book Company, must be printed in union offices and must bear the typographical union label when possible. This rule is imperative and no exceptions must be made to it.

T. J. FOSTER, President.

The company owns and operates one of the largest and most up-to-date printing establishments in the country, and it is conducted as a strictly union office, but so extensive is its business that its agents and superintendents are necessitated to have much printing done in the different cities, an evidence of which is that in the past six months there have been printed and circulated in this city 65,000 pieces of special advertising matter—a fact which makes the order of the president above given important. The company has over 750,000 students and graduates throughout the country, of whom over 5,000 live in the District, which gives an idea of the magnitude of its business. It will be gratifying to trades unionists everywhere that this great enterprise is "union to the core."

Charles E. Clark, a reader in the Job Division, is reported to be critically ill with kidney trouble. Mr. Clark was formerly superintendent of the Union Printers' Home, at Colorado Springs, Colo., and is well known throughout the country. He has been sick much of the time during the past winter.

* * * *

The Progressive Printer warns printers to keep away from St. Petersburg, owing to the unsettled condition of the trade there. I am glad to repeat this timely warning just at this time, when so many temporaries have been "let out" at the G. P. O.

* * * *

W. N. Brockwell has so far recovered from his tough tussle with erysipelas that he is expected to be able to go to work by the middle of the week. His illness continued over three weeks.

* * *

W. S. Hennen, of the Record Proof Room, has been quite ill for a couple of weeks with quinsy. At latest accounts he was making a safe recovery.

* * * *

John R. Moss, of the Record Proof Room, returned to work the first of the week, after a siege with tonsilitis lasting a week or so.

* * * *

The sales of shares in the National Mutual Finance and Investment Company are going on satisfactorily, although, owing to the unsettled condition attendant on the adjournment of Congress, there has not been the systematic canvass made which there will be. The shares of stock are $2 a month, payable on the 1st and 15th, and it is intended to be an institution for small investments. There could be no more capable officers than it has —F. Homer Melick, president; August Donath, secretary, and B. W. Bonney, treasurer.

* * * *

The March number of the Typographical Journal is a tribute to Editor John W. Bramwood's appreciation of what its readers want and shows him to be a really able journalist. It gives the printing news of the world, as well as an epitome of what other trades unionists are doing, and as a magazine of union printing it is pleasing to all except those whose taste runs to the Dogfighter's Own style of labor journalism.

* * * *

Harry Humble finally found an owner for the Shriner's pin which he found some weeks ago. It was dropped by a visitor to the G. P. O., to whom, after correct description, it was restored.

* * *

March 26 is the latest date I have heard assigned for the issue of the Sunday Star. While I have long had a faint suspicion that the Star might be improved from a literary as well as a journalistic standpoint, I have no doubt that the new Sunday Star will be a conspicuous success. The drawback to a mammoth Saturday evening paper is that people do not have time to read it until Sunday, and then they have later papers in the Post and Times, and nobody wants to read a paper a day old in the town in which it is printed. I hope the Star may be made so good a paper that the others will haye to hump themselves to keep in sight, and one thing that has got to be done in order to that end is to enter the market and buy what ever good stuff is for sale instead of depending on the staff for special articles. No newspaper can afford to rely solely on its staff in these strenuous journalistic days.

* * * *

Charlie Gunn chortles with glee because the Linotype Bulletin, published by the Mergenthaler Linotype Company, reproduced his slop, "The Operator's Dream," written under the influence of a posterior blow from a sour apple. That was only done, Charlie, to show that they can set anything on the machine.

* * * *

I met John R. Risdon on the street the other day—the first time I have seen him in fifteen or twenty years. He is in the chicken business out at Riverdale, and making money. It is a dozen years or so since he retired from the printing business. Time has been lenient with him and has made no heavy demands on his personal beauty. He is another evidence of the fact that a printer can make a success of anything he undertakes.

* * * *

I realized long years ago that if you step on a man's religious corns, even though you did not know his feet were there, he is going to rise in his might and smite you hip and thigh. It seems to be the strongest human passion to defend religious faith, even though the defender never practices any of its tenets. He may never have given any other religion a show—in fact, I never knew a fierce religious partisan who had—in order to see if its adherents had any ground for their faith. But how can a man feel sure that his is the true religion if he has not investigated others nor applied his reasoning powers to their claims? It must be because no religion is based on reason—all require blind belief. If you look for documentary evidence you find little to support any church's claim outside of its own literature, which at the best only makes out an ex parte case, to be disputed by the adherents of all other churches. It is a great misfortune that none of the literature contemporaneous with Christ makes any reference to Him except the writings of the Jew Josephus, and he only briefly—"About this time there came a man (if, indeed, it be lawful to call him a man) called Jesus," etc.—I do not feel at all sure of the correctness of any quotation, for it has been a quarter of a century at least since I have seen it. But this the Jews repudiate and declare to have been a Christian interpolation—that Josephus never wrote anything of the sort. Now, what are we to believe about it? Why, if we are Christians we must and undoubtedly will believe our own witness (we having called him); if we are Jews we will insist with them that somebody has falsified the record. But what is such testimony worth to the unbiased juryman whom we are trying to convince? It results in our getting back where we started—that all religious faith is a matter of mixed blind belief and emotion. So why should we get vexed with those who may not have our powers of faith—who want something more than "I believe it 'cause my mammy told me so" and try to torture everything they have said or done into something mean and ignoble? I don't know. Do you?

* * * *

Somebody signing the name "H. Bradford" filed a kick in Tuesday's Star against the sort of treatment accorded to the public by the Lady Vultures' Mount Vernon Association. (It is rare that anybody writes to the Star except "Old Subscriber," "Vox Populi," "Citizen," etc.; so this name alone is refreshing.) The party of which he was a member were required to check their lunch boxes on the arrival of the steamer, as lunches were not permitted on the grounds. (Of course not; do they not have sloppy garbage stands on the grounds?) After satiating their curiosity, on returning to the boat they were told that the only place they could regale themselves on their hand-me-outs was in the lounging room of the coon roustabouts. It is time that the Government took possession of Mount Vernon and rescued the public from the harpies who now control it. Their rapacity is disgusting. A visitor from thousands of miles away may not even pick up a pebble as a memento of the visit, but they will sell you all sorts of fake souvenirs. I have no doubt one could buy a bone of Washington if he were to ask for it—not a real bone of the Father of His Country, of course, but one they would certificate as such. As long as the Tomb of Washington is a source of income to this gang of screws, so long will it continue to disgust people. No Washingtonian ever goes there except to gratify a visitor; they are sick of the extortions and the annoying regulations.

Seriously Burned.

A little child of Mr. A. J. Wadsworth, of Specifications, was seriously burned about the breast and neck three or four weeks since when its clothing came in contact with flames from an oil stove. The little fellow was treated at home until the greater danger was over and then was removed to Garfield Hospital, where the experiment of grafting new skin was begun. While the burns were of a serious nature it is now believed that all danger is past and that only slight traces of the accident will remain.

GOSSIP FROM THE G. P. O.

Official Gazette.

R. H. Harstin has been transferred from the Night Force to this Division.

J. F. Smart, who was confined to his home for several days by an attack of grippe, has returned to work.

Our printer girls were in the strike of the stevedores or freighters at Havana, and were delayed twenty-four hours in leaving that port in consequence. Miss Booth has written some very interesting letters to friends, which would be excellent material for a "leader," but limited space will not permit of such treatment of the subject-matter. I therefore take the liberty of garbling a few extracts from these entertaining missives:

The first stop after leaving St. Augustine, Fla., where we saw the old slave market; the Ponce de Leon hotel, with its beautiful surroundings; the Plaza; the oldest house in the United States; the narrowest street, where persons particularly interested in one another may "hold hands" without the formality of crossing the street, and the alligator farm, which boasts a saurian that has reached the ripe old age of three hundred years and is a monster in size. As his home is near the Fountain of Youth he will probably live forever. On Cordova street the head of an old Indian Chief is carved in a rock and the following inscription is under it:

NOTIS.
THIS WERRY ELABORATE PILE
IS ERECTED IN MEMERY
OF TOLOMATO
A SEMINOLE INGINE CHEEF WHOOS
WIGWARM STUUD ON THIS SPOT AND SIRROUNDINGS
WE CHERRIS HIS MEMERY
AS HE WAS A GOOD HARTED CHEEF
HE WOOD NOT TAKE YOOUR
SKALP WITHOUT YOU BEGGED HIM TO DO SO OR PADE HIM SUM MUNNY
HE ALWAYS AKTED MORE LIKE A CHRISTSHUN
GENTLEMAN THAN A
SAVAGE INGINE
LET HIM R. I. P.

Lastly the Fountain of Youth, discovered by Ponce de Leon, was visited. One glass of its golden-hued fluid is guaranteed to make you two years younger and restore all of your lost happiness. We drank the full limit, which is three glasses. We are not going to tell how far back this sets us on the age calendar, but we left there feeling just "sweet sixteen."

We arrived in Havana, after experiencing the horrors of seasickness incident to the sea trip, in time to view the unveiling of a statue of General Marti, which was part of a Cuban Fourth of July celebration. The old fort was visited and the guillotine block, armor, dungeons, etc., inspected; a Cuban dance given by a swell social club and participated in by all of the dignitaries and the Cuban Four Hundred was attended; also a jai-alai game, with imported players from Paris who receive $5,000 in money; and to cap the climax a Cuban funeral, with its, to us, strange trappings and customs.

Our kodak has been our constant companion on all of our sight-seeing trips. The motormen are very accommodating. One stopped the car for us to get a picture of some stately palms that appealed to our artistic taste. He did not speak English, however, and we experienced some difficulty in making him understand. Finally we hit on the happy plan of pulling his coat sleeve and making signs, which gave the desired result. Monday we will visit Moro Castle, when we will have finished Havana. We leave Tuesday, by steamer, for New Orleans and the Mardi Gras.

The Official Gazette force has been called all sorts of names, "Annex," "Side Show," "Gaze-at," etc., but the limit is about reached in an article in the G. P. O. Mutual Relief Manual, from The Electrical World and Engineer, where the Patent Office Gazette is referred to as "Liebig's Extract of Inventions."

M. W. Barr of our Proof Room, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of his wedding on March 1, at the residence of his son, J. C. Barr, when he and his good lady received the congratulations of numerous friends and relatives. Many handsome and appropriate presents were received by the happy couple.

SMOOT AND SMUT.

Betwixt the Congressional Record, as printed of late,
And a nasty old novel, the distinction is great;
Yet in the one you could Reed Smoot on almost ev'ry page,
While in t'other you'd read smut that's a disgrace to the age. —M. A. MCPIKE.

GOSSIP FROM THE G. P. O.

First Division.

"Miss Emma" disposed of many packages of delicious homemade candy on Tuesday noon.

"None die and few resign" don't go in this Division—two resignations during the past week.

Col. Z. T. Jenkins, recently of the Night Force, is taking a few days' leave—much-needed rest.

We are pleased to learn that Geo. J. Woodgate, who has been very ill the past few weeks, is slightly improved.

E. S. Wild, recently of the Night Force, is the latest addition to J. C. Lesher's bunch—which numbers seven.

Why don't that bunch over on the G street side "cut out" that chorus. Get your water, saw wood, but don't sing.

Business at the lunch counter, fruit stand and milk fountain has noticeably improved since the addition to the day forces.

The "Y" is a busy department in this Division. But Mr. Leavitt and his corps of assistants are equal to every demand.

Wm. McFarlane, imposer, returned to work on Monday, having recovered from his recent sickness. Glad to see you back.

Mr. George H. Norton, and ex-employee, visited the Division during the week, and was warmly greeted by his old friends.

Judging from the crowds of visitors passing through this Division daily, the excursionists are in no hurry to leave Washington.

T. J. Waterman, assistant to maker-up Haworth represents slug 108, Voler V. Viles, assistant to Maker-up Wallace, succeeding to 114.

On Monday Chief Machinist James W. Hughes superintended the shipment of a press formerly used in the Bill Room to Foreman Constantine, of the Treasury Branch.

Yes, it's all over, and, of course, there are some disappointments, bound to be. But what's the use, cheer up—$4 per is mighty good, and a sure thing on your pay envelope.

Bruce Bielaski, an attache of Assistant Foreman Spottswood's room, has been transferred from the laborers to the helpers roll. Glad to record this deserved promotion.

A number of the members of this chapel have been afflicted with carbuncles. Our candidate for delegate, P. S. Steele, tells us that is the cause of the absence of his colleague, E. M. Root.

"Immoralized" is a new word, suggested by Simon Pocher, in referring to the absent-mindedness of a well-known gentleman who had met with a "glass" accident. Wonder if he didn't mean "demoralized?"

Another resignation, E. R. Gaither, a laborer in this Division for a year or two, resigned during the week. Someone remarked he has gone West—to the State of Washington, where a situation awaits his arrival.

A few slugs were juggled at the close of work on Saturday and this was the result: Mr. Durisoe went to 70 wf. (window frame), Frank Burnside to 41 mf (middle frame), S. E. Mullan 133 ef (end frame) and Lee Hartley to 12 oef (outside-end frame).

From a recent circular issued by the Civil Service Commission we learn that all temporary compositors will be placed on the eligible roll this spring, without undergoing an examination by conforming to certain requirements. This is justice to our temporary friends.

Scarcely had the echo of the whistle ceased on Monday afternoon, when Frank D. Smith, candidate for delegate appeared in the room. There are those who predict that Frank will carry the credentials. Mr. Smith is exceedingly popular and has hosts of friends who will vote for him.

S. G. Wise, of the Fifth Division, who has been transferred to the Weather Bureau, and stationed in Philadelphia, Pa., was in the room on Monday noon, bidding his old friends farewell. We are informed that Sam formerly belonged to this Chapel. His friends wish him prosperity in his new location.

Before the morning hour expired on Monday, Harry Knapp, a down-town candidate for delegate to Toronto in August, appeared in this Division, and was warmly greeted by his many friends. Mr. Knapp made a good run last year, and there are some prognosticators who say he is a sure-winner this time.

The Manual of the Government Printing Office Association for 1904 has just been issued. During the week Messrs. Lesher and Lillard distributed copies to the members in this Division. It is a fine publication, equal to those of previous years, and has been favorably commented upon. It was issued by the Sudworth Printing Company.

On Tuesday, Frank Hayslip, one of the remaining eight temporary compositors in this Division, resigned. Mr. Hayslip is a citizen of Columbus, Ohio, and has been appointed to the Weather Bureau service in that city, having taken the Civil Service examination some months ago. The best wishes of his friends in this room follow him to his new field of labor.

* * * *

It was not the unexpected, but the long-expected, that happened at the close of work on the Night Force on Sunday morning, when the force was discontinued.

Foreman C. E. Young was assigned to the office of Foreman of Printing; Messrs. James H. Ross, John E. Greene and Z. T. Jenkins, rated as revisers, were transferred to the Proof Room; the makers-up, imposers, compositors, and laborers were transferred to the several divisions.

As far as we were able to learn, our Division has been augmented by the following persons:

From the First Division, Night: Make-up James K. Wallace; Imposer T. M. Donn; Compositors: C. C. Auracher, George E. Breitenbach, C. W. Burnett, A. M. Butler, James Carville, W. F. Council, W. F. Crump, J. H. Edsall, Frank A. Everts, A. L. Huss, C. D. Johnson, James Kane, John Kiernan, S. W. Langford, T. E. McCardell, John A. Onyun, C. P. Peake, John J. Quinn, B. A. Reid, George H. Sehorn, R. P. Townsend, George A. Tuttle, Voler V. Viles, Stephen Th. Westdal, Chas. Wilhelm, and E. S. Wild. Laborers: R. N. Carter, John T. Howe, and Courtenay C. Thayer.

From Night Proof Room: L. D. Brandon, J. Walker Miller, and J. Fred. Orth,

From Day Proof Room: H. J. Smith, Will H. Way, and W. F. White.

From Specification: John J. Ray.

Kinsey Brewer, messenger in the Night Proof Room, has been assigned to the room of the Assistant Foreman of Printing.

The members of this chapel should remember that we have a candidate for delegate, Mr. Philip S. Steele, who should receive, as he deserves, our cordial support. The following pertinent paragraph in the current number of the Typographical Journal, appeared in the Albany, N. Y., letter, and bears on the "grand old man's" candidacy:

Albany members wish all possible success to Philip S. Steele, of Columbia Union, in his canvass as delegate to the Toronto convention this year. Mr. Steele is an old Albanian and an ex-member of No. 4, one who took a prominent part in our union affairs a quarter of a century ago, and represented No. 4 at the St. Louis convention in 1874, having for a colleague George W. Walker, who is still holding down cases in the Hamilton street branch of the J. B. Lyon Company. Here is hoping you win, Brother Steele.

So say we all. There certainly would be "something doing" if those "Albany members" could exercise their right of suffrage in this jurisdiction.

Second Division.

The Night Bill Force is with us, 36 of them.

Billy Edmunds has the game look of a man who has stood a protracted siege on the Night Spess.

Mr. P. M. Wallace, (slug 7) resigned his position, and has gone to Kentucky to edit a paper there.

Homer Melick of the Spess, makes the rounds now and then. He is a born financier and expert chess and checker player.

Lem Miller carries two pocket pieces—an American silver trade dollar and a Mexican silver dollar. Perhaps Lem hankers after the defunct 16 to 1 silver ratio.

"Blud" Thornton has a before and after remedy. Looking at his present avoirdupois, it is hard to prognosticate what he will look like after he quits taking it.

Miss Laura Gordon, of the Specification Division, has acknowledged the receipt of and thanked the donors of this Division for a collection taken for the benefit of a sick brother.

We have numbers of handsome lady lady visitors these days. The theatre is not the only place where bald heads in the front row look for the display of a trim form and neat ankle.

The mighty Ajax of the Spess made his appearance in the First Division at noon hour lately. Ajax is now a machine man, and sets both regular and Gazette copy on a Lanston.

Most of the wear and tear, rush and push incident to the work of this Division during the Congressional session has ceased, but nevertheless the closing days of a turn-in keep everybody hustling in pursuit of the frisky average.

Chairman Trudgian had a more serious illness than was supposed, but at last reports was improving. His genial presence is greatly missed. Since writing the foregoing Tuesday evening we learned he has had a serious relapse.

I had occasion to refer to Mr. J. I. Keefer in a former issue, and will again take the liberty of stating that he is a relative of the great Washington. Mr. Keefer served as one of the Inaugural committee, and is the proud possessor of a bronze medal, commemorative of the day on which the President was installed.

Pard Bloomer, "Cycle," et al., seem to be engaged in an all around mix-up. It sounds real sassy to hear Pard (figuratively) invite Cycle to "slap him on the wrist." Redfield has the chance of his life. An able cartoon of Pard with a chip on his shoulder, and "Cycle," or some other belligerent wearing the "mits," would be real funny. "What fools these mortals be!"

Third Division.

George C. Sparks now has charge of the italic distribution, Kinsolving's old job.

R. H. Pegues has been promoted to the lead and slug racks, vice Chas. S. Davis, resigned.

W. A. Kinsolving is now on frame 25, having fallen heir to Walter Brooks' place in the ring alley.

Mr. George Norton, formerly of the Second Division, now a prosperous newspaper man of Winchester, Va., was in the city last Friday.

C. E. Clarke, of the Main Proof Room, formerly Superintendent of the Printer's Home at Colorado Springs, is reported to be dangerously ill at his home.

Some of these stories the "rumor committee" put out remind one of the old story about the man who drove a nail through the moon and the other man who stood on the other side and clinched it.

The following, from Monday's Star, will be news to some of us:

After the many vicissitudes of the office of chairman of the Third Division it, is said to be a relief to find that the present chairman, J. E. Goodkey, will have no opposition at the next election.

I wish the fellow who writes copy for Revised Statutes side notes would get a pencil with a sharper point. Frequently there are times when one can not possibly guess what is intended to be written without the help afforded by the text.

From Bloomer's earnestness in suggesting that "Belcher looking for his apples and mourning because they were not" would be "a corker" as a subject for a cartoon, I am led to the suspicion that his ghoulish glee at such a prospect may be inspired by his having partaken of forbidden fruit himself. A fellow feeling makes us wondrous kind, you know.

A series of very interesting Sunday evening services is now being held at the Church of Our Father, 13th and L street N. W. A feature of each service is an address by the pastor, John Van Schaick, Jr., on some historical or literary topic, the last of which will be given March 26. On the three following Sunday evenings Mr. Van Schaick will give stereopticon lectures, ending the course with a vesper service on Easter Sunday. The subject for Sunday evening, March 19, will be: "Ian MacLaren and his work for literature and religion."

Twenty-three temporary hands were dropped from the roll during the week ending March 6. Saturday night, March 11, witnessed the dissolution of the First and Second Divisions, Night, known as the Night Bill Force, and on Monday morning the ex-Nights were scattered throughout the various divisions of the Day Force, twenty-three being assigned to the Third Division. The names and slug numbers of the new acquisitions are as follows: Charles O. Doten, 20; W. B. Tanner, 32; L. J. Bennett, 36; H. J. McClurg, 41; George D. Ellis, 42; W. G. Maxfield, 43; George G. Klinknett, 50; T. B. Hoagland, 55; Fred Harrison, 74; Sam F. Elwood, 77; C. B. Huse, 78; William J. Manning, 80; J. B. Swinburne, 88; E. N. Bunker, 94; F. C. Roberts, 97; Stephen Smith, 99; R. E. King, 100; C. C. Schertzer, 101; William McEneany, 102; Will E. Burchfield, 110; M. A. Bodenhamer, 111; Charles A Durno, 127; Emory B. Buzhardt, 136. The Third is pleased to welcome back into its fold Messrs. Doten, Tanner, Ellis, Bunker, McEneany, and possibly one or two others, some of whom went to the Night Force last fall and others the year before. The well-known F. C. Roberts is an acquisition to our numbers whose prominence in Union matters has brought him into a well-deserved popularity. C. B. Huse was one of the first of my new acquaintances when I arrived in Washington a little over two years ago, at which time he had charge of the ring alley in the Fifth Division, then located in the old building. E. N. Bunker was slug 44 in the famous Alley 7, over in the "Old Second," and retained his number in the "New Third," although in Alley 8, from which he went to the night side. When any of the boys see Bunker some one is sure to shout, "Look out for your rules!" Ask him why. Welcome to the Third, gentlemen! And look out for Chairman Goodkey.

It was my privilege to attend the first "Working People's Popular Concert" given by Miss Marie von Unschuld at National Rifles' Armory last Sunday night. If life and strength will admit, I shall give myself the pleasure of attending also the two remaining concerts of the series. In an entertainment where everything is thoroughly delightful, it is hard to particularize without doing injustice to somebody. That Miss Von Unschuld has kept her word in presenting to the public a remarkable gifted coterie of artists, in a programme of exceptional merit, goes without saying. Whatever her object may be in giving us the privilege of being entertained so very much to our taste for the ridiculously low price set for tickets, we are flying in the face of Providence if we disregard the opportunity. Everybody was heartily applauded, from President Samuel Gompers, who made an introductory speech, to little Misses Katharine MacNeal and Mildred Kolb, who furnished most of the accompaniments, and played them well although neither was out of her teens. The presiding genius, Miss Marie Von Unschuld, fairly electrified the audience by her wonderful work on the piano and was recalled again and again. The contralto solos by Miss Edna Scott Smith, the violin playing of Mr. Lucien H. Conen, and the 'cello solos by Mr. Ernest Lent were all thoroughly enjoyable. It was the sort of concert where you felt "How happy could I be with either, were t'other dear charmer away." And the word to say is "Encore."

Miss Von Unschuld's programme gave "Haendel" as the author of the famous "Largo." If she had asked McCann, no doubt he would have informed her that such spelling was "obsolete." But these Germans obstinately continue to prefer the original spelling of the names of their famous men in spite of all iconoclasts.

J. W. BELCHER.

Sixth Division.

The early part of the week found H. B. Barnhart confined to his home on account of illness.

Inaugural week Chairman "Jack" Hogan and wife entertained six charming young women of Syracuse, N. Y.

The regular meeting of the Union occurs next Sunday. It is certainly to be hoped that no obstacles will be thrown in the way of the completion of the new Constitution.

Miss Carrie L. Whitehead, of the Gazette Proof Room, accompanied by her sister, Mrs. W. F. Bancroft, and nephew, Master Willie Bancroft, of Mobile, Ala., were callers in this Division on Wednesday.

Abe Van Buskirk, machinist-operator on the New Brunswick, (N. J.), Home News, together with his wife, are guests of Louis Lippincott, of this Division, and family. Mr. Van Buskirk paid the big shop a visit this week.

Among the callers on Saturday last was "Billy" Weiss, of the State Branch, accompanied by a Mr. Herbert, of Des Moines, Iowa. Mr. Herbert has recently returned from the Orient, having worked in Hong Kong, China, and the Philippines as a printer.

Harry Knapp, down-town candidate for delegate, was a caller at this office on Monday. During the last campaign Mr. Knapp had the opportunity of forming many personal acquaintances which will undoubtedly prove beneficial to him in the coming campaign.

Last week Timekeeper Chas. W. Radley underwent an operation for a tumorous growth on the second finger of his right hand. The operation was performed by his nephew, a young physician, who was the guest of Dr. Radley and his family during the inauguration.

That was a nice little story in last week's TRADES UNIONIST about the farmer feeding hogs "corn in the ear," and, if true, it clearly demonstrates that the hog is keeping abreast with science, and will be able to take nourishment in spite of anything in the shape of throat trouble.

Owing to circumstances which might possibly prevent my attendance at the Toronto convention were I so fortunate as to be elected at the coming election, I take this occasion to inform the membership of Columbia Union that I will not be a candidate for delegatorial honors this year.

The Sixth Division (as at present constituted) will have at least two candidates in the coming campaign. Chas. W. Radley and Louis Vogt will each seek re-election to membership on the Board of Auditors. Its pretty near a cinch that each will be re-elected—with or without opposition.

On account of the nature of the work on hand last Saturday was devoted to a general cleaning up. This gave rise to the rumor that it was all off with the day force that evening. The Specification Room seems to be a hot favorite among the places selected to which transfers will most likely be made.

D. S. Kennedy, of the Mergenthaler Linotype Co., arrived in the city this week, and is spending the present week looking over the G. P. O machines. Mr. Kennedy also brings with him recently invented attachments which, when applied to the machine, enable the most perfect tabular matter to be produced.

I understand that Philip S. Steele, of the First Division, has decided that he will this year again make the chase for delegatorial honors. Mr. Steele is possessed of rare powers as an orator, and if he succeeds in his desire to represent No. 101, will undoubtedly leave an impression among the Torontonians that he has at least been among them.

"Wouldn't thou, sires, make of everyday life an Adamless Eden?" asks friend Sutton last week. Nay, nay, Maud. Neither wouldst I allow thee to corner the market on the fair Eves as thou seemest to have done in the past. Evidently thou hast had a great time in thy brief life. And not only do I agree with thee and the author who said, "In a woman's arms man finds comfort and consolation; from a woman's arms he lies down to his last long sleep," but I wouldst also add "from a woman's arms he sometimes gets an awful jolt."

Copies of the G. P. O. Mutual Relief Association Manual for 1904 were distributed to members of the Association last week. Organized in 1883 with a membership of 49, the Association has steadily grown until the present membership numbers 1,024. At no time during the life of the Association has it enjoyed greater prosperity than during the past five years under the presidency of Mr. A. W. Bowen, foreman of the First Division. Ninety dollars were paid out in benefits during the first year of its existence, while last year the grand total of $5,440 was distributed to sick members, whose total numbered 174.

NAVY YARD ITEMS.

The following have been reported as sick this week: J. R. King, J. L. Mitchell, C. E. Bolton and John Kane.

H. D. Crocker has been transferred from Ordnance Department to the Bureau of Equipment as draftsman at $4 per diem.

E. R. Vandegrift has been appointed a guide in the Yard, vice W. H. Patterson, who resigned to accept a position in the shops.

An examination will be held at this Yard on March 17 to fill the position of ordnance engineer and computing draftsman at $3,000 per annum.

The Sylph has been ordered to proceed to Jacksonville, Fla., on special duty, upon completion of which she will return back to this station.

Admiral Higginson, Commandant of the Yard, left Monday for Florida. He will be absent until April 1. In the meantime Captain Pendleton will act as Commandant.

Lieut. R. C. Bulmer has been granted leave for two weeks from March 6. Lieutenant Bulmer on that date married Miss Anita Poor and they are now enjoying their honeymoon.

The Seamen Gunners Class gave another of their successful dances last Friday evening. The usual large assemblage of friends enjoyed themselves, and by their presence made the members of the class feel doubly happy. An elaborate and interesting program of dances was offered, followed by refreshments.

Acting Gunner R. M. O'Connor has been ordered to duty at Coaster's Harbor. The instructors of the Seamen Gunners Class gave a theater party in honor of Mr. O'Connor, afterward escorting him to the depot, where he received a final three cheers, with a tiger, in addition to the good wishes from his former companions.

Commander W. F. Halsey, Secretary of the Navy Athletic Association, has recently addressed a letter of inquiry to the advisability of charging admission to the next year's foot ball games, and devoting the proceeds to the purchase of permanent athletic grounds. So far the replies indicate favorable consideration of the matter. The location will be in the vicinity of Philadelphia.

Columbia Lodge, No. 174, I. A. of M., had an interesting meeting Wednesday evening. After initiating several new members, the question of the Government furnishing contractors jigs and ternplates free of cost was taken up for discussion.

It appears from the evidence that the Navy Department has for some time been furnishing contractors doing ordnance work with jigs and ternplates made by experts in the Ordnance Shops at the expense of the Government, said work charged to ordnance work done in the Yard.

It is claimed by some that this places the workmen in the Yard at a disadvantage; that all jigs and ternplates made for use in the Yard are charged against the cost of the work, whereas the contractor, by having jigs and ternplates furnished him free, only figures on the cost of construction.

The question will be further discussed and there is a possibility that the matter will be brought to the attention of Congress at its next session, not in the nature of a complaint, but to provide a separate fund for this work, to enable the authorities in the Yard to compete with the contractor in a just and equitable manner, or in other words, if the authorities in the Yard are compelled to add to the cost of manufacturing Ordnance, the cost of jigs and ternplates, so should the contractor be compelled to reimburse the Government the actual cost of same when made by the Government for the contractor's use.

* * * *

One of my dyspeptic friends in the Yard who is fast passing into a pessimistic state, recently asked me for a recipe for indigestion. I gave him one I have used for half a century and always found it unfailing.

It is—

A HEARTY LAUGH.

Did you ever think what a capital, kindly, honest, jolly, glorious thing a good laugh is! What a tonic! What a digester! What a exorciser of evil spirits! Better than a walk before breakfast, or a nap after dinner. How it shuts the mouth of malice, and opens the brow of kindness, whether it discovers the gums of age, the grinders of folly, or the pearls of beauty, whether it racks the sides and deforms the countenance of vulgarity, or dimples the visage or moistens the eye of refinement, in all its phases, and on all faces, contorting, relaxing, overwhelming, convulsing, throwing the human form into the happy shaking and quaking of idiocy, and turning the human countenance into something appropriate to Sam Devere's transformation.

Under every circumstance and everywhere a laugh is a glorious thing. Like a "thing of beauty" it is a "joy forever."

There is no remorse in it. It leaves no sting except in the sides, and that goes off. Even a single unparticipated laugh is a great affair to witness. But it is seldom single. It is more infectious than scarlet fever or "Oslercitis." You cannot gravely contemplate a laugh. If there is one laugher and one witness there are forthwith two laughers. And so on. The convulsion is propagated like sound. What a joy when it becomes epidemic.

For sometime President Tucker, of the "Smart Set" has endeavored to formulate a plan whereby he could draw out Brother Will O'Donnell from his seclusion and introduce him into society. It was decided to give a progressive euchre party. Knowing well that Brother O'Donnell was an expert in the game, President Tucker one night recently marhalled the following brothers together, and after explaining the object, guided them to an Uncle Isaac on D street, where they each deposited one dollar for a dress suit, leaving their store clothes as security.

On counting noses he found present: Brothers E. L. Tucker, Ed. Buckley, M. A. McCormick, J. J. Mullen, Chris Severn, Geo. Ruttey, J. O. Montague, and the victim, Brother O'Donnell.

They proceeded to the rendezvous, fully expecting to meet a score or more of beautiful girls, who would use all their charms and persuasive powers to make Brother O'Donnell feel at home. Alas for human frailty. Only four of the ladies put in an appearance, and they were spinster aunts of uncertain age, each wearing the certain sign to indicate their mile stones traveled, viz., the corkscrew ringlets.

"Tucker apologized and O'Donnell blushed," is the way Montague reported it.

But all things have an ending. The games were played and the favors presented, consisting of several bottles of pickles.

Brother Montague, being the only married man in the party, by unanimous vote, was presented with the entire lot.

When the refreshments were ordered dismay was in every face. Bill O'Donnell had visited the pantry, devoured the ice cream, and had escaped.

As a punishment to Tucker it was decided that he be compelled to escort the four ladies to their homes, while the rest of the crestfallen band made a return visit to Uncle Isaac.

Moral: Be sure your victim is not from "New York" when you attempt to introduce him into the "Smart Set."

RAIN DROPS OF WISDOM.

Let every one mind strictly their own business. By so doing peace will reign.

Experience teaches, it is true, but she never teaches in time. Each event brings its lesson, and the lesson is remembered, but the same event never occurs again.

To be praised for good qualities which we are conscious that we do not possess, is, to a generous mind not pleasing but mortifying.

Your opinions of persons, should be expressed with caution and care—unless your speech conveys flattery. For if you shoot an arrow into a crowd it will probably hit somebody.

One of the most important female qualities is sweetness of temper. Heaven did not give to woman insinuation and persuasion in order to be surly; it did not make them weak in order to be imperious; it did not give them a sweet voice to be employed in scolding.

To perserve a friend three things are required: to honor him present, praise him absent, and assist him when he is in trouble.

Charity. A great deal is written on charity or alms giving. Pay the laborer his labor's worth, and charity hides its head.

By constant temperance, habitual moderate exercise, and unaffected modesty, you will avoid the fees of the lawyer, the claws of the policeman, and the poison of the doctor, and probably add ten years to your life.

The greatest pleasure of life is love, the greatest treasure contentment, the greatest possession health, the greatest ease sleep, and the greatest medicine a true friend.

A philosopher says that shutting the eyes makes the sense of hearing more acute. This may account for the many closed eyes that are seen in churches on the Sabbath when the contributions boxes pass their way.

IN MEMORIAM.

Less than one year ago I reported the marriage of Brother Wm. T. Lawrence and Erminie Beatty.

It is now my sad duty to state that on Sunday last the bride of less than a year passed to that unknown world into endless sleep. As earth's fairest flowers seem first to droop and fade, and its sweetest buds to wither, so death, from amid the circle of love's cherished treasures, seems ever to select the heart's dearest idol, the best and most fondly loved, as its earliest victim, crushing the hopes of many a doting heart, and around the hearth made bright and joyous by their presence, casting the lengthened shadows of despairing gloom, and oftimes darkening its light forever.

We mourn the early dead, when those fair flowers
That bloom so sweetly in spring's sunny morn
Are wont to droop in an untimely hour,
And ofttimes perish at its earliest dawn.
Nipt by the chilling breath of ruthless blasts,
Withered and crushed beneath the spoilor's tread,
Their cherished beauty all too bright to last,
They fall and perish with the unconscious dead.

PORTNER BREWING CO. IS FAIR

Building Laborers Contract Withdrawn—Strong Label Resolution Passed—Labor Temple Committee Makes Report—Retail Clerks Wants Their Card Shown.

The regular weekly meeting of the Central Labor Union was called to order at 8 p. m. on Monday, by President Dickman.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

CREDENTIALS.

American Society of Plate Engravers: W. F. Wall and J. Hausler, vice C. K. Young and G. G. Kendall.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Stationery Engineers, No. 99, requesting an investigation of R. Golden & Co. dealers in butter, etc., and if grievance of Engineers Union is sustained to place said firm on "We Do Not Patronize List." Referred to the Grievance Committee.

The chair announced that on invitation he had attended a meeting of the Brotherhood of Commercial Telegraphers, and addressed them on the advisability and necessity of organized labor to concentrate its efforts by joining Central Labor Union.

CALL OF UNIONS.

Musicians called attention to Kernan's Lyceum and Lafayette Square and Academy of Music Theaters being on the unfair list.

Retail Clerks called attention to their Union Store card, and requested all members of organized labor to request card when making purchases.

Bottlers stated that Robert Portner Brewing Co. had signed their contract and had been placed on the fair list.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Special Committee on Labor Temple made a partial report, and requested an appropriation of $150 for expenses incident to incorporation, etc., it being understood that the Central Labor Union could retain the option of securing stock or consider the appropriation as an advance loan.

A motion being made to grant the request of the committee for a loan, an amendment was offered to defer action to next meeting. The original proposition and amendment were lost.

A motion to discharge the committee was lost.

The Contract Committee reported that contract submitted by the Building Laborers Union had been withdrawn from the committee, and recommended approval of their action. Report concurred in.

NEW BUSINESS.

The following resolutions presented by Delegate Spohn were adopted:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Central Labor Union be directed to furnish for circulation and signature, printed copies of the following or similar form:

I hereby promise that I and the members of my family will, when possible, purchase only union-made products bearing the union label.

That purchases shall be made only from union clerks in good standing in their respective organizations.

That when purchasing, the attending clerk shall be required to exhibit a current membership card.

That I will not patronize any firm listed as unfair, or which is known to be unfriendly to organized labor.

(Signed) Yes ——
No ——

Resolved, That all who desire shall be supplied with copies of said form for circulation and signature; the same when signed to be returned to the Secretary of the Central Labor Union and placed on file.

Resolved, That any one refusing to sign the form the name shall be entered thereon as "No," and be so returned to the Secretary.

Personal Mention.

Matt. Hayes favored us with his pleasing personality this week. As a raconteur of affairs typographical Mr. Hayes is in a class by himself. With an endless flow of gossip and a fund of interesting reminiscences of days gone by he can regale his listeners for hours. Mr. Hayes came to us from the South. His ultimate destination is unknown.

Frank Stewart, who has been in the G. P. O. as a session employee, left for Chicago on Tuesday. He will visit the home folks in Ohio en route.

W. L. Griffis, the popular and efficient chairman of the Second Division, Night Force, G. P. O., left for Chicago last week. Mr. Griffis is very popular in Washington among the craft and we hope to retain him permanently in the near future. As a chairman he was just and generous, and his many friends wish him a safe return to us in the fall.

Geo. B. Hoover, one of the best job printers in the country, is in the city and is open for an engagement. Some of Mr. Hoover's work was shown in the Typothetae souvenir issued in Pittsburg a few years ago.

G. P. O. Base Ball League.

The good news has been floating in the air that the Printers have decided to have two cracker-jack base ball teams in the G. P. O. League this year.

There is no doubt after last year's experience the League that the Mahone Lot produced more real base ball sport for both spectators and players than could be seen anywhere in the city.

The officers of the League have promised to make the grounds one of the best diamonds in the District, with seating capacity for five hundred, and all who hold season tickets including schedule of all games, will be entitled to a good seat for the season.

These tickets will be distributed throughout the Departments to all those who wish to help pay expenses of team representing their Division, and does not include broken fingers or dislocated joints.

A popular physician has volunteered his services free of charge at every game and will be instructed to take special care of the Printers fans and that they will be at their case or machine at the usual hour next morning.

Word is going around the office that the teams of last year will have a hard proposition before them to beat the Prints. Let us hope that they will all make them play fast ball, and when the season is over the pennant winners will have something to be proud of.

Boys, get together, and help the good sport along.

A ROOTER.

In purchasing goods from advertisers in this paper, do not fail to mention the fact that you saw the advertisement in THE TRADES UNIONIST. It will accord you good treatment at the hand of the salesman, and incidentally help the paper.

Allied Label League.

During recent months a strong effort has been made to effect a complete reorganization of the Allied Lable League, but not until the last meeting in February did matters shape up to give encouragement to the promoters of the plans. At this meeting, which was well attended, the officers were chosen to serve six months, as follows:

President, J. H. Brahler, Cigarmaker's; Vice-President, G. Amberg, Barber's; Financial Secretary, L. R. Boyd, Musicians; Recording Secretary, John G. Schmidt, Bakers; Treasurer, C. A. Pfau, Retail Clerks; Sergeant-at-Arms, A. W. Kenley, Bottlers.

Twelve organizations were represented and considerable interest was manifested. According to present plans as expressed in the discussion that took a general scope, and which was participated in by the delegates from the various unions, there is a vast field for work that will be of great benefit to all label trades.

In the past there has been a great lack on the part of workingmen to insist on the label. It is the purpose of the League according to a plan discussed to send committees from time to time to the meetings of the different labor organizations throughout the city to advocate the insistence of the label.

There is unquestionably a large field for the League in this line, and lots of hard work ahead if they go about their work intelligently and persistently, which is guaranteed by the officers chosen, who are all hustlers in their Locals, besides being delegates to the Central Labor Union, and several serving on prominent committees.

At the last meeting of the League the question of requesting the President of the Central Labor Union to appoint a label committee of that body was discussed, but action was deferred until the next meeting, Friday, March 24.

Label and miscellaneous trades should give all possible encouragement to the new organization, for all will be benefited by affiliation. Join hands and help one another; in doing so you will help your own organization. All unions coming under this head are earnestly urged to send delegates at an early date.

The Bennings Races.

The spring meeting of Washington Jockey Club opened to a large crowd of lovers of the sport of Kings.

The result of the management of the Benning track is shown by the class of patrons it receives. With a determination to have clean and good racing the Benning management has built up a reputation equal to any track in the country.

The events to be run at this meeting are of high class of merit and exciting contests are looked for, as quite a few of the horses from the Southern tracks will meet horses just starting the season.

The meeting will continue until April 13.

Don't forget Woman's Auxiliary Euchre, Wednesday, March 29.

COLUMBIA UNION MEETING

Temporary Scale on The Star Agreed to Subject to Ratification.

PHILADELPHIA, NO. 2, GETS $25

Constitution and By-Laws Adopted—The Apprentice Laws Adopted as Reported by Committee—Further Conference on Newspaper Scale Desired.

The regular monthly meeting of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, was called to order at 2:30 p. m. on Sunday last, President Berg in the chair.

Traveling cards received since last meeting were read and accepted.

The Membership Committee, having reported favorably on the admission of George F. Von Ostermann and French R. Osthaus they were elected.

The committee also reported favorably on application of Cliff S. Newsom, who was an apprentice member of St. Louis Union. Mr. Newsom was duly elected.

A report on application of a Mr. McDonald, a machine tender, being asked, the committee was requested to report the case at next meeting.

Bills amounting to $28 were read and ordered paid.

An appeal, through the American Federation of Labor, for the striking United Cloth Hat and Cap Makers, being read, an appropriation of $10 was made.

A communication was read from the Western Federation of Miners expressing thanks for donation of $70.20 sent to aid the strikers in Colorado.

A communication from an indigent member of the Union being read, it was referred to the Relief Committee.

A communication from Philadelphia Union No. 2 was read, thanking the Union for donation of $70 made to assist in fighting the Inquirer of that city.

A communication from Theodore Noyes of the Star, respecting the proposed change in the scale to cover changed conditions of hours of labor on that paper, was passed for consideration with report of committee on that matter.

The report of the Committee on Newspaper Scale was then taken up for consideration. The committee having reported a temporary agreement, pending further conference with the Newspaper Publishers' Association, on motion the action of the officers of the Union and the committee was indorsed, and the committee instructed to resume negotiations for the purpose of having the scale in effect on the Times signed by the Newspaper Publishers' Association.

The temporary agreement is as follows:

AGREEMENT.

By the terms of this agreement, entered into this 11th day of March, 1905, the Evening Star Newspaper Company agrees to pay to its employes in the composing room $4.13 for day work and $4.33 for night work, of seven hours each, respectively, the said rate to be effective until a permanent scale shall have been agreed upon between the Newspaper Publishers of Washington, D. C., and Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, or the Evening Star and Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101: Provided, That should the permanent scale as finally agreed upon be higher than the above rate, the Evening Star Newspaper Company agrees to pay such difference in favor of the employes to said employes on the signing of the permanent scale; if, however, the permanent scale as finally agreed upon, should be lower than the rate provided for above, such difference in favor of the Evening Star Newspaper Company shall be repaid to the Evening Star Newspaper Company, the Union binding itself so see that the terms of this agreement are fully complied with, to the end that the said Evening Star Newspaper Company shall be fully protected, it being understood that the employes shall repay such difference, if any should exist.

The report of the Committee on Codification and Revision of the Laws was then taken up.

Mr. Ennis read a communication from the Typothetae objecting to certain changes made in proposed apprentice laws.

A motion to adopt the apprentice laws as originally reported by the committee being made, a point of order was made that a reconsideration of previous action of Union was necessary.

A motion to reconsider being made it was adopted. Mr. Ennis then moved that the original recommendations of the committee be adopted. Carried.

Mr. Ennis also reported for adoption the recent provision, ratified by the Typothetae, governing pay for overtime on Sundays and legal holidays, which was adopted.

Mr. Goodkey moved to strike out section requiring attendance of chairmen at all meetings. Lost.

A vote being taken on adoption of the Constitution and By-Laws as a whole, it was adopted—ayes, 78; nays, 0.

Mr. Lerch gave notice that at the next meeting he would present amendments to Article X, Scale of Prices.

Mr. O. T. Pierce gave notice that at next meeting he would move repeal of Article relating to Trials and Charges.

Mr. Goodkey gave notice that he would so amend section governing attendance of chairman to make it read "all regular meetings."

Mr. Brockwell, on suggestion of the president of the Union, moved that Scale of Prices be printed in separate book form.

The chair stated that, without objection, the officers would have 2,500 copies of each book.

REPORTS OF OFFICERS.

The president reported two deaths since last meeting and called attention to the vote by which $70 per month was pledged to Philadelphia Union, and ruled that any future appropriation under the resolution would require a nine-tenths vote.

An appeal being taken from the decision of the chair, the chair was sustained by a vote of 78 to 1.

The Secretary reported that the sum of $77.95 had been forwarded to the Western Federation of Miners for Colorado strikers; also that 400 circulars had been sent out in accordance with instructions contained in report of delegate to investigate conditions in Philadelphia; also reported the transfer from active to passive roll of J. L. Shipley.

NEW BUSINESS.

A motion was made to make appropriation of $70 to aid Philadelphia Union, with provision that all amounts paid by this Union be made a subject for consideration by our delegates to the Toronto convention, to secure repayment to all Unions advancing money to Philadelphia Union, such amounts to be rebated back to such Unions in per capita payments.

A division was called for on the motion.

The appropriation being voted on by secret ballot, failed of a necessary nine-tenths vote.

A motion to appropriate $25 for Philadelphia Union was carried.

Mr. Bynum called attention to the euchre to be given by Woman's Auxiliary on March 29, and extended an invitation to all to be present.

The question of joining Bookbinders Union in the issuance of Catalogue of Publications now conducted by that Union was referred to the Printing Committee. Adjourned.

Mr. McCann to Mr. Belcher.

EDITOR OF TRADES UNIONIST:

My letter printed some time ago in the TRADES UNIONIST correcting Brother Belcher in regard to the authorship of the "Pastoral Symphony" seems to still rankle in his manly bosom. Periodically he breaks out in some acrimonious reference to it. Last week he had a throw at me again in a superlative effort to write up a concert he attended. His injudicious use of words and phrases reminded me of Brudder Bones in one of his eloquent forensic moods. "A remarkable gifted coterie of artists" struck me as quite ridiculous, especially the application of the word "coterie." Further on he informs us that the audience was "fairly electrified," and then uses the couplet, "How happy could I be with either," etc., forgetting that there were more than two in that "remarkable gifted coterie."

But what astonished and amused me most was when he wound up by pronouncing all who differ with him as to the spelling of a name—your humble servant among the number, of course—as "iconoclasts." Now, wouldn't that "jar yer intelligence?"

I am willing to contribute toward presenting Belcher with a dictionary, and some kind friend should inform him where the Carnegie Library is located, so that he may consult the books of reference so abundant there.

JUST EVERY-DAY LIFE.

To the printer slang they come at last. The New York Herald speaks of Rider Haggard stopping at the Waldorf-hyphen-Astoria.

An associate, Mr. J. H. Massey, resigns Departmental life this week to enter upon the publication of a paper at Marietta, Ga. In this leap from the national capital to the Valley of Content in the shadow of the Kenesaw, Mr. M. devotes his energies and ambitions to a dual end—that of the upbuilding of his home city and the newspaper which now passes into the keeping of the third generation, the pride alike of his father and grandfather. In the possession of that confidence that begets success it is but natural to predict, through the stepping stones of the city council and state legislature, his attainment to higher honors.

H. S. SUTTON.

From Clime to Clime.

A story has been written by a printer giving in detail his journey of 21,630 miles, covering six months, in such a way as to interest not only the printer familiar with the cities visited, but the general reader.

The author, Samuel Murray, graphically protrays his adventures from Washington City and return, starting February 20, 1903, and ending the trip in that city August 17, 1904, two days ahead of his schedule. In that time he covered the United States from coast to coast and visited Mexico in the South and Canada in the North.

A map showing the route taken by Mr. Murray is in the book, which should be read by every one interested in books of travel.

ALLIED PRINTING TRADES UNION LABEL COUNCIL WASHINGTON. 2

Only Eight-Hour Union Office in Town.

THURSDAY, MARCH 23, 1905.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

It was a very good-tempered union meeting last Sunday, especially considering the great differences of opinion on a couple of topics. I think the reason for the failure of the $70 appropriation in aid of Philadelphia Union lies in the fact that many see, or think they see—which amounts to the same thing—more union politics than real unionism in the fight that is being made on the Executive Council in g eneral and Lynch and Bramwood in particular. Many express the opinion that if a union or a number of unions can nullify the acts of and refuse to obey the Executive Council our scheme of government is a failure and had better be abolished. The Executive Council was created by I. T. U. law with certain powers, and while all may not agree with the interpretation which that Council puts on the laws, no one has a right to refuse to obey its decisions, and no one can reverse them except the I. T. U. by its representatives in convention. It is unfortunate that unionists will let their passions and prejudices lead them into denunciation of the supreme officers of our organization and into impugning their motives. We are supposed to be law-abiding, and to be such it is necessary that we should obey the laws we have as interpreted by the officers we have until the times come for the making of laws and electing officers. Then a majority can make whatever changes are desired. In this warfare on Mr. Lynch and the Executive Council it should be remembered that the former was elected, after a stubbornly fought contest, by over 7,000 majority, and the other two members by still larger majorities, showing that they were the choice of the membership, and it is fairly presumable that their acts are indorsed by the majority of the membership until it is demonstrated by somebody besides Mr. Lynch's opponents in the last campaign that the contrary is true. It is more than a year until the next election, and consequently much too early to begin electioneering work. All of such work done now will have spent its force before that time and been forgotten. It is useless to assert that the Philadelphia matter is not based on politics with reference to the next campaign, for it originated with and is being pushed by the active opponents of Mr. Lynch in the last. The Executive Council should be obeyed or it should be abolished, and I am glad to see that the number of those who take that view is growing.

"Brocky" missed the calls of a comforter who used to visit him when he had a carbuncle on the back of his neck. This caller's conversation usually ran about like this:

"Hello, Brocky, old man! Sorry to see you laid up like this. Good heavens you certainly do look bad! Let me look at your carbuncle. My, my! That is awful! Say, you remember Tony Critchfield—that fellow who died with a carbuncle three years ago? His didn't look anything like as bad as yours, but it killed him all the same. And there was Bill Smithman—his carbuncle looked like a pimple compared with yours, but it only took it three weeks to kill him. My, I'm sorry to see you looking so bad, old man! I hope you'll pull through all right, but—well, good by, Brocky. I certainly hope you'll get well."

Comrade W. N. Brockwell, of the late Record Proof Room, returned to work last Monday, after four weeks' struggling with erysipelas, and in celebration of the event he was unanimously elected chairman of the Annex Proof Room, organized in the quarters lately occupied as the Record Proof Room and largely of the same personnel. Some very handsome team work is generally done when Brockwell's name comes up for election as chairman, like this:

No. 1: "I nominate Mr. Brockwell."
No. 2: "I second the nomination."
No. 3: "I move that the nominations be closed."
No. 4: "I move that the election of Mr. Brockwell be made unanimous."
That is all there is to it.

I hear that R. A. Nelgner, who has been running a Merg in the Library Division, resigned last week, believing that he can do better "on the outside." A good many operators say they can do better in private employ, especially on newspapers, than in working for Uncle Sam. For one thing, the hours in the G. P. O. are longer than on newspaper work. But our good old uncle furnishes some advantages that make up for that little difference in the way of holidays and leave with pay.

* * * *

Harry C. Knapp, of the Times, made his initial visit to the G. P. O. last Monday in the interest of his campaign for delegate to Toronto. He made so good an impression last year, received such a complimentary vote, and won so many friends by taking his defeat good-naturedly that he has every reason to hope for success this year. Who his competitors will be I have not heard, but there will doubtless be others with the same ambition.

Last week I took a slam at the management of the home and tomb of Washington at Mount Vernon, and I let it off light at that. The managers must have belonged to a Don't Association at some time in their lives, judging from the signs about the place—"Don't smoke!" "Don't pick up nothing!" "Don't take no pictures; we have them for sale!" "Don't look pleasant; we don't feel that way, and you shouldn't!" And etc. The pleasures of a visit to the historic place are much enhanced if one goes by the electric road, for in season he has plenty of time to pick blackberries while sufficient power is being generated to get up the hills. A relay of mules at each hill would be an improvement and would generate the power more rapidly. They might be used to plow corn between times, and the plowing would not be interfered with much. If you have never been to Mount Vernon—and every true American wants to visit the Tomb of the immortal Washington once (and I never knew anybody who wanted to go a second time)—you have missed thrilling experiences which you should not let your life close without.

Oh, yes, we are going to have a Sunday Star all right, "for he himself hath said it," the announcement having appeared in the Evening Star every day for a week past. It will be a mammoth issue and we are promised features new in Washington journalism. Banzai! (I'm gradually acquiring a taste for the Japanese word for "Bully!") I wish the good old paper all success in her venture and I have no sort of doubt that she will have it. The Washington Star is one of the greatest newspapers of the country and reaches a larger number of the actual inhabitants of the city than any other paper does of the inhabitants of its city, and it would not do that if its readers did not like it.

* * * *

Judge Emory Speer, of Georgia, one of the brightest men on the Federal bench to-day, recently, in commenting on the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States against the system of peonage that has been practiced in some parts of the South, delivered a philippic against the chain-gang system of cities, declaring that it is a violation of the thirteenth amendment of the Constitution, which declares that involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime, shall not exist in the United States, the petty offenses for which chain-gang sentences are given being merely misdemeanors and not crimes. The Judge might also seriously question the manner in which verdicts against the poor wretches are secured. The unsupported word of a policeman, anxious to "make good" his arrest and with blunted sensibilities of the sancity of an oath; a police judge with more cases before him every day than King Solomon could have investigated the merits of in a week; a social system which makes destitution a crime and to be out of a job a suspicuous circumstance; petty and annoying regulations the violations of which causes arrest—all these, with a police force each member of which is anxious to "make a record," constitute a large part of the pleasures of city life. I have been told of a policeman swearing that an automobile was making 15 miles an hour when its capacity was only 12. A friend of mine was thrust into a police cell and permitted to die of pneumonia in New York whose offense was that he had fallen on the ice and broken his leg and otherwise so injured himself that he could not explain it. Would it not be better to pay less attention to the unfortunate class and more to the criminals?

Now that the night forces are all broken up and everybody knows "where he is at," let us look into the merits of the National Mutual Finance and Investment Company. It proposes to receive investments of from $2 to $20 a month and indulge in the real estate game. It is a good place to put a few dollars—not enough to cripple anyone's finances—where it will increase and we will get the benefit of the earnings of our own money. Look into it, gentlemen, and then give us your subscriptions.

The Union Outfitters to Men Company is doing so well already that its success is guaranteed. Let us wear union-label clothing as well as demand union labels on printing—concede what we demand. A man can buy anything there that he can buy anywhere else, and as good and as cheap, and with a union label on it.

G. P. O. Council, National Union, will meet for the first time at Pythian Temple (third floor, back), 1012 Ninth street northwest, next Saturday evening, at 8 o'clock. After the business of the evening an informal entertainment will be given, with refreshments and cigars. This latter feature is in charge of Friend Graves, the Speaker of the organization, who knows how. It is a guaranty of an enjoyable evening to know that Tom L. Jones and other singers will sing. G. P. O. Council never makes a failure of an entertainment, and when the programme says "Refreshments" it means a lot of 'em.

Wiley H. Davis, of the First Division, was one of the singers at Dr. Bischoff's organ recital last Tuesday night, and, as always, this promising young tenor acquitted himself to the full satisfaction of the audience. He is making a name for himself in the musical world of this city, and under the artistic training of Dr. Bischoff is improving every day.

W. S. Hennen, of the late Record Proof Room, who has been suffering for a couple of weeks with an aggravated quinsy, is believed to be slowly improving, but is by no means yet a well man. His throat had to be lanced in two places.

The Star's account of a lecture by Rev. H. E. Johnson, a Virginia Methodist, on St. Patrick, delivered on March 15, winds up thus: "He gave a graphic recital of events in the era of St. Patrick, who, he said, had the misfortune to be born out of his native country." That beats me!

Yes, dear Cycle, I admit that "some very good reading appeared for sometime in THE TRADES UNIONIST over the pen name of 'The Understudy.'" But I really took up the work during the illness of Joe Babcock, as his understudy; and when I became convinced, after a year or two, that he would not resume the task himself, I began signing my name to my productions and have continued it ever since. Now let us have your reasons for not signing your name, acknowledged by great a statesman and by a great lexicographer. No, I won't give you away, Cycle. You must do it yourself.

I have received "The Business Man's Pocketbook," by the International Correspondence Schools, of Scranton, Pa., bound in flexible leather, hip-pocket size, which is one of the most complete things I have ever seen. It is so full of information useful to a business man—as much as can be put in 406 pages of nonpareil—that I would need a column to tell about it.

A letter received by "Gus" Bruehl, of the Star, from "Shad" Campbell, mentions the arrival of Mrs. Nellie Wilson, last Friday, at the Home at Colorado Springs. "Shad" thinks Columbia Union ought to furnish a room at the Home, as San Francisco, Chicago, Denver, Indianapolis, and other unions have done, and hopes that the sending of Mrs. Wilson there will hasten the event.

Mr. Possible Candidate, you now have until April 16 to make up your mind whether you want to butt into the delegatorial race or not. I don't see anything on the hook for ambitious and aspiring people but delegateships, and only four of them. If you want one of them, get busy! Even then you have no assurance of getting it. But I don't believe there will be much of the strenuousness of last year's campaign injected into this. There are no issues. There were none last year, but we didn't know it. We don't want to send men, however, who are habitually wrong. If you are of that kind, stay out of it.

Col. Harry S. New, of Indiana, has been appointed vice-chairman of the Republican National Committee. There was much speculation as to who the new chairman would be, though if we may believe them there are now plenty of wise guys who all the while knew that New would get it. We were interested for Mr. New for the reason that he is a newspaper man. His ripe experience as such will be of great service in his new field of endeavor.

After reading editor Kennedy's article it is easy to understand why space necessary for reply to Mr. Bramwood's was denied. The Journal is always a welcome visitor, but it is fortunate that the craft is not compelled to rely wholly upon Indianapolis as the only source of full and reliable information.

The high school girls of neighboring villages in Pennsylvania have united in a crusade and will refuse to allow boys to walk home with them or call at their homes who use cigarettes. Success or failure of this movement will largely depend on whether these well-meaning girls are able to continue and overcome "that lonesome feeling."

***

Editor Kennedy, of the Western Laborer, makes some telling points in his reference to the prevailing notion that it is "contrary to the ethics of some unions and union men to pay a labor paper money for doing anything," and that "it has always been the notion among union men that labor papers are run to print what official organ editors lack the moral courage to print for fear of making enemies and jeopardizing their jobs." Those who at one time or another have been associated with labor papers are prepared to bear witness to the truths presented by Mr. Kennedy. The notion still prevails with many that a man's full obligation is discharged as soon as he hands in his name to the office of publication as a subscriber, and such a man is still better satisfied if he is carried from year to year as a "dead head." We have known cases where the opinion prevailed that white paper bills are met and weekly wages paid in this way. It is easy enough, but mighty poor taste, for a concern which is provided with necessary funds and secure against loss by a monthly levy to hold up to ridicule a struggling weekly, because, as merely a business proposition, the proprietor charges space rates at a cost sufficient to cover expense of publication. The struggling weekly more nearly represents the struggling masses and deserves well of those who profit by its self-sacrificing devotion.

The expected has happened, as since the adjournment of Congress and with the Record in dry dock the temporaries and extras have been dropped, thus reducing the force to the minimum or nearly as it stood prior to the assembling of Congress in December last. The reduction, while necessary and anticipated by Civil Service regulations, is nevertheless unwelcome to those who might hope to continue indefinitely. With those who remain as regulars or to fill out a probationary period a feeling of sympathy is manifest, and expressions of interested friendship were heard when the "good bye" hour arrived. We hope that Uncle Sam may soon see his way clear to extend to each an invitation to return, when, by each of those remaining will be extended the glad hand of welcome.

GOSSIP FROM THE G. P. O.

First Division.

E. M. Root is still on the sick list.

Glad to learn that Geo. J. Woodgate is improving.

W. A. H. Turner has been on the sick list this week.

The total force in this division numbers 204, including everyone.

Comrade E. D. King has been on the sick list. Also E. F. Latham.

Frank F. S. Miller was transferred to this Division on Monday from the Treasury Branch.

Col. Jas. E. Bright took a "day off" this week. Somebody remarks "he has a string of them." There are others.

"Eureka," he loudly called when he discovered his pay envelope with his hard-earned wages, in his overcoat pocket.

Luke Woodward, chief of the Division of "Cuts," is off on fifteen days' leave. His assistant, Chas. C. Barton, is in charge.

On Monday morning, Mr. J. Walker Miller, an employee of this Division for the past six days, was transferred to the Specification Room.

C. W. Radley, one of our Monday morning accessions, will be a candidate for re-election to the office of Auditor at the approaching election.

With the adjournment of the special session of the Senate on Saturday last, the night forces were discontinued at the close of office hours on Sunday morning.

Even our clever friend Judge Holeman has been obliged to go to—the Supply Division. He is missed in his old alley when the whistle blows.

Fred C. Chase, recently employed temporarily on the Night Force, has embarked in the printing business. Success is kindly wished him in his new enterprise.

Owing to the various transfers, and so forth, the compositors that had been temporarily filling "preferred places" since December 1 last, have returned to their frames.

The latest advices from Portland, Me., impart the welcome information that George H. Ball, formerly of this Division, is rapidly improving. Good news to his many friends.

When L. W. Baldwin was transferred to the Sixth Division last December he represented slug 90. When he returned to this Division on Monday he was assigned to the same slug.

On Saturday W. J. Weiss, employed in the State Branch for several years, was transferred to this Division and assigned to slug 23. "Billy" received a cordial welcome from his old friends.

On Saturday evening the balance of the temporary force in this Division was discontinued. We understand that the order was general with regard to all the temporary compositors employed in the office.

The regular monthly meeting of Government Printing Office Council, No. 211, National Union, will be held at Pythian Temple, 1012 Ninth street, N. W., on Saturday evening, March 25, at eight o'clock.

Well, right on the eve of an election for chairman, and no announcement of candidates. Perhaps the present affable Chairman "Davy," is exclusively in the "running," How about some of our recent acquisitions?

Not a candidate for delegate has visited us this week. Did you ever witness such a dull campaign? Incidentally we understand that Miss McDonald, representing the "down-town" section, will be a candidate.

We are glad to learn that H. J. Frank, recently one of our temporary compositors is employed in the store room. Nothing like being permitted to sign the pay roll every two weeks, regardless of your particular line of duty.

From the corrected time slip posted for the information of all interested we notice the following acquisitions to our Division:

From the Sixth Day—Makers-up: Will H. Chase, C. S. Elder and L. P. Kenney assigned to the "Y." Compositors from the same division: Chas. F. Mullen, John Adams, S. R. Wall, Geo. A. Plummer, L. W. Baldwin, Winslow Lewis, and C. W. Radley.

From the Record—Chas. A. Morgan, F. M. Werneke and John R. Moss.

From the Proof Room—Geo. S. Fitzgerald, Ira M. Ingalls, H. W. Templar and Frank W. Miller.

ROUGH WRITER.

Third Division.

F. H. Jones took a jump from 114 to 118.

Frank L. McUmber is now slug 119, having been transferred from 26.

Messrs. L. J. Bennett and George G. Klinknett went to the Spess Monday morning.

Robert J. Mears, late Slug 41, is now employed by Byron Adams, where he "never disappoints."

Now we see "triangles of wild geese harrowing the blue fields of the sky," as John J. Ingalls put it.

It is said to be a fact that the Post is fully equipped to issue an evening edition in the near future.

It is reported that Tom Hoagland has rooms for rent, and that therefore he is eligible to membership in the Oldest Inhabitants Association.

Mrs. A. W. Bowen will make the race for delegate to Toronto from the Woman's Auxiliary of Washington, with good prospects for securing the honor.

R. P. Piehoff, former Chairman of the Third Division, was in town last week for a few days on private business, and left for home in haste on receipt of a telegram stating that his baby had died. We all sympathize with Bob,

Brother Charles H. Gove, who attends the Church of Our Father, informs me that there was a mistake in the programme of evening services issued by the church, the dates as given being just one week too soon. Therefore Pastor John Van Schaick. will give his lecture "Ian MacLaren and his work for Literature and Religion" on Sunday evening, March 26, instead of March 19 as announced in this column last week.

The horde of Pennsylvanians increases. We already had J. M. Lenhart, of Meadville, W. M. Camp, of Erie, F. O. Sanders, of Watsontown, and F. E. Warren, of Harrisburg, but the disbanding of the night forces brought us J. J. O'Hern, of Warren and Titusville, and H. J. McClurg, of Beaver, and the returns are not all in yet.

Last Saturday night we lost all the remaining temporary hands from the Dvision.

There were 16 of them, as follows: Wm. W. Satterfield, H. E. Bartle, Robt. D. Heiner, F. M. P. Montague, Theodore P. C. Willis, D. A. Smith, Jr., Chas. H. Stormfeltz, Clifton S. Newsom, F. T. Eleven men and one woman came to us Monday morning from various Divisions. Their names and slug numbers are as follows:

Nellie H. Shipman, 4; Will W. Fry, 9; A. P. E. Doyle. 12; A. Coykendall, 18; R. L. S. Halpenny, 26; A. R. Nathan, 36; J. J. O'Hern, 38; H. C. Town, 50; Edward Nash, 116; Samuel Solomon, 124; John H. Hooper, 128; George R. Merriam, 132.

Franklin O'Yama Sanders, late of Watsonville, Pa., now slug 40, Alley 7, is very much given to reciting poetry. His favorite selection is:

Breathes there a man with soul so dead
Who never to himself hath said—
This is my own, my native land;
Whose heart hath ne'er within him burned
As home his footsteps he hath turned
From wandering on a foreign strand!
—Canto 6, Lay of the Last Minstrel.

And everybody wishes he was back in Watsontown.

The meeting of the Commercial Telegrapher's Union last Sunday evening was addressed by John Dickman, President of the Central Labor Union, and F. C. Roberts of this Division. Mr. Dickman's speech was on the line of the duty of all local unions to be represented in the central body. The speaker instanced the recent secession of the Pressmen's Union, and argued that the time might come when these independent brethren might feel the need of a sustaining hand, and the very Unions they are so eager to break with might possibly be the ones to whom they would fain turn for help, from which they are now barred by the act of secession. Mr. Dickman hoped that all might be brought to see the great importance of acting together. His remarks were received with hearty applause. Mr. Roberts followed, in a speech devoted to the labor question in general. His remarks were received with close attention, and on finishing he was applauded.

It hoped that all members of trades unions will make it a point to attend these meetings, and thus keep in touch with what the leaders are doing to advance the cause of labor.

For delegate to Toronto, Miss Teresa McDonald!

It is my privilege as a correspondent of the TRADES UNIONIST, and my special privilege as a Rhode Island man, to have the honor to announce the candidacy of Miss Teresa McDonald for delegate from Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101 to the Annual Convention of the International Typographical Union at Toronto.

Miss McDonald is no stranger to the printers of Washington, having been employed here for a number of years past, and now holding the position of proof-reader on the Washington Post. With the just consideration which should be accorded her as a representative of the craft which she adorns, there should be no doubt of her election. A year ago, after having announced her candidacy, and realizing that with two women on the ticket neither could be elected, she retired in favor of Miss Anna C. Wilson. Not only did she do this, but she took it upon herself to go personally to the friends who had promised to give her their votes, and handing them Miss Wilson's cards, asked them to vote for her friend. That Miss McDonald is now the logical candidate, there can be no question.

She is intelligent, has abundant ability, and has that personal magnetism which is a charming woman's greatest accomplishment. She deserves and will receive the votes of all fair-minded members of Columbia Union.

Like many another old-time printer, John E. Rastall, until recently a compositor in the Third Division, has an interesting history. Besides being a Civil War veteran, with three years and five months service to his credit in the Union Army, he has the unique distinction of having served with old John Brown, Gen. Jim Lane, and others in the border war which gave Kansas and Nebraska to the country as free States and brought on the Civil War. Rastall went West in 1856 with his printing office foreman, Edmund G. Ross (afterwards U. S. Senator from Kansas), from the Sentinel, of Milwaukee, driving an ox-team overland, taking three months to make the journey. Arriving at Topeka, then an insignificant village, he found no place to lay his head, and joined the "Free State Army." His experiences were numerous, sometimes humorous, and sometimes tragic. He was with the "forces" when three or four towns were raided. The United States troops captured him with others and held him prisoner at Lecompton. Mr. Rastall says he thinks the charges against him were murder, arson, horse-stealing, slave-stealing, treason, and a event," said he, "Slug 132 would have few others which he has forgotten. However, he did not wait to be tried. He gave Uncle Sam the slip and escaped North on the underground railway with a runaway slave. But before leaving Kansas, he obtained a formal written discharge from the "Free State Army of Kansas," which document he prizes highly. It is signed, among other officers, by his colonel, Aaron D. Stevens, who was hung with old John Brown at Harper's Ferry. Rastall says he was not at Harper's Ferry, simply because he was not asked to go. Had he been asked, he would have followed his usual custom and been there. "In that event," said he, "Slug 132 would have had another name behind it."

Sixth Division.

Andrew Bailey, linotype machinist during the past session on the Record, was transferred on Monday morning to the Job Room.

F. C. Damm, who has been a machinist on the Record during the past session, has resigned, and left for St. Louis to become head machinist on the Post-Dispatch.

The first chapel meeting after the transformation of the Night Record into the day Sixth Division was held Monday noon. George Hayden was the unanimous choice for chairman, likewise Eddie Nevils for secretary.

The ovation which greeted Miss Teresa McDonald as she advanced up the aisle to cast a vote at Sunday's union meeting was a pretty good indication that she has the best wishes of a large number for her success in the delegatorial race.

If Dr. Osler ever happens to read "Pard" Bloomer's poem which appeared in last week's TRADES UNIONIST he will be more convinced than ever that the only remedy for some people (especially writers) after they have passed the age of sixty is chloroform.

It was a pleasure to those present at the Union meeting last Sunday to see the big, good-natured chairman of the Nominations Committee, Wm. Brockwell, performing his duties after a month's illness. The absence of his usual jokes, however, was a sure indication that he had as yet not fully recovered.

The climax to the long-discussed Constitution came last Sunday when the two principal actors in the ten-months' drama, Chas. H. Ennis and James Monroe Kreiter were appointed as tellers on the final vote. The hearty cheer given as they shook hands at the close of the vote proved that each had gained in popularity by his determined effort to embody only that into the Constitution which he deemed best.

I sincerely object to the manner in which "Rough Writer" has confiscated and used a standard abbreviation in connection with slug quotations. It may be all right to say "oef" for outside end frame and "ief" for inside end frame, but when it comes to "wf" for window frame I draw the line. "Wf," boy, means wrong font. And if any of the gentlemen mentioned are on wrong font cases, its time a change was being made.

Its all over. Columbia Union now has a new Constitution and By-Laws. Probably at no time in the history of No. 101 has a greater contest been waged for and against the recommendations of a committee than that which closed on Sunday amid scenes of unusual excitement. Throughout the many heated arguments which arose during debate on the new Constitution, President John R. Berg has had much to contend with, and has rendered his decisions in a most impartial and just manner. His re-election to the presidency of No. 101 will undoubtedly be his reward for the faithful performance of his duty during the past year. For the members of the Laws Committee, and especially its chairman, "Judge" Chas. H. Ennis, nothing can be said but praise. Not only is the "Judge" a master of the laws of the land, but has proven himself a master of the laws for the guidance of members of Columbia Union. As a suitable reward for his untiring efforts his elevation to the president's chair—not this year, but next—would be but a just reward.

The old Sixth Division is a thing of the past. Foreman Berg and his entire Record force arrived early Monday morning and took complete possession. Armed with a bunch of transfers for most everybody he handed them out in the following order:

First Division—Makers-up: Will H. Chase, C. S. Elder, L. P. Kenney, C. W. Radley. Imposers: L. W. Baldwin, S. R. Wall. Compositors: Winslow Lewis, John Adams, Chas. F. Mullen, Geo. A. Plummer.

Second Division—Louis C. Vogt, D. R. Lyons, W. F. Gould, W. H. Flynn, W. V. Smith, R. L. Moler, W. L. Howard, R. T. Lippincott, E. E. Richards.

Third Division—H. C. Town, A. R. Nathan, Edward Nash, J. H. Hooper, John O'Hern, R. L. Halpenny, A. Coykendall, Samuel Soloman, Nellie Shipman.

Fourth Division—Guy McCord, Frank Jones, A. W. Howe, G. F. Montgomery, Jas. M. Weaver, J. F. Luitich, V. Howard, W. T. Hall, J. E. Hogan, C. B. Nelson, Oscar Nelson, W. F. Simons, R. C. Starr, D. W. Corkins.

Fifth Division—Hubert Newsom, H. T. Young, A. K. Williamson.

Specification Room—H. D. Young, L. H. Burton, Frank Welch, J. N. Breen, Ben Wolfe, W. L. Evans, Wm. H. Drayton, Misses Julia M. Burke and May D. White.

Those to remain in the Sixth are:

A. K. Mundheim, as assistant. Machinist operators: F. A. Vinton, S. H. Cluxton, Chas. S. Gunn. Compositors: Jos. E. Sheehan, B. R. Preuss, W. H. Cornish, D. S. McConnel, E. E. Connor, H. B. Barnhart.

The three months old daughter of Mr. T. R. Long, of this Divison, died on Tuesday of this week, after a brief illness.

On Tuesday of this week it became generally known that our fellow craftsman, D. J. McCarty, had been advanced to the rank of grandfather. The "everybody up" order was the signal for hearty congratulations.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the G. P. O. Veteran Club gave an unusually enjoyable entertainment and supper at Pythian Temple last Saturday evening. The entertainment, which consisted of vocal and piano music, was preceded by the presentation of a beautiful American flag by the ladies to the Club.

It is a real pleasure to note that copy messenger Austin D. DuGanne has been advanced from laborer to helper, which places him on the eligible list for something higher or a position commensurate with his stature. Austin towered something above six feet when he came here, and he has kept on growing till now everybody looks up to him.

T. C. Easterling, late a memer of this force, and who is popular everywhere, has accepted a position as ticket agent with the Mt. Vernon and Alexandria Railway Company, at Thirteenth and Pennsylvania Avenue. It will be a pleasure to part with the price of a trip to Mt. Vernon occasionally just for the privilege of doing business with "Tom."

George Graham recently accepted the terms of an advertisement and forwarded a small sum under promise of returns in choice bulbs and plants from a man who represented himself as doing a legitimate business at Somerville, Mass. Sufficient time has elapsed to warrant the suspicion that the fellow has moved on and is "doing" business or some one somerelse

Bindery Notes.

Captain Fredericks is still at work blowing his burners.

A number of Bindery dudes can be seen at Chase's Theater—not inside—but in the lobby, posing when the ladies are coming out. They are known as "The Peepers."

It is reported that Chas. Varden Barton, graduate in Bugology, and candidate for President of the United States and Philippines, has made a canvas of the G. P. O. and has secured the promise of several ladies' assistance in his campaign. "Ring up the wagon and we will all take a ride."

There will be a meeting of the gentlemen who need the money in Washington on March 23rd. A continuous performance will be conducted until April 13. Electric cars will be run every two minutes for the small sum of five cents to carry the lambs out to be sheared. It is a Spring meeting and many will spring a leak before the meeting is over. The world has no sympathy for the gambler who loses.

CRANKISMS.

A Friend of Labor.

One of the most consistent advocates of legislation in Congress looking to the betterment of the conditions of the laboring classes is Senator Thomas S. Martin, of Virginia. It was through his instrumentality that the Kean resolution to investigate the question of railroad rates was so extended as to include an investigation to ascertain the advisability of enacting a national employer's liability bill, which would do away with the old common law doctrine of fellow servants, behind which the railroads get to avoid paying just claims for damages growing out of injuries sustained by employees in discharge of duty. This investigation will undoubtedly result in a Federal liability law, and it will prove a great boon to railroad employees.

Another piece of legislation of interest to labor, secured by Senator Martin, was the provision that mechanics in United States Navy Yards shall be entitled to short annual leaves of absence with pay, thus placing them on the same plane with Department employees.

NAVY YARD ITEMS.

Lieut. Fullinwider and family are now occupying Quarters F.

Acting Gunner J. Sperle has been ordered to report for duty on the Maryland March 25.

Gunner Sergeant John Costello has reported for duty on the Dolphin. He will have charge of the Marine Guard in perfecting them, as bulls eye hitters.

The Navy Yard Machinist Band gave a promenade concert at Masonic Temple Thursday evening last. The attendance was exceedingly large and the program rendered very interesting.

Electrician W. G. Read has been temporarily detailed to Schenectady, N. Y., where he will observe the test of the General Electric Co. 500 kw. generators which are to be installed in the Yard.

The funeral of Medical Director G. A. Bright, U. S. N., retired, took place from his residence in this city on the 14th inst. A detail of blue-jackets in charge of petty officers from the Yard assisted as body bearers.

The written request of F. E. Meredith, chief gunner's mate, for examination for appointment as acting gunner in the Navy, has been approved by the Secretary and he will be ordered to appear before the next examining board.

The Dolphin sails on March 17 for Charleston, S. C., where she will take on board the Secretary of the Navy and his party, including several Senators and Members. She will then proceed to Havana and Guantanamo, Cuba, on a tour of inspection.

Many applications by photographers were made to the Commandant for permission to photograph the decorations in the various shops during Inaugural week. East Gun Carriage Shop was the principal attraction, as it was the most elaborately decorated.

The following electricians have reported during the week for duty in connection with the wireless telegraph station: G. L. Short, J. A. Martin, A. Cameron and A. M. Reinhardt. Each man brings testimonials as to his fitness to hold the position.

Gus Thiekuhl, chief photographer of the Construction and Repair Department, was accorded special permission to make photographs of the Inaugural ceremonies and has succeeded in obtaining a set of the finest views taken of the Inaugural address and parade.

The board appointed to examine candidates from among the minors under instruction in the shops, for the positions as apprentice draftsmen Ordnance Department, have concluded their labors. As the result the following have been transferred from the shops to the drafting room with pay at the rate of $1.68 per diem for the first six months: J. H. Lascallett, L. M. Streamer, C. A. Watson, W. G. H. Stump, G. D. Gallagher and F. H. Kramer.

Another poet has sprung into existence in the Yard and hails from the Secondary Mount Shop. His poetic debut is entitled:

DO IT.

Success in Life consists in deeds—
Not words—but self reliant
Brave deeds, through which the will o'er comes—
All obstacles defiant.
So if you have a work to do
And would not fail and rue it,
Just put your shoulder to the wheel
Push hard, push strong. Just do it.

Some idly wait for luck to come,
Nor think life's what we make it;
While doers work like veterans true
And win the prize and take it.
Then forward with unbending will,
However others view it,
There's just one way success to gain
'Tis simply "go and do it."

If fortune's wheel seems standing still
On Life's steep grade, yet never
Was progress destined to remain
Inert and dead forever.
If from the ruts you'd raise the wheel
Just put your shoulder to it,
Success will then come uppermost
If you'll take hold and do it.

Life's battle is but rough at best,
The truest will be slighted
By those who cannot understand
Till time the wrong has righted.
Then let your aim be higher still
E'en to the death pursue it,
Then you shall win immortal fame
If you've the will to do it.

I love to brave the storms of life
There's strength and beauty in it,
Adversity I rather like
Although I would not win it.
But when it comes I'll vanquish it
And go up higher through it,
There's but one brave alternative
And that is—Die or Do It.

I. A. HEALD.

I carefully read the able address of the President to the Congress of Mothers and was much impressed with his convincing argument as regard the propagation of the sexes. By it I am reminded of a story.

Two Hebrews meeting one day, and after saluting each other, one inquired of the other how their mutual friend Cohen was progressing. He was informed that he was not only married but was the father of a fine son, "and," continued the narrator, "he is blessed with a good landlord. When Cohen informed him of an increase he promptly notified Cohen that he would reduce his rent a dollar a month, and for every child born he would continue the reduction."

Meeting again some five years after, inquiry was again made relative to Cohen.

"Poor fellow, he is dead," replied the other. Being anxious, the other asked what was the complaint. He was amazed when he was informed that the death of Cohen was caused by too strenuous an effort on his part trying to reduce his rent.

* * * *

There is one other question in which I am interested. That is the moral and religious teachings in our public schools. But as there are now so many expressing their views through the public press, both pro and con, I will not take up the space allotted to me with the subject except to say that I am heartily in favor of a trial at least, I am more convinced that a greater necessity is the moral and religious training of many of our law makers, City, State and National.

One can scarcely pick up a paper that his eyes does not behold the spectacle of bribery and corruption. During the last year in our own city men who were looked upon as faultless have gone down in disgrace, their future blasted worship of that Moloch, gold.

What a sad spectacle to see men standing high as National Legislators facing a jury of their countrymen for malfeasance and corruption in office. Are we not fast approaching an era when an honest man in public life will be lonesome? National and State laws seem inadequate to bring a reform. Why not try a school of Morality for their benefit?

RAINDROPS OF WISDOM.

It is no shame for a man to learn that he knoweth not "all whatever age he may be."

Alexander the Great valued learning so highly that he used to say "that he was more indebted to Aristotle for giving him knowledge than to his father for life."

Wisdom adorns riches and shadows poverty.

He gets a great deal of credit who pays cash for everything he buys.

Do good to your friend that he may be a better one, to your enemy that he may become your friend.

In doing what we ought we deserve no praise because it is our duty to our fellow man.

Write down on your heart the advice of one who truly loves you; though you like it not at present some day you may.

You will never have a friend if you must have one who is perfect. A perfect man would be very lonesome.

Ice Wagon Drivers Want Consumers to Ask For Their Card.

GLAZIERS HAVE A GRIEVANCE

Suspender Workers Have American Suspender Co. on Unfair List—Engineers Receive Contract From Robert Portner Brewing Co.—Carpet Mechanics Want Their Card Asked For.

The regular weekly meeting of the Central Labor Union was called to order at 8 p. m. on Monday last by President Dickman.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

The Grievance Committee reported progress.

CREDENTIALS.

White Cooks, No. 767; Alcide Drouin, Philip Guillimi, Charles Milowich, Martin Semperle, and E. M. Staebler.

Teamsters, No. 372: Silas Sherwood, George Fetlow, G. T. Berry, A. J. Davis, and J. L. Smith.

Bills amounting to $31.50 were read and ordered paid.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Suspender Workers, No. 8144, stating that the American Suspender Co., a firm that had built up its trade on the label, being the pioneer in label work, had taken issue with the Union and coerced its employees. Owing to conditions that proved intolerant to the Union, the label was withdrawn from that establishment. Referred to Allied Label League.

From Local No. 430, Ice Wagon Drivers and Helpers, asking that ice consumers ask drivers and helpers to show cards when delivering ice, and thus strengthen the Union. Placed on file.

From E. Sancho Lopez, editor of Porto Rico Workingmen's Journal, inclosing ten copies of that publication, and asking for subscriptions to it. Placed on file.

From Local No. 1021, Glaziers (Brotherhood of Painters), requesting that Warren & Dyer, 627 F street northwest, be placed on "We Do Not Patronize" list. Referred to Grievance Committee.

CALL OF UNIONS.

Carpet Mechanics: Request that members of organized labor ask for card of mechanic who lays their carpets.

Engineers, No. 99: That they had secured a contract from Robert Portner Brewing Co. for an eight-hour day and an increase in wages.

Machinists, Columbia Lodge: That a dispute had arisen between them and another organization affiliated with this body, and requested that a committee of three be appointed to confer with the two organizations. Request granted.

Adjourned.

TO EDITORS TRADES UNIONIST:

San Francisco, March 24.—It is a long way from 'Frisco, To-ronto, but Bob Higgins says whisky is 5 cents a glass there—and that ought to be inducement to make the race. No. 21, by resolution, will send but one delegate, and though there will probably be several candidates, the only one I've heard mentioned is H. L. White—who doesn't have to take a smile to smile. Like "Fatty" Gimmel, of Chicago—whom I haven't meet for twenty years—Harry is of the few naturally cheery under all circumstances. He is the secretary of No. 21—and, like Frank Birdsall, of Denver, fits the place and the place fits him. If an opponent could circulate the report and get it believed that by electing Harry delegate we would lose him as secretary he wouldn't get enough votes to take him to Sausalito.

About that 5 cent whisky—it doesn't affect Phil Steele, who'll get the votes of all good people any way. But there are others—and the suggestion is volunteered that the candidate who will first circulate the promise to take to Toronto all who vote for him will carry the credentials and incidentally lessen campaign expenses.

The Making of a Newspaper.

The daily newspaper, its inception and evolution, was the subject of an interesting lecture given at Shiloh Baptist Church recently in the Free Lectures to the People Course, by Captain George A. Van Smith, of Minnesota. He said in part

"When the original American desired to reduce his thought to symbolic print for preservation or transmission, with the simple directness of his savage nature he sent his squaw for a bit of spruce bark; ripped off its tender innermost cuticle, and wrote or drew. Civilization has improved on the Indians wasteful methods in that it utilizes the whole tree excepting only the bark. The Indian's method can scarcely be called paper making, but rather drawing on nature's stationary department for its rough product."

The lecturer described the making of Egpytian papyrus from 3600 B. C. and the manufacture of Chinese paper which also far antedated the Christian Era.

"The manufacture of genuine paper did not reach Europe until the twelfth century, when it was introduced into Spain by the Moors, and up to the beginning of the nineteenth century small sheets were made slowly by hand. By the hand process a skilled mechanic could, by the most arduous labor, in a day turn out a few dozen sheets of very coarse, rough strong paper. Today the big paper machines turn off a well finished smooth paper ready for the presses at a rate of rather better than a ton an hour. The method of manufacturing paper by hand from the inner bark of the mulberry tree, as today practised by the Japanese, probably represents the method in vogue from the earliest time and strangely enough presents in outline the most approved modern methods.

"The paper on which your daily chronicle of the world's happenings is printed is just wood. There are of course coloring and sizing ingredients, but it is wood. And 90 per cent of it is the raw unvarnished article as it comes from the forest to be crushed to a fibre and in and hour is a sheet of paper ready for the printing press.

"The daily newspaper had its origin in China, in the Pekin Gazette (Tching Pao), or News of the Capital, which began publication before the Christian Era. This unique daily is printed in a Government edition sent to officials and a popular edition sent to subscribers. Ancient Rome also had its daily newspaper devoted to official happenings and called Daily Occurrences. This publication was laboriously written on papyrus."

The lecturer showed pictures of paper machines in action, and took up in detail the history and present conditions of newspaper making in America. He introduced the first stereopticon slides ever made of the new Times building on Thirty-fourth street, New York, a structure with a larger percentage of steel to cubical contents than any other office building in the world; a building of the extreme height of 476 feet, or 100 feet above the torch of Liberty Enlightening the World, which stands in New York harbor. The Times building has thirty-one stories, of which twenty-one are entirely devoted to the work of making a daily newspaper.

Captain Van Smith spoke of the Times building as a visible monument to the brain, energy and sacrifice that enter into the making of every newspaper great or small and to the newspaper life, the most fascinating if most exacting of existences.

A number of views of the interior offices of the World and Herald, and a description of the functions of each department in the great dailies of America, were followed by many anecdotes, humorous, pathetic and tragic illustrative of the varied elements which go to "The Making of a Newspaper."

Working People's Popular Concerts.

The second concert of the first series of Working People's Popular Concerts will be given next Sunday night at National Rifles' Armory Hall, 920 G street northwest.

To those who attended the last concert no further notice is necessary, as their full appreciation of the artistic program presented by Miss Von Unschuld will be attested by their presence at the next concert.

Miss Sadie Gompers, the talented daughter of Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, will render several solos during the concert. Miss Gompers has but recently returned from the West, where she received flattering notices on her rendition of some of the best composers of the old school.

The price of admission (10 cents) is so far below what might be considered the standard for a concert of such a high class that it shows clearly that the promoter is not actuated so much by the amount received in the box office as an endeavor to give the people an opportunity to hear good concerts that meets the requirements of their purses.

G. P. O. Base Ball League.

The base ball fever has struck the shop. Its the one topic of discussion among the fans. The ponies—well they are only here for a short time, but base ball stays until the leaves begin to fall.

Prophesies galore! Some have it that the inclosure on Seventh street where the aggregation known as the Senators hold forth will receive only the overflow from the Mahone lot.

But be that as it may, the G. P. O. League has taken the right start. At a meeting of the fans held on March 12, at Typographical Temple, the association for 1905 was formed, and the following well-known locals elected as officers:

President, Leonard Kukart; Vice-President, Wm. R. Love; Secretary, Wm. R. Barnholt; Treasurer, George Kirch.

After careful consideration by the high officials it was decided that the G. P. O. League should consist of six teams—two of Printers, two of Binders, one of Pressmen, and one from the Foundry, and the following men have been chosen as managers: Montgomery, Press Room; Hart, Foundry; L. B. Cooley and J. H. Williams, Printers, Ecker and Laframbois, Bindery.

It is the intention of the managers that the season shall open on May 1, the attraction being a team composed of Printers against one of Binders.

In this connection it may not be out of place to look over the material out of which two good printer teams could be formed, many of whom have made enviable reputations as base ball players in the past.

There is Berger, Bielaski, La Vinge, Nachmann, Cooley and Skeen, of the First Division; Rullman, Martin, Vogt, Atkinson, Wisener, Corkins, and Luitich, of the Fourth; Will Dow, Giles, Scott, Cotter, Templar, Gene Smith, John Williams, of the Sixth; Geo. Healy, of the Treasury Branch; Fitzwilliams, Broas, Bailey, of the Job Room; Chas. Wright, of the Agricultural Branch, and many others whose names I can not now recall.

It is the intention of the managers to spend considerable money in placing the grounds in first-class condition, and to this end a contribution from G. P. O. employees will be asked of later.

When the paper comes your way be liberal.

CHAS. S. GUNN.

Edward Drew Dead.

Edward Drew, a member of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, died at the Emergency Hospital on Sunday last of pneumonia. Mr. Drew was well known down town, having worked on the Critic in its palmy days. His funeral took place on Tuesday.

ON THUNDER MOUNTAIN.

The Printer Group Gives Promise of Being a Winner All the Way.

Many of the printers at the Government Printing Office are interested in the gold-mining enterprise, the "Printer Group" of the Nonpareil Mining and Developing Co., which is composed of former employees of the G. P. O., being interested both financially and from a standpoint of wishing all members of the craft well in any undertaking.

Any reports from the working of this company is interesting to all at the big office, and the following letter from Robert G. Bailey, general manager of the company at the property, is descriptive of his work of developing a mine:

DIXIE, IDAHO, March 8, 1905.

When we located the "Printer Group" two years ago it looked to me that we were on the back of a winner; when No. 1 (Pica) tunnel was driven in the prospects grew brighter; and now No. 2 (Minion) tunnel gives much better promise than anything that has gone before. Not only does the outlook seem good to me, but dozens of people have visited the property this spring and I have yet to hear of a word said about the property except in its favor.

We started No. 2 tunnel to one side of the small (?) dyke on the Minion, as a crosscut. After going in 10 feet it looked as if we were across the dyke—that we had reached the hanging wall. From surface indications this would have made the dyke about 50 feet wide. We then turned the tunnel sharply to the left, with the idea of drifting along the wall through the country rock. (The country rock is softer and more easily worked.) When the tunnel had been driven in 50 feet, I calculated to crosscut the dyke westward to the foot wall. Imagine our surprise and gratification as work on the tunnel progressed, to learn that we were by no means across the dyke; that what we took for the hanging wall was simply a reef of granite about three feet wide, cutting obliquely across the ledge. As the tunnel work progresses we alternately cut across ledges of porphyry, quartz and talc, varying in width from two to five feet. These stringers cut across the dyke diagonally, and all appear to be mineralized throughout.

Some of the ore in these offshoots from the dyke is as good as I have ever seen anywhere; all the ore on an average looks good.

What these additional ore bodies may mean, I confess I do not know. Our foreman says his opinion of the matter is that the whole mountain is a vast ore body, with occasional reefs or "horses" of granite, sandstone, schist, etc, cutting across it. If such be the case a thousand stamps dropping a thousand years would not exhaust the ore body.

Tunnel No. 2 is now in sixty-five feet. We are gaining about one foot in depth for every foot the tunnel advances. As depth is gained the ore becomes more compressed, lies in place, is softer, more oxidized, more easily worked, and presents a better appearance. From all signs the greater the depth the better class of ore we encounter. I may be mistaken but I surely believe that we and our friends will have no cause to regret our venture in this mining proposition. If I alone voiced this sentiment I might lose hope when I got a low assay, or from some similar cause, but when every person who sees the dyke makes the same hopeful predictions—there is no room in my mind for doubt.

I know you have great faith in the ultimate success of the proposition, and if you could see the matter in the same light as I do I am sure your enthusiasm would be unbounded. No matter what turns up don't lose courage, and don't part with any of your stock. It stands a good show of becoming a valuable asset.

With regards to yourself, as well as all the G. P. O. boys, I am, as ever,

Sincerely yours,

ROBERT G. BAILEY.

EXPERIENCE.

BY THOMAS C. EASTERLING.

If when your plans go all astray,
Gloom and sorrow cloud the way,
Till friends who shared your nectared cup
Have turned their backs and passed you up—
When not a beacon is in sight,
And you have lost, at last, the fight—
Don't give up, but still press on,
For there's a vict'ry to be won;
Keep your courage all the while,
And bear your burdens with a smile—
Put it down "Experience."

If the girl who won your heart
Plays the coquette's hateful part,
Whose fickle smiles their cunning lend
Till false and true their colors blend—
Whose tongue is silvered o'er with lies
Till falsehoods cloud the lovelit skies—
Keep your faith and don't give up,
For she will quaff the bitter cup,
And turn your heart another way,
For there will surely come a day—
Put it down "Experience."

If fortune still her distance keep,
And the path is rough and steep,
And every hour is filled with fears
Till hope grows fainter with the years—
When you have spent every dime,
And being poor seems a crime—
This is the test the fates have lent,
For steel springs higher when 'tis bent;
So let your spirit be likewise,
For all's a blessing in disguise—
Put it down "Experience."

ALLIED PRINTING TRADES UNION LABEL COUNCIL WASHINGTON. 2

Only Eight-Hour Union Office in Town.

THURSDAY, MARCH 30, 1905.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

My esteemed contemporary, the Sunday Star, came out all right last Sunday morning, according to advertisement, and it is a great addition to Washington journalism. It consisted of 56 pages and a 24-page magazine, the latter well-filled with very good literary matter. Special articles on all conceivable subjects filled the paper, and all well written and interesting. Advertisements galore showed that our business men welcome the Star's venture as an opportunity to communicate with the public. The Star is a great newspaper. Long may she flourish!

* * * *

I certainly hope that my friend Joe McCann has not noticed my other friend Belcher's little slip about old John Brown being hanged at Harper's Ferry; for, although the latter undoubtedly knew better, that would not stop Joe from handing him a few hot ones. These little historical slips occur to all us literary men and we bear with each other and never mention them, but not all of our critics appreciate the fact and are as charitable to us as we are to each other.

* * * *

It was a very nice little entertainment that the officer whose duty it was provided for us at the National Union meeting last Saturday night. There were singing by three or four singers and recitations by the Rev. George Buckler, and everything went off to the queen's taste. Why don't I mention the names of the singers? Because I didn't takes notes, and, anyhow, if you were there you know as much about it as I do, and if you were not, what business of yours is it? Speaker Graves had a proper aggregation there, and that is all you need to know. And now let me ask you a question. Why is it that I can't get you to these meetings unless I let you know beforehand that there will be an entertainment and a feed? The new quarters in the Pythian Temple are as fine as frog hair, and there is an elevator by which to get up to the hall instead of climbing stairs. There will be another meeting along about the 29th of April, and if you haven't attended one since you were initiated that will be a good time to break in. With the finest set of officers and the finest quarters in town, I am proud of my G. P. O. Council, I am, and I have been for the last nineteen years.

Thanks, gentle Cycle, for your kindly reference to my justly celebrated poem in a recent issue. You and I know what poetry is. But there are so many who do not. That is what makes me so blamed mad.

* * * *

My friend Philip S. Steele told me one evening last week that he is a candidate for delegate to Toronto. Heretofore I have been hearing nothing on the subject but vague rumors, a very unsatisfactory source of information for one who prides himself on his unvarying accuracy. Mr. Steele came so near the goal last year that he will undoubtedly find running easy. If a lifetime devoted to the union and unionism weighs anything in the scale, especially when coupled with an understanding of the questions that concern our craft and the ability to state his position regarding them, Mr. Steele will lead the ticket.

* * * *

With green-eyed Jealousy clasping me in both her arms because Belcher and not I was chosen as the organ to announce the candidacy of Miss Teresa McDonald for delegate to Toronto, still I hasten to give in my allegiance. What if both are from Rhode Island? That is probably only because they accidentally happened to step out of the State and then kept going, or possibly they were crowded out by people putting on their overcoats as winter approached. Does Belcher carry half of the votes of the Union in his pocket that I do? I guess not. He may control Rhode Island's vote, but he and Billy Leavitt all there is of it. Notwithstanding the are almost fatal error that Miss McDonald made in her herald, I believe I can pull her through, but it was my matchless success in electing Miss Anna Wilson last year that gives me confidence. People will keep testing my powers, though, I am afraid, until I finally fall down.

The mammoth Sunday Star, the latest departure of our enterprising contemporary, the Evening Star, of which the first number has just appeared, is worthy of that great news paper, of which the Post is proud, as every one interested in Washington should be. Brimming full of news, correspondence, description, and tale, splendidly printed and handsomely illustrated it is a magnificent as well as a welcome addition to Washington's Sunday newspapers.—Washington Post.

Our brilliant and enterprising evening contemporary, which has ever been an inspiration to the Times, issued last Sunday the first number of the Sunday Star, which we welcome into the field of Sunday journalism, the more especially that it so nearly fills one's ideal of a great newspaper. The Star is almost as conspicuous a part of Washington as the Capitol.—Washington Times.

Now, of course these notices of the Sunday Star did not actually appear in the papers to which they are ascribed, nor any reference to it whatever, so far as I have been abe to discover in rather carefully scanning them, but something of that sort ought to have been published by both of them, and would have been in the old days. There is never anything lost by such courtesies between newspapers, or similar ones between individuals.

* * * *

I believe Charlie Buchanan, of the Nominations Committee and the Annex Proof Room, is a candidate for delegate to Toronto. He has been acting for some time as though he wanted some one to knock him down and drag him into the race. He is one of those conscientious fellows who want to feel sure that there is a demand for him, and from the number of politicians I have seen around him and the looseness of his coat buttons I think they have got him converted. I do not hesitate to say that I am for him and that he will (consequently) be elected if I have correctly diagnosed the case.

* * * *

All doubts that have heretofore existed in my mind as to whom I will support (whom I shall vote for is a matter of minor importance) for the downtown I. T. U. delegate have been resolved by the candidacy of James Monroe Kreiter, the announcement of which threw us all into a flutter last Monday. Together we have made the Typographical Journal the great magazine which it is, together we come nearer shaping the legislation of Columbia Union than all other forces combined, and together, side by side, we will be found fighting in this campaign. It is not my desire to frighten anyone else into withdrawing, but Kreiter and Victory will be found perching on the same banner on that fair May day on which political fortunes are made and marred.

* * * *

It is perhaps twice in a lifetime that such an ideal candidate for delegate announces himself as we have this year in Orton T. Pierce, of the Post. I have had occasion before to commend the aspirations of some of our members, but it was with feelings of despair as compared with the pure joy with which I announce the candidacy of Mr. Pierce, by which the Union and not he is the favored party. It is scarcely a compliment to Mr. Pierce to say that he will be elected "hands down," as the racing slang puts it, because the fact is patent to anyone. While I have not been authorized to make the announcement of his candidacy I have had so much satisfaction from being assured that it is true that I cannot refrain. Pierce and pure politics! Hip! Hip!

* * * *

It is with pleasure that I again refer to the candidacy of Harry Knapp as the down-town delegate. He is far and away the ablest and best fitted man to capably represent that portion of our Union in the International body (man you will observe I say) that has ever suffered his name to be mentioned in connection with the position. He would have laid Spadge Parsons out as cold as a frosted pumpkin last year had not a lot of us realized that that was Spadge's last and only, while Knapp is good all the time. But he has given way to others often enough; this is his year. Knapp will be elected.

* * * *

Sadie Maguire, the Omaha Western Laborer cheap-for-cash politician, recently had things to say about my Mount Vernon article of a couple of weeks ago. Be of good cheer, Sadie; you are not despised any more widely than you are known. By the way, a Western correspondent not long ago wrote me: "We could down Lynch next year if it were not for Sadie Maguire and such animals. Nothing makes friends faster for a man than such enemies."

* * * *

The latest candidate for delegatorial honors, who has personally assured me that he is in the race, is Titus F. Ellis, of the Proof Division. This makes me revise all my previous predictions, for, after his gallant race of last year, there can be no doubt of Mr. Ellis's election to Toronto. As the best equipped man in the field, I welcome his candidacy, though I doubt not that he could be elected without my efforts. The interests of the Union being my only concern, I am glad to be one of his supporters.

* * * *

There are rumors in the air that Flournoy C. Roberts will be a candidate for delegate, and while it is almost too good news to be true I hope that no cruel enemy has raised my hopes only to dash them to earth. For years one of the most prominent members of the Union, of good address and a pleasing speaker, Mr. Roberts would be an ideal delegate. If it is any inducement to him to make a mere rumor substantial fact to know that he will have my warmest support, I am only too glad to tender it.

* * * *

I am in receipt of The Miners' Magazine, the organ of the Western Federation of Miners, for which I think I am under obligation to my friend Otto Thum, who is an attache of that journal, It is one of the handsomest labor publications in the country.

* * * *

John McVicar, ex-president of the I. T. U. and ex-commissioner of the Detroit public works department, who was in this city from some time in January until after Inauguration, is recovering from his severe illness, according to the Detroit Times. Mr. McVicar was quite ill most of the time while here.

The regular quarterly meeting of the Association of Ex-Delegates will be held next Sunday, at 3 o'clock, at Typographical Temple. There is some money in the treasury. Let's go and devise some means to spend it.

Miss Teresa McDonald visited the office the early part of the week and staked out her claims, meeting with the greatest encouragement.

Free Lectures to the People.

Professor W. L. Davidson, President of the International Chautauqua Alliance, will give a lecture on "In and About Shakespeare's Home," March 31, in the Hall of the Public Library.

Rev. William R. Turner, Rector of St. Michael and All Angels Church, will lecture in the Hall of the Eastern High School, March 31, and will take for his subject "Scotland; Historic, Heroic, Romantic."

Tom Watson's Magazine.

Edwin Markham is still for "The Man With the Hoe" and against the plutocrats and trusts. He is reported to have joined forces permanently with Tom Watson's Magazine. His poem "The Palace," in the first number of that new monthly, is said to rank with the popular masterpiece that first brought him into fame.

GOSSIP FROM THE G. P. O.

Official Gazette.

E. H. Davis is reported as sick.

Guy S. Saffold is on three weeks' leave of absence.

Miss Anna C. Wilson has returned to work, after a five weeks' vacation.

E. L. Scott has returned to work after an illness of about ten days' duration.

Miss Marion Booth reported for duty last Thursday after a five weeks' vacation.

H. J. Southwick is taking advantage of the fine weather to beautify his residence at Riverdale.

Miss Carrie L. Whitehead has been exploiting the beauties of landscape and building of Washington with her sister from Alabama.

There was a splendid turn out of the members of G. P. O. Council, N. U., on the 25th inst., at their new place of meeting, Pythian Temple.

Mr. Smith received an invitation to attend a dance given by the Monotype employees of Chicago on which the label was conspicuously printed. Good symptom; isn't it?

Miss Teresa McDonald, of the Washington Post chapel, distributed her cards announcing her candidacy for delegate to the I. T. U. Convention, on Wednesday afternoon.

The taking of "leave" occasionally is sure beneficial. Frank Wilkins was "off" only seven days and on his return he propounded the following conundrum: "What is it you sit on, lie on, and clean your teeth with?" Ans. "A chair, a bed, and a tooth-brush."

It is with sincere regret that I note the death of O. S. Miller, which occurred Tuesday, March 28th. Mr. Miller was a member of the Gazette force for a number of years and was universally liked and esteemed by all who came in contact with him. About ten years ago he was stricken with typhoid fever and since that time he had not enjoyed good health. He was located in the Main Proof Room as copyholder at the time of his death. His remains were sent to Indianapolis, Ind.—his home—where he was affiliated with a G. A. R. post and the I. O. O. F.

H. J. REDFIELD.

Main Proof Room.

At a chapel meeting held Wednesday, March 29, the following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas the hand of Providence has taken from earth Zidon E. Ross, for many years a reader in the Document Proof Room, Government Printing Office; and

Whereas the employes of said room recall with pleasure the cheerful disposition and ready comradeship of their friend who has gone, and regret that his life has come to its end;

Resolved, That the members of this chapel hereby offer their most sincere sympathy to the family of their deceased fellow-worker, with the hope that they may receive an abundance of the Divine comfort at this time of need.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of Mr. Ross, and to THE TRADES UNIONIST for publication.

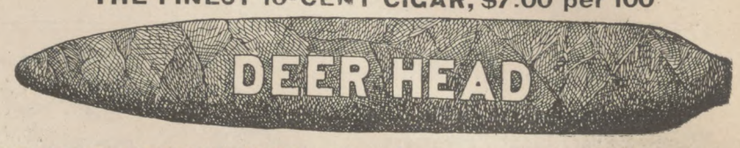
A. H. CHASE,
Committee.

Whereas the grim reaper has once more invaded our circle and removed from our midst our former friend and associate, Osias S. Miller, and while we sincerely deplore his death, we recognize the inevitable decree, that all things earthly are transient and must pass away. Mr. Miller was a man of sterling integrity, just and upright in his dealings, and one who won the confidence of all who came in contact with him by his candor, no less than his manly courtesy. We therefore desire to bear this humble tribute to his memory, and to convey to his immediate family our genuine sympathy in this their hour of trouble and sorrow.



Resolved, That a copy of this preamble and resolution be sent to the family of our late friend, and be published in THE TRADES UNIONIST.

GOSSIP FROM THE G. P. O.

First Division.

Everything quiet in the slug line. Not a change to record.

B. L. Fowler is enjoying the remainder of his leave—nine days.

Yes, "Davey" makes a good chairman, and we might as well give him another term.

Our sick members—Messrs. G. J. Woodgate, E. Douglass King and E. M. Root are still on the sick list.

John Kiernan, recently transferred from the Night Force, began a thirty days' leave without pay on Monday.

Our clever friend, Jimmy Weaver, now of the Fourth Division, is a noonday visitor to Col. J. S. Burnside's lunch counter.

The bowling contest on Monday night between this and the Second Division was well attended. Of course, our Division won out, outplaying the other side.

Our friend Werneke, recently of the Sixth, showed up smiling during the week, and missed his old slug by one; he is now 31. Since Monday's transfers slug 31 is vacant.

"Judge" Mabrey, of the Treasury Department, recently returned from Missouri, paid the office a visit on Monday. He was employed in the S. G. C. in this Division for a number of years.

"Nothing doing" in the candidate line this week. Did you ever witness such a wholesale scarcity of candidates for delegate. Toronto, Canada, is the objective point, and a splendid trip it will be.

On Monday morning J. H. Edsall, C. D. Johnson, F. M. Werneke, Clarence L. Vliet and C. E. La Vigne were transferred to the Fifth Division. At the same time Will H. Way was transferred to the Specifications.

How about your annual leave? Have you taken it? If not, an urgent request has been issued for all such leaves to be taken at the earliest opportunity. Have you seen the North Capitol Street board walk? No joke.

Comrade Sefton has been on the sick list again this week. That accident he met with last July in attempting to board a Ninth street car at the intersection of New York avenue has caused him to lose many hours from work.

Of course you will not forget the Boston Baked Beans dinner at the North Capitol (M. E.) Church, on April 12. Colonel Bentz or Comrade Reed, of the Proof Room, will give you a ticket upon application for 25 cents. Purchase one, anyhow.

H. W. Templar, secretary of the Union Label Committee on text books, of No. 101, has written to the Commissioners of the District requesting a hearing before the Board regarding the use of Union Label text books in the public schools.

If you catch a glimpse of Mr. Lease, the Evening Star route representative any pay day, it is a sure 50 to 1 shot that Disbursing officer Bennett, Paying Teller Wilver, and the man with the "strong box," M. Kane, are heading this way. As a collector, Mr. Lease collects.

"Lest you forget," we would merely note that our watchman friend, George Schlosser has long since been transferred to the regular roll; it is also truthfully reported by Jack Burnside that he is the originator of the order "two by one" out on the promenade at the upper elevator.

On Tuesday afternoon this Division was favored with a call from Mr. Hempler, of Buffalo, N. Y., the patentee of the lockup quoin which bears his name in universal use throughout the country. Imposer Burnside, who had met Mr. H. upon a former visit, showed him through the Division. He was accompanied by Mr. Karr, the well-known jeweller of this city.

Are you aware that the elevator service is very much improved? Well, it is. And if the employees who use them would stop crowding it would be another decided advantage. It requires a trifle less than two minutes to walk down, and there are hundreds who much prefer to walk down and never think of using the elevator at the close of work. But walking up, well—that's a different story.

Now that the hurried work incident to the recent session of Congress is cleared up, our foreman, Mr. A. W. Bowen, has the laborers engaged in the annual house cleaning. It is almost unexplainable where all the dust and accumulations come from in a new building like the present structure. Even the representative from North Carolina (had written it N. C., but being averse to any further "call downs" spelled), Simon Pocher, can't quite keep up with the dust, with his nameless (sawdust) preparation.

MIT DE BOWLERS.

Bruce Bielaski added additional laurels to his reputation.

During the contest both Messrs. Bowen and Shanks, foremen of the respective Divisions, were interested spectators.

Second Division.

Non-expired leaves of absence are now due.

J. R. Purvis and W. M. Edmunds have been transferred to the Patent Specification Division.

We have a compositor in this Division 87 years old, Mr. Howard, who can distribute type without glasses if he chooses.

J. E. Colton has recovered from his attack of pneumonia, and is able to be at work. His many friends are pleased to know this.

The Millenium has arrived. Its editor is a laborer in this office, and he announces himself a candidate for President of the United States.

"Spike" made good in the romantic line. An old fashioned elopement; parental reconciliation; congratulations; happy ever after. Curtain.

J. A. Massey, Jr., a member of this chapel, has taken thirty days' leave, with the intention of entering on a newspaper enterprise at Marietta, Ga., in connection with his father.

Fat tabular work has been running the turn in ending Wednesday, at which everyone is pleased. Turning Spanish into English nonplusses the newcomer, but once mastered, it is easy.

Hank Allen is an enthusiast on bowling. He is one of the team of this Division that rolls ten pins on the bowling alleys of this city, and speaks highly of the latest patent device for setting pins.

Maud S. has a decidedly romantic temperament. Of such nature's poets are born, but Maud carries his aestheticism a trifle over the line. It may be he wanders off into dreamland now and then.

O. C. McCardell, acting chairman of this Division, announces a collection of $67.45 chapel dues for March. He also states there will be no further assessment of five cents for each member hereafter.

We are glad to be able to state that Chairman Trudgian, of this Division, who has had a long and serious illness, is recovering. At last reports, Monday, he was sitting up, and there is little doubt he will be able to resume his employment in another week.

A published newspaper item states that there will not be a reduction of the regular force for some time to come. There is enough work in the office, with the natural increase incident to the growth of the country, to offset the capacity of machine production.

The handy "average books," issued by the Timothy Class of the Ninth Street Christian Church, are distributed quarterly, but may be obtained by applying to Slug 19. They are surely worth a contribution of five or ten cents, on account of their practical value.

A. T. Maupin, of this Division, who has been in ill health, has gone to his home in Stanardsville, Va., where he has a fine farm. Mr. Maupin is an old newspaper man and has many friends in the G. P. O. They hope to see him regain his health and strength, if possible.

There is a certain cartoonist of this Division—I do not care to tell his name—who ably caracaturized the onslaught to the elevator. Needless to say, the rush has slackened. Of course, discipline must be maintained, and a published notice, with a penalty attached, demands stern obedience.

Helper G. O'Connell was taken ill the latter part of last week. The able assistance of L. J. Clements, who is a student of medicine, and Dr. Atkinson, both members of this chapel, after considerable effort, restored him. His difficulty was an extreme attack of ingestion, which affected the action of the heart.

The Dolly Dumpling nurse girls, who are to be seen as they saunter forth from Rust Hall, North Capitol street, on their way to Sibley Hospital, must be an invigorating tonic to invalid patients. They are a delight to the eye, and aid as much as medicine in the hands of a physician for the restoration of health. Maud S. may have another romance up his sleeve who knows?

Oysters in every style at R. A. Driscoll's North Capitol and G street. Overholt whisky, 10c.

Third Division.

This is an unusually backward season for candidates.

If there is any gentleman from Pennsylvania who has not been counted, he is invited to make himself known.

Cliff D. Scott, who went last from this Division to the Record Proof Room, returned last Friday morning and was assigned to frame 15.

London has one licensed drinking place to every 436 inhabitants; while the Government Printing Office, with 4,000 employees, has one to every 363.

That Miss Teresa McDonald, as delegate to Toronto, would reflect the highest credit on Columbia Union, there can be no reasonable doubt. Then why not vote for her?

Further returns from Pennsylvania indicate that William McEneany should be added to the roster of persons in this Division who hail from that State, Titusville is Mr. McEneany's home town.

Rev. John Von Schaick, Jr., pastor of the Church of Our Father, Thirteenth and L streets northwest, will give the third lecture in the series of Studies in Scottish History and Religion, entitled "English Law Lords and the Free Church Case of 1904," on Sunday evening, April 2, 1905.

Those who enjoy good music, well performed, need not be told twice that Miss Marie von Unschuld will give the second of her series of popular concerts at the National Rifles' Armory, on Sunday, April 2, at 8:15 p. m.

James Monroe Kreiter came down the line Monday to let it be known that he is a candidate for delegate to Toronto. Which reminds me of a line in Hamlet's soliloquy—"To be, or not to be—" But there is no question about it. Mr. Kreiter will not be elected.

One noon recently, as Mr. Chairman Goodkey was seated in the center of the room, surrounded by a large crowd of his admirers, General Delahunty advanced and presented him with a piece of lead pipe. "Here is your sceptre, Joe," he remarked. "It's a lead pipe cinch," said the redoubtable O. K. G., and the incident was closed.

Messrs. Robert F. Simms and Jarvis Moulden have started a job printing plant on Seventh near D street northwest. They say that any candidate for delegate who fails to give them the job of printing his cards, etc., will surely get thrown down. At least, so Goodkey says. Simms and Moulden were formerly employees in the Third Division, where they have many friends who wish them success in their new venture.

For the first time since the law went into effect requiring a "due stamp" to be affixed to working cards of members of the I. T. U., the Union label was this month printed on the said due stamps. It seems just a bit singular, to say the least, that so important a bit of printing should for so many years (about five, I think), have lacked this sign, so essential as an evidence of Unionism. The excellent secretary-treasurer must have been so much occupied with editorial work in connection with the Typographical Journal that including the Union label on so insignificant a piece of printing as the "due stamp" has entirely escaped his mind. It is high time he got awake.

* * * *

It seems to be my fate to "amuse" Mr. Joseph W. McCann. At least, he has said so a couple of times; yet from the manner of saying it, almost anyone would conclude that Mr. McCann was too mad to be very heartily amused.

According to McCann, Haendel, who was a German, is not now thought to have been an authority on the spelling of his own name. Until a comparatively recent date "Shakespeare" was thought to be correct spelling; but by looking over all the evidence, including letters written by the great master, "Shakespere" was and is now admitted to be the original spelling.

If McCann and his "authorities" would pursue the same course in regard to Haendel, he and they would discover that I have spelled the great composer's name as he spelled it himself. It is quite easy to account for the form of spelling used by McCann and others. The name is written either Haendel, as I have given it, or Händel, the two dots over the "a" having been substituted for a small "e" placed directly over the "a," while omitting "e" following "a" in the syllable "Haen."

Careless spelling by the English, among whom Haendel spent the close of his life, doubtless inaugurated the custom of omitting the two dots over the "a," and spelling the name "Handel," which custom obtains among them to this day. However, Haendel himself had nothing to do with this, for he was a German and spelled as the Germans did—and do. Germans to this day always spell the word Haendel or Händel, They need no "books of reference," for that.

Referring to McCann's other crticisms of me, I will forgive him the dig about the "remarkable gifted" coterie of artists, for it sort of balances his "I have wrote," which appeared in one of his letters concerning me. I will do him the justice to say that I don't believe he thinks I am responsible for the word "remarkable," used in the remarkable way just noted; and I am certain that a person of his apparent intelligence would not willingly use the words, "I have wrote."

As for the word "coterie," I beg to submit that Webster gives this a its definition: "A set or circle of persons who meet familiarly, as for social, literary, or other purposes." I do not think any reasonable person—especially any person who attended Miss Von Unschuld's concert—could object to my use of the word "coterie" in speaking of that lady and those who assisted her.

If what I have here said jars Mr. McCann's intelligence, I hope he will take measures to have it put upon a more secure foundation. J. W. BELCHER.

Specification Notes.

A few are playing the ponies, with usual results.

It would seem that a new rumor of what is to happen shortly is born every hour.

Washing windows and other things of a house-cleaning order began with the first balmy day.

There are a number of long and short hold-over leaves, and there's money in the till to pay them.

Charley Koehl, the agile manipulator of the proof-press, has been presented with a new machine.

That is a strange sort of spirit which animates and suggests nothing bette than "I'm glad it is not me" when a dismissal is made.

It is said that they raise a superior article of honey down in Tennessee, but Mr. Richmond is almost persuaded that the order he sent and paid in advance will never reach Washington.

Your correspondent will soon be able to declare a dividend if interest in these "notes" continue. There is no limit to the satisfaction one may experience as a result of an effort to please everybody.

We are pained to learn of the continued illness of our esteemed fellow-craftsman, Mr. James E. Brooke, who is suffering from a complication of ailments, the nature and extent of which give little hope of early recovery.

Martin has a calendar posted near his frame which represents March as having only twenty-eight days, but in disregard of this he decided to keep right on to the end of the month in order that the paper might not get behind.

The death of Mr. O. S. Miller, on Tuesday, came as a great surprise to members of this chapel, where he was employed for several years. Mr. Miller was esteemed by associates for his gentlemanly bearing, and those who best knew him are prepared to testify to his many sterling qualities.

During the morning hour of Monday last the following named were transferred from this to the Fifth Division: Chas. J. Ziegler, W. S. Sill, Daniel N. Prosser, Walter T. Roche, Jesse M. Clark, Geo. G. Klinknett, and A. T. Wadsworth; and the same morning the following came over from the new building: Will H. Way, W. H. Davis, H. Harrald, and Geo. T. Weaber.

No one has favored us with an explanation of the cause or causes which led to the substitution of iron bars for shutters at the first-story windows of the old Printing Office. It is evident to any casual observer that the change is not appreciated by trysters who habitually made this a place for resting their elbows. The romance of lunch-hour is sadly disturbed by the new order of things.

Under the terms of the new law, which will go into effect on the first of April, a large increase in the issue of trade-marks is anticipated. One attorney has one thousand cases ready for submission and another four hundred. The law requires that the list shall be advertised in the Official Gazette one month prior to final action by the Patent Office; hence there will be little doing here out of the ordinary before about the first of May.

Louie Carroll reports the loss of $25, and is unable to say how it got away. We were relating the incident to a friend in this room when he made known to us a streak of luck he met with some three years ago. He was traveling in a street-car when in some unaccountable way a roll of bills escaped him, amounting to $63—money he had put aside to meet an obligation about due; and following closely upon this it became necessary to submit to the amputation of a leg, which incurred an expense of $900, or his entire money savings, which were then deposited with a local building association, besides months of lost time from the office. It is only by comparison that we may learn that the troubles and trials of this life are more evenly shared than any one individual may know or imagine.

NAVY YARD ITEMS.

The Sylph has gone to Jacksonville, Fla., on special duty.

Capt. A. S. Williams, U. S. Marine Corps, who has been stationed in the Yard, has been detached and ordered to the U. S. S. Illinois.

Gunner Kenyon has been notified to appear before the examining board April 3 for preliminary examination to promotion to grade of chief gunner.

An examination of applicants will be held on April 4 for the purpose of filling the positions of four (4) first class assistant ordnance draftsmen at $3.04 per diem and to establish an eligible register of assistant draftsmen.

Preparations are being made to move the wireless telegraph apparatus, now in the scale house to the small building east of new boiler house, so the smokestack can be used to suspend the aerial wires. It is expected that communication may be had not only with Cape Henry, but the New York Navy Yard also.

APPEARANCES.

A coat that has marks of use upon it is a recommendation to people of sense, and a hat with too smooth a nap and too high a lustre is a derogatory circumstance. The best coats in F street are on the back of penniless, broken down sports, clerks with pitiful salaries, and men who never pay their debts. The heaviest gold chains dangle from the fobs of gamblers and gentlemen of elegant leisure. Costly ornaments on ladies indicate to eyes that are well open a silly lover or a husband cramped for funds. And when a pretty woman goes by in a suit of plain and neat apparel it is a sign that she has fair expectations and a husband that can show a balance in his favor.

* * * *

A WAGGISH CHAPLAIN.

In the Navy Yard we find all trades and all professions—lawyers, doctors, and even ministers. One of the latter while preaching one Sunday recently at a church near Alexandria was annoyed by the inattention of his congregation, as manifested in turning their heads to see everybody who came in.

"Brethren" said he, "it is very difficult to preach when thus interrupted. Now, do you listen to me, and I will tell you the name of every person as they enter the church."

Of course, as he intended, this remark attracted universal attention.

Presently some one entered.

"Brother Joe Moore," called out the minister, while that brother was astonished beyond measure and endeavored in vain to guess what was the matter.

Another person came in.

"Brother John Bayne," bawled out the parson with a like result, and so on in several cases.

After a while the congregation were amazed at hearing the preacher call out, in a loud voice: "A little old man with long whiskers. Don't know him. Every body can look for themselves."

RAIN DROPS OF WISDOM.

He that will not be counselled cannot be helped.

He that knows useful things, and not he that knows it all, is the wise man.

Consider well who you are, what you do, whence you come, and whither you go.

The surest way to live peaceably with your brother scribes is to mind your own business.

Kindness to all wins many a blessing, and administering to the sick knits soul to soul here and hereafter.

Grace, beauty, and sunshine, preeminent satellites in the moral world. May they be the rubies worn by us all.

If your would have a thing kept secret never tell it to anyone, and if you would not have a thing known of you, never do it.

The holiest and the loveliest attributes of woman show themselves in all their beauty when called to assist dissolving nature.

If you would know in reality how much joyousness and life inspiriting bliss there is in assisting the needy just practice the deed.

If a man gives a woman wealth it is only a proof of his generosity, but if he gives her his time it is a proof of love. This, however, cannot be considered as a conclusive proof, for in giving their time many men bestow that which is of no value to themselves or others.

If any one has a competence of the goods of this world contentment should sit enthroned in robes of peace. If anyone has more than this let him dispense the same to the needy, and the richest of all earthy blessings will be his—the lofty swellings of his heart and the benedictions of the recipient.

For several days the employees in the Yard have been on the qui vive, owing to the fact that a stranger bearing credentials from the Secretary of the Navy has been making some investigations relative to the system now in vogue in the Yard in handling the large mechanical forces.

One rumor, which, if true, would be much regretted, and which would be fought to a finish, was that the naval officers in charge were to be replaced by civilians having special experience in ordnance manufacture.

This rumor easily falls to the ground, as it is an established fact—one that cannot be controverted—that Secretary Morton cannot duplicate from private corporations the equals, and certainly not the superiors, of those now in charge of the Naval Gun Factory.

For instance, when we are pushed for time, when the shops are congested with work that is wanted hurriedly for completed ships, a certain amount of guns and carriages are given out by contract. Invariably, after the completion and acceptance by officials of Navy Department, the expert mechanics in the Yard are required to adjust the mechanism that is necessary to a perfect machine. This being true then why should the Secretary, whose knowledge of gun manufacture is so recent, attempt to change the condition which have made the Naval Gun Factory at this Yard a power that is felt over the entire world.

From the best information obtainable I am led to believe that the Secretary is anxious to improve the system of work in not only the Naval Gun Factory but in all the Navy Yards.

Former Secretary Whitney endeavored to replace red tape with simplicity, and partially succeeded, and it is understood that Secretary Morton will, when the report of the inspector is submitted, follow up to completion the work started by Mr. Whitney.

It is dollars to doughnuts that very few changes will be made in the Naval Gun Factory, either in the supervising force, the manner of construction, or in the force of mechanics.

Secretary Morton can always rely on his assistants in the Yard in not only weeding out the incompetents, who from time to time as mechanics are needed report for work, but also the idlers and boozers, and in this respect the supervising force have no better assistants than the shop stewards representing Columbia Lodge, No. 174.

IN MEMORIAM.

Wm. F. Beaumont, of the Tool Division, whose illness I have previously reported, died at his residence in Anacostia, March 21.

When our friends pass away, those with whom we have keen closely associated, whose natures are a part of our conditions and environment, we mourn their loss and our sympathies go out to their loved ones. But when the green destroyer enters our own household and takes bone of our bone and flesh of our flesh the blow falls more heavily.

Sweet harmonist and beautiful as sweet
And young as beautiful, and gay as young
And happy as good.

He has left us and entered that world of spirits, the beauties of which eye hath not seen and whose harmonies ear hath not heard.

Truly it is said fleeting and transitory are the flowers of earth, and those that bloom the loveliest oftentimes are the first to fade away. They fade only to bloom in a more perfect region where disease can never into nor chilling frosts destroy the tender blossom.

It is selfish for us to complain, for thou art happy and enjoying the blessed realities thou did'st delight to anticipate while here on earth. Lonely indeed are our hearts. Still we would not recall thee back to earth again to struggle with its temptations and sorrows. We rest in the consolation; we know that our Redeemer liveth, and that as he lives we shall live also, and while our loved one cannot come back to us, we can go to him.

LOVED AND LOST.

We weep for the loved and lost, Earth's fairest flowers,
Seem first to wither 'neath the rude wind's blast,
Though oft protected from its blighting
showers,
Yet are they surely forced to yield at last
To the destroyer's touch, to droop and die,
To fall around us cold and silently.

We weep for the loved and lost, how fond we cling
With firm unyielding grasp, to those we love,
Refusing oft to grant the offering,
Tho' rightly claimed by Him who rules
above,
For oh 'tis hard to see our dear ones laid
So dark and deep within their narrow bed.

We weep for the loved and lost, yet sweet the thought
That those we loved and fondly cherished
here,
Will, with the ransomed, from their sleep be brought
To dwell forever 'mid that blissful sphere,
While all is beauteous, fair, and dazzling
bright,
Without one dimming shade of sorrow's night.

We weep for the loved and lost, yet look aloft
To that blest heaven, free from clouds and storms,
And see that little barque, so tempest tost
Securely harbored safe from every harm,
And think what rapturous joy, 'mid pleasures fair
Await to welcome those who enter there.

From Clime to Clime.

In our notice of Sam Murray's book, "From Clime to Clime," in last week's paper, we stated that Mr. Murray had covered the distance in his itinerary (21,630 miles) in six months. It should have read eighteen months. Mr. Murray is well pleased with the success he has achieved as an author, and his book has been well received.

Allied Label League.

Owing to the storm coming up early last Friday evening there was a small attendance and no business was transacted. The next meeting of the League will be held on Friday, April 14.

All label organizations are earnestly requested to have delegates present, so that the large amount of work mapped out can be carried out successfully.

THE TRADES UNIONIST.

OFFICIAL ORGAN CENTRAL LABOR UNION, WASHINGTON BRANCH, AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

Vol. IX. No. 43. WASHINGTON, D. C., THURSDAY, APRIL 6, 1905. Price, 3 Cents.

CENTRAL LABOR UNION.

Bookbinders Want Public Library to Observe Eight-Hour Day.

The regular weekly meeting of the Central Labor Union was called to order at 8 o'clock on Monday evening, President Dickman in the chair.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

The Grievance Committee reported progress on Golden & Co. and Warren & Dyer cases.

CREDENTIALS.

Electrotypers, No. 17: Martin Burns.

Steam Engineers, No. 99: Milton Snelling, vice C. F. Howdershell.

The Committee on Credentials reporting favorably on credentials, the delegates present were duly obligated.

Bill for $45 for rent for quarter ending June 30, 1905, was ordered paid.

CALL OF UNIONS.

Bookbinders: Requested that the Secretary of the Central Labor Union communicate with the Commissioners of the District of Columbia and inform them that the eight-hour law was being violated with reference to bookbinders working in Washington Public Library.

Musicians: Request members of organized labor to refrain from patronizing those places of amusement now on "We Do Not Patronize List."

Plumbers: That they had not heard from their grievance against S. Artz. The information was given.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Finance Committee submitted a partial report on the excursion of 1905, and on motion the Secretary was directed to call a special meeting of the Labor Day Committee of 1904 on Sunday next. He was also directed to notify all interested parties to be present.

Adjourned.

JUST EVERY-DAY LIFE.

Permitted a respectful suggestion to the gentlemen from the House on the Hill engaged in looking after the printing output, I would say there be placed on the title page of each work a line reading, "Copies of this book can be secured by mailing — cents to the Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C." By this means each copy would be an advertisement, a material revenue be derived therefrom, and members of Congress relieved from requests for publications to an appreciable extent.

If any difficulty exists, it lies in the duplication. An editor will prepare a batch of statistics for publication; so will his contemporary. One Sunday evening a lady of my acquaintance was reciting to a number of visitors her trouble with mice, ending with the suggestion that one of the gentlemen present might secure a feline enroute home, find her front door key under the mat and deposit the desired animal in the hall. Next night, near 12 o'clock, one of the gentlemen chased across the K street parking, secured a specimen of the Thomas variety, and deposited it in the location designated. That morning, about 4:45, on my way home, I espied a giant cat, and remembering the request, after divers scratches, found the key and did likewise. The difficulty lies in the duplication.

Anent the Dr. Osler proposition:

At 20 the man fails to hear the swish of the skirt on the stair; at 40 he listens for it.

At 20 the girl furnishes the buttonierre; at 40 the man manages to pass the florist's on the way down street and she selects a bunch at his expense.

At 20 he kicks the bottle from the woman's hand; at 40 he volunteers to buy the poison.

At 20, basking in a woman's smile, he imagines he has reached the acme of happiness; at 40 meets the woman who diffuses full measure of sunlight into his heart, she being unborn when he was a victim of the first hallucination. H. S. SUTTON.

Was reinforced too feebly by the heart;

IN THE SPRING.

Pushed by the ever-brightening hours
Moves nature's spacious scenery,
And with an apron full of flowers
The earth puts on her greenery.
Yet pause before you shed
Your flannels warm and red,
Although you may perspire.
Wait till you hear
The voices clear,
In accents high and higher,
Of fans with souls on fire:
"Kill the umpire!"

The spring is here for keeps. A gray green mist of bud and leaf fringes the streets and avenues. Through open doors and windows the ear is greeted by the laughter of happy children and the twitter of nesting birds, and the eye finds rest inthe fleecy white and ethereal blue of cloud and sky. In the words of the poet, "ring doves coo again, all things woo again," and the unctuous murmur of the persuasive candidate makes all nature hum with gladness as he passes down the line.

Organized Labor Triumphant.

We were among the first to direct the attention of organized labor, some two years ago, to the danger of reaction in the industrial world, and to emphasize the need of greater vigilance and more systematic co-operation in defense of the rights and just claims of the wage-earners, just then seriously threatened by legal and other attacks.

Parryism was rampant, and progress toward friendly relations between employers and employed on the basis of right and equity was blocked by militant and hypocritical "alliances" and organizations whose real reason for existence was, so far as their moving spirits were concerned, determined hostility to the whole unionist movement. Sweeping, grossly unfair, and reckless decisions were being made by prejudiced judges. These so encouraged unscrupulous attorneys that they did not hesitate to challenge the plainest and best established principles of law in relation to unionism and union activity. They would have undone the work of a century and revived the infamous conspiracy and anti-strike laws of the early days of great industry if they had been permitted to have their way.

But organized labor is not a house built upon the sand, and it has withstood these assaults. Now there are numberless signs of a change for the better. We believe that the reaction has failed, and that henceforth, if labor will but stand firm, united, and resolute, sanity will prevail in the treatment of labor by the courts, by the majority of level-headed employers, and the impartial public.—American Federationist.

PEOPLE'S FREE LECTURES.

Entertainment of High Order Given Weekly to the People.

Colonel John McElroy, of the National Tribune of this city, entertained a large and enthusiastic audience in the Hall of the Eastern High School on the evening of March 24, in the Course Free Lectures to the People: The Colonel took for his subject: "Gateways of the World."

In the course of his interesting talk the lecturer said: Nature has divided the surface of the earth into continents by great barriers of oceans, high mountain ranges and wide deserts. She has again by similar barriers subdivided the continents into what is known as countries or nations. These barriers are of the utmost importance, from their tendency to fuse together the people of diverse races, customs, and languages inclosed by them into homogeneous nations. Penetrating these barriers are great natural gateways through which all communications and commerce between the different countries pass. The high importance of these gateways is indicated by the constant recurrence through the centuries of great battles in their neighborhood, having for an object their possession, that being of vital interest to commerce and travel. Armies have always been sent thither to attack or to protect them. An illustration is France, which is shut off from the rest of Europe by the high mountain walls of the Pyrennees, Alps, Jura and Vosges. France was originally peopled by many races, diverse in origin, language and customs, but through the centuries were fused into homogeneous people with the same language, religion and Government. The main gateway to France is where the Vosges Mountains sink down into the sea plain, and is occupied by Belgium and Luxemburg, which have been for thousands of years "the cockpit of Europe."

The greatest gateway in ancient history, was the Plain of Esdraelon near Jerusalem, which was the only passage between the continents of Asia and Africa, and the gate by which the people of Asia Minor reached the Mediterranean Sea. There was periodic battling for 4,000 years for the possession of this gateway, in which all the nations of ancient history were involved. The next great gateway is that of Constantinople and the Valley of the Danube, which is the main doorway between the continents of Europe and Asia, and for which there has been incessant fighting for thousands of years.

The great Russo-Turkish War, for its possession, was fought as late as 1877.

The Atlantic seaboard of the United States is separated from the great interior by the Appalachian chain of mountains, through which great gateways have been cut by the Hudson, Susquehanna, Potomac, James, Monongahela, Kanawha, and Tennessee rivers, and which are now taken advantage of by the great railroad systems between the seaboard and the interior. These have all been the scenes of fearful fighting for their control.

The Potomac river forms a barrier between the northern and southern sections of the Atlantic coast, and Washington, in connection with Richmond, forms the great gateway through which all communications and trade must pass. The control of this gateway was the cause of the fiercest and most continuous fighting in the civil war, during which the battles of magnitude, unprecedented in the history of the world, were fought, and the country around Fredericksburg made a second Esdraelon, and the end of the war came when the Union armies secured complete control.

The next fact of great importance was the barrier of the Rocky Mountains between the great interior of the country and the Pacific coast. Like the passes through the Appalachian chain of mountains, the passes through this barrier were first made by the great animals in search of food, prey, salt, and water. They were followed by the Indians in war and hunting parties, they by the trappers and traders, they by the gold seekers and immigrants. Next came the stage coach, and finally the great transcontinental railroads, which traverse these mountains through three great gateways.

The most stupendous fact in all history has been that more than half of the population of the earth is concentrated upon the far Eastern shores of the Pacific, in China, Japan, Hindostan, and the adjoining countries.

The control of the trade routes with the far East has led to a large portion of the wars of the world, and upon these trade routes rose in ancient times the great cities of Ninevah, Babylon, Alexandria, Cairo, Athens, Rome and Byzantium.

As the center of population moved westward, Venice and Genoa arose in mediaeval times. Spain and Portugal, in trying to secure a share in this great eastern trade, discovered America and the Cape of Good Hope. Immediately the whole face of the world changed, and instead of the Mediterranean being the principal highway of the world, the Atlantic Ocean became that highway and the Mediterranean sank into a byway. Venice and Genoa decayed, while Antwerp, Amsterdam, London and Liverpool rose. We are now confronted with a revolution, as great as that which followed the discovery of the Cape of Good Hope. The extension of the boundaries of the United States to the Pacific Ocean and the ready communication by railroads has made the 85,000,000 people of the United States close neighbors to the 800,000,000 people of the far East, and their trade must come this way, making the Pacific Ocean the great highway of the world instead of the Atlantic Ocean, and building up our cities, particularly Seattle, San Francisco, and Los Angeles, to even higher greatness than attained by Amsterdam, Antwerp, London and Liverpool.

The wise forethought of our Government in acquiring Alaska, Hawaii, Samoa and the Philippines has made the Pacific Ocean an American Sea. Over this new great highway of the world, over this broad avenue of commerce between the 85,000,000 people of the United States and the 800,000,000 of the storied East, over this expanse of land and water, comprising one-sixth of the entire surface of the globe, waves our sacred and beautiful Star Spangled Banner with a power and a glory unequalled by that of any flag ever kissed by the sunlight of Heaven.

On the evening of March 31, Wilbur L. Davidson, D. D., President International Chautauqua Alliance, Secretary of The American University of Washington, D. C., and Manager of the National Chautauqua Bureau, gave a strong, eloquent, and beautiful lecture, in the Hall of the Public Library, in the Course Free Lectures to the People, entitled, "In and About Shakespeare's Home."

Professor Davidson did not attempt to prove the authenticity of Shakespeare's works, nor to enter into the Baconian controversy now raging, but simply to give a better idea of Shakespeare and his work by showing the town and the neighborhood where the poet lived.

Seventy-five imported stereopticon views, pronounced by competent judges to be the finest in America, were depicted upon the screen. The lecture is chaste, engrossing, and poetical, and the views simply beyond comparison. Interest in it was heightened by the fact that the subject just now is so much written and talked about, and the audience pronounced it a magnificent artistic success, highly instructive, and very much enjoyed.

The next lecture in this course to be given at the Public Library will occur on April 7, when Charles F. Nesbitt will give an instructive talk on "City Gardens."

REMEMBERED.

BY ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

His art was loving. Eros set his sign
Upon that youthful forehead, and he drew
The hearts of women, as the sun draws dew.
Love feeds love's thirst as wine feeds love of wine,
Nor is there any potion from the vine
Which makes men drunken, like the subtle brew
Of kisses crushed by kisses; and he grew
Inebriated with that draught divine.

Yet in his sober moments, when the sun
Of radiant summer paled to lonely fall
And passion's sea had grown an ebbing tide,
From out the many Memory singled one
Full cup that seemed the sweetest of them all—
The warm, red mouth that mocked him and denied!

G. P. O. BOWLING LEAGUE.

The Third Division Leads the Bunch at the Present Time.

The G. P. O. Bowling League started off Monday, March 27, amid great enthusiasm. The contestants were the First and Second Divisions, the First winning two out of three games. The Third Division followed a few nights later and took the Fourth Division into camp, winning all the games scheduled with them.

Foremen Bowen and Shanks, Roberts and Lawson were on hand to encourage their respective teams.

* * * *

The League has started off with the following officers: President, Jack Childress; Secretary-Treasurer, F. Holt; Board of Managers: Messrs. Heisler, Holt, Childress, Wolfe, Wisener, and Peel.

* * * *

The following prizes have been donated to the League:

TRADES UNIONIST cup, to team showing the highest average.

W. J. Reilly, box 100 cigars, for highest set.

John E. Bonini, a prize to the team making the highest number of pins in the fifteen games.

F. Geyer, manager of Pabst Brewing Co., through Mr. Miller, a prize for the second highest team score.

* * * *

The following list of prizes have been agreed upon:

One prize to the man with the highest average for six games or over in the League.

One prize to the man with the second highest average for six games or over in the League.

Winners of these two prizes will not be entitled to their team prize for high man, but it will go to the next highest man.

Six prizes.—One to the man with the highest average for six games or over in each club.

One prize for the man making the most strikes in the League.

One prize for the man making the most spares in the League.

Death of W. F. Rodrick.

Walter F. Rodrick, clerk of the Board of Education, well known as a former employe of the G. P. O., died at his home, 151 Kentucky avenue southeast, on Wednesday, of rheumatism of the heart.

Mr. Rodrick was appointed clerk to the Board of Education about four years ago and gave excellent satisfaction in the position.

As a printer he was one of the best ever employed on Specifications, being rapid and clean. In the old piece days he invariably led the room in ems set.

Mr. Rodrick is survived by a widow, who was also a printer, Miss Mott Lorenz, and was also on Specifications at the time she became his wife. He left no children.

ALLIED PRINTING TRADES UNION LABEL COUNCIL WASHINGTON. 2

Only Eight-Hour Union Office in Town.

THURSDAY, APRIL 6, 1905.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

By the loss of a sheet of my copy last week the readers of THE TRADES UNIONIST were deprived of a portion of the treat which I had provided for them. On that sheet I told of the great gratification I experienced at the candidacy of my friend Mark Barnum, of the Job Room, for delegate, an honor for which I have long desired him to compete, magnificently equipped as he is for the position. I also spoke of the candidacy of my friend Frank De Smith, of which I have spoken before, for the same office, and enumerated in my poor way a few of the qualities which especially fit Mr. De Smith to represent this Union at Toronto. A poem or two and some items of minor importance comprised the remainder of the page. I beg to assure my readers that I am as much disappointed because of the mishap as they can be, perhaps more so, and I will strive in the future to make amends for what was not at all my fault. But, for that matter, after a thing is done what boots it whose fault it was? The inquiry can be actuated only by a desire for revenge, the poorest stock a man ever invested in.

* * * *

The Post and Times are better papers since the Star made its new departure. I did not think the Post could be a much better paper, but it has even improved on itself. There is nothing like competition to bring about desirable conditions. It is within the recollection of many that prior to the establishment of the Times as a union printers' venture it was almost impossible to get a line relating to labor matters into either of the then existing papers, but after that event they both employed labor editors and ran regular labor departments. If you don't see what you want, ask for it; then if no intention of supplying the demand appears, indicate that you will get it in some other way and it will come. And right here I will say that the workingman who does not take and read at least one daily paper every day and at least one labor paper every week ought to be deprived of the right to manage his own affairs, and I believe he is, as a general proposition, for he does not know enough to manage them, nor even enough to know that he has no hand in managing them. Oh, yes, there are plenty of them, and many of them are "the most intelligent" class of trades unionists who make their living out of printing.

* * * *

Oh, by the way, another paragraph was a remonstrance against the practice of unduly complimenting young lawyers by suggesting that they resemble somebody who has made his mark in the world, instancing the Free Lunch Fiend's fancy that Judge Charlie Ennis is beginning to look like me. A newspaper paragraph saying that Congressman Sulzer, of New York, looked like Henry Clay, printed when he first came to Congress, came near ruining his career; but he has outgrown it. However, I really think Charlie is beginning to look more important.

* * * *

Beware of ever telling a story to a professional story-teller. Before you are half way through, your story will have reminded him of a story, and from that on he only waits for you to get to the climax, when, without the slightest appreciation of the point of your story, he hastens to begin his. Oh, yes, we all know him—in fact, I know a number of him. It is rare that a good raconteur is a good listener. As almost any of us (who can) would rather tell a story than listen to one, we all are impressed what a good fellow he is who never offers to relate an anecdote, but always laughs heartily and invariably at the right place when we tell one. Now, if I might be permitted to suggest to my friends of the first mentioned class—and if they were not my friends I would not want to be making suggestions to them—if they will just wait their turn and indulge in a good haw-haw at the end of the other fellow's story (and it is an accomplishment easily acquired), their stories, when told, will be received with twice the enthusiasm, for no fellow can laugh easily and naturally at another fellow's story immediately after his own has fallen flat. It is, after all, only an exhibition of ordinary politeness to seem to enjoy the other fellow's story, even if you are chock full of what you know to be a much better one. And while I am pouring out my wisdom and giving easy lessons in good breeding let me go a little further and suggest that after you have told a story it is not exactly proper to begin another before a more modest man can get a chance to start his; but a still greater affront, if you are trying to be real boorish, may be given by walking off at the conclusion of your story and as your victim starts to tell his. The refinement of cruelty, however, is to refuse to listen to a story because you have heard it, which is usually done with a vast assumption of superiority and contempt, though, if you are of the breed who customarily practice this clownishness, you may be made to look down your nose for a half day by a dose of your own medicine. Then there is the jackass (of course my friends are not jackasses or they would not be my friends) who, at the conclusion of your story, retells it "as it ought to be told," or with a slight variation, or with a different climax, or tells where he heard it before and who told it, "and you just ought to hear him tell it"—the object being to belittle the present raconteur, of course.

No, I've no personal grievances on this score. It is not often that I tell a story. I prefer to write them, and then nobody can interrupt me except by laying the paper down, a fact of which I am not cognizant, and should not care if I were. And I do not have to listen to the other fellow's story, and yet escape the charge of discourtesy.

I'll bet that the "Nonsense Here and There" man, who animadverts on the closeness of "Bloomer's punctuation" never read a book on punctuation, doesn't know punctuation when he sees it nor its office, doesn't know a qualifying clause from a boxing glove, owes his groceryman, whips his wife, starves his children, patronizes Chinese laundries, corrects every "take" he sets, goes through the alley on pay day, drinks 5-cent whisky, votes the Populist ticket, and plays pinochle. Do you want on?

The Association of ex-Delegates held its regular quarterly meeting on Sunday afternoon, President Zach. T. Jenkins in the chair, Secretary John T. Herbert on deck as usual. The rag was chewed for awhile in the matter of giving an entertainment, which was finally referred back to the entertainment committee, there being nothing in particular in view. The dues were further reduced to $1 a year and unpaid dues remitted to a certain point. A committee was appointed to draft appropriate resolutions on the death of ex-Delegate O. S. Miller, whose death occurred last week. The association adjourned without indorsing any candidates for union offices. Say, do you know that there are in this city such infernal fools as to believe that the ex-Delegates do indorse candidates, or such d—d scoundrels as to pretend to believe it? You don't? Well, you don't know how many different kinds of fools and scoundrels there are in this world.

The sales of the Union Outfitters' to Men Company for March, one of the poorest months of the year for the clothing trade, because it is neither winter nor spring, warrant the prediction that it will be one of the most successful businesses in Washington. Established as it was to "boom the label," it has had the effect of making many of the other stores put up union-label signs which never had them before, but they will not stay up unless their popularity is demonstrated. We demand the label on our printing; let us also demand it on everything we wear. The Union Store has everything that a man wants to wear and should receive the custom of every union man. I do not think a single stockholder became such for profit, but to furnish a place where all union goods can be bought. Let us meet them in the same spirit.

I had the pleasure of an introduction to "Tim Tickle" last Sunday—a personal introduction, I mean, of course, for we have been acquainted literarily for some time—and found him a very pleasant, agreeable gentleman, as all the regular writers of THE TRADES UNIONIST are. It is only the irregular and occasional people who introduce dissensions where otherwise all is peace. Mr. Tickle is a true unionist, one of those who are willing to contribute their time and services to the union and be useful in other ways than by the mere payment of dues, and of such is the Kingdom of Heaven.

We haven't sold quite all the shares of the National Mutual Finance and Investment Company yet, and if you want to save a dollar or two a pay day that you will never miss and yet place it where it will do the most good for you, now is the time to subscribe. (I don't mind saying that if I had been present at the accouchement it would never have been burdened with so long a name without a kick from me.) It is bound to win; so get in, boys. (No objection to girls.)

The second of the popular concerts given by Miss Marie Von Unschuld was at National Rifles Armory last Sunday night, to a house crowded to its limit. The fact that this concert was given "with the approval and the indorsement of the American Federation of Labor and the Central Labor Union" shows that the sympathies of Miss Von Unschuld are with organized labor or she would not seek its indorsement. I shall not attempt a critique of the numbers, nor am I capable of writing one, but that all the artists were most capable was evidenced by the warm applause and the demands for encores. Miss Von Unschuld is one of the most delightful pianists I have ever listened to, with a wonderful touch in the pianissimo and astounding volume in the forte passages. Miss Sadie Gompers, daughter of the president of the American Federation of Labor, Mr. Samuel Gompers, has a voice showing careful training, by which its excellent natural qualities have been greatly developed. She sings with excellent taste and feeling, and a great range, clear enunciation, and splendid control of her voice. The musical world will hear more of her. Mr. Lucien Conen, the violinist, showed thorough knowledge and command of his instrument, playing most tastefully the difficult numbers assigned him, excelling in double-stop work, and was most generously applauded. Mr. Robert E. Steel, the flutist, also had the sympathy of the audience with him in each of his numbers. The flute is not a favorite instrument of mine, but I think he did fine work with it. It was a graceful and pleasing act in Miss Von Unschuld to have her pupils play some of the accompaniments, and the little girls, some of them not more than 10 years old, showed the care that had been bestowed upon them. It was, all in all, a most enjoyable concert, up to the standard of those for which ten times the seat prices are usually charged, and makes the world of working people largely Miss Von Unschuld's debtor.

What has heretofore threatened to be a tame campaign for delegate we now have assurance of being a hot one, made so by the entrance of Walter Virgil Smith, ex-president, into the lists, being the second Smith to offer us the opportunity of securing a really able delegation. For me to attempt to add anything to the just fame of Mr. Smith by anything I may say would be to gild pure gold or paint the lily. It will be the first time in its history that this Union will have sent two delegates bearing the same name. Ex-President Smith will be a credit and an honor to us and add new laurels to a load which is now making him round shouldered. What a proud union Columbia ought to be!

* * * *

You candidates can prepare to begin to get ready for business. The entrance into the delegatorial arena of my friend Thomas Jefferson Rowe, of the Second Division, puts a new face on the whole matter. Heretofore I have indulged in some prognostications as to the probable winners, but new factors require new figures. I have no hesitation in giving it as my opinion, which is the same thing as a straight tip, that Mr. Rowe will land an easy winner, as he ought to because of his ability and the valuable service he has rendered as chairman of the Amos Cummings Memorial Committee. It is sometimes quite a strain on me to pick the winners, but not in the case of Mr. Rowe; he is a foregone conclusion.

Shelby Smith, who has been cited to appear before a trial board of Philadelphia Union on charges filed against him by the I. T. U. Executive Council for violation of section 81 of the general laws, has made demand upon the Council for certain documents, and among the number the following, which I copy because it seems to affect two members of Columbia Union:

4. All letters, telegrams, or other communications received by the Executive Council, or by James M. Lynch, or John W. Bramwood, officially or personally, which in any manner bear on or refer to the "Philadelphia situation," from the persons named below, and certified copies of the answers thereto, to wit:

L. C. Shepard, Grand Rapids, Mich.
George Dabney, Pittsburg, Pa.
V. B. Kinney, Omaha, Nebr.
William Klinger, Chicago, Ill.
Michael Colbert, Chicago, Ill.
Ed. C. Thrift, Detroit, Mich.
Thomas McConkey, New York, N. Y.
George Jackson, New York, N. Y.
Charles T. Scott, Boston, Mass.
Norman McPhail, Boston, Mass.
E. E. Calhoon, Washington, D. C.
A. F. Bloomer, Washington, D. C.
Harry Ogden, Cincinnati, Ohio.
John F. Quirk, Albany, N. Y.
Fred H. Brown, Syracuse, N. Y.
Elmer Throssell, Newark, N. J.

Is it any wonder that my support is so eagerly sought by candidates for office, when my name is to be found in what is probably very distinguished company? Not any. My advice to Shelby, after this and some other cracks he has made, is that he plead mental irresponsibility and throw himself on the mercy of the court. I believe he could get corroborative evidence in this city of the justice of his plea. However, as this is not a categorical answer to the charge so far as it includes me, so far as it is a charge, and ignoring the ridiculousness of the demand, I will state for the benefit of all who may have any curiosity on the subject that I have never mentioned the "Philadelphia situation" in any manner in any letter or telegram to Mr. Lynch, Mr. Bramwood, or Mr. Hugo Miller, these constituting the Executive Council, nor ever felt any interest in it except to feel sorry for Philadelphia Union in having fallen into such hands. I can't speak for the others, but two or three of whom have I ever met and most of whom I never before heard of. And Shelby seemed such a nice man, too.

* * * *

We have grandfathers galore in the Proof Division, and even throughout the office generally, but it remained for Mr. Emmet B. Chambers, who is also mayor of Kensington, Md., to be the first within my knowledge to reach the dignity and honor of great-grandfather. No, I don't know any of the particulars; but who so base as to ask for a bill of particulars at such a time? When I saw him going up the front steps last Monday morning, two steps at a jump, I knew that he was not merely seeking to escape Dr. Osler.

* * * *

And again my calculations are knocked galley west. Joseph E. Goodkey, who polled nearly 500 votes for delegate to the A. F. of L. last year that he didn't panhandle for, and who can easily double the number by his arts of persuasion, permits me to announce him for delegate to Toronto. I am more than delighted. An able debater, thoroughly informed on all the great subjects, in touch with all the membership, he will make a magnificent delegate. I am also glad because I am sure that I will find in him a delightful traveling companion on my outing when I go to Toronto next August.

H. V. Bisbee, of the Library Division, formerly one of the publishers of the Craftsman, of this city, has sold four bound volumes of that paper to Mr. George E. Barnett, professor of political economy of Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, who is desirous of securing National and I. T. U. Convention Proceedings for 1850, 1857, and 1876; Typographical Journal, volumes 4 and 5; The Printer, New York, 1859–1864; The Printer's Circular, Philadelphia, 1866 and following years; The American Model Printer, New York, 1879 et seq.; Our Organette, Indianapolis, 1882 and succeeding years, as well as the first volume of the Craftsman. Can anybody accommodate him?

Prof. Henry W. Weber's Rebew Orchestra will give a recital on April 25 at Odd Fellows' Hall, and there are numerous reasons why we should accord him most substantial patronage outside of the selfish one of enjoying a splendid programme, splendidly rendered, but if I tell them to you now, over two weeks prior to the event, you will forget them before the time comes. I'll bet you don't remember half the things I told you two weeks ago. I'll tell you all about it in ample time.

GOSSIP FROM THE G. P. O.

First Division.

Not a thing doing in slug quotations this week.

George W. Sylvester has been transferred to the Spess.

Slug 165, Mr. A. J. Gibbs, of the "Supply Division," is on fifteen days' leave.

Mr. L. Woodward having returned from his leave, "Doc" Radley is back in alley 23.

Jacob Persinger, having been summoned to his Ohio home, is using his unexpired leave.

Two of the laborers, Messrs. Delano and Carter, took the Civil Service examination a few days since.

Since his transfer to the Division, Geo. A. Plummer is on his old job—working with Lesher's bunch.

Candidate Harry C. Knapp passed through the Division on Monday, handing out his cards. Of course, he was cordially received.

Messrs. R. L. Davidson and N. J. Lillard were unanimously re-elected chairman and secretary of this Division for the ensuing quarter.

Henry W. Gray, custodian of the vault, and all-round confidential man, took last Saturday off and went a-fishing up the Potomac.

Do not forget the approaching entertainment in Odd Fellows' Hall, for the benefit of that excellent and popular Rebew Orchestra. Mr. Rebew is no stranger, but one of us, and both he and his musical organization should be most liberally patronized.

Comrade E. Douglas King reported for work on Monday, after one week's illness. He suffered from a violent and protracted attack of hiccoughs.

The well-known Sergeant John Waller is in charge of the "Subway." However, he visits the Division daily in quest of page cord, page papers, etc.

E. M. Root, our general utility man, despite the protestations of his physician, reported for work on Monday. He had several carbuncles on his neck.

After an absence of seven weeks, our fellow-workmen, who represents slug 119, Mr. George J. Woodgate, reported on Monday morning, and was most cordially greeted.

Candidate Steele denies that he was looking for the Maltese Cross over in the cage on Saturday. The two D's—Daley and Del.—says it was only a quarter he dropped in the sawdust in the cuspidor.

The G. P. O. Immediate Relief Association has a total membership of 211. The Friendship Sick Relief has a membership of 154. Slowly but surely growing in membership. Excellent associations.

After a brief sojourn in this Division, W. J. Weiss has been transferred to the Interior. However, I guess "Billy" is pleased with the change; the environments of a branch is better suited to his inclinations.

We have heard the names of Joseph E. Goodkey, chairman of the Third, Titus F. Ellis, Proof Room, Walter V. Smith, of the Second, and Mark H. Barnum, of the Job Room, mentioned as candidates for delegates. Of course, the First Division's popular candidate, Philip S. Steele, is in the race as a winner. From our point of observation it looks as if he will carry the credentials. He should receive, as he deserves, the chapel's unanimous support.

Miss Teresa McDonald, of the Post proof room, and candidate for delegate paid this Division a visit on Tuesday. Judging from the numerous commendatory remarks, we should infer that Miss McDonald created a most favorable impression and will receive a rousing ballot in this Division. Then, too, printers generally are not unmindful, and will remember how graciously she withdrew from last year's campaign and thereby assured the election of Miss Wilson. "One good turn deserves another," and we are out of the guessing if Miss McDonald will not be one of the successful contestants.

Second Division.

Who is your choice for delegate?

Henry Taylor has been assigned to the ring force.

George P. Phillips contemplates the erection of a cottage in the near future near Georgetown.

The bicycle offered for the benefit of a deceased Union printer of Baltimore was won by a member of the Baltimore Sun force. No. 25 drew it.

It may be of interest to know that an average of eleven takes per day of the regular specification copy is being "set" on the Lanston Monotype machine.

Our friends, Messieurs proof readers, should not be so chary of rings. Occasionally they may err, but let the error always be on the side of doubt.

Miss Teresa McDonald, of the Post passed her card Tuesday, The lady has excellent prospects this year. Give her a vote, boys. Of course the girls will.

April fool day found its usual quota of victims—in this Division. The laugh went around at their expense. If it were not for a little humor life would, indeed, be a dull affair.

There is a current rumor that the handsome genial, popular Jack Rowe, is a candidate for delegate. If the rumor should prove to be true, get down solid for him. Those who know him can vouch for his worth.

Our jolly comrade, Bill Bailey, passed his card lately. It bore the insignia of the G. A. R. and incidentally bore testimony of the esteem of his comrades by the fact that he is a commander of his particular Post.

The G. P. O. Base Ball League will contain two printer teams. The teams must be organized by May 1. The Mahone lot will be used on Mondays and Fridays for practice. Season tickets will be distributed to contributors, which will entitle them to seats at all games.

The bowling team of this Division will have a bowling contest on April 5, 12, 21, and 26, at 8 o'clock sharp, on the "Palace" alleys, E street between Ninth and Tenth, south side. They cordially invite all their friends to be present.

T. L. Jones gave a rendition of excellent worth on Wednesday the 29th at the Ninth Street Church, corner Ninth and D streets, northeast. He will sing again in the Rebew Orchestra at Odd Fellows' Hall, on Seventh street, April 25.

Miss Anna Wilson, of the Gazette, and Miss Booth, recently returned from Havana, favored us with a visit on Wednesday of last week. Both young ladies look well after their trip, and speak in glowing terms of the Mardi Gras festival at New Orleans.

The late O. S. Miller was a man of sterling worth. He was greatly interested in the phenonema of psychism before his passing away, and studied the subject in all its varied phases. In fact, he seemed convinced of its basic truth. His remains were sent to Indianapolis, Ind., for interment.

* * * *

I met Bill Brockwell, Bill Dorsey, and "Windy" Morgan in a corridor of the Second Division recently, As usual, Bill (Brockwell) was relating one of his redoubtable stories. Chairman Brockwell has recovered from his recent attack of severe illness, and looks jolly as ever.

By the way, I heard a good one on "Windy." As the story goes, he was telling the number of different towns he pursued his avocation in (worked at his trade) in the presence of Foreman Hickman, who computed the time on calculation. The sums total would have made "Windy" 83 years old. As he is still on the sunny side of—but never mind—let it go at that.

I have another as told by Chairman Goodkey, of the Third Division by the way, on himself. He (Goodkey) took some blocks of sugar and marked them after the manner of dice in a crap game. The foreman came along, took a casual squint at Goodkey's ready-made material—and in surprise queried. "Say, Goodkey, are you playing a crap game?"

SPRING AND FALL.

When the leaves begin to spring, the spring begins to sizzle;
When the leaves begin to fall, the fall begins to fizzle.

ANENT THE DELEGATE ELECTION.

If Philip pines for a chance to display
His delegate powers at Toronto, he may
Do it for me, since it is no business of mine—oh!
Yet I don't think it is right to presume
That any one seeks to Steele Philip's boom,
Because Philip's pine is, forsooth, a real Philip-pine-o.

NO FLOWERY RINGDOM.

Not in the Second's ring alleys—we've looked in them both—
Are there real pretty posies, nor any such growth,
Though there's a Beddow bright roses, with roses left out,
And a patch of sweet Williams, with the sweet much in doubt.

UNCLE SAM AND THE OTHER FELLOW.

The diff'rence we note 'twixt Uncle Samuel, good soul,
And a gay Bostonese is just this on the whole:
Dear Uncle Samuel, we know, has his Philippines,
And the fellow from Boston has his fill of beans.

ALL POETS ARE NOT OMADHAUNS.

In this wicked old world many people there are
Who esteem poets and fools as much on a par,
But such people don't know our own poet sublime,
Who is much farther from fool than reason's from rhyme,
And especially so if the fool in the case
Blazons and basks in the rays of royalty's grace;
For while the fool 'muses the court when the court chooses,
Poet Talbott takes pride in courting the muses.

WHEN THE TREES DEPART.

Says Patrick to Michael, with a tear in his voice:
"When the trees are all gone we'll have no cause to rejoice."
"Avick, ye spalpeen," returns Mike, mopping his brow,
"What the divil's the gag ye are givin' me now?"
"No gag at all," responds Pat, "nor any such thing,
'Cause each tree, as you know, always leaves in the spring,
And ere leaving, of course, packs its trunk with due care,
But can't go in the winter, 'cause its limbs are all bare."

Third Division.

Kreiter and Goodkey! Oh, shucks!

The thinking man will think twice before he turns down Philip S. Steele.

Messrs. Chas. O. Doten and C. B. Huse were transferred from this Division to the Fifth on Thursday, March 30.

William W. Satterfield, formerly slug 4 of this Division, who was dropped with the last of the temporaries, has resumed work at the office of the Daily Sentinel, Dover, Del.

Quite a number of the best fellows in the building seem to be pushing the candidacy of Charles B. Buchanan, of the Proof Room, and judging a man by the company he keeps it is fair to assume that Mr. Buchanan will reap results on election day. I am informed that he is in every way worthy of the honor he seeks, and would bring credit upon himself and Columbia Union if chosen as delegate.

Max J. Knoble represented the Third Division at the euchre party given last week by the Woman's Auxiliary, and with his usual bull luck won first prize. "I had good partners," Max modestly remarked. He followed this up Sunday by going (not to church; oh, no!) fishing, and was lucky again, for he reports having caught 300 perch. I understand that the fish hereabout will bite at your shadow, and as Max is a pretty big man his large catch is accounted for.

A spirited election for officers of the chapel for the ensuing six months, held Friday, March 31, resulted in the re-election of Joseph E. Goodkey for chairman by a vote of 37 to 36 for his opponent.

For Secretary, W. Russell Branham of the ring alley received 36 votes; F. Harrison, 18; Matt Maloney, 5; scattering, 14. There is general gloom over the election of Branham, as it is realized that should Chairman Goodkey be absent, applications to the Secretary for rings will be unavailing.

In setting a take of Copyright Catalogue the other day I came across a book written by Edward S. Ellis, entitled "Imitatio Christi," based upon the work of Thomas à Kempis. Forty years ago, when times were hard and high prices were the rule for everything, Irwin P. Beadle, of New York, won the undying gratitude of the rising generation by issuing the original "Beadle's Dime Novels," and Edward S. Ellis, now a patriarch of ninety or thereabouts, was one of Beadle's best writers of Indian tales. Two of those "dime novels" written by Ellis were among the first books I ever read. They were "Bill Biddon, Trapper," and "Nat Todd." They don't write stories like that now.

It was a pleasure to see the large and appreciative audience at Miss Von Unschuld's concert last Sunday night. But it was a greater pleasure to sit and listen. With their usual painstaking indifference the Post and Star were only able to have their reporters at the concert a part of the time, so their reports were, as usual, partly faked.

For some unexplained reason Mr. Lucien Conen did not arrive in time to play the opening number on the program, but when he finally appeared, to play Wieinowski's "Legende" and "Perpetuum Mobile" by Ries, he was enthusiastically recalled.

The flute solos by Mr. Robert E. Steel, flutist of the Marine Band, were finely rendered and well received, and the singing of Miss Sadie Gompers was quite pleasing.

Miss Von Unschuld easily carried off the honors, however, and was recalled after each of her numbers with long-continued applause, to which she responded with additional selections. Her playing of Liszt's transcription of Schubert's "Erlking" was, to my mind, the piece de resistance of the evening. She is a thorough artist, and we may count ourselves fortunate who listen to her playing under such favorable conditions. Not the least pleasing part of the entertainment was the creditable playing of accompaniments by five young pupils of Miss Von Unschuld.

The next and last concert of the course will be given Sunday evening, April 30.

Monday noon Goodkey came down stairs from his luncheon with a thoughtful look upon his open countenance.

"Say!" said he to me, "commere; I want to show you somethin'."

Proceeding to his files of THE TRADES UNIONIST he selected one dated some time in May, 1904, and spread it out upon the bank.

He had the table showing election returns for delegates and other officers.

"See here," said Mr. Goodkey, "what was my vote last year. Here it is: 483 for Trustee and 490 for Delegate to the American Federation of Labor.

"Now," said Mr. Goodkey, shaking his head and looking wise, "if I can get 490 votes without making any canvass, how many could I get if I did make a canvass?"

"Oh, about a hundred, I guess," remarked a bystander.

"Aw, you keep still," said Mr. Goodkey, smiling broadly. "Say, fellers," he continued, "I guess I'll run. I guess I've got just as much license to run as some of them fellers!"

"Certainly you have, Joe," said General Delahunty. "Only don't ask me to nominate you, for somehow or other every one I nominate gets defeated." And the General smiled as if the prospect of defeating somebody was pleasant.

"I'll show 'em," said Mr. Goodkey. "There's Kreiter, now; haint I got just as much license to run as he has? Well, I should smile."

Then everybody smiled and the meeting broke up.

I am a little bit surprised at Bloomer for working off that antiquated fling at Rhode Island that has been repeated so often that it sounds foolish. He must have written it on one of his off days.

Rhode Island, notwithstanding its circumscribed area, is big enough for a good many things. Since 1636 it has been big enough to be a home for those who were persecuted because of their religious belief. The original settlers were big enough to pay the Indians for the land they took for farming and other purposes.

The original deed from Chief Miantonomoh to Roger Williams and his companions is on file in the State House in Providence, and in the offices of the various town clerks may now be seen hundreds of deeds from Indians to the original white purchasers.

Fish, oysters, and clams surpassing in quality anything that can be purchased in the District of Columbia may be had in unlimited quantities by visiting this big little State, and "Rhode Island clam dinners" are an institution widely but never successfully imitated.

Bristol, R. I., is the home of the Herreshoffs, designers and builders of the fastest yachts that ever rode the waves, unbeaten and victorious over the sportsmen of the world. Newport is there, too, and Narragansett Pier, watering places as beautifully situated as any in the world.

Oh, Rhode Island is big, if she is little.

So with her representative, Miss Teresa McDonald. Gifted by nature with a charming personality made doubly attractive by her mental gifts, thoroughly conversant with the business, the needs, the aspirations, and the capabilities of the International Typographical Union, she stands before us to-day the ideal candidate for delegate from Columbia Union. One of the best of those of whom Rhode Island can boast, she is second to none as a worthy exponent of Union principles. It will honor any one to to support her; it will honor Columbia Union to elect her.

Student Strike Breakers.

A correspondent of a New York newspaper recently expressed his shame and indignation at the action of a considerable number of Yale students in offering to play the contemptible part of strike breakers.

Some possible danger of a strike on the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railway existed at the time, but the Yale students knew nothing about the merits of the controversy, as there were no adequate reports of it in the newspapers, and not even the lorn excuse that they thought the strike and strikers to be without justification could be pleaded for them.

No; the eager and premature offer to the railway company was the manifestation of a sentiment that should cause right-minded educators and college-bred men to hang their heads in shame.

But what is the matter with the students? We can not believe that they are bad and cold at heart; that they would knowingly and deliberately aid unfair employers and injure the cause of organized labor. The explanation must be that they are misled and confused by such attacks on unions as President Eliot, of Harvard, has gotten into the habit of making.

But the spectacle is as disgusting and shameful as it is dangerous—not to labor, but to the colleges, which will lose the respect and sympathy of the masses of the wage-earners.

Have the college presidents and leading educators nothing to say about students doing such dirty work? We have heard of no protest against the tendency of President Eliot and Dr. Hadley. Colleges are endowed by public-spirited men and women. Will strike breaking by students bring the colleges good will and support? Of a few plutocrats, perhaps, but not of sober-minded, enlightened, and thoughtful men. Far beyond all this would be the contempt into which the universities and the teachers in them will fall in the estimation of the working people and the general public. If it shall become a general standard for college and university students to become "scabs" and strike breakers, it will arouse indignation and contempt for all who attend and are associated with these institutions of a supposed higher education.—American Federationist.

NAVY YARD ITEMS.

Pard and Tim have met. Nuf Sed.

W. C. Mount, business agent of No. 93, Rochester, N. Y., spent a pleasant hour in the Yard recently shaking hands with the boys.

Geo. M. Donaldson, of West Gun Carriage Shop, has been promoted to leadingman. We always rejoice when a Union man steps up higher, more so when he stays in the Union after promotion. I know this saying will hurt some, but it is their fault, not mine. It is the truth what hurts.

The following telegram will be read with interest by all Union machinists:

ATHOL, MASS., March 23, 1905.

To P. J. Conlon, Washington, D. C.:

Have settled all differences with Starett Tool Co. Union agreement signed. Will use label again. Will organize all the employes to-night. (Signed) JAS. O'CONNELL.

Columbia Lodge, No. 174, at its last meeting decided to hold a special meeting, which, no doubt, will be on the second Sunday in April, to devise ways and means to place the Machinists on the same wage plan as outside shops and the two Government departments, viz., G. P. O. and the Bureau. There is so much dissatisfaction in the Yard on account of the difference in pay that in my judgment it will be a serious proposition on the part of the conservative members to hold in check the more rabid ones. It is to be hoped that a peaceful solution will be the outcome.

A RAT STORY.

"That reminds me," said Parson Richardson, as the boys were discussing the rat question during the lunch recess, "of an incident that happened in my early married life. At that time I lived adjoining the Old Christ Church southeast.

"One night I was awakened by the piercing cry of the babe who was sleeping in his crib. Jumping out of bed I hurriedly lit the lamp, and to my horror I discovered a huge rat gnawing at the baby's hand. My first impulse was to throw the lamp at the rat, but better judgment prevailing I placed the lamp on a stand. Seizing a base ball bat the battle began. It was nip and tuck. The rat seemed to know that I was in dishabille as he carefully dodged my blow to repay me with a nip on the shins.

"Seeing that I was being worsted, I raised the window and yelled, 'Police.' This brought more trouble. A policeman rushed in at the front door just as a colored man and a bull terrier entered from the rear.

"The officer thinking the negro was a burglar seized him, while the bull terrier seeing his master assaulted seized the policeman, and for some time it was impossible to tell which had the best hold.

"Explanations followed and peace reigned; all hands then ascended the stair to finish the rat. Just as we got to the head of the stair, the rat, seeing no doubt that his chances were slim, darted across the room and out of the window which I had forgotten to close. Running across the lawn it passed into the church and next thing we knew the bell was ringing long and loudly."

"How did that happen," asked Sam Lescallet.

"Why that rat just ran up the bell cord and being so heavy he started the ringing," said Parson Richardson.

I am somewhat of ——— myself," remarked Doctor Ferris as the gong struck to resume labor.

A MODERN BATTLE SHIP.

Not one in a thousand ever contemplates the life or cost, of a modern battle ship. For the benefit of those who have neither time or inclination I will state that the life of a ship of said class is less than half that of her wooden prototype—the ship of the line of a previous generation.

The old wooden frigate built of seasoned oak and copper fastened was good for forty years of cruising, while the warship of steel reaches the junk pile in less than twenty years from the time her keel is laid.

Without taking into consideration the possibility of grounding, collision, or destruction by an enemy, there are four stages to the life of a modern armored vessel, each period being of about five years duration.

It requires five years to build such a structure, counting from the time of the signing of the contract until the final acceptance trial of the vessel takes place. For the next five years this floating fighting machine is in active service and is classed as a unit of naval strength, representative of highest advance in naval construction. Then, either by reason of obsoleteness of armature, inferiority of armor, or reduction in speed, the fighting value of the ship declines, and the vessel is therefore neither regarded as a model for future naval construction nor is she assigned to the leading squadron of fighting ships.

The last five years of her existence finds her employed for special duty or as a ship in reserve. The actual period in which a modern battleship can be classed as a fighting machine of the highest order is therefore limited to ten years.

While the vessel is in process of construction her usefulness is in great part prospective, while during the last five years of her existence it is in retrospect that she appeals most strongly even to naval experts.

Regarding the life of a battleship as of twenty years duration, there is therefore an annual depreciation of 5 per cent in her valuation, as the first cost of such a vessel, including its machinery and guns, is about seven million five hundred thousand dollars. The actual loss resulting from deterioration or from other causes is at least one thousand dollars per day.

The cost of maintaining the vessel in commission will approximate $1,500 per day, so that the total outlay in maintaining a battleship in commission, even during a time of peace, involves a direct or indirect expenditure of twenty five hundred dollars daily.

The following circular has been posted on the bulletin:

NAVY DEPARTMENT,
WASHINGTON, March 9, 1905.

Your attention is respectfully invited to the importance of securing the regular attendance of employes under your command at their work and the loss of efficiency which may be caused by frequent leaves without pay and absence from musters. Your attention is called to paragraphs 62 to 70, inclusive, of Navy Yard Order No. 23, revised. The terms of these paragraphs relating to irregular attendance at work should be held strictly enforced, and foremen, quartermen, and leadingmen should be held strictly accountable in cases where irregular attendance is not promptly reported. You should cause the record of attendance of employes to be carefully scrutinized, and when it appears that a man frequently absents himself from musters, even if the number of consecutive musters so missed does not in any case reach six, he should be considered for discharge on account of the irregularity in attendance and excessive loss of time.

Leaves of absence without pay should be granted only for special reasons and in cases of apparent necessity, and care should be taken that such leaves of absence are not taken advantage of to give any employe undue preference in the matter of employment. At least as often as once in each quarter the record of attendance of employes should be scrutinized, and any employe who is losing time at a ratio which would bring the total time lost during the year in excess of thirty days, not counting the suspensions and furloughs, should be admonished, and if the employe persists in continued loss of time he should be discharged in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 64 of the order hereinbefore referred to.

You will use the utmost diligence to secure the regular attendance at their work, and to separate from the Government employment men who do not attend regularly and who without reasonable cause lose more than thirty days annually.

Very respectfully,
PAUL MORTON,
Secretary.

COMMANDANT,
NAVY YARD, WASHINGTON, D. C.:

Respectfully referred to the heads of departments, who will note and strictly adhere to the instructions contained in the letter.

FRANCIS J. HIGGINSON,
Rear Admiral, U. S. N., Commandant

From the above, one who is not connected with the Yard and unaccustomed to naval rules, might infer that the employees of the Yard, without distinction, were such as to require a strict censorship as regards loss of time, etc. Such, however, is not the case. Possibly, without exception, there is no department under the Government where so many men are employed that the loss of time is less than in the Naval Gun Factory.

Like all departments employing several thousand men, you can find in the Yard the same conditions existing as in railroad centers or other manufacturing establishments. A certain percentage of idlers and drunkards, whose only desire seems to be to work sufficiently to meet their actual necessities. Men who prefer vice to virtue, rum shops to happy families, and any house instead of the house of worship. These are the men to whom the Secretary alludes, and not the painstaking, industrious mechanic whose only desire is to give to his employer full value in work for wages received, and provide for his family not only the necessities of life, but using all his energies to lay up in store something for that time in life when Governments, like corporations, have no use for the Old Man.

The semi-annual election of officers of the Stenographers, Typewriters, Bookkeepers and Assistants' Association, No. 11773, of the American Federation of Labor, was held at Spanish Veterans Hall, Tuesday, April 11, when the following officers for the ensuing year were elected: Joseph T. Sherier, president; Louis A. Sterne, first vice-president; Fannie F. Brown, second vice-president; M. K. Clinton, financial secretary; Frank F. Hartwell, recording secretary; J. W. Lowe, treasurer; J. W. Bernhard, guardian; Miss M. Bechtold, guide.

The organization is in a very healthy condition, and all stenographers, typewriters and bookkeepers of the District are earnestly requested to correspond with Recording Secretary, Frank F. Hartwell, 810 Twentieth street northwest, who will be pleased to give full information as to the aims and objects of the above Association.

BOOSTIN' UP THE UNDER DOG.

Some folks sez I'm out o' fashion,
An' they sez it dussent pay,
But I've got my stile o' thinkin'
In a sorter foolish way.
Some folks, they jest snort an' sputter,
'Till ther heads gits all agrog
Boostin' up the lucky feller,
But I'll boost the under dog.

Haint no use fur you to blunder,
Wastin' time on little wars;
Better face the guns that thunder,
Givin' balls an' gittin' scars;
You'll shore find a heap o' fitin'
If yer head don't git agrog,
Plenty wrongs that you kin righten
Boostin' up the under dog.

Haint no time to stand achewin'
Holdin' down the center floor:
Better to be off an' goin',
Where the bullets rip an' roar;
You'll shore need the man thats in you
If yer head don't git agrog,
Fur you'll find a plenty 'gin you
When you boost the under dog.

'Taint no use o' talkin', mister,
Maybe flies kin roost on me,
But life's too tarnation short, sir,
To be other than I be.
Let the ole world snort and holler
'Till it busts an inside cog,
But I'll wade thro' blood an' foller
'Till I boost the under dog.

BYRON.

That soul but vainly strives to simulate
Poetic splendor or poetic balm
In which life's wintry storms do not precede
The magic warmth of art's creative calm.

Ah, sure, no rhymer unimpassionate,
No soul untroubled by life's quickening jars,
Shall ever stand where Byron with a pen
Of fire translates the gossip of the stars.

With Celtic clearness, simple, tender, strong,
And while the world from worldly dreams awoke,
Sad Erin smiled again mid flowers of song.

JUST EVERY-DAY LIFE.

During the inauguration a thousand or more members of the Pennsylvania marching clubs were quartered at the Metropolitan Hotel. A representative of the Philadelphia Inquirer desired to place that paper on the news stand. "Wait a moment," said Newsdealer Queen, "until I consult some of my printer friends." If any copies of the Inquirer were disposed of in that neighborhood they sold from the sidewalk.

We have with us the race bug, the building bug, the investment bug, the bowling bug, and now Brother Cooley wants me to call attention to the base ball bug, in which many are becoming interested.

A headline in one of the late magazines, "A Hunt for Bohemia," is a misnomer. As home is where the heart is, so you make your own Bohemia. Some years ago a lady remarked to me, "You tell a clever story; I'd like to have you meet my friend." And in that sentence a Bohemia was born. The friend could tell a clever story and the circle grew. One of the female members thereof became engaged to be married and a few days before the event attended a gathering to say bye-bye. Her eyes were red; it was plain to see she had been weeping. Here, methinks, in this loyal little woman, forcing back the tears that blur, is to be found the ideal dweller in the tents of Boheme. With an approach to the pace that kills on one side of the scales and a prospective life of domesticity on the other, it involved a rending of the heart strings to choose between. "You have been crying?" was brutally asked. "Not exactly," was the response. "I thought among the last things I would do would be to make one of those burnt-wood poker-chip holders for my chief, and the smoke gets in one's eyes so."

G. P. O. BOWLING LEAGUE.

The Third still leads.

Spence, of the Sixth, has a narrow lead for prize for most spares.

Sherman, of the Third, and Holt, of the Second, are tie for most strikes prize.

Additional prizes have been donated by John P. Sheehan and James S. Dugan.

Bruce Bielaski, of the First, now leads the individual score, with Fitzwilliam a close second.

"Hank" Allen, having recovered from his indisposition, will from now on be a regular rooter for the Second.

On account of Bielaski leaving the city the game scheduled for the 17th between the First and Third will be played on the 15th.

O'Connell, of the Second, made 234 in a game last week, and has a fine chance of winning the prize for highest score.

There being but one game apart between the First, Second, and Third Divisions, the games this week will have have a bearing on the general result.

The League ended the second week with the Third Division still in the lead. During the week the First Division won two out of three games from the Fourth Division, the Second winning three from the Sixth, and the Third two from the Job Room.

PEOPLE'S FREE LECTURES.

Great Interest Shown in the Closing Lectures to the People.

On the evening of March 10, in the Course Free Lectures to the People, at the Eastern High School, Frank J. Hogan, of the Washington Bar, gave a stereopticon lecture to a large and enthusiastic audience, entitled "From the Nation's Capital to and Through the Philippine Archipelago."

Leaving Washington in Summer, the audience traveled with the lecturer over land and sea, a distance of nearly 15,000 miles, they saw some of the beauties of our own country on the run to the Pacific Coast. There was a short stay in San Francisco, a glimpse of the leper-colony island of Hawaii, and a week's stop-over in Honolulu. After leaving Honolulu the travelers discovered an almost unknown little mid-ocean island, and then got a view of an active volcano in the Pacific Ocean. Every corner of the historic city of Manila was visited, a tour made through the archipelago stopping at points on the island of Luzon, Samar, Panay, Cebu, Mindanao, Sulu, and others; something was seen of nearly every Filipino and Moro tribe, and an opportunity gained to study the characteristics of the "little brown brothers."

The lecture was illustrated with about 100 beautiful slides, from photographs taken by Mr. Hogan. Combining the experience of the traveler, and the eloquence of the orator, this bright young man held the intense interest of his audience during the entire lecture.

William L. Hall, of the Bureau of Forestry, discussed the development and the "Life of a Tree" in the course Free Lectures to the People at the Public Library recently. Among other interesting things told to the audience was that a tree must have heat, light, and moisture within a certain range, and the range differs with different trees. These differences account for the wonderful adaptation of trees to different parts of the world, some to swamps, some to deserts, some to lands where it is always warm, some to snowy mountain tops and icy lands of the far North. Then too, in addition to heat, light, and moisture a tree must have soil in which to stand from which to obtain a part of its food and air from which to complete its nutrition. A tree is always modified in form and growth by the degree in which it receives the elements which it requires.

These things make it possible for a tree to live. On the other hand there are things which are substantially influenced by the tree in its growth. The tree has a marked influence upon the other trees which grow near it, changing emphatically their form rate of growth, and utility. Trees that grow in a dense forest differ in these respects from these which grow singly in a park. In the forest, which is only a community of trees, are found many kinds of plants and animals which are not found elsewhere. Their existence is made possible because of the peculiar conditions which the forest induces. Then the soil is changed by the presence of trees. Year after year they drop their leaves upon the ground until in a forest a thick layer is formed which is constantly decaying and becoming mixed with the soil as humus, thereby increasing its fertility, Another very important influence upon the soil is to hold it in place on steep slopes where it is liable to be washed away by storm waters, and on plains where it is liable to be blown away by the winds. Upon climate trees have a marked effect, exerted principally in checking the wind and in making the soil and atmosphere most moist.

Trees are used for beautification, for protection and for their products. Trees used for protection or for their products are usually grown in masses or forests and the maintenance of forests for these purposes is called forestry.

Friday evening, April 7, Charles F. Nesbitt entertained a large audience in the course Free Lectures to the People in the Hall of the Public Library. The lecture was illustrated by sixty slides.

Mr. Nesbitt's subject was "The City Gardens." He said:

"The City Gardens Association of this city is an organization to help the worthy help themselves. The Association realizes that the best form of charity is that which gives a man self-confidence, self-respect and leads him to self-support. With this as the foundation of its work last year it plowed and fertilized land sufficient for eighty gardens, one eight acre in size, furnished seeds and tools for the same, and asked in return that the land should be cultivated well and that each gardener should respect the rights and privileges of his neighbor. The work was carried through to a successful harvest in the fall, many of the gardens laying away provisions for a large part of the winter. Not the least to be reckoned in the success of the movement was the healthy occupation provided, One notable instance in this regard was the great benefit derived by two gardeners who were known to be tuberculosis patients. The movement in this city is modelled after the work of the Vacant Lot Association of Philadelphia. This latter has been such a successful association that during the eight years it has been in existence it has attracted world-wide attention.

Similar movements in London and Paris can be traced to the inspiration of the Philadelphia work. Sixty per cent of the gardeners are men above fifty years of age, men physically incapacitated for indoor employment, men who have found themselves out of employment so late in life that it has been impossible for them to enter into competition with younger men into the occupations and men who desire to add to scanty incomes by healthy labor after hours. From gardens covering 27 acres the first year the movement has grown this past year to 275 acres reaching 4,000 families. From a cost to the Association of $18.25 per garden the first year there has been a reduction to $6.16 per garden this year. The first year one garden in twenty was forfeited from breaking one of the other of the two rules of the Association. This year but one in two hundred and fifty was forfeited. More than ten per cent of the gardeners last season procured land for themselves and worked it at their own expense. Some of them formed a club, hired nine acres of land at $15 per acre and started a truck farm. One of the most successful gardeners was appointed manager. He established a market on the ground and a delivery system of the children of the families interested. These children made from four to five dollars a week working three or four hours a day during vacation.

"Such instances prove," said the lecturer "the great value of this charitable movement. Wherever such a movement has been tried it has been the rule that the second year many of the workers prefer to help themselves." A like movement in Chicago several years ago shows similar results.

The City Gardens Association is also furthering the teaching of gardening in the public schools, more particularly at the present time to encourage civic improvement and to teach the children of the public schools to respect the property of others.

The improvement of back yards from the artistic and the sanitary point of view is urged by the Association. The possibilities of vegetable gardens in back yards for those who do not care to cultivate vacant lots was also discussed.

The simple rules of landscape gardening applied to small premises, either front or rear was also well illustrated.

Death of M. P. Canty.

Michael P. Canty, a well-known member of Bricklayers Union, No. 1, died at his home, 519 H street northeast, on Sunday. Mr. Canty has been in ill health for several years, still his death came as a shock to his many friends. He was prominent in the affairs of his local union, serving as its treasurer for several years. Mr. Canty also served as an International officer and attended many of the conventions of that body.

As a Union man he was honest and sincere in his convictions, firm and unrelenting when he felt his organization was in the right, but with a spirit of conservatism that often aided his organization through difficult questions.

Mr. Canty had the respect and confidence of his organization, which was shown on the many occasions he was chosen to represent it both on questions of a local nature and in International circles.

NO LIMIT IN WEIGHING AGE.

Man's Moral Force Should Be Considered as He Grows Old.

Dr. William Osler, the Johns Hopkins professor who has accepted a call to Oxford University, declared in his farewell address that a man above forty is practically useless, and that a man over sixty is so absolutely worthless that a humane dose of chloroform ought to be administered to him. That statement aroused a storm of protest and helped to reconcile the country to the learned doctor's departure. Of course, the theory is absurd from any standpoint, but it is especially significant as showing the standpoint from which this eminent physician views the subject. In measuring a man he employs only physical and mental standards, ignoring entirely man's moral force and development, which ought to increase with the years. Even from physical and mental standpoints the doctor is grossly in error, for much physical work is done by men above forty and excellent men as work is done by men above sixty. But why pass over the spiritual life of a man. Does science look no farther than to muscle and brain? The heart of man demands recognition, and it is young at forty, strong at sixty and often does its best work after three score years and ten have passed over the head of its possessor.

Nestor complained that the gods do not bestow the wisdom of years until they have withdrawn the vigor of youth. Dr. Osler's theory places a higher estimate upon vigor than upon wisdom, forgetting that the former may be worse than wasted if not directed by the latter. And he would deprive the young of the inspiration that comes from communion with those who, growing riper in experience and broader in sympathy, prove anew that "the path of the just is like the shining light that shineth more and more unto the perfect day." This old world would lose an incalculable amount of love and benevolence and helpful service if Dr. Osler's brutal suggestions were put into practice. But no fear. We shall have more reverence for age and a deeper appreciation of its contribution to society the more we consider the matter. The doctor has become so absorbed in anatomy that he is oblivious to the soul and to the influences that act upon it.—The Commoner.

THURSDAY, APRIL 13, 1905.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

There once was a newspaper man in in the old Second Division who undertook to write up the foreman and assistant foreman of that Division. He grew so enthusiastic over the late Ben Shannon, the assistant, that he had no adjectives left for the foreman, Ed. Jones. Yes, it was in this very paper. So he wound up something in this fashion: "As for Mr. Jones, the foreman, oh, what shall we say? Words fail us." (You observe that he was a "we" correspondent as well.) I am in something of the same predicament now that my long-continued and strenuous efforts have brought ex-President Joe M. Johnson into the field as a candidate for delegate. I have said pleasant things about some of the other candidates, exercising the wise discrimination for which I am noted, and undoubtedly have turned hundreds of votes to them. But if I say that Mr. Johnson is as earnest and devoted as Mr. Steele, as well equipped and able as Mr. Ellis, as conscientious and modest as Mr. Buchanan, as entertaining and deserving as Mr. Frank D. Smith, as companionable and capable as Mr. Walter Virgil Smith (I am afraid I shall find complications in having two Smiths to elect), as upright and alert as Mr. Barnum, as strenuous and watchful as Mr. Goodkey, and as entirely delightful and estimable as Mr. Rowe (I am in grief at a report that Jack will not permit his name to be used), I am doing him no more than justice, and the facts and the capabilities of the language will not admit of more ardent or stronger praise. As president he safely and successfully conducted the affairs of Columbia Union for two years, and for a much longer period has ably assisted me in shaping her destinies. With safe and wise opinions on all subjects, he has the ability to state them convincingly to an audience. He never talks to hear his own voice nor enters a race merely to hear things jingle. Columbia Union has sent many able men to the I. T. U. conventions, but never an abler or better equipped delegate than Joe Johnson.

Belcher makes my little few-line chestnut about Rhode Island the occasion for hurling about three sticks of encyclopedia at an inoffensive and defenseless people. It's nothing but jealousy because of my indorsement of Miss McDonald's candidacy, and I think he is getting ready to claim the entire credit for her election. Beware how you defy me, Belcher! It is many a year since a candidate was elected in Columbia Union who did not have my support. Have a care when you throw down the gantlet to me, Belcher!

The "Frazzled Thoughts" man knows not of what he writes when he says my omnibus nomination machine is again working overtime. It does all its work—and was ever work more satisfactory or potent?—within the prescribed and legal eight hours. But if it had to seek a new headline each week for its product, it might also have to resort to whiskered platitudes to fill its space.

* * * *

My deskmate and the chairman to whom I owe allegiance, William N. Brockwell, notwithstanding he has refused office in this Union, is not without ambition. But he is so extraordinarily conscientious that he believes an aspirant should begin at the bottom and work up. Therefore, though there is no office in the gift of the Union that might not be his if he would merely consent, he chooses to begin his upward clime as near the bottom as justice and the necessities of the case will permit. I have his permission to nominate him for sergeant-at-arms in case the present occupant does not return to the city and indicate his desire to retain the office. He has been a close student of the duties pertaining to the office, has read a number of books written by the most successful sergeants-at-arms in the world's history bearing on bearing of the mace, is quick of eye, light on his feet, and can quell the fiercest tumult by his piercing glances, though not depending on them alone, for he has been taking boxing lessons ever since deciding to accept the office. After this announcement I do not contemplate that there will be any opposition to Mr. Brockwell.

* * * *

I hope that none of the candidates for delegate will be disappointed that I have decided to make none of the nominating speeches next Sunday after that head is reached. I will probably be too hoarse by that time if there were not other reasons. My good friend Steele knows that I am with him though I was compelled to decline the honor he offered me. It was with no less profound regret that I refused Messrs. Frank Smith and Buchanan, though they had claims because of being employed in the same room with me. Mr. Johnson still grieves, while trying to bow to the inevitable. Mr. Barnum was probably more greatly disappointed than the others because of the great part I had in bringing him out. Mr. Goodkey's tears were excusable, and perhaps I had thoughtlessly given him grounds to hope. It is a sincere grief to me that my refusal probably had much to do with Mr. Rowe's declination to run, if he does decline. Mr. Ellis took my kind but firm negative with the fortitude that becomes a really great man, but the tear in the corner of his eye showed the poignancy of his suffering. Mr. Walter V. Smith approached me on the subject with so much diffidence and modesty that he was as nearly prepared as a man can be for such a blow. A simple suggestion to each of the down-town aspirants was sufficient to show them the impropriety of being nominated by other than a down-town man, though I cannot truthfully say that they were not disappointed at my decision. Ah, there are no pleasures in this world that are not attended by pain—no joys without accompaniment of grief.

Last week I made a little preliminary mention of the fact that Prof. Henry W. Weber's Rebew Orchestra will give a recital at Odd Fellows' Hall on April 25, and as this organization has played without money and without price on every occasion when they have been requested to do so, for the National Union and other associations in which we are interested, the least return we can make is to give a generous support on this occasion. Which I would recommend that we each take a couple of tickets, whether we can go or not, but with the perfect understanding that if we don't go we are missing a musical treat, for Henry has worked hard with his bunch until he has them licked into a shape that would be a credit to any musical aggregation.

Mrs. Bessie N. Wild and her pupils gave the last of a series of six musicales last Saturday evening at her studio, 73 Rhode Island avenue northwest. Mrs. Wild is a very fine instrumentalist and is peculiarly successful in imparting instruction both on the piano and vocally, and many of her pupils show marked ability and the results of their teacher's careful training. Her methods are those receiving the approval of all the great performers, and she possesses in large degree the rather rare faculty among fine musicians of being able to teach her art and to imbue her pupils with her own enthusiasm. Mrs. Wild has also been quite successful as a composer, and a number of her compositions, both vocal and instrumental, have found a place among the good music of the day. The programme Saturday evening consisted of vocal and piano solos and duets, and the generous applause evidenced the appreciation of the audience. Among the singers were Mrs. Jessie Spencer Hover, whose sweet voice has been heard at many of the entertainments in which printers were interested; Miss Nettie Wallace, both vocalist and pianist; and Messrs. Will E. Burchfield and Stephen Th. Westdal. The pianists were Mrs. Cora Reamer Clarke, Mrs. Herbert Hollidge, Misses Deborah Hickman, Gertrude Reamer, Mabel Webb, Fern Prince, Ethel Swaine, Gertrude Langford, Florence Gompers, Florence Moyer, Louise Wood, Marian Paul, and Yolande E. Burchfield, and Masters David L. C. Hover and Edmond Hatcher.

In my announcement of the candidacy of Walter V. Smith for delegate last week I spoke of him twice as ex-president, instead of ex-vice-president. But it was due to my inability to associate "vice" with his honored name, and is not that a sufficient explanation?

A friend asked me the other day, "How is it that Shelby Smith was known as Frank Smith in St. Paul and as Shelby here?" I don't know, but the question evidences that Shelby has not the only Suspicious Mind.

Bowling is good, clean exercise, and the interest being taken in the G. P. O. Bowling League is encouraging. It is better for printers than base ball, for it does not endanger fingers, which are very useful in our business. Though it would seem to be more a winter than a summer sport, owing to the violence of the exercise, the boys have to arrange it to bowl when the strenuosity of work does not interfere.

When a man is filled with Suspicions that everybody is Conspiring to Injure him or the cause he is interested in, and Imagines Plotting whenever he sees two or more men Gathered Together, and Talks and Acts in a Deeply Mysterious manner, and sees Devilish Underhanded work on every hand, the next thing you hear of him is that the Police have got him and that he is on the way to the Bug House. I wouldn't say that Shelby Smith is that way, would you?

George P. Nichols, of the Baltimore Sun, ran in to see us a minute or two on Monday. No one has more friends in the G. P. Henry L. Ripley, formerly of the G. P. O., last as "postmaster" on the Record, who resigned two or three years ago on account of failing health and returned to his old home at Edgartown, Mass., to fight for life in the sunshine and on the sea, called on old friends at the office to-day on his return from Ormond, Fla., where he spent the winter. He seems to have found health and is as rugged looking as when he made his first appearance here,

According to the San Francisco Labor Clarion of March 31, Adrian M. Jones, formerly well known in this city, was found unconscious in his room there a few days previously and hovered between life and death for several days in Waldeck Hospital. A marked improvement soon took place and his complete recovery was anticipated. He had worked in the State office at Sacramento during the session of the Legislature. A private note says: "Jones came to Frisco from Los Angeles six or eight months ago and was then in failing health. Adrian, Jr., in the petroleum business in southern California, is in attendance."

Charles W. Fear, secretary of the Union Label Committee of Kansas City and delegate to the recent labor convention at Joplin, Mo., is a candidate for delegate to Toronto from that city. He conducts a department in the Kansas City Labor Herald headed "Of Interest to Printers," and he makes it so. I do not suppose I ought to interfere with the election in a city so far away as Kansas City, but cannot help having a kindly feeling for an esteemed contemporary.

The supply of sawdust has been short lately. Why not fill the cuspidors with breakfast food? It would be almost as good for the purpose, and would demonstrate thereby that it has its uses.

Resolutions on Death of O. S. Miller.

At the last meeting of the Ex-Delegates Association of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, the following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas the hand of death has removed from our midst our esteemed member, Ozias S. Miller, of the Ex-Delegates' Association of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, of Washington, D. C.; and

Whereas the deceased in his intercourse with the members of the Association was sincere and devoted in his support of the objects and aims of the organization; and

Whereas the life of our deceased member was replete with many acts of unobtrusive love and kindness to his family and friends, full of devotion to those most dear to him, patriotic in his following his country's flag, and, as a craftsman, true to the cause of unionism; therefore be it

Resolved, That the Ex-Delegates' Association expresses its sincere sorrow at the death of Ozias S. Miller, which occurred in Washington, March 28, 1905, and tender its heartfelt sympathy to his bereaved relatives and sorrowing friends in the loss of one so devoted to loved ones and steadfast in his friendship. Be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be furnished the relatives of the deceased; that they be spread upon the minutes of the Association, and a copy be furnished the Typographical Journal and THE TRADES UNIONIST for publication.

E. H. Davis has returned to work after an illness of a week's duration.

G. J. Schley took a day off, and I "subbed" for him.

Mrs. A. W. Bowen was nominated for delegate at the last meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary.

H. C. Knapp, of the Times, distributed his card announcing his candidacy for delegate to the I. T. U. convention.

Valentine Ruff utilized several days of his annual leave in fixing up his fences and sprucing things up a bit about the homestead.

At the last meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary Mrs. O. D. Hyler was nominated as a candidate for delegate to the convention to be held at Toronto.

Jed Shaw comes of a long-lived stock. One of his uncles lived to the ripe old age of 104. He has one brother 84 years old and another brother has just celebrated his Seventy-fourth birthday. The latter is postmaster at Dixon, Ill., and he was one of the organizers of the Republican party in that section. The original Shaw in this country was keeper of the log on the Mayflower, and came over the pond in 1620. Jed must be about thirty-five, if one may judge by the cheerful view he takes of life.

Finley S. Hayes, with the assistance of one of the machinists named Gibson, has perfected a gripper which the Mehle company are likely to secure. The device has been placed upon two of the presses and will be put on a great many others in the office. It has been found to do away, to a great extent, with the annoying troubles caused by electricity generated in the sheets of paper by rubbing over each other.

GOSSIP FROM THE G. P. O.

First Division.

A. W. Sefton, Alley 2, is on the sick list.

Less sawdust in the cuspidors. Splendid idea.

B. L. Fowler and Jacob Persinger have returned from their leave.

"Nothing doing" this week, not even a change in the slug quotations.

Philip S. Steele, of this Division, is in the campaign as a winner. Let us hope so.

During the week we have heard the name of ex-President J. M. Johnson used in connection with the office of delegate.

How about the remainder of your unexpired leave? But then the base ball season opens on Friday. That settles it.

Miss McDonald passed through the Division on Monday afternoon. She seems much elated over her prospects for being elected.

Don't forget the excellent musical entertainment to be given in Odd Fellows' Hall, Seventh street, on Tuesday evening, April 25, by the Rebew Orchestra.

Colonel Bentz, of the ring alley trust, should feel highly complimented at the large number of members of this Division that attended the New England dinner on Wednesday.

Let it be understood that when the International Typographical Convention selects Bristol, Tenn., for its annual meeting, Chairman Davidson will be a candidate. So says H. S. Gunn.

The Committee on Rumors labored industriously, if they did not work overtime on Tuesday, for the air was full of rumors, and they found lots of persons to believe their "hot-air" fairy tales.

Did you ever see such a dull campaign? The annual election will be held on Wednesday, May 17, and generally apathy prevails. Perhaps it will become enlivened after the nominations are made at the regular stated meeting on Sunday.

Joseph E. Goodkey, the Third Division's candidate, is a noonday visitor or boarder with our lunch lady. He certainly makes things lively. It is whispered that Mr. Simpson, of the same Division, is in the running. Of course rumors are being industriously circulated.

Second Division.

It was a boy. Born last week. John P. Allen is the happy father.

The brainery certainly has its innings this time—or hopes to have. Most of the candidates so far wield the black and blue pencil.

Mr. Nat G. Watts an imposer of this Division, was recently bequeathed $30,000. He is erecting a large flat on Twelfth street, between N and M streets.

It has been stated that Walter V. Smith will enter the field as a candidate for delegate. If this is correct, it will be our sincere hope that he lands a winner.

One of my fellow compositors handed me the following: "Why is the average farm house like a stylish woman's hair? It generally has a pump-at-door." Next.

E. J. Patch, of the correcting force, won the fifth prize, $5 cash, offered for the best rhyme on a commodity advertised in the Saturday Evening Post. Mr. Patch is an experienced newspaper man, and successfully launched and sold several country newspapers throughout the West and Northwest.

There was a raging rainstorm Wednesday evening of last week, but that did not prevent the bowling team of the Second, of which Messrs. Beddow, Holt, Moler, and O'Connell are members, from scoring a victory of 2 to 0 against the Record team. Remember the place and dates—the "Palace," on E street between Ninth and Tenth, on Wednesday evenings.

Take a friendly hint, boys, or something may drop. I mean that elevator rush; but then, human nature is human nature. Hold a stick of candy up to a dozen children and there will be a grand melee to get there first. How would it do to "go down on the slate" to the extent of the capacity of the elevator—that is, beginning with the first slug in routine. It seems, too, as though there could be a quicker return for the second load. The service is somewhat clumsy.

* * *

On account of his severe illness, Chairman J. B. Trudgian declined renomination as chairman.

The candidates and number of votes cast in the contest Wednesday, April 5, were:

For Chairman: W. R. Abbott, 15; L. J. Clements, 32; O. C. McCardell, 44.

For Secretary: T. J. Arrington, 52; S. M. Simpson, 39.

Messrs. J. E. Colton, N. H. Lytle, and F. T. Razee acted as tellers.

Our deceased fellow compositor, W. F. Rodrick, who at the time of his death was a member of the Board of Education, and in whose honor the flags of the city schools were half-masted, was one of a trio of "swifts"—Rodrick, McCann, and Duguid, famous in their day for rolling up big scores. Mr. Rodrick labored at the case and read proof in the Specification Division at the time he took the position he held at the time of his death on the School Board. He had amassed, in various form of legitimate speculation, a considerable for tune.

Our iron competitors have minimized the interest in hand type-setting, but as a matter of curiosity it may be stated that a woman compositor in the Spess holds a record of three stickfuls of 15 lines each in 27 minutes, or 9 minutes to the stickful, This would make 6 stickfuls or 90 lines in 54 minutes. McCann holds a record of 91 lines in 60 minutes. Very likely the lady in an hour's time would have slowed down, so that the records would have been about equal. An hour of such speed would require great endurance, such as, perhaps, only a man of McCann's strength would be capable of. As a comparison, 3 to 4 stickfuls an hour is the average compositor's capacity.

Try oyster pan roast, 10c. Ladies' Dining Room. R. A. Driscoll, North Capitol and G street

Third Division.

Beautiful weather, this, for those who are on leave.

Harry Knapp, of the Times, left his cards a few days ago for the chairman to circulate.

Those of us who are compelled to be at our frames are wishing for July 1, so that we, too, may enjoy the open air.

If we must have spittoons, please let us have them under as favorable conditions as possible. Can it be possible that the appropriation for cleaning them has run out?

The chapel was honored on Monday last by a call from Miss Teresa McDonald, of the Post, candidate for delegate to Toronto. Miss McDonald received a hearty greeting, particularly from a number of her old friends, who took occasion to predict her election. It must be said, with due regard to the possibilities, that all signs so far point to the little Rhode Island lady as the successful candidate from down-town.

* * * *

"I'm the only candidate that ain't a proof reader," remarked Mr. Goodkey the other day.

"There is one thing certain, Mr. Chairman," I remarked. "You can beat Kreiter, anyhow."

"Didn't you know Kreiter wasn't running?" said the chairman. "Miss McDonald is the down-town candidate."

With which latter assertion I heartily agreed.

* * * *

It was my privilege to receive an invitation to one of Mrs. Bessie N. Wild's monthly musicales, given for the purpose of showing the progress made of her pupils, at her studio, 73 Rhode Island avenue northwest, last Saturday evening. It seemed hardly possible that so much genuine enjoyment could be had from the singing and playing of little children, who all showed abundant evidences of careful training, and whose performances were rendered with much credit, both to themselves and their teacher. The program consisted of piano solos, piano duets, and vocal solos, 27 numbers in all. This musicale was the last of a series of six, to be followed next month by the annual public recital.

An unexpected development took place last week. Until the last issue of THE TRADES UNIONIST the great majority of the employees of the G. P. O. were unaware that the force could boast of an octogenarian. That a man may be a good printer and do a competent day's work at the age of 80 and over, is proved by the voluntary statement of Walter Dudley Morgan, slug 47, Third Division. Mr. Morgan admitted to a correspondent of this paper that "he was telling the number of different towns he pursued his avocation in (worked at his trade) in the presence of Foreman Hickman, who computed the time on calculation. The sum total would have made Windy 83 years old. As I understand it, no account was taken of the time Mr. Morgan lived before he worked at his trade. It would be fair to assume that he began working at the printing business at the age of 15, which, when we add in the elapsed time since he unbosomed himself to Mr. Hickman, would make him a little over a hundred. How about it, Windy?

* * * *

"Rah! Rah! Rah!
Who are we?
We are the Goodkey 'lection 'mittee!
Are we, Good (whis) key?
Yes, we are
Good (whis) key! Good (whis) key!
Rah! Rah! Rah!"

"That's the war cry that 'lected me, ha! ha!" said Mr. Goodkey immediately after election, as he passed me a card containing the above dreadful stuff. Whether the chairman's statement is correct or not, the mere possibility of such a thing happening makes one ponder on the slight causes which are often behind great events.

There appears to be a great diversity of opinion as to the merits of Chairman Goodkey. For instance, one man passed me a paper on which was written these words: "Like the frogs in the fable, the voters of the Third wanted a King. And they got him."

Almost immediately afterward I heard another man say that he had never been in a chapel before where the chairman did so much to benefit the compositors as Mr. Goodkey does. And so it goes. The truth of the whole matter, to my mind, appears to be that our chairman is such a many-sided man that one must know him thoroughly in order to understand him. Who that has ever read "Pickwick Papers" will forget that his first impression of Mr. Pickwick was that of a man somewhat given to picnics and sprees; which impression later gave way to the image of a jovial, large-hearted, manly English gentleman, who so ingratiated himself into the liking of the reader that when "fines" was reached he laid down his book with genuine regret.

To the suggestion that Mr. Goodkey, like Mr. Pickwick, would appear to better advantage in story form, I must enter a decided negative. Our chairman must be seen and heard to be fully appreciated. Let it be noted that in spite of his reputation as a terror for fines he has fined nobody during the past three months. In the few instances where he has seen fit to reprimand he has not been so fortunate.

Like George Washington, Benedict Arnold, and several other great men, he has a bad temper which sometimes gets away from him. But generally speaking, the man who makes it a practice to live up to the chapel and office rules will have no trouble with Goodkey. He has enemies. So had Shakespere, Bill Nye, J. Ham Lewis, and others who rose to greatness in spite of obstacles. His large mind may be seen in the following manifesto, issued March 31, at three o'clock.:

READ AND PASS.

To all those who made my reelection possible I render my utmost thanks.

To those who did not see their way clear to vote for me I entertain the kindliest feelings.

The vote would apparently indicate a divided chapel, but I hope to show even those that I can rise above the level and give all a square deal.

With best regards and thanks to all.

Fraternally,
J. E. GOODKEY.
J. W. BELCHER.

Sixth Division.

L. D. Weeks, of machine 30, this Division, returned to work on Monday after an absence of a couple of weeks.

Word has been received by a member of this chapel from Harry Bradley, who resigned last week. He is at present in New York City and doing nicely.

Harry T. Young, of the Fourth Division, resigned last Saturday, and will embark in the newspaper business in the South. During the last session of Congress Mr. Young was a machine operator in the Sixth Division. He is a bright young man, exceedingly popular with his associates, and I predict for him a successful newspaper career.

By making the statement last week that somebody had said that Charlie Ennis was beginning to look like himself Pard Bloomer may properly be accused of striking below the belt. It looks like an attempt on the part of Mr. Bloomer to bring to a close the career of a young man who, otherwise, is destined to hold the highest office within the gift of No. 101's members.

W. J. Dow, assistant foreman of this Division, received word on Sunday announcing the sudden death of his father at his home in Pierce City, Mo. As his father had always been in the best of health, the news of his death came as a sudden shock. Mr. Dow left immediately for his home town, where he is at present. The sympathies of the entire Sixth Division and of his many other friends are undoubtedly his.

So far the campaign is a disappointment as compared with last year. Of course there is plenty time yet to give the printer and the engraver a chance to do some fancy work in the card line. If anyone has any idea of putting musical notes on their card, I would suggest that that be left to Titus Ellis. Come on, boys, (and girls') 'liven things up a bit. Give us something—picture cards, lead pencils, blue ribbons or any old thing.

The announcement that Joe M. Johnson will be a candidate for delegate this year will cause no little disappointment among a good many—disappointment only in the fact that he had been looked upon as one of the chief attractions in the oratorical line, for next Sunday's seance. Mr. Johnson is one of the best orators in Columbia Union. He is so thoroughly well-posted in Union affairs and so well known among the craft, both here and at large, that it would seem almost out of place to mention his many qualifications. Should he be elected to go to Toronto, Perpetual Delegate Anderson, of Atlanta, will have a rival of the first-class when it comes to oratory.

Talk about your ga-lant chairmen! I never admired anything so much in my life as I did the manner in which Chairman Geo. Hayden introduced Miss Teresa McDonald to the boys on Monday. Had there been anything lacking in the manner of this charming little lady to win votes, what Chairman Hayden said in his introductory remarks would easily win over the heart of the most ardent woman-hater. I have already said I believe it would be safe to place her on your list of winners, and I'll stick to it.

Between bowling and base ball, the fellow who likes a little recreation after office hours should find plenty to amuse him. So far the showing made by the Sixth Division bowlers is not of the highest order. But for all this there is a good excuse. When the League was formed the present members of this Division were doing a night stunt on the Record, and the Sixth Division team was composed of bowlers from the day side. When the latter Division was disbanded a team was speedily organized from this force to carry on the work. However, they are gradually getting into form, and I expect to see a number of the prizes landed by the Sixth's team. Cold weather the past week somewhat held in check the base ball enthusiasts. Most every evening finds a few of the boys batting the ball over the diamond and getting themselves in shape for the opening game.

So much space in THE TRADES UNIONIST has been occupied recently in telling of the sterling abilities of delegatorial candidates, that at first thought I had concluded to keep out of it, and stick to minor matters. But how can one keep out when the very spirit of the thing is in the air. There is Joe Goodkey, of the Third. I presume he is making a horseback campaign as he is said to be in the saddle in his Division. If Goodkey is elected, President Lynch will have cause to remember that he has been there.

I have not been chosen as the personal announcer for anybody, but Walter Smith did tell me that he is a candidate. Of all the candidates, he is possessed of a personal acquiantanceship probably greater than that of any other. He has been active in union affairs for years, and will undoubtedly put up a strong race in the coming contest.

Then there is my great and good friend James Monroe Kreiter. In this instance the temptation to stuff the ballot box is great but it will not be necessary. He isn't a 'long shot in the race by any means.

To my way of thinking, Chas. B. Buchanan stands an excellent chance of attending the convention as a delegate. Of a pleasing personality, well versed in union affairs, and a large personal acquaintanceship he seems to be possessed of all the qualities that go to make a winner.

While we of No. 101 are looking forward to next Sunday as the day on which the candidates are given their licenses to begin active campaigns, our sisters of the Auxiliary have already passed that interesting part of the proceedings, and two ladies are now engaged in an active campaign.

At a meeting of the Auxiliary last week Mrs. O. D. Hyler and Mrs. A. W. Bowen were nominated to represent that body at its coming Toronto convention, Mrs. Hyler being placed in nomination by Mrs. J. A. Huston, and Mrs. Bowen by Mrs. Ed. Thomas and Mrs. Joe Johnson, wife of Columbia's ex-president. And in this connection they do say that that faithful little apostle of unionism—Mrs. Johnson—is possessed of a power of oratory equal to that of her distinguished husband, and that she could possibly give the "old gent" the ace and deuce, and beat him at the game.

But it is not my purpose to dwell upon the sterling ability of Mrs. Johnson as an orator, but rather upon the many qualities which would make one of the candidates an ideal delegate.

It is not my pleasure to possess the personal acquaintanceship of Mrs. O. D. Hyler, but I do know Mrs. Bowen, and have known her for a good many years. As a worker for the church, for the lodge, or for the cause of unionism she has ever been ready to lend the helping hand. I have known of her participation in many events, but I have the first instance to learn where she was found wanting in the ability to do that part assigned to her, and to do it well.

And while I may be accused by some of our sisters of mixing into that which should not concern me, I can not at this time refrain from saying that no mistake will be made should Mrs. Bowen be chosen to represent the Auxiliary at its coming Toronto convention.

CHAS. S. GUNN.

NAVY YARD ITEMS.

The Naval Gun Factory Machinists' Band gave their third grand ball on Tuesday, April 11, at the National Rifles' Hall. It was a grand success.

Capt. Wm. Swift, formerly an officer in the Yard, who is in a hospital at Havana ill with typhoid, is improving. It will be remembered that he accompanied the Secretary of the Navy to Cuba a few weeks ago and was taken sick.

Sunday work has stopped until July, at least. Every body seems glad, except the misers who would work twenty-four hours in a day and seven days in a week if allowed. The supervising force is exceedingly glad, as is better explained further on.

The wife of Admiral Higginson, commandant of the Yard, is in sorrow owing to the fact that her two Japanese servants, cook and house boy, have taken French leave and disappeared. It is thought that they have gone to offer their services to their country.

The future Assistant Secretary of the Navy has been visiting us, gathering points before he takes charge next autumn. Like his future chief, he also is a railroad man. No doubt in the early future we will have two battle ships passing each other on the same track.

William Bennett, another old landmark, was buried under the auspices of Naval Lodge, F.A.A.M., on Sunday last. Mr. Bennett was master boilermaker under the old system of bureaus. Since the change to Naval Gun Factory he has been in charge of the structural work in the erecting shop. He will be missed, not only for his value to the Government, but by the men under him for his kind consideration toward them in many ways.

The Machinists' Band is again without a permanent leader. Professor Joyce, owing to the fact that he was compelled to leave the city to accept a position in another territory, is the cause of the present condition. He was an able leader and will be missed. Who his successor will be I cannot state at this time. Some of the members are inclined to ask Professor Stanley, the former leader, to again accept the position. I am assured by that gentleman that it would be impossible to do so.

* * * *

There is wailing and gnashing of teeth among the supervising force in the Naval Gun Factory on account of a decision of the Comptroller of the Treasury relative to overtime and pay thereof. It is something like the Biblical story, Rachel weeping for her children because they are not. Master mechanics, quartermen and leadingmen bemoaning the loss of a half day pay for each Sunday since last September.

The facts are thus described:

Owing to the necessity of having guns, mounts, etc., ready for the vessels completed and in the course of construction, it was found to be absolutely necessary that the shops must run not only the whole twenty-four hours during the week days but also on Sundays and legal holidays, to insure a completion of the work in the proper time.

The Department issued the order and the men worked accordingly. For the performance of the same the employees, including master mechanics, quartermen, leadingmen and workmen, were allowed for each Sunday and legal holiday an additional 50 per cent to their daily wage.

After six months or more the extra work has ceased, and to the amazement and dismay of the supervising force Acting Secretary of the Navy Darling, acting on a decision of the Comptroller, or rather one of his assistants, has issued an order debarring the supervising force from participating in the additional 50 per cent.

On next pay day the sum for the additional pay which they have received and no doubt expended will be deducted from their pay envelopes, which will leave the most of them in a position to stand the grocer off for a further period; or, in other words, some of them will draw a blank from the paymaster.

There can be no doubt in the mind of anyone connected with the Yard of the great injustice done to these men under this ruling. They have done their work faithfully and should receive their reward, just the same as the workmen under them.

Let us use figures to illustrate the position these men are placed under this ruling: A fourth class machinist receives $2.64 per diem; added to this the 50 per cent makes the total $3.96. A leadingman receives $3.60 per diem. The fourth class machinist therefore receives 36 cents more than the leadingman. A quarterman receives $4.16 per diem, while a third class machinist receives $2.88 with the additional 50 per cent equals $4.32 or 16 cents more than the quarterman. Continuing the figures and we have a fourth class man receiving 32 cents; a third class man, 72 cents, a second class man $1.08, a first class man, $1.44, and a special rate man, $1.84 more than a leadingman. These figures could be carried out in the same comparison with the quarterman. Or, in other words, the supervising force, who, by their talent and mechanical skill, have reached these positions, are under this ruling compelled to accept lower pay than those under them. The law specifically states that a leadingman shall receive 24 cents more than a first class man, while the quarterman shall receive an additional 80 cents over and above first class pay. This being so, by what rule in geometry or arithmetical crazeology the figuring process develops a total as herein before described I am at a loss to determine. I simply give it up. Some one who is used to bug house algebra please figure out how this sum can be worked. How under the law a leadingman who receives 24 cents more than a first class man, when his time is figured up finds that he receives 36 cents less than a fourth class man. Possibly the following circular letters will explain:

[Received May 24, 1904, Commandant's Office, Navy Yard, Washington, D. C.]

WASHINGTON, May 19, 1904.

SIR:—The following extract from a letter of the Assistant Comptroller of the Treasury, relative to the status of certain employes under the eight-hour law, is printed for the information of officers and employes at navy yards, naval stations, etc.

The Court of Claims (24 Ct. Cls. 340) decided that a watchman was not a laborer or workman within the meaning of the eight-hour law for the reason that:

The employment of a watchman, who is expected to guard and protect the property of the defendants during the hours of darkness, could not have contemplated a hiring on the theory that eight hours constituted a day's labor, giving the right to the employe to quit at the end of eight hours from the commencement of his service.

Second Comptroller Brodhead held in 1873 (2 Comp. Dec., 35,527) that:

Master builders, master carpenters, master mechanics, foreman of bricklayers, carpenters, painters and laborers, superintendent of shoeing shops and storekeepers are prima facie not entitled. The law was intended to apply to any muscular rather than brain labor. If it should satisfactorily appear that any of the classes named were hand laborers, in addition to their duties as master or foreman, they may be entitled. But the classes mentioned have generally merely a supervisory duty and at an increased compensation taking them out of the intent of the law.

In another decision on page 674, same volume, the Second Comptroller said of the eight hour law:

It is understood to apply to such laborers, workmen and mechanics as were employed by the Government for a certain fixed period each day, commencing at a stated time in the morning and working until a specified time in the evening, thus making regular hours; and not such laborers as teamsters, ostlers and farmers whose services are of an intermittent character, and who from the nature of their employment are not, and can not properly be, confined to fixed hours, but are liable to be called on at any time outside the usual hours for mechanics. As to assistant storekeepers, if employed as minute men, liable to be called on at any time, early in the morning and late in the evening without regard to ordinary working hours, they are not entitled.

Very respectfully,

CHAS. H. DARLING,
Assistant Secretary.

Commandant Navy Yards, Naval Stations, etc.

NAVY DEPARTMENT,

WASHINGTON, D. C., December 15, 1904.

SIR:—Referring to the letter of the Superintendent of the Naval Gun Factory, No. 11984, of December 9, 1904, authority is hereby given to run several of the machine shops of the Naval Gun Factory, on Sundays and legal holidays, for a period not to exceed four months. Employes who work on Sundays and holidays during said period will be allowed the ordinary rate of pay with fifty per cent additional for such days. It is not obligatory for employes to work on Sundays and holidays during this period, but those who volunteer should do so with the understanding that their pay will be as above stated.

Very respectfully,

PAUL MORTON,
Secretary.

The Commandant, Navy Yard, Washington, D. C.

NAVY DEPARTMENT,

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 31, 1905.

SIR:—Replying to the letter of the Superintendent of the Naval Gun Factory, No. 3472, of March 30, 1905, stating that the master mechanics, quartermen, and leadingmen have been paid for Sunday work as overtime work in accordance with the precedent established during the Spanish-American war, by authority of the Navy Department as contained in its letter 8802-25, of March 29, 1899, and the further statement that there has been no occasion since the receipt of said letter, so far as the Naval Gun Factory is concerned, to ask for further questions on this subject, your attention is called to the Department's circular letter to the Commandants of Naval Stations and Navy Yards, etc., of May 19, 1904, relative to the status of certain employes under the eight-hour law, which was printed for the officers and employes of the Navy Yards and Naval Stations, etc., a supply of which was sent to the Commandants at all Navy Yards and Naval Stations at that time.

You are directed to check the pay of the foreman, master mechanic, quartermen and leadingmen who do not work with their tools for any overtime pay that has been allowed them contrary to the Department's letter of May 19, 1904, which is amplified by the Assistant Comptroller's letter of February 21, 1905, in a specific claim by Foreman E. B. Hussey.

I also desire a report as to whether or not the circular letter of May 19, 1904, was received by the Commandant and forwarded to the various departments of the Washington Navy Yard, and if so why overtime pay was given to supervisory employes who were debarred under the decision of the Assistant Comptroller from receiving overtime pay.

It is certainly known without any reference to the letter of May 19, 1904, that the Department's letter of December 15, 1904, did not apply to persons who were specifically appropriated for the clerks who are given a per diem compensation. Had the decision of the Assistant Comptroller contained in the Department's circular letter of May 19, 1904, been noted the overtime payments would not have been made to the supervisory class of employes.

Very respectfully,

CHAS. H. DARLING,
Assistant Secretary.

The Commandant Navy Yard, Washington, D. C.

Received April 1, 1905, Commandant's Office, Navy Yard, Washington, D. C.

U. S. NAVY YARD,
Washington, D. C., April 1, 1905.

Respectfully referred to Heads of Departments for their information.

Checkage will be made against all of the supervisory force who have been paid overtime as directed in the within letter.

E. C. PENDLETON,
Captain, U. S. N., Commanding.

Every effort has been put forth to have this matter rectified by the supervising force, aided and seconded by the efforts of Captain Pendleton, the naval superintendent, who better understands the many sacrifices made, not only by the men who work, but by those in charge, to come to the rescue of the department in the hour of trouble.

It is hoped that the matter will be promptly adjusted and the money that has been deducted be promptly returned.

Columbia Lodge has not as yet taken any action as regards the situation. Unless a satisfactory arrangement is made the Union will promptly act in protecting the members who are a part of the supervising force.

The action of Columbia Lodge will be prompt and of such a character that its members who are included in the order of Judge Darling will be recompensed dollar for dollar. Thus does Columbia Lodge stand by those who, after receiving a promotion in the shops, appreciated the value of Unionism and stood by their faith.

The lesson should be learned by those who seceded as soon as promoted, and by those who never knew the benefits of Unity, that it is their duty to themselves and those under them to apply at once for a Union card, knowing, as they do, under the present trouble, that "United we stand, divided we fall." Who will be the first to hand in his petition?

COLUMBIA UNION MEETING

Nominations for Officers and Delegates Brings Out Big Crowd.

A VERY INTERESTING MEETING

Laws Committee Report Goes Through Without Amendment—Newspaper Scale Committee Makes Report—Newsy Notes and Incidents of the Meeting.

The regular weekly meeting of Columbia Typographical Union was called to order at 2 p. m. on Sunday last, President Berg in the chair.

The minutes of the last stated meeting were read and approved.

Traveling cards received during the last meeting were read and accepted.

The Committee on Membership reported favorably on the application of George W. Collett, William S. McDonald, G. W. Crane, and French R. Osthaus, and the gentlemen were elected.

The application of V. C. Meyerhoffer went over for one month.

On request of Spartansburg Union to initiate Oswald Glover, the request was granted.

The newly elected members present were then obligated.

Bills amounting to $34.25 were read and ordered paid.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Philadelphia Union, tendering a rising vote of thanks for assistance. Placed on file.

From Industrialists of America, suggesting method of securing representation at convention to be held in Chicago in June. Placed on file.

From American Federation of Labor, urging that no further aid be extended to Western Federation of Miners, and suggesting sending aid to the Garment Workers on strike in Chicago. Placed on file.

Mr. Whitehead, from Committee on Printing, reported progress in conference with committee from Pressmen and Bookbinders Union in issuing a pamphlet of interest to each organization.

Mr. Dickman asked the privilege of the floor for H. W. Sherman, general secretary of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, and a delegation in waiting, but objection being made, the request was not granted.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

The Laws Committee presented an adverse report on the Goodkey amendment to require chairmen to attend all regular meetings. The report of the committee was concurred in.

The committee reported favorably on an amendment to Article I, Constitution, declaring the aims of the organization. The amendment was adopted.

The committee reporting adversely on the proposition to strike out the sections relating to hand composition in the newspaper scale, the amendment was defeated.

The committee submitted a favorable report on an amendment governing the apprentice on machines, which was concurred in.

The committee reporting unfavorably a proposition to strike out certain sections relating to trial of members, and the report of the committee was concurred in.

The Committee on Newspaper Scale reported that they had failed to secure a conference with the Publishers' Association on the proposed scale, and submitted the supplemental scale for consideration. On motion the officers of the Union were directed to submit the scale to the Publishers' Association.

Mr. Stelle, from Relief Committee, reported on an applicant who recently arrived in the city and who was an invalid before arrival. The committee desired to know whether the Union wanted the case carried by the committee. The matter was sent back to the committee to take such action as they deem necessary.

The President reported four deaths since last meeting.

NEW BUSINESS.

F. C. Roberts presented the following resolution, which was adopted:

Whereas Columbia Union, No. 101, being the first local union to be credited with a female member at the Union Printers' Home; and

Whereas other unions have made provision for the accommodation of their members; therefore be it

Resolved*, That the sum of $10 a month be set aside out of the general fund of the Union, to be known as the "Home Memorial Fund," said appropriation to continue until, in the judgment of the officers of the Union, a sufficient amount has been raised for the purpose of furnishing a memorial room in the Home for our lady members; and be it further

Resolved*, That the officers of the Union be, and are hereby, instructed to take this question up with the officers of the I. T. U. for the purpose of carrying out the instructions of the above resolution.

F. C. Roberts also presented the following resolution, which was adopted:

Resolved*, That Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, recognizing the war being waged on the Union Label by the employing class, requests its members to give more heed to the potency of the label, and when making purchases to call for the Union Label, it being the most practical way to meet the open shop question.

Hugh Everett moved that the Board of Trustees be authorized to loan the sum of $1,000 to The Union Outfitters to Men Company, at 6 per cent per annum, if they deem it a perfectly safe investment, said sum to be repaid within one year. Should a sufficient amount necessary to float the loan necessary for the purpose for which the money is intended be not available the $1,000 be returned to the Board of Trustees on May 1.

An amendment to make the amount of the loan $500 was defeated.

The original proposition was then put and carried—142 to 4.

The Secretary was directed to write to Mr. H. W. Sherman explaining the causes that led up to the refusal of the Union to grant an audience to a delegation of which he was chairman during the session of the Union and inform him of subsequent action of the Union on the proposition he desired to present to the Union.

The chair then declared the next order of business to be the nominations of officers for the ensuing year

Adjourned.

NOTES.

Berg and Hussey—thats Love-ly.

The festive candidate maketh himself numerous these days.

"One good term deserves another." So say the friends of Vice-President Billy Love.

Don't get the two Smith's mixed—Frank D. is a comma chaser, while Walter V. is just a printer.

So far as the proofreader candidates are concerned, the closed season for marking commas has arrived.

Treasurer James E. Bright was referred to as eagle-eyed. Heretofore James has been considered rather foxy.

The gentleman who nominated Joe Goodkey immediately left the hall. However there was no danger of mob violence last Sunday.

All brethren contemplating attending the next meeting are cordially invited to bring along their first aid to the injured packages.

W. J. Willey, of the Post, pushed the Pierce delegatorial ship off the ways. She is now taking on the heavy armament and preparing for the coming battle on May 17.

Chas. B. Buchanan's delegatorial ship was launched in good shape. Chas. H. Ennis cut the ropes, and Edgar S. Meritt gave it a push. If there is anything in a good start, he's it.

So many ex-presidents were present the idea occurred to me that the proper thing to do would be to form an ex-president's association. Just for their own personal amusement, you know.

By referring in his nominating speech to Joe M. Johnson as the coming I. T. U., president, Geo. Halsey made the hit of the day. If elected to go to Toronto, he will undoubtedly make a record that will place his name and the presidency or the I. T. U., almost inseparable.

Thomas A. Bynum told of Titus F. Ellis' many qualifications for delegate. Mr. Bynum is not noted as an orator, at the same time he is one of the most entertaining speakers in Columbia Union.

Don't censure a man too severely for bringing his little child to a union meeting. Remember the Good Book says that if you "bring up a child in the way he should go when he becomes a man he will not depart from it."

The name of Philip S. Steele, "the grand old man," was placed in nomination by John B. Dickman. Mr. Dickman hasn't been very successful lately in nominating winners, but it looks like he had made a home run this time.

James Monroe Kreiter's delegatorial balloon collapsed while being inflated. However, as I have already nominated him for reading clerk at the Toronto session there is no reason to doubt but that he will be there in that capacity.

One of the best posted men in International law in the Union is T. Frank Hall, of the Third Division. His ever readiness to quote from the I. T. U. Constitution is rapidly earning for himself the title of the "watchdog of International Law."

Big, good-natured Charlie Sheldon, of the Job Room, probably gets more real good enjoyment out of a union meeting than any other member who attends meetings. This is easily accounted for from the fact that he looks at everything from the sunny side.

The ovation which greeted the name of Secretary George G. Seibold was a high compliment to that gentleman. One year ago the house was divided on the secretaryship, but to-day everyone is unanimous in their praise for the efficiency of the present Secretary.

P. T. Barnum once said the American people liked to be humbugged. I don't know how Marcus Barnum, the Job Room candidate feels on the subject, but its pretty safe to bet he doesn't agree with the late lamented Phineas, especially when it comes to delegates.

Columbia Union has generously decided to furnish a room at the Colorado Springs Home for the use of lady inmates. I am sure, however, the entire membership will join me in the wish that none of our lady members will have occasion to use the room other than as visitors.

By selecting the venerable Nicholas Watkins as his nominator, Marcus A. Barnum made no mistake. Mr. Watkins is one of the old landmarks of unionism in Washington and the good words he said for Mr. Barnum were gained from a personal acquaintanceship bordering onto twenty years.

I hope my good friend Bloomer will not feel that the ovation which greeted him on his arising to place in nomination the name of President John R. Berg was intended for himself. I understand he let the report of his intended nomination be circulated in advance in order to greet just such a commotion.

Edgar Thompson paid a beautiful tribute to Candidate Harry Knapp, of the "down town." As an associate of Mr. Knapp on the Grievance Committee I have had a chance to become personally acquainted with him and believe that he will make a delegate in whom Columbia Union may feel justly proud if elected.

The real surprise of the day came in the nomination of Dexter Hussey, of the Times, for vice-president. Mr. Hussey has all the qualifications for a first-class vice-president, but methinks he will have some hustling to do if he defeats the present incumbent of that high office.

Miss Teresa McDonald was nominated by ex-Delegate Frank S. Lerch, the nomination being seconded by Miss Carrie L. Whitehead, of the Gazette Division. It was Miss Whitehead who one year ago seconded the nomination of Miss Anna C. Wilson. Miss Whitehead asks no special favors for her candidate on account of sex, but feels that "taxation without representation" is no more acceptable at the present time than it was in the years gone by.

CENTRAL LABOR UNION.

Paperhangers Want E. N. Richards Placed on Unfair List.

The regular weekly meeting of the Central Labor Union was called to order at 8 p. m. on Monday, President Dickman in the chair.

The minutes of the last regular meeting were read and approved.

CREDENTIALS.

Carriage and Wagon Workers International Union: G. H. Graves, vice C. B. Wandel, resigned.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Union Outfitters to Men Co., giving notice of stockholders meeting. Placed on file.

From Potters Herald, of East Liverpool, Ohio, stating that a special edition of that paper to be known as the "Non-unionist" issue, will be printed May 4, and asking for an order for copies of the same. The Secretary was directed to subscribe to 250 copies of the paper.

CALL OF UNIONS.

Paperhangers, No. 420: Asked that E. N. Richards, 1330 G street northwest, be placed on "We Do Not Patronize List." Referred to Grievance Committee.

Bakers: That John G. Schuerger, 216 Ninth street southeast, be placed on list of firms "We Do Not Patronize." Referred to Grievance Committee.

Mill Workers' Helpers Union: Asked if Central Labor Union had received notice of revocation of charter of that Union. Informed that no notice to that effect had been received.

President Dickman stated that he had called on Mr. Hatch, assistant secretary of Associated Charities, and that the Committee on Prevention and Cure of Consumption desired to deliver an illustrated lecture on that subject. On motion, the Secretary was directed to invite the committee to deliver the lecture on Monday evening the 24th inst.

G. P. O. BOWLING LEAGUE

The Third Division Still in the Lead, the First-Job-Second Next.

Holt of the Second leads the League in total number of strikes, and Spence of the Sixth leads in spares.

The J. D. Frazee Laundry Co., through C. H. McGraw, presented the League with $5.00 in trade as a prize.

During the week the First Division lost two to the Sixth, the Fourth two to the Job, and the Second two to the Third.

The third week of the League wound up last Friday night and found the Third Division still in the lead, with the rest of the clubs all in a bunch.

It is a pretty race for first place between Bielaski, Fitzwilliam, Atkinson, and Allen, as there is just about 10 points difference in the first four men.

At the close of the League the members intend holding a smoker at which time the prizes will be awarded and there will be plenty of music, and refreshments, both liquid and solid.

The Rebew Orchestra.

The Rebew Orchestra, an organization of amateur musicians, of which Prof. Henry W. Weber is the director, is an institution well known to the readers of THE TRADES UNIONIST. Mr. Weber has been training this aggregation for years, and has brought it to a very creditable degree of proficiency. It numbers many very excellent musicians in its ranks, and there pervades the whole an earnest desire to succeed. Always ready to give its services for any charitable entertainment, its only income consists of its annual concert, of which the fourth will be given at Odd Fellows' Hall next Tuesday evening, April 25. The following is the personnel of the orchestra:

Director—Henry W. Weber.

First violins—B. J. Wrightsman, Miss Grace Mae Wilson, E. N. Hopewell, Mrs. Mabel L. Bernhard, Arthur Nyman, Miss Nan M. Dougherty, D. W. Holton, Miss Annie Stratton, Edw. B. Wayson, Jos. O. Harrison, J. B. Fowler, Thos. C. Havell, Second violins—Walter Crouch, Miss Minnie A. Bray, Edwin E. Daly, Miss Gertrude Murphy, Allen J. Marsh, H. A. Kahlert, Miss Ethel May, T. A. Connor.

Violas—G. J. Weber, William Kern.

Cellos—J. A. D. Turner, John F. Wahler, Chas. M. Havell, Louis E. Bradford.

Flutes—M. K. Peck, Matt. L. Allison, Jos. P. Rudy.

Clarinets—H. B. Schmidt, Jos. A. Dodge.

Cornets—Albert Lindstrom, Henry J. Doolan, Benton C. Gardner.

Horns—Arthur De Marco, George Mazullo.

Trombones—L. E. Maher, F. E. Keith, R. A. Pearson.

Bass—A. W. Higham, Wm. F. Grosskurth, jr.

Drums and tympanies—H. G. Sims, C. Hillengas.

The following is the very interesting programme:

PART I.

1. Overture—"Orpheus" (Offenbach), orchestra.
2. Soprano solo—"For All Eternity" (Mascheroni), Mrs. Edith D. Bayly. Violin obligato by Mr. Jos. O. Harrison.
3. Waltz—"Georgie" (Pettee), orchestra.
4. Contralto solo—(a) "Ah, 'Tis But a Dream" (Hawley); (b) "Slumber Boat" (Gaynor). Mrs. D. Olin Leech.
5. (a) March—"To Our Friends" (B. J. Wrightsman); first time; dedicated to Rebew Orchestra. (b) Caprice—"Hearts Message" (Santelmann), orchestra.

PART II.

1. Unfinished Symphony (F. Schubert), first movement only, orchestra.
2. Tenor solo—"Farewell to the King's Highway" (DeKoven), Mr. Thomas L. Jones.
3. Flute and clarinet duet—"Minnehaha" (Barnard), Mr. M. K. Peck and Mr. H. B. Schmidt.
4. Quartette—"Estudiantina" (Lacome); Mrs. Edith D. Bayly, soprano; Mrs. Margaret Koontz Holland, contralto; Mr. Thomas L. Jones, tenor; Mr. Dana C. Holland, bass.
5. American Fantasia—"Gems of Stephen Foster" (Tobani), orchestra.

Accompanist, Mrs. Thomas L. Jones.

None of the vocalists need any introduction to many of our readers, for they have been heard on many occasions. Mrs. Edith D. Bayly has a delightful soprano voice; Mrs. Leech and Mrs. Holland have established reputations as contralti; Mr. Jones is a tenor whose singing makes him ever in demand; and Mr. Holland has a bass voice of great range and power. Mrs. Jones is one of the most capable accompanists in the city, and there is scarcely a more severe test of musicianly ability.

Rebew Orchestra has done so much gratis work for charitable occasions that on this, its one night in the year it is deserving of the most generous patronage in return. Mr. Weber is an employee of the Government Printing Office, which alone entitles him to kindly consideration, and the work he is doing for music, purely from love for it, makes him a benefactor.

Death of Charles E. Clark.

Charles E. Clark, a member of the Job Room Chapel, G. P. O., where he had been employed for a number of years, died on Monday of acute nephritis, at Sibley Hospital.

Mr. Clark had been in poor health for several years, his last illness being of six weeks duration. He was at one time superintendent of the Union Printers' Home and was a resident of Omaha, Nebr., at the time he came to this city.

Interment was held at Mt. Olivet Cemetery, Mr. Clark becoming a Catholic just prior to his death.

"It's seven o'clock, Fritz! We must run home." "No, if I go home now I shall be whipped for being so late. I'm going to stay till nine, and then I'll get bonbons and kisses because I'm not drowned."—Lustige Blaetter.

ALLIED PRINTING TRADES UNION LABEL COUNCIL WASHINGTON 2

Only Eight-Hour Union Office in Town

THURSDAY, APRIL 20, 1905.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

As is well known, during the past winter an organization of workingmen was formed to establish an emporium for the sale of union-label garments for men. A sufficient sum was subscribed with which to begin operations, and about March 1 the Union Outfitters for Men Company were open for business at 519 Seventh street northwest. It seems to have been the purpose of certain parties to make the enterprise a failure from the start, and the unfortunate employment of an official favored their scheme, for, according to what the friends of the company say, he proceeded to exceed his instructions in the way of incurring obligations, and when dismissed for this and other bad faith he at once made the threat, "I'll put you out of business in twenty-four hours!" In the effort to make his threat good he went immediately to the creditors of the company and made such representations that they at once demanded their money. On a statement of the facts all of the wholesalers were satisfied for the time being; but he succeeded in getting one to insist upon having his bill paid at once. A meeting of the stockholders was called and the money to pay this bill was subscribed and paid in on the spot. Then the ex-official went to the other creditors and represented to them that the company was preferring certain creditors and that they had better apply to have a receiver appointed, which they did, an account of which appeared in the city papers, the case to be heard on April 28. The management again went to their stockholders, and again they responded, but the amount was too large for them and they appealed to the various labor organizations, with such signal success that the demand will be met and the company will be ready for the next move of the enemy. None of these bills were due, but under the law the creditors were enabled to proceed as they did. Columbia Lodge of Machinists placed $1,500 at the disposal of the company; Columbia Typographical Union came forward with $1,000, and the other unions with other sums. There can be no other conclusion than that certain parties have determined that an establishment for the sale of union-label goods exclusively shall not be maintained in this city, and that the parties are those who would be most injured by such an establishment seems probable. Columbia Union voted the aid unanimously last Sunday, and I have rarely seen so much feeling and so much enthusiasm displayed. The sales of the store during its six weeks of existence warrant a belief that its annual legitimate profits will be not less than $15,000. The Union Outfitters to Men Company will win.

Without the slightest idea as to the merits of the contest for the delegateship of the Woman's Auxiliary to the annual convention at Toronto, I think that menfolks should keep their nibs out of it and let the members thereof make their own selection. I do not think they really could affect the result, but they can make a whole lot of bad blood trying to do so, and the effectiveness of the splendid organization cannot but be weakened by the efforts of unpetticoated gossips to interfere with it. There was so much of this last year as to be disgusting, especially to the ladies. Gentlemen, we have a pretty fair tooth-and-toenail election of our own, and if you want to get into politics, that is your legitimate field. Come out into the open and declare your preferences, as I do, where you have a right to have preferences, and let the ladies run the politics of their organization. Of course this is primarily a hint to my apple-boozed friend Charlie Gunn, but it may be taken by anybody—not that I have any special license to throw out hints, though I never was one of those fellows who have to be told before they will do anything. If you must hand out bouquets and lollipops, bestow them on Joe Goodkey or me. We are used to such things and they won't hurt us.

Recently I received from my friend Otto F. Thum, of Denver, formerly editor of the Colorado Chronicle, one of the best labor papers in the country during its brief existence, now an employee of the Miners' Magazine, of Denver, the famous "Is Colorado in America?" flag, issued during the Peabody horrors in that State. It is a representation of a "regular" flag, each stripe bearing a legend, as follows:

Martial law declared in Colorado!
Habeas corpus suspended in Colorado!
Free press throttled in Colorado!
Bull-pens for union men in Colorado!
Free speech denied in Colorado!
Soldiers defy the courts in Colorado!
Wholesale arrests without warrant in Colorado!
Union men exiled from homes and families in Colorado!
Constitutional right to bear arms questioned in Colorado!
Corporations corrupt and control administration in Colorado!
Right of fair, impartial, and speedy trial abolished in Colorado!
Citizen's Alliance resorts to mob law and violence in Colorado!
Militia hired to corporations to break the strike in Colorado!

This flag made a great sensation in Colorado and many efforts were made to suppress it. It was so eagerly sought that but few remain, to be treasured up as mementoes of the protests against the greatest outrages ever perpetrated on freemen in a free country.

Some little time ago I received from William E. Shields, ex-president of and ex-delegate from Columbia Union to the 1891 I. T. U. convention, at Boston, as well as an ex-foreman of a Division of the G. P. O., the folder statement of the Allied Printing Trades Benefit Association of Denver. The principal officers are W. H. Neighbor, president; W. T. Scott, vice-president; F. C. Birdsall, secretary-treasurer. It was organized in 1897 and now has nearly 200 members. It is divided into classes, of which Class A members pay 60 cents a month and receive $1 for the first and $10 for each succeeding week's illness until $121 has been paid; Class B pay 50 cents a month and receives $1 and $8, and Class C, 40 cents, and $1 and $6, the total beneficial period being thirteen weeks. It has disbursed over $5,000 in benefits and now has $2,835.48 in its treasury, of which $2,500 is drawing 6 per cent interest. There is no "divvy" once a year, as in our associations, but their dues are sufficiently less, especially when considering the greater beneficiary period, to make it as equitable.

The news of the death of Charles E. Clark at Sibley Hospital on Mondav evening was received with sincere sorrow. He had long been a sufferer, and it was only as a forlorn hope that the surgical operation was undertaken which he underwent last Saturday. He was prominent in union matters and for some time was Superintendent of the Printers' Home.

* * * *

It is astonishing how excited some members of the Union become over legislation at meetings which they did not attend, and the less they understand what was really done the madder they get. This is a class who think proposed legislation should be brought around to them on a silver salver. There is a smaller class who attend, take no part in the proceedings, and begin to get mad the next day. Then you wonder who pulled the string.

* * * *

The organization of a night force on Wednesday evening struck people "like a thunder shower out of a clear sky," as Chris Auracher says. A hearing before a Senate committee on the much-mooted freight-rate subject made it necessary.

* * * *

It is reported that Charles E. Miller better known here as "Turkey," died in Philadelphia recently, after a long illness, consumption being the disease. "Turkey" Miller was a good fellow—a little erratic in his ways, but with good intentions always.

* * * *

The "Indians" have reorganized for political purposes and are on the warpath big. They have a cheerful faculty of getting there when they make a hustle, and you can gamble that the candidate of the "Indians" is a good fellow all the time. Otherwise he wouldn't be their candidate.

* * * *

Titus F. Ellis, I am told, declines the nomination for delegate which he received last Sunday, on account of physical annoyances of a painful though not dangerous character. The splendid vote which Mr. Ellis received last year warrant a belief that he could be elected if he had seen fit to remain in the race.

* * * *

There was some rare eloquence at the meeting of the Union last Sunday (some of it was well done, too—there, I said it first). In a spirit of meanness—I think it was because he had not been asked to nominate anybody—Frank Kidd moved to turn the nomination business upside down and to nominate for the lowest office first, which, the Union not appreciating the diabolism of the move, was carried. The programme had been that I should make the first speech, thus setting the pace, as it were; but by reversing the motion that duty fell on Frank Lerch, in nominating Miss Teresa McDonald for down-town delegate, ignoring previous speeches nominating alternates. Of course Frank is a great speaker, but who could not make a great speech with such a subject? Then Edgar Thompson performed the same office for Harry C. Knapp and C. I. Willey for Orton T. Pierce, both of whom did pretty work. I can't remember the order in which the G. P. O. delegates were nominated, but old Mr. Nicholas Watkins said the glad words for Mark H. Barnum, Judge Charles H. Ennis made the welkin ring for Charles B. Buchanan, Thomas A. Bynum manfully spoke for and of Titus H. Ellis, M. A. Bodenhamer modestly suggested Joseph E. Goodkey, George F. Halsey spoke gracefully and easily for Joe M. Johnson, Zach T. Jenkins spoke enthusiastically and tellingly for Frank D. Smith, E. W. Morcock eloquently and candidly spoke of Walter V. Smith, and John B. Dickman said a lot of nice things, with an air of truthfulness, of Philip S. Steele. Then some insequential offices had noble and distinguished gentlemen's names associated with them, as you will find when you get your printed tickets. Tom Bynum again broke loose and named James E. Bright for treasurer in a manner that discouraged any intended competitors, and W. L. Gutelius did a like service for Secretary George G. Seibold, with like result. After that Tim Ring named Dexter S. Hussey for vice-president and Dan Vaughan moved a continuation of William R. Love in that position. Then, in a singularly compact but telling speech A. F. Bloomer nominated John R. Berg for re-election as president. When the deafening applause had ceased a great calm fell upon the multitude and they silently and gladly went home. They're off!

* * * *

The death of Ned Morcoe on April 12 was too late for extended notice last week. For twenty-five years he conducted the cigar and news business in the building on Twelfth street, between E and Pennsylvania avenue, which he bought out of the proceeds of his store. He was a printer, but few of those who traded with him and made his place a sort of headquarters knew the fact, so long had he been away from the trade. He learned the trade on the old National Intelligencer and worked on the Capital at the time when Donn Piatt made it hum. About 1879 he and the late Samuel Haldeman, ex-president of the I. T. U., purchased the business of "Pap" Smith when it was located on Pennsylvania avenue about where Dietz's thirst parlors are now, and soon removed to Twelfth street. Haldeman did not remain in the business long, and Morcoe conducted it ever after alone. The place was a down-town headquarters for printers, especially formerly, and one might find practically the same individuals there during the whole time of Morcoe's ownetship. He was accommodating in business, careful in money matters, of the strictest probity in his transactions, and probably amassed quite a little sum. He never married, and at his death was 54 years old.

John Kiernan, employed here for a number of years and usually on the night force during sessions of Congress, has resigned to take a foremanship in his own city of Chelsea, Mass., one of the suburbs of Boston, I am told. Mr. Kiernan is an excellent printer and an honest, steady workman. By name he is an Irishman, but by birth, accent, and sympathies he is an Englishman of the English. I have often noticed that an Irish Englishman and a Scotch Englishman are the most loyal of Englishmen and generally out-English the English themselves. Mr. Kiernan is a man of the most pronounced views and devoutness in his religion. He believes the Bible literally and does not question that the Omnipotent and Allwise Father permits the existence of a personal devil possessed of almost equal powers with Himself and with a superior side line of attractions with which to win souls; that whatever is natural is wrong; that religion is all groanings and self-abasement; that all that is bright and gladsome is of the devil devilish, and that the road to heaven is one of gloom and of enjoyment of unnatural things—the sort of religion that went out of fashion along with knee breeches, broad falls, neck stocks, and shoe buckles. But as he really believes these things, and as he does no harm with his belief except to occasionally stir up acrimony in debate, I have no fault to find. Of course I would not be so free in this criticism were it not that he is several hundred miles away and can do nothing worse than write letters virtually admitting the truth of what I say, but denying my right to say it. His home is in Chelsea, where he owns a little place and where his family is located, and I am glad to know that he has a comfortable situation there, which will be worth a good deal more to him than one here, away from his family. I never could do much toward bringing him to the true religion, but nevertheless I do not think he is doomed to everlasting punishment on that account.

Every little while I hear a member of Columbia Union—one of the older ones, of course—express a wish that we could go back to the old system of one general polling place for our annual election, instead of voting by chapels, as at present. The argument used against chapel elections is that voters are influenced by those in more or less authority, who assume to speak for others of still higher position, and that elections are actually carried by such means. There has possibly been some such assumption on the part of unscrupulous minor officials, but it would be hard to believe that any union man would be swerved in his vote by having a timekeeper or a "postmaster" or a bankman dropping hints that votes cast for So-and-so would be gratifying to So-and-so, and the latter So-and-so would be likely to make it warm for the minor official whom he heard of as pretending to speak for him in such a matter. The old one-poll system had a number of disadvantages, among them being scenes of rowdyism as disgraceful as those of national elections. There were always loafers to hang around the polls for the occasional drinks which the candidates were expected to buy, and who held back their votes until the last minute, knowing that their attractiveness and interest were gone the moment they voted. I remember one occasion when a bricklayer was voted on the name of a printer whom he personally resembled, while the latter was away getting a "hummer" as part of the fruit of his waiting. Fights at the polls were not unusual, and a bunch of policemen were kept there in anticipation of them. Buttonholing, cajoling, "knifing," trading, and all the dirty practices that seem inevitably connected with politics were the regular thing. Now we vote quietly and uninfluenced in our several chapels, without noise, hurly-burly, or personal solicitation, except the few who are in all things merely custodians of votes and opinions that if they were not held at the behest of one would be at that of another. I once heard of a man soliciting the advice of the member of Congress from his district as to how he should vote in a union election and getting well snubbed for his pains. In the old days many of us of the more refined and highly respectable class refused to incur the risk of disgraceful scenes in order to vote, whereas under the present system we do not feel it beneath us to drop in our ballots, when we can do so without fear of contamination. There is no real argument whatever for a return to the old system, while there is every argument for retaining our chapel elections.

Harry W. Templar, of the First Division, is the Scribe of Washington Court of the Tribe of Ben Hur and State Deputy of the order, the first of these positions corresponding to secretary and the second being the high Muck-a-Muck of the District. He will talk to you at the office or at his house, No. 1541½ Third street northwest.

Frank Montgomery, whom some will remember as a former employee of the G. P. O., died at Kansas City, March 31, his remains being interred at Hays City, Kans. The services at the grave were under Masonic auspices. He was a well-known editorial writer on the Kansas City Journal at the time of his death.

AROUND THE PRINTERIES.

Star Scintillations.

"To say more would be superflu-ous."

An employee of the Star composing room on being asked, "Who's your neighbor?" remarked: "Damfino."

The usual modesty of the members of the Star chapel has again asserted itself. No candidates this year. But wait until next.

The best way to push the label is to demand it from those who do not particularly care to have it on the goods they have for sale.

Since the whipping-post idea has been discarded, the popular "little woman" will defend herself and will Pierce her opponents' hearts if they Knapp.

Chairman Whyte, of the Star, has broken all previous records in the matter of card collections in his chapel, a total of something over $125 having been left in his care to be applied to the union funds.

A goodly number of ex-Post men are now employed on the Star. It's a safe bet that the candidates representing the former chapel will profit thereby in the latter office on election day. Friendships formed in the Post composing room are not soon forgotten.

Well, we cannot have a down-town President this year, but there is an excellent opportunity to have the next highest honor come this way. The indefatigable Dexter Hussey has proven his worth as a member of the most intelligent Laws Committee Columbia Union has had in recent years.

GOSSIP FROM THE G. P. O.

First Division.

Frank W. Miller began a fifteen days' leave on Monday.

H. J. Smith has been transferred to the Second Division.

J. A. Gibbs, of the supply end, has returned from his leave.

John R. Moss and Geo. A. Plummer, of Alley 12, are on the sick list.

Judge Underwood, of the "Y," has been on the sick-list this week.

Do not forget that the April card is the one needed on election day, May 17.

W. A. Brooks, messenger in Mr. Spottswood's office returned from an extended leave on Tuesday,

John R. Durisoe is enjoying the remainder of his unexpired leave. A leave is a mighty handy article in the spring.

Candidate Steele was the first one to circulate his cards on Monday, followed by Joseph E. Goodkey as a close second.

Titus F. Ellis has withdrawn from the struggle for delegate. How about the rest of the candidates? Will they "stand pat?"

Of one thing we are very positive — that our Chapel will have two successful candidates—James E. Bright, for treasurer, and "Doc" Radley for auditor.

Candidates Frank D. Smith, and Joe M. Johnson passed through the Division on Tuesday in charge of Chairman Davidson. They received the glad hand.

Congratulations are in order for the excellent candidates placed in nomination at Sunday's meeting. Select your candidates and avoid all mud-slinging or abusive language.

John B. Dickman placed in nomination, Philip S. Steele for delegate. Thus far in the campaign we believe that our venerable friend will be a member of the Toronto delegation.

In an errorless game the George Washington University base ball team defeated Roanoke College on Monday by the score of 5 to 2. Bruce Bielaski's home run in the fifth won the game.

Frank M. Sweet, a well-known printer passed away on Monday. The deceased had been employed here about four years, coming to this city from St. Paul, Minn. During the past winter he was employed on the First Division night.

We understand from a recent executive order, that members of the G. A. R. employed in the G. P. O., have been placed upon the same footing as in the other departments, i. e., their time is not deducted when selected to attend the funeral of a deceased comrade.

"The Carpenter Press" is the name of W. S. Carpenter's new printing office, 1343 F street. Mr. C. is well-known in this Division, having held a temporary appointment the past two seasons. We understand that John F. Hanrahan, an excellent printer, is in his employ.

On Tuesday, April 11, W. Fred. Councell and Mrs. S. Elizabeth Cross were married in Philadelphia. Both the contracting parties are well and favorably known in the G. P. O. Mr. Councell has been employed in the office for a number of years, and during the sessions of Congress holds a "preferred" place on Foreman Young's night force. Hearty congratulations are extended to the newly wedded couple by their hosts of friends.

Of course you attended the regular stated meeting of No. 101 on Sunday. If you did not you missed the interesting proceedings, not to mention the eloquent nominating speeches.

As the ticket in full appears elsewhere in this issue, we will refer to the members of this Chapel who are candidates and in every way worthy of your unbounded support and confidence.

Vice-President Wm. R. Love, who has most acceptably filled the office during the past term, was renominated by Mr. Dan C. Vaughan. Dexter S. Hussey, a down-town man will be Billy's opponent.

As one of the three alternates from this office, H. W. Templar was named. All things considered this Chapel has fared well in the choice of candidates, and they should receive, as they deserve, our most cordial support.

Second Division.

Bravo, Maud! The last one was a peach.

Candidate Joe Johnson was with us Tuesday.

Billy Ball was on leave last week and returned to his case Friday.

Don't forget the Rebew entertainment Tuesday evening, the 25th.

C. I. Leonard took a few days off last turn-in. He has since resigned.

Desk 51 of the Proof Room advertises a locket lost. Have you found it?

Here are the winners? Joe Johnson, Joseph E. Goodkey, Walter Smith, Teresa McDonald.

A. T. Maupin, formerly of this Division, is seriously ill at his home in Virginia. He is not expected to recover.

Our friend Charlie Graff made the rounds Tuesday, He attracted the gaze of all lovers of a whole-souled fellow.

Several of our members received a certificate testifying that they had contributed to the McKinley monument fund.

Ex-Chairman Trudgian has recovered sufficiently from his illness to be able to return to his duties, though still much shattered in health.

Here's another from a punster in the room? It may be a delegate matter to mention, but this thing of soliciting votes has, to some extent at least, assumed the role of a bare-faced proceeding.

The correspondent of the Third Division refers to my item concerning W. D. "Windy" Morgan. A "choke" is a "choke," and our friend Morgan is too well seasoned a veteran to entertain any ireful feelings over the joke.

Under "G. P. O. Bowling League Notes" it is stated that Wm. G. O'Connell, of this Division, made a score of 234 in the bowling contest, the highest number. Beddow stands 185, Razey 167, Holt, 170, and Moler, 144. As Hank Allen has been indisposed, he has not been able to show his mettle, but will no doubt show good form in future contests.

It is whispered about that Specification takes will soon be rattled off on the Record machines. Individually, I cannot see how the Linotype can buck against the Spess style-book. With the Monotype it is different, as individual types can be easily corrected, whereas on the Linotype one error necessitates throwing out the entire line. However, if the rumor is true, it will be at least an experiment—and, who knows what will come next?

By the time these notes are read the candidates will have been nominated. As one or two correspondents have plaintively remarked, there is no excitement. If they can't think of anything else, let the nominees get together with a brass band in front and serenade the office, so as to let us know they are alive. Look at the hustling canvass Miss Wilson made, and the way she pinned badges on the gentlemen's vests was too sweet for anything—and it elected her. So look sharp, or the other fellow, or lady, will get there first.

It struck me forcibly not long since that an improvement in our noonday menu—Pard can translate "menu" into plain "grub"—would be a joy to the heart, the satisfaction of a long-felt want. For instance, the different departments have much better accommodations, and, for that matter, observe how great department stores, mammoth factories, large business offices provide for their employees—why should not our benevolent Government institution do the same? Think of first-class coffee, nectar for the gods, and a clean spread, and—imagine—chairs to sit on, and, incidentally, 15 minutes more for a social chat.

Third Division.

Vote for Steele. He is honest, conscientious, and thoroughly reliable.

There are five compositors and six proofreaders in the bunch of eleven nominees for delegate.

Orton T. Pierce has no show against Harry C. Knapp; but neither will be in it with Miss Teresa McDonald.

How does this combination strike you? Frank D. Smith, Philip S. Steele, Charles B. Buchanan. At the present writing, it looks the likeliest in the bunch.

Did you see Goodkey's card? It is patterned after the large card of the Rebew Orchestra; only instead of the press notices, he has the names of the convention city, the convention itself, the office he is after, and the label, "one in each corner with a fence around it," as Frank Kidd remarked. "If you only had that fenced off too," he continued, pointing to the name, Jos. E. Goodkey, "then your card would be all right."

One of the speakers at the last meeting hit it off pretty accurately when he said: "No matter what is said here, the candidate may kill it all when he calls on the voters to present his cards."

It is rumored that at the next meeting of the Union Mr. F. C. Roberts, of this Division, will reply to several statements made by Barrister Ennis in the course of his remarks at last Sunday's meeting.

Mr. R. M. Pigues, guardian of the slugs and leads, has returned to us after using up the balance of his leave, his place during his absence having been filled by W. A. Kinsolving, of the correcting alley.

Three candidates for delegate—two from the Government Printing Office and one from down town—called on us Tuesday afternoon to solicit our support at the coming election. They were Frank D. Smith of the Proof Room Annex, Joe M. Johnson, of the Proof Room, and Harry C. Knapp, of the Washington Times. Of the three, Smith's chances for success seem most favorable; Knapp is very popular with his friends, but is thought to be hardly strong enough to win against Miss McDonald; and there seems to be a growing sentiment that Johnson will lose.

* * * *

As I was walking past frame 24 a day or two ago I heard the Chairman call me.

"Say," said he, "I want to call your attention to just one thing." Then concentrating his glance upon my face until his fiery orbs seemed to search the innermost recesses of my soul, he continued, with impressive earnestness, "I was the only candidate what had the nerve to open his bazoo agin that thousand dollar racket. They all kept still but the old fox!" Here he indicated that the "old fox" was none other than himself by pointing the index finger of each hand at his breast.

"Not one of 'em dared to open his yap but me!" went on Mr. Goodkey. Then, with a wise shake of his head, he concluded with: "Oh, I know a thing or two, I do!"

Sixth Division.

A night force means night work for the candidates.

Herbert Nitterauer and Frank Mauck, former helpers in this Division, returned on Tuesday morning.

The boys who predicted the machines could not stand idle at night during the summer have had their inning.

Chas. E. Dietrich is absent on account of illness. I am informed he is seriously ill with grip, fever, etc.

A. K. Mundheim is again in charge of this Division during the day, with L. P. Kenny, of the "Y," at the copy desk.

The "I told you so" boy has been vindicated, and hereafter will command respect for his advanced predictions.

Walter V. Smith, of this Division, passed his cards on Wednesday. One can hardly refer to Walt. as making friends, for it really appears as though everybody was his friend at the outset. He is looked upon as a winner.

The services of an expert will be required to patch up the Sixth Division bowling team. With Bert Wolfe, Ed. Moores, Jimmie Spence, Jack Williams, Gene Smith, "Ikie" Wear, and others on night work some of the best bowlers in the G. P. O. are removed from the con test. But the glory of the Sixth must be retained. Get together, boys.

Standing on board an American man-of-war a few years ago watching the bombardment of the forts at Tin Tsin, China, by the allied sea powers of the world, stood two American boys who are now connected with this Division. Each wore the blue of Uncle Sam's navy and each was doing service on the same ship. To-day M. M. Cronin and Herbert Nitterauer(for they are the ones referred to) are connected with this Division in the capacity of machine helpers. Aside from their services in the far East, each were with the fleet off Santiago, and like most men who have followed the sea are perfectly at home in most any old post where they have dropped anchor. To most of us this seems like a pretty big world, but to these past followers of the sea this old revolving sphere seems to be but a good sized foot ball.

Like a thunder clap from a clear sky came the news down the line that Foreman John R. Berg was making up his list for a night force.

And the news was so. Down the line he came, and every time he touched a man he was it. "Report at 6 o'clock for night work," said he. And so was formed the night force which begun work at 6 o'clock on Tuesday night.

Its the cream of the flock. I'd say so to please them. With Mr. Berg himself a foreman, the personnel of the force is as follows:

Makers-up—Ed. S. Moores and H. M. McElfresh.

Linotype machinists—Claude Pendarvis, Chas. George.

Linotype operators—John Williams, Hugh Everett, Bert V. Wolfe, Harry Howe, Harry Giles, Will L. Mattox, A. A. Maul, Edward S. Poole, J. A. Scannell, Eugene F. Smith, M. Spencer, W. H. Anglin, Lewis C. Tuttle, E. E. Wear, James F. Spence, Gene Andrew, Jack Desmond.

Compositors—A. W. Emory, Daniel McFadden, Chas. P. Voelker, R. W. Christian.

Machine helpers—R. H. Cloreser, Percy J. Reid.

CHAS. S. GUNN.

A FEW MORE LITTLE PIKELETS.

A TACK-FULL HEN.

Senator Newlands' little joke, going the rounds of the papers, about a Nevada hen that was supposed to be going to lay a carpet because it was discovered picking up stray tacks, is one that nobody but a tactless man or a henpecked hushand could be chicken-hearted enough to carp-at.

THE SAME DIFFERENT THING.

If your horse you'd put on his metal,
There is one simple thing you should do:
Dispatch him forthwith to a blacksmith,
And have him on each hoof drive a shoe.
If chickens you'd chase from your garden,
The same different thing you should do,
And this without need of a blacksmith,
Since you can, of course, furnish the shoo!

IN THE MILKY WAY.

"If I had a cow that would only buttermilk yield,
I would dress her, I think, in the finest of silk."
"Come off, you galoot, to either barnyard or field,
And you'll find there's naught a cow gives but-her-milk."

WHERE THE RESEMBLANCE COMES IN.

When's a house, be it either an old one or new,
Like a fair lady's hair who to fashion is true?
It is, it must be—can't be any less or more—
When the house, new or old, has a neat pump-at-door.

IN THEIR MIDST.

Glad to b'lieve that Schooler and Glenn
Are, on the whole, truth-loving men,
And yet I quite often have seen 'em
When there was real Lyon between 'em.

FISHERMEN'S STORIES.

Not, indeed, since our Lord came upon earth,
Humanity's sinful state to relieve,
Has any fisherman's story been told
That us poor way-faring folk could believe;
And e'en then only one fisherman's story
Was accepted as free from falsity's rot,
And that was when Thomas told the good Master:
"We've toiled all night and not a fish have we caught."

Appropriation Declined.

At the last meeting of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, the Board of Trustees of the Union were directed to loan $1,000 to the Union Outfitters to Men Co. store if in their judgment the proposition was considered a good one.

The Board of Trustees met on Wednesday evening, a number of members of the Union being present. Mr. H. W. Sherman, representing the Union Outfitters to Men Co., made a statement to the Board of Trustees in which he said that as the method by which the loan would have to be placed by the Union required considerable action and possibly delay, the corporation mentioned would now decline the offer with thanks.

It is said that the amount necessary for the project is well under way, and the intention of the promoters of the store is not to place any Union in a position where its members may divide on the question of making a loan at this time. They ask, however, the moral support and material aid of every member of a Union in the city and promise that the effort of the promoters of the enterprise to create a demand for Union-made goods will be realized in this city.

NAVY YARD ITEMS.

John R. Weaver, a helper in the Erecting Shop, was injured last week. He was sent to Providence Hospital for treatment.

Admiral Higginson is expected to return this week and again resume charge of the Yard, relieving Captain Pendleton, who has been acting as Commandant.

Saito Tashiro and Yeshem Yama, the Japanese cook and house boy, who took French leave last week, have been declared deserters from the Navy and reward offered for their return.

George Faust, chief gunner in the Navy, who for many years was connected with the Ordnance Department of this Yard, died at Newport, R. I. His burial place was Arlington.

The following have taken the examination for chief gunner in the Navy: Gunner D. F. Diggins, J. Kenyon, C. Hierdahl, and C. B. Bebson. The examining board consisted of Chief Gunner C. H. Venable, J. J. Walsh and Wm. Walsh.

Chief Boatswains W. A. Cooper, St. Clair, and McGlaughlin, have been in session examining candidates for the position of chief boatswain in the Navy. The following appeared and took the examination: Boatswain, C. J. Cooper, E. V. Landstrom, John McGrath, Christian Crane, and Fred. Miller.

Now don't get jealous ye poets. I have a little poem written by one of the sweetest little girls in Washington, Minna Irving, it is entitled:

THE CAP RIBBON.

I wonder why a yachting cap
She loves so much to wear,
When feathers, lace and roses wait
To deck her curly hair.
But lo! I see a narrow band
Of ribbon black and fine,
And just above the peak, behold
Some gilded letters shine.

The U. S. B. S. "Illinois,"
Embroidered there I see;
In golden thread, and thus I know
There is no hope for me.
A brave and gallant sailor boy,
Has won this maiden sweet,
She wears the ribbon from his cap
Her "heart" is with the fleet

Sailors oftentimes meet with queer incidents in their lives.

One of them, out on liberty a few days ago, was accosted by a gentleman:

"So you are a sailor boy, one of Uncle Sam's Jackies eh?"

The sailor nodded.

"And who be you," said Jackie.

"I am a naval contractor and furnish the cheese for you boys."

"Ye do, do ye," shouted the sailor. "You are the blanketty blank son of a marlin spike I've been looking for these twenty years." With that he brought his mighty fist down on the contractor's silk dicer, butted him in the stomach, and landed him neatly into a near by mudpuddle. "Now," he roared looking around with a glare "show me the duck that furnishes the butter and I will down yer both together."

A Navy Yard man read that human eyes
Of hypnotism were full,
He went to see if it would work
Upon an angry bull—It wouldn't.

THE SONG OF THE STORE CLERK.

The song of the store clerk is yet unsung. We hear a sad murmur—work—work—work, rising feebly from counters and shelves, and heavy spring stock, from high desks in dark places where a ray of sunshine never enters. It blends with the sharp cry of trade, with the ceaseless strokes of hammers, with the clatter of knives and forks in underground holes, where confused messes are devoured against time in the restless days of the "Busy Season."

It stands out on the pages of ponderous ledgers—and sometimes it becomes painfully startling in police reports, when we read that a "young clerk" was charged with embezzling the funds of his employer.

The motto which is held up to young Americans in every nursery and school room is, "Be rich or be nothing." They see it in the superficial character of our institutions, in paved streets, brownstone houses, silks and gems, vases and mirrors.

Country boys see the glitter from afar. Dull to them become the songs of birds, and the wheat, nodding to the light breeze, and all the simple delights of nature.

With a mother's kiss and a father's blessing, the boy starts from home with a light heart. He hears the customary twaddle of merchants, that industry and perseverance will be rewarded. He learns that poetry is weakness—that he must cease to adore the beautiful till he can pay for it.

He bows down to the golden god and lays his young nerve and his young spirit at his feet.

Years go by—the mother's prayer and the father's "God bless you, my boy," is forgotten—the music is dead—he is the child of simplicity no more. The fond dream of his youth had been dispelled. He begins to feel that perseverance is sometimes useless.

He becomes one of the two classes we see every day. He delivers himself up to the liquor habit; his cheeks lose all token of their former freshness, and his eyes are bleared; he frequents the races and gambling hells, and figures in the Police Court, and one day we miss him entirely.

"Suicide," says the coroner. Or his spirit is crushed, and he becomes resigned to his destiny—a clerk for life. His shoulders are stooped. He wears one suit the whole year. You see him on bright Sundays walking with his wife and children.

He is known at the great house of Catchem and Cheatem as the "Old Man."

The younger scions affect funniness with him, and have a standing joke that he is going "into the firm." But he becomes infirm sooner than even they expect. A dry cough is heard from his high stool. His princely employers wonder why he is always sick, and begin to hint at somebody else to fill his place.

They are just in time—they have sucked and drained the last drop of his life—blood, he dies and his seat is vacant.

His employers remember him by sending a cross of flowers—emblamatic of his life.

His little ones become charity's children, and his wife, forever singing the same old ditty, "work-work-work," soon follows him.

The funeral of ex-Master Boiler Maker William Bennett, whose death I reported last week, was one of the largest ever held on the Navy Yard. Masons, Odd Fellows, Knights of Pythias and shopmates generally marched in line.

Among the many associates of the ex-foreman awaiting the arrival at the cemetery of the funeral cortege was Mr. George R. Wilson, who for half a century was Superintendent of Steam Engineering Department and later foreman of Ordnance. Venerable in appearance, weighted down with four score years, this aged man welcomed his old shopmates as they pressed eagerly forward to extend the glad hand to their former chief.

Although he and I had not been kindly drawn to each other for many years, owing to the fact that a Judas, though intrigue and machination, came between us and planted the seed of discord which ended in a separation. I could not refrain from availing myself of the opportunity to offer him again the hand of friendship—and as he clasped it in the same spirit in which it was offered—in that moment I felt that the misunderstanding and the bitterness of the past had been entirely obliterated by the soothing influence of time. I trust that the All Wise Providence will not only lengthen his days but give him strength as he journeys down grade toward the setting sun of his existence.

* * * *

I appreciate the kind expressions of my worthy colleague, Brother Bloomer. It is thus that not only scribes should meet, act and part, but all true Unionists. It has been my pleasure to have been in his company on many occasions and listen to his witticisms, without knowing that it was the only Bloomer. It is regretable that he, like myself, will in a few more years be classed as subjects of Osleritis. Nearly two score years ago I was trying, through the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Journal, to teach Unionism to the craft, while Pard was doing the same in another direction. We have done our duty, and will have soon acted our little part on the stage of life, and will pass on to make room for a younger generation. It is but the law of nature, and "so mote it be."

* * * *

I think the Trade Unionists of the District—not the "Paper that prints the Union News"—but the craft, need a caudle lecture, and I know of no better time than now to train a siege gun and fire hot shot among them.

To begin with I seriously doubt if one half of the Trade Unionists in this city know that there is a Union Store "Outfitters to Men," with Union-made goods, Union clerks, and Union hours at 519 Seventh street northwest. If not, I am going to tell you something about it.

Starting not under the most auspicious conditions, with every element of success guaranteed, the business was flourishing. But there was a small cloud in the clear sky only seen by one, a Judas, who, acting as a tool for the Parryites in this city, sought to crush the infant industry before it had matured. That cloud has spread until it has almost eclipsed the bright sun of our prosperity.

The question in plain words is up to you. I mean you—each and every Trades Unionist in the city: Are you going to allow a combination of Parryites to crush out this infant industry, or will you be men and awaken to the fact that if this industry is crushed it will be heralded throughout this broad land that the business men of this city, fearing the progress made by this store would be an incentive for the starting of other Union industries, had united to crush this prosperous infant.

These are the facts, and it will certainly happen if the Unionists of this city do not better themselves.

There are some seventy locals in the District representing all the different crafts. Let every member attend his Local at once and see that this subject is brought before the meeting, ably discussed, and prompt action taken. There is no time to spare. Action must be prompt, and a sufficient amount must be raised to meet certain indebtedness. Some have done nobly, and have proved themselves true Unionists. Are you in this class; if not get into the band wagon.

Don't wait for and expect that the men in the Navy Yard will be able to collect enough money to float this indebtedness. We have done more in proportion than any other of the craft, notwithstanding we receive less wage than other departments. We are willing to do more, but we like company, and expect every Unionist individually to act his part as a Union Man should do when he sees his rights endangered, or his liberties crushed.

Columbia Lodge, No. 174, I. A. of M., at an adjourned meeting held Sunday last, took up the question and almost unanimously voted to loan the directory of the store $1,500.00.

We have not stopped at that, but further propose to raise by private subscription not less than $2,000 more. Get in line with us Trades Unionists of other crafts and prove by your fidelity to the cause of Unionism that neither one man, or a set of men, no matter how closely they are allied with the Parry Association, can either destroy our business or place a ban on our credit. This means "You—every Union brother in the District of Columbia."

The committee also reported favorably on placing E. N. Richards, paper hanger, on "We Do Not Patronize List." Agreed to.

The Council then adjourned and the doors were opened for the general public to attend a free public lecture on "Prevention of Tuberculosis."

The lecture was illustrated and the audience evinced deep interest in the lecturer, as he proceeded to point out the need of great care in handling consumptives and the necessity for proper sanitation in the shops and homes.

G. P. O. BOWLING LEAGUE.

The First made 913 in one game.

Holt and Bielaski lead in the total number of strikes—41.

Richards and Nachman are tied for highest number of spares—57.

The Second and Third tied for first place at end of the fourth week, with the First a close third.

Last week the First won two games from the Third, the Second won three from the Job Room, and the Sixth won two from the Fourth.

A smoker is being arranged for at the end of the League season. If you want to get next see Childress, Holt, Schinnerer, Reed, Wolfe, or McDonough.

Would it not be well for Manager Brosnan, of the G. P. O. Departmental League, look over the final scores in making up his team for next year.

Since our last report, O'Connell bowled a set of 199, 208, and 196, making a total of 603, an average of 201, while Bruce Bielaski made score in one game of 246, and pulled down O'Connell's 234.

* * * *

The following disposition of prizes have been decided upon (subject to additions), by the Prize Committee:

TRADES UNIONIST cup, to the team having highest per cent of games won

To man making highest average, $5 in laundry work. Donated by Frazee Laundry (McGraw).

Second highest average, one year's subscription to the Inland Printer.

Third highest average, $2 in laundry work. Donated by P. A. O'Brien.

To man making highest number of strikes, a pearl-handled pocket knife.

To man making highest number of spares, a pair of silk suspenders.

To man making highest scores in any set of three games, a pipe.

To man making highest individual score, a pipe.

No man will be entitled to more than one prize.

In case of a tie between any two or more men for a prize, it shall be decided by drawing lots for it.

One prize to man making highest average on his Division team (total of six prizes), a pair of cuff buttons.

Shelby Smith Not Guilty.

From the report of proceedings of Philadelphia Typographical Union, No. 2, of the meeting held Saturday night, April 15, we learn that Shelby Smith was found not guilty in the trial of charges brought against him through the I. T. M Executive Council.

We take the following from The Trades Union News:

The trial board appointed at the March meeting to try the charges brought at the instance of the Executive Council of the I. T. U. against Shelby Smith, one of the editors of the Trades Union News, reported its findings of not guilty. The report was approved by a practically unanimous vote.

Editorially Shelby Smith comments on the trial as follows:

NOT GUILTY.

Typographical Union, No. 2, on Saturday night of last week listened to the report of the trial board on the charges brought by the Executive Council of the I. T. U. against Shelby Smith. The trial board reported that the defendant was not guilty for the reason that the publication was neither malicious nor untrue.

The Union approved the finding of the board, only two negative votes being cast. It also concurred in the recommendations of the committee, one of which was that the report—which made eighteen typewritten pages—should be forwarded to the Journal for publication.

As the report constitutes a severe arraignment of the Executive Council, it is not believed the editor of the Journal will dare to print it. In the event of his refusal excerpts will appear later in the Trades Union News.

A Progressive Paper.

The Easter edition of The Western Laborer came as a pleasant surprise to us. It is replete with good, wholesome labor news and interesting items. The edition was under the sole charge of Mrs. Frank A. Kennedy, who had the honor of being the first president of the Women's National Auxiliary. Mrs. Kennedy is well remembered in Washington, having attended the convention here in 1902, and is no novice in newspaper work.

The cover was a beauty for simplicity and color and reflects good judgment and taste in the designer.

WESTERN FEDERATION OF MINERS.

The subscription recently taken to aid the Western Federation of Miners amounted to $89.95 as follows:

NAVY YARD ITEMS.

Acting Gunner Beakes has been ordered to Indian Head for temporary duty.

O. L. Hansel has been appointed an electrical draftsman in Yards and Docks Department at $4.48 per diem.

O. D. Leisenring, structural steel work draftsman, Yards and Docks, has been advanced from $4.24 to $4.48, a worthy promotion.

The Dolphin left the Yard Sunday last for Tangier Sound for great gun practice. She will return after ten days absence.

Messrs. Wallace and Griffith, ordnance machinists, are now at Norfolk Yard temporarily, fitting gun work on board of Uncle Sam's fighting machines.

C. F. Jeancon has been appointed ordnance computing draftsman and engineer at a salary of $3,000 per year, as the result of the recent examination held in the Yard.

A. C. Plant, draftsman Yards and Docks, and D. F. Asbury, ordnance draftsman, who now hold temporary appointments, have had their time extended for thirty days.

Richard Egdorf, draftsman in same department, has been promoted to architectural assistant at $5.28 per diem. J. G. Little, draftsman, has also been advanced to $4.24 per diem.

George H. Holden, subinspector of ordnance, has been ordered to proceed at once to Hartford, Conn., and report for duty to the Inspector of Ordnance at the works of Pratt & Whitney Co.

Jesse B. K. Lee, who for several years has been Chief Clerk Ordnance Department, and Miss Mary A. Cady, of Takoma Park, Md., were married April 24. Congratulations to the happy couple.

Lieutenants Gise, Fullenwider, and McNeely will comprise the board that will meet in the Yard on April 27 to examine candidates for the position of marine engine and boiler draftsman under the Bureau of Steam Engineering.

On May 2 an examination will be held in the Navy Yard for the position of leadingman at the Naval Proving Ground, Indian Head, Md. The successful man must prove his knowledge of smokeless powder. The examining board will be Lieutenants Gise, Fullenwider and McNeely.

Bro. John A. Finnegan, the sweet tenor, whose Irish melodies have made him famous, has resigned his position as machinist in the Yard to accept the position of chief tenor at St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York. While we all regret his departure we rejoice in his elevation. He has been a hard student and has justly earned his reward. I look for a brilliant future in the musical world for the sweet Irish songster. Columbia Lodge, No. 174, I. A. of M., extends its hearty felicitation on his elevation.

In the six years of the country's prosperity from 1897 to 1903 average prices of breadstuffs advanced 65 per cent, meats 23, dairy and garden products 50, and clothing 24. The report of the Interstate Commerce Commission shows that the average increase in the pay of railroad employees in that period was about 8.5 per cent. What becomes of Carroll D. Wrong's figures, which showed that the increase of pay corresponded with the increase of living. And yet they say there is no politics in figures.

Master Mechanic Charles Smithson, Assistants Charles Love, John Byers, and S. Lescallet, with Messrs. Stees, Moore and several other machinists, are down the river on a ducking excursion. They will remain several days. Dr. Baldwin was consulted before they sailed, and if they carried out the instructions of this wonderful snake root professor I am confident they will evade the malaria conditions that always comes with spring. One thing I am sure of. They will not be able with all their powder and shot to bring down as many "dead ducks" as the articles on the Union Store did in your last issue. Between Pard and Tim there seemed for once a perfect unison of thought and "dead ducks" in front of us. Back of us and all around us are the results of these hot shots. I have a few more ready for immediate action, but will save them for another occasion.

RAIN DROPS OF WISDOM.

Aim at perfection in everything, though in most things it is unattainable. However, they who aim at it and persevere, will come much nearer to it, than those whose laziness and despondency make them give it up as unattainable.

You will never convince a man of ordinary sense by overbearing his understanding. If you dispute with him in such a manner as to show a due deference for his judgment, your complaisance may win him, though your saucy arguments could not.

What a world of gossip would be prevented if it was only remembered that a person who tells you of the faults of others intends to tell others of your faults.

Most men live according to opinion or rule of fashion, which is full of variety, leaving the direct rule of wisdom, which renders us calm and serene.

It was a good reply of Plato to one who murmured at his reproving him for a small matter: "Custom" said he, "is no small matter." A custom or habit of life, does frequently alter the natural inclination, either to good or evil.

Opinion is the main thing which does good or harm in the world. It is our false opinions of things which ruin us. Travelling sometimes make a wise man better, but always a fool worse.

There is a sort of economy in Providence that one shall excel where another is defective in order to make men more useful to each other, and mix them in society.

If we do not learn to bear with little faults, we shall be continually fretted and irritated. Domestic happiness requires mutual forbearance, a love so strong as to overlook petty causes of complaint. If we always stand upon our rights and insist that we will have justice done us, and demand explanation for every unguarded word, there is an end of happiness. Nobody can live with us. Our homes will be a scene of perpetual contention. We cannot have a friend, or keep one, for we shall drive him away by our readiness to take offense.

In Turkey a man with tight pants is considered so great a vulgarian that he is not tolerated in respectable society. To spit in presence of an Arab is to make the acquaintance of his cheese-knife. In Russia that man is considered low who refuses a warm breakfast of fried candles. In this country vulgar people are such as keep good hours and live within their income.

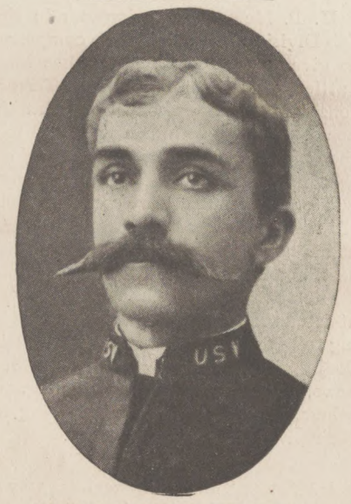
Rebew Orchestra.

A most gratifying patronage attended the fourth annual concert of the Rebew Orchestra at Odd Fellows' Hall last Tuesday evening. The orchestra was in good practice, and its excellent selections were very acceptably supplemented by Mrs. Charles B. Bayly, soprano soloist in Wesley M. E. Church; Mrs. D. Olin Leech, contralto soloist in the same church; Mr. Thomas L. Jones and Mr. Joseph O. Harrison, tenors, and a quartet composed of Mrs. Bayly, Mrs. Margaret Koontz Holland, contralto; Mr. Jones, tenor, and Mr. Dana C. Holland, basso.

The organization is the only strictly amateur orchestra in Washington, and its work showed very creditably on the ability of its director, Mr. W. H. Weber, as well the orchestra. Its numbers were the "Orpheus" overture, by Offenbach; "Georgie Waltz," by Pettee; "To Our Friends," a march, by Mr. B. J. Wrightsman, concert master of the orchestra, and dedicated to the Rebew Orchestra; "Heart's Message," Santelmann; Schubert's unfinished symphony (first movement), and an American Fantasie," arranged by Tobani, from gems of Stephen Foster.

Probably the best work of the orchestra was the Schubert symphony, which was rendered with expression and harmony. Second to it was the Santelmann "Caprice," which showed uniformly good conception by the players.

Mrs. Bayly's solo, "For All Eternity," by Mascheroni, with obligato played by Mr. Harrison, was rendered in excellent voice, and for an encore she gave with fine expression Bischoff's "Jenny."



Mrs. Leech sang Hawley's "Ah, 'Tis But a Dream" and Gaynor's "Slumber Boat" with fine enunciation and expression. For a recall she rendered Moore's ballad, "Believe Me If All These Endearing Young Charms."

Mr. Thomas L. Jones, tenor, sang "Farewell to the King's Highway" and received an encore.

Messrs. M. K. Peck and H. B. Schmidt rendered a duet, Barnard's "Minnehaha," for flute and clarinet.

The work of the quartet caught the audience, and after singing very effectively an arrangement of "Annie Laurie," they responded to a recall by giving Roeckel's "Madeline."

At the close of the program the floor was cleared for dancing.

CAPT. J. WALTER MITCHELL.

As a writer on labor matters Captain Mitchell is acquiring a reputation on the Evening Star of this city for fairness in treating the questions that arise between capital and labor.

In addition to his service as labor editor on the Star, Captain Mitchell is past historian of the National Army and Navy War Veterans, and is at present Secretary of the United States Historical Society.

Captain Mitchell is an old typo, and is a member of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101.

The Child Labor Evil.

Several state legislatures have this year added to former good work along the lines of discouraging the employment of child labor by raising the age limit from 12 to 14 years. The child labor evil is one of the greatest evils that menace the future of the republic. The child that is forced into a mill, mine, or factory is deprived of both education and physical development, thus dstroying possibility of future usefulness as a citizen, depriving the child of natural rights and degrading general labor conditions to a lower level. Thoughtful men and women are giving more and more attention to this evil, with the result that conditions are being bettered.—The Commoner.

'Twas Ever Thus.

A. J. E. Hubbard, of THE TRADES UNIONIST and the Labor News, of Colorado Springs, Colo., was a candidate for police magistrate of Colorado Springs, Colo., recently.

The selection rests with the Board of Aldermen. The present incumbent, Judge Coombs, was a candidate for re-election and A. J. E. Hubbard was his opponent.

The ballot proceeded, and eight votes being cast, with five necessary to elect, the balloting was a tie up to the sixth ballot, when Alderman McCaffery deserted Hubbard and voted for Coombs.

At this distance it may be that Alderman McCaffery, who is resident trustee of the Union Printers' Home, and has been loyally supported by members of organized labor in the past, has a good and sufficient reason for his desertion of a fellow-craftsman and worker in the past, but it will be hard to convince the friends of Mr. Hubbard to the contrary.

We quote from the El Paso County Democrat:

For police magistrate A. J. E. Hubbard, of the Labor News, tied Mr. Toombs, 4 to 4, till the fifth ballot. On the sixth ballot, Alderman McCaffery of the Out West Printing Office, left Mr. Hubbard and voted for Mr. Toombs, giving him 5 votes. Mr. Hubbard, being a labor union man, expressed surprise that a card man should be the one to desert him.

Popular Concert Course.

The last concert of the first series of Popular Concerts, given by Miss Marie Von Unschuld, will be held on Sunday, April 30, at National Rifles' Armory Hall, at 8:15 p. m.

To anyone fortunate enough to have heard the previous concerts given by this gifted and talented young woman no further notice is necessary. To those who have not been present at the preceding concerts we would advise them to attend the last one of this series, as it will prove a musical treat to all lovers of music.

The price of admission is only 10 cents, and a reserved seat can be secured for 25 cents.

A Modest Protest.

We have received the following communication, and we trust our correspondents will take cognizance of the protest entered:

EDITORS TRADES UNIONIST:

Gentlemen:—From the large amount of matter put in your paper by the various correspondents concerning the writer, one would be led to believe that it was my personal organ, no less than twenty-five columns being used during the past five years. Of course, I am used to such things, for Paul Maas used to do it in the old eight-page Typographical Journal; Billy Hollster used to do it in his Eight-Hour Herald, and Jim Watson used to do it in the New Era. I would request that you publish this so that the correspondents will know that I do not at all relish notoriety.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

A couple of weeks ago I received a letter from M. D. L. Shrope, editor and publisher of the Easton, (Pa.) Journal, asking if I was in Wichita, Kans., in a certain year about seventeen years ago, and stating that he would give his reason for the question after getting my answer. As I had never been in the burg, which had not yet been discovered when I left that country, I so informed Mr. Shrope, and waited in vain for the reason. Then I dropped him a line reminding him of his remissness, eliciting this answer:

EASTON, PA., April 22, 1905.

MR. A. F. BLOOMER.

DEAR SIR:—Replying to yours of the 20th, would say that seventeen years ago a pair of shoes were stolen from the Syndicate lodgings in Wichita, belonging to his job lots "Whittlesey" Johnson, and being appointed a committee of one at that time to try and locate the footwear, I concluded that if you were in that burg at that date you were possibly the culprit; but such not being the case, I will explain my reason for writing as I did some time ago.

Seventeen years ago the Wichita Democrat was a "rat office," one —— ——, a notorious rat, being the forman. After a stiff boycott, in which Eugene Andrew assisted, the shop was unionized and I was made foreman. Recently the same —— blew in on Easton with a card. I went over the Wichita affair with him and then threw him out of the office with a few lefts and rights as a remembrance. He took revenge by telling some of the boys that I had ratted in Wichita and had taken his job. Naturally (being a kicker for straight unionism) I have some enemies in No. 258, and they proceed to make capital out of the story. —— promised to be at our next union meeting and was kept full of booze on the strength of such promise, but he failed to materialize. I was there hoping he would come. I had a copy of a paper called The Wichita Union Laborer, which Eugene Andrew may recall, published whenever necessary, in which the story of the Wichita affair was given and —— denounced, and was also fortified with a copy of the minutes of the Wichita Union of September 26, 1887, kindly sent me by the secretary.

Fraternally yours,
M. D. L. SHROPE.

'Gene Andrew has often related little anecdotes to me covering this very affair and other incidents in the early career of Mr. Shrope, and I am convinced that the above version of the Wichita matter is perfectly correct.

Mr. Shrope, who originated in Easton, made his first appearance on the "tourist" stage at Omaha a little back of the time above given, arriving direct from Easton with two or three trunks of good clothes and having all the appearance of being one of the dilettanti. The Omaha boys undertook his education with such enthusiasm that he walked out of town in about three weeks to all intents and purposes and in apparel a graduated "roadster."

The Wichita Democrat, the only rat office of the town, was an eyesore to the sterling union men of that city, and they boycotted it to a standstill and until its proprietor sued for mercy. He asked that they send him a union foreman to take charge, and then for a moment they were up against it. Every man who was competent had a job to his liking or did not want one. While they were discussing the matter on the street corner, Shrope, who had just climbed off a brake beam coming into town, strolled up to them, and 'Gene Andrew spoke to him, having known him previously in Denver, gave him a quarter to eat with, and they resumed consideration of the problem. But Shrope's arrival was an inspiration to one of the party.

"Who is that chap?" he asked.

"His name is Shrope," answered 'Gene.

"Can he print?"

"Oh, yes; he's a good printer."

"Let's get him to take this job."

"All right."

They hunted up Shrope, whose raiment was not such as to be much of a recommendation, chipped in and bought him a seersucker suit, a pair of shoes, collar and necktie, a straw hat—in fact, blew in four or five dollars on him—and, he having consented to take the foremanship, took him to the newly enlightened proprietor, and in a few minutes he was foreman, remaining as such until the paper finally gave up its feeble breath. Shrope of course had to take to the road again, and he continued a shining member of the great fraternity of "tourists" until a few years ago, when he returned to his old home at Easton, where he now publishes the Journal.

This ought to be a pretty good certificate of union character for Mr. Shrope, if he needs one, which I do not believe he does.

H. P. McKevitt, an imposer in the Job Division, has at last been compelled to give up work, though he has long battled with the Great White Terror, consumption, and is now confined at his home. He is hopeful, in which he has the encouragement of his physician, that he will yet conquer his malady, but for a time must have complete rest. He will appreciate the visits of friends at his home, No. 13 First street northeast, and in no other way can we better testify to our sympathy with the afflicted than by visiting them and helping to take their minds away from their bodily ailments, giving them the office news, backcapping the candidates and others, and in all ways contributing to their diversion and amusement.

Redfield's "Maud S." cartoon was a corker in the upper works, but no one but a corkscrew designer could ever depict his legs.

It was perfectly beautiful that everything was so arranged in connection with the proposed loan to the Union Outfitters to Men Company that the Union showed an almost unanimous willingness to make the loan, the company was satisfied to receive merely the moral support of the Union instead of its coin, and everybody was vindicated. Everything was simply delightful.

* * * *

It is well that the constituency should be informed of the charges against candidates for delegate as well as to have their virtues forever drummed into its ears. It is early in the campaign and I have as yet collected but few of the facts, but I hope to be able to give more in a supplementary article.

Walter V. Smith is charged with keeping his face clean and having money, on one occasion being known to have three double sawbucks a week after pay day.

Mark H. Barnum, as secretary of the Job Room Symposium, refused a loan to Matt Hayes on the occasion of the recent visit of the latter to the city.

Frank D. Smith failed to "pass the rundown" to another reader, and when the latter finally found him and remonstrated he laughed cruelly in his face.

Philip S. Steele was seen talking to a foreman, and for that reason was believed to be reporting the misconduct of a fellow-workman.

Charles B. Buchanan wears good clothes, takes frequent baths, shaves every day in the week, is too proud to butt in on conversations, and etc.

Joseph E. Goodkey had two motions seconded at union meetings within a year (but it is claimed in mitigation that neither was adopted).

Joe M. Johnson refused, while president of the Union, to appoint a foreman chairman of the convention reception committee; failed to appoint another foreman on the same committee at all; received the sum of $50 for his convention expenses and expended the same on a trip away; ignored, snubbed, and entirely squelched the vice-president of the Union in connection with the convention; appointed three of the supporters of his opponent, Shelby Smith, on standing committees, even giving one a chairmanship; failed to appoint "Funny" Roberts a member of a secret committee for the appointment of which he was the mover. ("Funny" didn't care anything about it and Johnson did). Johnson's opportunities for wrongdoing have been much greater than those of the other candidates, it must be remembered.

While these offenses are sufficiently heinous to damn all of them, what am I to do? "Other refuge have I none." I must vote for three out of the bunch. How I wish I could vote for all three of the down-town candidates instead, for I have heard nothing against any of them. These charges, however, I fear are but a foretaste—a prologue, as it were. But I have a duty to perform, and fearlessly will I perform her. Anyone knowing any other good reasons why any of the above-named candidates should not be elected will confer a favor on the subscriber by informing him of them, with all the details. No questions asked and the strictest secrecy observed.

A letter from William E. Shields, of Denver, dated April 17, says that Dan Quinn had left there the evening before for Richmond, and adds: "He did not reap the benefit expected. I was sorry to see him go, but it is one less to look after. The trouble is, people expect to come out here and get well without taking the medicine, and if they do not do this they had better stay at home." Shields is himself in good health, but very much overworked by reason of his position as president of the Trades and Labor Assembly.

A friend of mine was filing a kick with me about THE TRADES UNIONIST the other day. "There was So-and-so who died a week or so ago," said he, "and the only notice THE TRADES UNIONIST had of it was a small paragraph stowed away in a corner." It probably never occurred to my friend that not everybody knew his friend as well as he did, and therefore could not write as extensively of him. THE TRADES UNIONIST is a paper that we largely make ourselves, and when in possession of news or facts we should all freely contribute. Even the great newspapers have to know something about a man before they can print it.

WANTED—Backcapping stories of the candidates. The meaner and more contemptible, the better. Authenticity not demanded nor any responsibility entailed. Nothing too low or dirty. Will be printed in this column in the order in which received. Special attention given to sneaking innuendoes.

The really silliest and most incomprehensible claim I have ever heard made by men not yet deprived of their personal liberty is the one that "I don't think it is right for workingmen to combine their money and go into business in competition with regular business firms," and I have heard two or three give utterance to it. The excuse for corporations is that they engage in enterprises requiring more capital than one man can furnish; but if a number of mechanics, with still less means per capita, combine their money to enter the business world, it is wrong! A half dozen or a dozen butchers, bakers, contractors, druggists, and merchants generally, having accumulated more money than they can use in their business, form a corporation to engage in banking, notwithstanding there would seem to be banks already in existence; or to insure property against fire, or to do any other kind of insurance, regardless of the fact that by doing so they are competing with established fire and other insurance companies; or to build a street railway that will compete with other street railways, or to engage in manufacturing or merchandising, or for any of the thousand and one purposes for which corporations are formed, and it never occurs to these ultra-conscientious people that somebody is being wronged. It is only when the workingman attempts anything besides work that they become ireful. "I don't think workingmen have any right to compete with regular business firms!" Such an argument—and I have even heard it made against individuals who engaged in business while continuing at their regular occupation—would keep the workingman ever a workingman, unless he were able to accumulate sufficient means to branch out as a capitalist at one fell swoop. On the same principle, a workingman must not buy a house, because by so doing he would compete with the man who has houses to rent; he must not lend his money at interest, because there are established money lenders; he must do nothing but work at the trade which he learned, and as he has no right to invest his money in any business that anybody else is engaged in—and there is somebody working every conceivable opening—it is his duty to spend all he earns in order to live, which makes logical the capitalist contention that the workingman's wage should be whatever will enable him to live and continue at work. Who would think that a man with a brain like that could make a living at anything?

It is a toss-up in which way the Western Boiler Plate Laborer is the greater disgrace to the union printers of Omaha—by its typographical appearance or by the matter which appears in its columns. But it only represents Boiler Plate Sadie after all.

I have received a note from Sam Musick, one of the proofreaders in the Bureau of Public Printing, Manila, P. I., submitting a problem in proofreading on which he desired the opinions of the finest corps of proofreaders in the world, but entirely too complicated to be given in THE TRADES UNIONIST. He says: "Time will not permit a letter on life in the Philippines, but at a future time I may write you an article on 'Killing Commas Among the G Strings,' or something on life in the Tropics. I expect to return about September, 1906, by way of India, Egypt, the Holy Land, and Europe. Ed Jones sails from Hongkong, May 10 next, via Europe. Kindest regards to all my old friends and best wishes for your health and happiness."

In blowing off the several fraternal insurance associations I have mentioned once or twice the Tribe of Ben Hur, which is not so large numerically as some of the others, but is growing. With all the blood-sweating that these associations have been undergoing, Ben Hur has been keeping the even tenor of her way, never promising more than she can fulfill, and has not seen and I hope never will see the necessity of freezing out the old members in order to keep going. Nor has she found it advisable to employ an expert to inform her what old-line experts have been saying from the start, that fraternal companies have too low assessments, and it is probable that she never will, for she started right. When we employ an expert to inform us about matters in which others are interested, we can never be sure that ours is the only pay roll that bears his name, and knowledge of that fact ought to guarantee care in the selection of experts. At any rate, Ben Hur is prosperous and growing. Her system is peculiarly her own. Every member pays the same amount—$1 a month—and the age at time of admission determines the amount of insurance paid at death. But Harry W. Templar, of the First Division, G. P. O., the financial officer of Washington Court, can tell you more about it than I can.

* * * *

No, Sonny Gunn; the ovation which I received on arising in the Union to nominate John R. Berg for president at the recent meeting was not intended for me, but for Mr. Berg; but not for the world would I have had you lose the opportunity to testify your loyalty by being the first to say so.

There is nothing so quickly resented by the friends of a candidate as inordinate praise of another candidate, and the same is doubly true in its effects when one candidate is disparaged and in the same breath others are praised. In fact, great newspaper as it is, THE TRADES UNIONIST, when its correspondents take sides for and against candidates, is more hurtful than helpful. When a correspondent says "there seems to be a growing sentiment that Johnson will lose," a prognostication that could only be actuated at this time by a wish for that consummation, with a proposed combination of three candidates for delegate suggested in the same article, it has a tendency to array not only the friends of Johnson but of every other candidate against every one of the three, innocent as they are of the arrangement and irresponsible as is the one who proposes it. The man who fights against a candidate instead of for a candidate injures the man he would help and helps the man he would injure nine times out of ten. Mr. Johnson, in this campaign, is at the disadvantage of being known as a man who has done things and who can do things; and that is a disadvantage. The recordless man, for good or evil, but who has a large speaking acquaintance, will generally put it all over the man who has distinguished himself, for the reason that the man who has sufficient force of character to distinguish himself has invariably made enemies and aroused feelings of resentment by the very fact of his success. No man can wrong us worse than by having had greater success or having shown greater ability than we have—that is the most common human feeling of all. There is not a candidate in the field this year who would not make a creditable delegate, though some of them are abler than others. That is true of any two or more men whom God ever made. But if I wanted to kill the chances of any one of them, I would commence work on the job by praising him to the skies and disparaging others, and it would be done—not because of my personal unpopularity, as a number of 5½-hatted No. 11-booted wits would like to rush in here and say; in fact, I would not be doing it all. The friends of the other candidates would attend to the job. The correspondents of THE TRADES UNIONIST can hurt their candidates, but they cannot help them in its columns. If you don't believe me, try it.

* * * *

The fact having been brought to my attention, I have taken the trouble to verify it by reference to the records, that while president of the Union Joe Johnson appointed every printing foreman in the Government Printing Office on the reception committee for the I. T. U. convention except W. R. Ramsay, L. C. Hay, W. H. Hickman, Milo Shanks, Albert Cottle, Aven Pearson, W. T. Hastings, J. M. Craig, S. F. McBride, Frank Wallace, W. H. Fisher, and John R. Berg and Theodore Hodes, if the latter two were then foremen. This discrimination on the part of Johnson we will punish this year, the first time we have had a whack at him since it occurred.

* * * *

I hear that Philadelphia Union has vindicated Shelby Smith. "Ask my brother if I'm a liar."

* * * *

I have received the Easter edition of the Western Laborer, consisting of sixteen pages, the title-page in royal purple. Being entirely the work of Mrs. Frank A. Kennedy, the national president of the Woman's Auxiliary, I take pleasure in giving it my unqualified indorsement. It is devoted almost altogether to work of the Woman's Auxiliary, with letters from most of the local organizations, and shows intelligent and faithful work on the part of Mrs. Kennedy.

Harry Knapp made us a visit on Tuesday evening. From his manner I judge that he does not ask nor expect especial consideration on account of his sex.

* * * *

The Masonic Reporter, of Baltimore, published by the Masonic Reporter Company, of which Walter H. Mules, who was one of the "temporaries" in the G. P. O. the past winter, is secretary, reached me the other day. It has grown to ten pages and is replete with matter of interest to Masons. Though it is still in its first year it has a fair advertising patronage, betokening permanency. Published so near at hand, it is of especial value to Washington Masons.

After about two and a half years' meanderings everywhere between here and the Pacific coast, Will ("Bugs") Watson dropped into town a week or so ago, though merely on a visit, as he has a comfortable job in Chicago, to which he will return in a week or so. Judging from his personal appearance, he has been having a good time every minute since he left.

GOSSIP FROM THE G. P. O.

First Division.

T. Frank Morgan is "subbing" for Mr. Pratt.

Corporal Richard N. Carter, laborer, is off on leave.

We notice a new cabinet being delivered in the "supply end" on Monday.

James H. Brodnax and Winslow Lewis have been on the sick list this week.

With all his faults "we'Love him still," and will re-elect him Vice-President. Why not?

Candidate Mark A. Barnum received a rousing ovation upon his first visit a few days ago.

Charles B. Buchanan, candidate for delegate, created a most favorable impression upon his initial visit.

Keep your eye on Candidate Goodkey. He is in the running., and while he may not carry the credentials he will get a whole lot of votes.

As a successful caricaturist, H. J. Redfield, the Gazette correspondent, is a past master, as per last week's issue of THE TRADES UNIONIST.

Candidate Goodkey is a regular boarder at our lunch counter. You can hear Union politics discussed in all its phases and you need not be a "mixer."

In the absence of George W. Robinson during the past week, "Bill" Skeen performed on the press. Oh, I tell you, he is an all-round worker in a printing office.

Ex-Chairman Nachman is the official scorer for the G. P. O. Bowling League. Phil., why didn't you tell us lon aggo, and not permit us to get the news second hand.

Col. James E. Bright, our handsome and only candidate for treasurer, is exceedingly anxious to receive every vote of the chapel. Let us give him a royal send-off.

Postmaster B. H. Pratt, is absent on a well-earned vacation, and enjoying a much-needed rest. He will visit Baltimore, Philadelphia, and New York during his absence.

Judge Underwood and George W. Robinson, of the "Y," who were on the sick list last week reported on Monday; also Messrs. Moss and Plummer. Glad to see you with us again.

This chapel's candidate for delegate, Philip S. Steele, feels confident of a complete vindication at the May election. Philip has many warm friends both in the G. P. O. and down town.

Assistant Foreman George R. Boone spent Sunday and Monday at his home in Berkley, W. Va. Mr. Boone's father is among one of the oldest citizens of that section—being in his ninety-third year.

Mr. Pierce, down town candidate for delegate, paid his first visit to the Division the other day. Although a comparative stranger to many members of the chapel, he was accorded a hearty hand-shake.

During the week Messrs. John C. Lightcap, F. W. Kern, and J. W. Cross, of the Main Proof Room, were transferred to this Division. Foreman Bowen assigned them to this side of the room—slugs 60, 75, and 77.

Mr. Fred H. Berger, over in the cage, is a great fisherman. Did you hear about his latest catch? No; well, we are not giving out state secrets. Are you a subscriber to the only 8-hour labor paper in the District? If not, hand Fred. your name.

Harry C. Knapp, one of the down town candidates for delegate, visited the office on Monday. He speaks very encouragingly of his prospects down town. Mr. Knapp will make an ideal representative, and will no doubt make a good run in this Division.

Last week we referred to W. R. Brooks returning from an extended leave. We learn that he subsequently tendered his resignation as a laborer and was appointed a helper, through Civil Service. He has since been granted thirty day sleave without pay. Busy Brooks.

The friends of Ira E. Cole, one of the oldest pressmen in the G. P. O., were shocked to learn of the death of his wife, Mrs. Nettie A. Cole, after a two days' illness. She was a member of the Golden Cross, Lincoln Relief Corps, and other organization. Her husband, three daughters and five sons survive her. Universal sympathy is extended the family in their sudden bereavement.

What did you say? Did not the room look fine on Monday morning when we came to work? Just as nice and clean as the first morning we landed about eighteen months ago. The floor, well, it was pleasing to the eye, and would you believe it, put Simon Pocher out of a job for a day. We understand that the "sweepers" under their efficient superintendent were the responsible parties. Call again.

ROUGH WRITER.

Second Division.

Someone lost a scarf pin. Inquire at the desk.

Lem Miller was absent the fore part of the week making gardens.

H. J. Smith has been transferred from the First to the Second Dixision.

E. C. Rote, of the Proof Room, was assigned to this Division last week.

One of Mac's puns: "If we all 'Mark H. Barnum,' he will have the greatest show on earth."

Robert H. Miller, a student of medicine, has been transferred to the Interior Department.

One of the wash bowls needs repairing. It makes a difference when a crowd is waiting to wash up.

The uncle of C. P. Boss died Saturday morning. Mr. Boss absented himself Monday to attend the funeral.

C. I. (Spike) Leonard, who resigned lately, has gone to Chicago. "Spike" was well known throughout the office.

One of our members from Kentucky has joined the Jonadabs which is a guarantee for the good morals of that State.

Billy Love, candidate for vice-president made the rounds Tuesday. Billy is too well-known for comment. Vote for him.

Delegates O. T. Pierce, of the Post Chapel, and Charles B. Buchanan, of the G. P. O. Proof Room, came in and shook hands last week.

A pair of spectacles, comb, and fountain pen were found in the Proof Room. Loser will find them in the Chief Engineer's Room, second floor.

Through an oversight reference was omitted in last week's issue to the death of Frank M. Sweet of this room, but was referred to in full elsewhere.

The wife of Frank A. Baxter died last week. On account of partial or total blindness before her death, Mr. Baxter was obliged to be with her constantly.

The G. P. O. Base Ball Team will be in good shape for the opening on May 1. Seats to accommodate 500 people will be erected, and interesting contests may be looked for. Members of this Division will do their share in holding up the laurels.

While not inclined to be critical, I am compelled to call attention to the habit of certain members who are addicted just before time is called, of washing their grimy paws in the bowls that contain the sponges for wetting type. This is not nice, and should be stopped.

Charles L. Nace designed and executed an attractive banner bearing the inscription: "Our Choice," Walter V. Smith, with place and date of election, and the Union Label, all in colors, painted by hand. Looks like Walter had clear sailing, to use a nautical term.

Mr. Hubert Newsom (slug 19) is not the correspondent for this Division. While Mr. Newsom is a gentleman of ability and urbanity, this explanation is made because he, being known as a brother of the pen, it was thought he is the present writer. This is not the fact.

Three of our candidates are destitute of hirsute adornment on their respective countenances. This statement will give point to the punning paragraph last week, which read: "It may be a delegate matter to mention, but this thing of soliciting votes has, to some extent, at least, assumed the role of a bare-faced proceeding." Guess who they are?

One of our members, Mr. E. E. Richards, has distinguished himself as an artistic photographer. One of his photographs was reproduced in Sunday's Star, and four out of five of his pictures were selected by a committee of experts to be placed on exhibition. This was a higher percentage than any competitor received, and we are pleased that a member of this chapel is the recipient of the distinction.

On Monday night, May 15, the Woman's Auxiliary will give an entertainment and dance at Masonic Temple. Besides first class professional talent, Columbia Union will excel any of its previous efforts in placing on the stage artists who will give a variety of good things that will be sure to be appreciated. The proceeds will be used to send their delegate to Toronto, and this alone should insure a good attendance. Be sure to buy a ticket when offered for sale.

Charles E. "Turkey" Miller, who is reported to have died in Philadelphia of consumption, was well known in the G. P. O. as a member of the Union who took great interest in its affairs, and while he was an aspirant for official honors was not very fortunate in obtaining them. His personal peculiarites may have been the cause of this. He was a reporter for a Chicago paper at the time of the anarchist trials in that city, and reported its proceedings. He was also at one time a clerk in the railway mail service, and, I believe, worked as a machine operator in the city of Brotherly Love.

Ladies' Dining Room. R. A. Driscoll, N. Cap. and G. Crabs and Clams.

Third Division.

Frank D. Smith will be elected.

Philip S. Steele's election is conceded.

It will be a close rub between Love and Hussey for vice-president.

It is said that Walter V. Smith will get a big vote among the down town offices.

As was predicted, there is now money in the Chapel treasury. The fine was an even dollar.

Will E. Morris and R. E. Stenner came to us about a week ago from the Record Proof Room.

The knowing ones say that Mark H. Barnum will make a great deal better run than some folks may think.

Those who observe the diamond cross in Jeff Garland's necktie are not surprised. He is a mica mining magnate.

People who haven't the good manners needed for self-control in public should not attend the meetings of the Union.

Robert J. Mears, who worked a short time for Byron Adams after leaving with the temporaries, is now with the Post, setting ads. Robert can make good wherever they put him.

Candidates O. T. Pierce and Wm. R. Love had their cards printed by people who know the value of good presswork. The pressman can make or mar the appearance of any job he handles, a fact that the other candidates seemingly ignored.

Those who rub their fingers along the cement between the brick over the wash bowls do not stop to think that while they are getting their fingers clean the cement is gradually being rubbed away, and they are not only defacing, but injuring the building.

Ordinary people may think that if they are "on the level" they deserve the best opinion of their fellow-men. It takes an extraordinary man, however, to get "above the level." Such a man is Chairman and Candidate Goodkey, vide his post-election manifesto.

There seems to be no reason for changing the opinion expressed by me last week concerning the down town candidates for delegate. Mr. Pierce isn't in it a little bit; and while Harry Knapp under ordinary conditions might have plain sailing, he is hopelessly handicapped in competition with Miss Teresa McDonald, She deserves election and will get the votes.

It is reported on very good authority that there is wide-spread opposition to the candidacy of Joe M. Johnson. In conversation with a gentleman who has recently had excellent opportunities for ascertaining the prevailing sentment regarding Mr. Johnson, I was informed that it was extremely unfavorable to him. "If it keeps up," I was told, "I'm afraid my friend Joe is a goner."

The annual exhibition of pictorial photographs by the Capital Camera Club is now open at the Corcoran Art Gallery and will continue until May 1. Among the exhibitors are J. W. L. Dillman of this Division, and E. E. Richards of the Second. Mr. Dillman's one exhibit, a Maryland farm house scene, and Mr. Richards' picture of the Capitol after a snow storm were reproduced in the Evening Star last Saturday.

Never before in the history of the labor movement in this city has there been such an effort put forth to boom the Union Label. Committees composed of men prominent in the movement are visiting all the Locals in the city in the interest of Union label-goods. It is needless to say that our own F. C. Roberts is working like a beaver at these meetings. If some of the so-called Union people of Washington would emulate his energetic example there would be a tale of progress to tell that would make for the speedy triumph of the labor cause over any and all obstacles.

We have had two reception days since the last report, on the first of which we shook hands with Candidates Philip S. Steele, of the First Division, Frank D. Smith of the Proof Room Annex, Walter V. Smith of the Second Division, and Mark H. Barnum of the Job Room. On the second day Orton T. Pierce from the Post chapel and William R. Love, candidate for re-election as vice-president made their appearance. Unofficial visits have also been made by Dexter S. Hussey, down town candidate for vice-president, Charles B. Buchanan of the Proof Room, and Harry C. Knapp of the Times chapel. Gentlemen, you are welcome. While we can't vote for all of you, we are glad of the opportunity to make your acquaintance. Come again. And don't be discouraged if you don't get there this time.

* * * *

WHO? EH??

Who'll hold Columbia's banner high,
And for his Union fain would die?
Who'll give the boys a straight, square deal?
Who'll dress the wounds the soreheads feel?
Who'll get an overwhelming vote,
And on the wave of vict'ry float?
Joe Goodkey!!

It was remarked by a gentleman of my acquaintance that it was a pity that the poet's name was not given in full with the lines under the picture of "Maud S." in last week's issue.

In reply to a question as to his meaning the gentleman said that it was well-known that the aforesaid poet's name was Alfred Lord Tennyson. "They might at least have put it Alfred L. Tennyson," he said.

It is a shame that questions covering subjects like the one just alluded to are not incorporated in the Civil Service examination papers. They would have a tendency, it seems to me, to create an interest in the divine art of poetry. In the meantime we must snatch what crumbs of wisdom we may from the chance remarks of my highly-gifted "gentleman friend."

Albert P. E. Doyle was transferred to the Navy Branch last week.

Mr. Doyle is a relative of the late Hon. Thomas A. Doyle, of Providence, R. I., who was elected mayor of that city seventeen times, the term being one year.

Mayor Doyle was very popular among all classes and was always ready to meet his fellow-citizens. On one occasion Michael McHale, the proprietor of a well-known boozorium in the Tenth Ward, called at the city hall and announced to the messenger that he wanted to see the Mayor.

He was politely escorted to Mr. Doyle's office and informed that he must knock on the door.

He entered on hearing a voice saying "Come in," and remarked:

"I want to see the mayor?"

"I am the Mayor," said Mr. Doyle.

"Are ye the Mayor?" said Mr. McHale, not abashed in the least. "The hell ye are! I want a license!" He got it.

Boys, there is no use dodging this fact: Our chairman, who is also a candidate for delegate to Toronto, is a much talked-of man, and one of the correspondents has already placed him among the winners. He has boundless faith in himself. He has already procured a map of Toronto, Niagara Falls, and the surrounding country, and in view of the route he purposes taking there is a persistent rumor that he intends going over the falls in a barrel so as to arrive in the convention city "the observed of all the observers."

When told that Philadelphia Union had exonerated Shelby Smith by a practically unanimous vote from the charges preferred against him, Mr. Goodkey boldly announced that he intended introducing a resolution before the convention to "investigate the hull headquarters."

Another thing we must accept is the fact that outsiders take him almost as seriously as he takes himself. I was talking the other day with a gentleman who never was guilty of making snap judgments. He said: "There are worse fellows than Goodkey. When all is said and done, Goodkey believes in doing pretty near right."

We must all admit that the above is true.

Furthermore, it is a solemn fact that some of the fellows that have cussed Mr. Goodkey hardest in the past are going to vote for him.

GOSSIP FROM THE G. P. O.

Sixth Division.

And them were Maud. Hee haw!

When you mark your ballots, Mark Barnum.

Machinist Frank Vinton spent Easter Monday in New York City.

Make-up Jerome Kendall and Operator Ed. M. Nevils are on leave.

Machine helper A. H. Potter returned from a few days' leave on Monday.

Dave McConnell and George Hayden are rated as temporary imposers for this Division.

Imposer Charles Slentz has taken Make-up McElfresh's place while the latter is on night work.

Speaking about Rhode Island, Bro. Belcher forgot to mention that Rhode Island furnished the President'sThanksgiving turkey.

Ex-delegate Anna C. Wilson, of the Gazette, was a caller in this Division on Wednesday. Miss Wilson is assisting Miss Teresa McDonald in her campaign for delegate.

The announcement that the entire Pennsylvania delegation in the G. P. O. is backing Frank D. Smith for delegate puts that gentleman's chances to win above par. If the boys from the Keystone State stand pat, its only a question of majority.

Chairman George Hayden is considering the advisability of giving a series of illustrated talks in the near future. Mr. Hayden has a large collection of views on popular subjects, and will find much encouragement among Sixth Division members if he decides to go ahead.

O. T. Pierce made his first visit to this chapel on Tuesday. Mr. Pierce hails from the Post chapel down town and is making what might be termed a strenuous campaign. He doesn't mince matters, but announces that a vote for him is a vote against "the gang." And so the fight is on.

J. Herbert Broderick is again acting as a TRADES UNIONIST correspondent, this time from the Star chapel. Mr. Broderick will be well remembered as the Post correspondent who one year ago took an active part in the campaign, thereby greatly aiding the Hawkes cause. Welcome back, Herbert.

Joe Goodkey called on me officially last week and produced the papers to prove that he is not only a printer, but has been such for many years. Mr. Goodkey says he is sure of election, and that if anybody wishes to get in his bandwagon the time is now while there is space. Goodkey is making a wonderful campaign.

The best cartoon ever published in THE TRADES UNIONIST was the one by Redfield which appeared last week portraying H. S. Sutton. There is yet room for improvement in Mr. Redfield's work, but the popularity of his subject obliterated the poor points in his drawing. Appropriate, indeed, are the beautiful words of Tennyson when he wrote: "There were none like her; no—not one, nor ne'er shall be 'til rivers cease to flow." He's the only Maudy and while others may follow there will be none like her 'til rivers cease to flow.

A new attachment has recently been applied to one of the Mergenthaler linotype machines in the Job Room which will enable an operator to increase his speed several thousand ems per day. With this attachment in operation, the use of the quad matrix for quadding out purposes is no longer necessary. Heretofore one of the chief drawbacks to speed on Record or Q. and A. matter has been on the limited number of quad mats in the magazine. But with this new appliance all this trouble is alleviated, and the operator may speed 'till his heart's content.

* * * *

A gentleman from one of the other Divisions, who evidently believes there is not enough knocking going on at present, has handed me the following verses:

Just a little "backcap"
Dropped along the way—
Seemed so very harmless—
The germ is there to stay.

Growing ever larger
As it's passed along;
Now the little weakling
Is tall and big and strong.

Just a little knocking
Against a candidate—
Better start it now, boys—
Soon 'twill be too late.

* * * *

The Second Division correspondent says he cannot see how the Linotype can hope to compete with the Lanston machine on Specification work, because the latter may be corrected by hand, while with the former machine a new line must be cast for each error. For the gentleman's enlightenment I will say that it is an easy matter for a Linotype operator to assemble and cast several lines in the same space of time that would be required for a compositor to lift, correct, rejustify and put back in the galley a line set by the Lanston machine. Thus admitting that the Linotype is much faster than the Lanston for setting type, it will be readily seen that the same principle is applicable in correcting.

This is a short story: Once upon a time there lived a man who wrote articles for a labor paper. He was asked by a very popular man who was to be nominated for the office of president of a very large union to place his name before the meeting. He did so and then wrote an account of it for the paper which read like this: "A very large number were present on Sunday to hear I. Knowing the crowd would leave the hall as soon as I got through, a chump by the name of Kidd moved to reverse things, which was carried. The crowd slept throughout the meeting until it came the time for I. Great cheering greeted I when I arose to place in nomination the name of a gentleman for president. When I had finished there was nothing further to remain for and the meeting adjourned. P. S.—I have heard several favorable comments on the gentleman I selected to nominate."

Referring to a little tribute which I recently paid to a warm personal friend who is a candidate for delegate from the Woman's Auxiliary, my friend Bloomer says, "I think that men folks should keep their nibs out of it and let the members thereof make their own selection. * * * There was so much of this last year as to be disgusting to ladies." To the latter part of these remarks I will agree with Brother Bloomer that some of his own writings on the subject one year ago were very disgusting to a large number of refined ladies who are connected with our sister union. But to what extent the men should keep out of it is another question. If memory serves me right it was the ladies themselves who invited the men to become interested in their organization. Almost every man in the Government Printing Office who had a wife, or who had one in view, was sought out by some member of the Woman's Auxiliary and asked to use his influence to bring the wife or fiancé into the Auxiliary. The doors of the G. P. O. were thrown open to delegations from the Auxiliary, and the printers were solicited to buy tickets for entertainments, etc. The response was generous, and the funds of the organization were not only greatly swelled thereby, but also by gifts from the treasury of Columbia Union. I am pretty sure that the lady members of the Auxiliary will be the last ones to ask the men to keep out of the affairs of their society, knowing as they do the purpose of its formation was for co-operation with the Typographical Union. There may be a few women who wish it were otherwise, and I am inclined to believe that my friend Bloomer has been under the hypnotic influence of some such.

PIKELETS.

MAUD S-T MENTION—SUTTON AND SOOT IN.

There's a diff'rence, of course, aside from all jokes,
Between the TRADES U. and a chimney that smokes;
And the diff'rence is this, told in a minute—
One has Sutton it and the other soot in it.

NICE AND NACE.

A mighty nice piece of handiwork by a Nace gentleman is Candidate W. V. Smith's large and handsomely illuminated poster, now on exhibition in the Second Division. Hank Allen will have to look out for his artistic laurels, while the other fellows are looking out for a Nace up W. V. S.'s sleeve, so to speak.

LEADS AND SLUGS.

No grist was ground by the Miller here away on Tuesday, but it is wheat to remember that a Taylor appeared upon the scene and sewed up the bags during Lem's absence.

BARNUM'S SHOW.

Everybody who wants to see "the greatest show on earth" for the election of a certain delegatorial aspirant, and that, too, without having to sneak in under the canvas, should make it a point to Mark H. Barnum on their ballots. So thus will they mark time to the music of the band.

INVITED TO THE LOVE FEAST.

The present incumbent, and willing to-do-it-again, of the vice-presidency, was hereaway making Love to the voters on Tuesday.

MISS TERESA M'DONALD.

Consider it well and get on to the pace
Of voting all right for the maid in the race,
Who's amply equipped all the duties to face.
Make straight her path to the much-coveted place,
Which she surely can fill with dignified grace.

A DISTINCTION WITH A DECIDED DIFFERENCE.

What is the difference between Poet Talbott and the average carpenter? One hatches new poems and the other patches old homes.

NOW AND THEN—A DELEGATE DITTY.

It is now that the "glad hand" is extended;
'Tis now that the pump-handle shake is on tap;
'Tis now that sweetest of smiles are expended,
And the most tempting bait exposed in the trap.
But ere many days more—just bide ye a bit—
You'll surely find out, beyond cavil or doubt,
That we are up hard 'gainst the icy-cold mit,
Which, for 'nother twelvemonth, isn't apt to thaw out.

THE WILL AND A WILL.

The will of man is an endowment divine,
That of woman—well, no one can shake it;
Yet oftimes it happens that heirs not in line,
Employ great lawyers and liars to break it.

CENTRAL LABOR UNION.

Meeting called to order at 8 p. m. Monday by President Dickman.

Minutes of last meeting read and approved.

Grievance Committee reported progress.

Bills amounting to $6 were read and ordered paid.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Secretary Tindall, of Board of District Commissioners, in response to inquiry of Central Labor Union of alleged violation of eight-hour law at Public Library, stating that work is being done by a local firm of bookbinders as a matter of convenience at the Library, the shop the men employed in being governed by a nine-hour day. The Secretary was directed to notify the Commissioners that the Central Labor Union considers the working of the bookbinders nine hours per day at the Library is a violation of the eight-hour law.

From the Associated Charities Committee on Prevention of Consumption, notifying John B. Dickman, president of the Central Labor Union, that he had been unanimously elected to membership, and that a subcommittee on Trades Union Co-operation had been created for the purpose of educating the workers in the movement. Placed on file.

From A. E. Kellington, International Secretary-Treasurer International Union of Flour and Cereal Mill Employees, stating that the Washburn-Crosby Milling Co., is still on the unfair list, and refused to arbitrate. An appeal is made to all central bodies to visit merchants handling the product of this mill and urge them to discontinue its sale. Placed on file.

From Hod Carriers' Union, No. 21, stating that Harry Wilson, contractor placed all men under him in Union No. 21, and is paying the scale ($2.25) per day. Placed on file.

From Hod Carriers' Union No. 21, enclosing copy of working rules and agreement for approval. Referred to Contract Committee.

CALL OF UNIONS.

Hod Carriers: That Geo. A. Fuller Co. was not employing members of their Union on Times Building.

Engineers, No. 99: That members of that Union had been placed on eight-hour basis on Washington Post.

Stationery Firemen: Wanted information relative status of their grievance against Washington Newspaper Association. Information given.

The Horseshoers Strike.

Considerable bitterness seems to mark the conduct of the strike now in progress in this city. The boss horseshoers claim to have the best of the argument thus far, but in all reason a better condition should prevail if the dispute is to be adjusted.

There is no city in the country where conditions differ in this craft as in Washington. Without an organization of Union drivers, who would refuse to take a horse out without Union shoes, the Union horseshoers have an uphill fight, while the number of so-called "bum" horseshoers recruited from country shops can help to break a strike. But an owner of a valuable horse is not going to take a chance of having his horse ruined by botch work. Unless the bosses want to do all the work they will have to come to terms with the Union.

No Treachery in His.

President McDonald, of the American Labor Union, has tendered his resignation because his organization has entered into a conspiracy with other people in Chicago to disrupt the American Federation of Labor. Mr. McDonald refuses to forget that the A. F. of L. unions responded nobly financially when the Western Federation of Labor was battling with the Peabody and Bell anarchists in Colorado. McDonald refuses to be an ingrate, or bite the hand that fed him and his people during the blood days of industrial war in that State. McDonald, like others, have differed from the policy of the American Federation of Labor, but the difference has been an honest one, and worthy of such men as he. His resignation from his organization for the cause reported is typical of men of his character. There will be others who will follow in his footsteps.—Portland Labor Press.

EBENEZER W. PATTON.

Ebenezer W. Patton died to-day (Thursday) aged 46, after an illness of several months duration. He developed a case of heart disease that caused him great suffering, all of which he bore with the fortitude that marked him all through life.

As a member of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, he represented that Union in the I. T. U. Convention at Colorado Springs, Colo., in 1896, and served as a member of the Union Printers Home Board of Trustees for one term.

Mr. Patton had a wide acquaintance among printers throughout the country and had many warm friends in the craft.

With a quaint humor that was refreshing, and an adept at repartee, he was the life of any party where he was well known Of a retiring and diffident nature, he was not one to force his views among men, but was a good listener and had a remarkable memory for past events.

Mr. Patton was one of the editors and proprietors of THE TRADES UNIONIST for about eight years, and it became a part of his existence. He saw it grow from year to year and took a just pride in its progress.

Mr. Patton was a member of B. B. French Lodge, F. A. A. M., Orient Commandery, No. 5, K. T., Columbia Chapter, No. 1, R. A. M., and Almas Temple, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine.

The funeral will take place Sunday, at 2.30 p. m., from John R. Wright's undertaking establishment, 1337 Tenth street northwest. Interment at Glenwood.

NAVY YARD ITEMS.

"Parson" Richardson is also on the sick list. Judging by the number of boils annually produced by the "Parson," one would imagine he was a lineal descendent of the meek and boiliferous Job.

It was not only a beautiful, but a touching scene to witness the different Locals falling over each other in their eagerness to be the first to come to the rescue of the Union Store. It reminded me of a scrub race where every jockey was trying his level best to come in last.

Bro. Jack Holden, who has been critically ill is now convalescent. Jack is a son of the assistant editor of the Machinists Journal, Arthur E. Holder, and has proven by his fidelity to Unionism a worthy son of an honored sire. I only wish there were more Arthur Holders.

Bro. Dave Thomas, one of the hustling boys of Columbia Lodge, is carrying a pet around with him in the shape of a mashed hand. Dave says he don't want it, but would not take the world for it. Dave stuck his hand between two pieces of metal just as they closed to see how it would feel. He now says he will never go there any more.

Capt. Persing, of the E. G. C. Shop, who won fame and honor as the man who broke up the Mollie Maguires in Pennsylvania a quarter of a century ago, is also sick. It is reported that the Japanese Government is anxious to secure his services, knowing well his peculiar forte—that of capturing a whole regiment single-handed, by surrounding them.

Bro. Harry Budesheim, of E. G. C. Shop, accompanied by one of the sweetest girls in this city, Miss Amelia M. Rothauge, visited Philadelphia last week and while there were quietly married by the Rev. Dr. Hesse. After a trip to Atlantic City and Niagara they returned home and are ready to receive their friends at 304 North Carolina avenue. Harry looks as happy as a bee in a 'lasses barrel over the event, but just wait until he he does the cake walk stunt about 2 a. m. and incidentally picks up a couple of tacks. Oh what a difference in the morning.

As I grow older I see more good and more evil in all men than heretofore I did. I see that good men are not so good as I once thought they were, but have more imperfections, and that nearer approach and fuller trial makes the best appear more weak and faulty than their admirers at a distance think. And I also find that few are so bad as either malicious enemies or censorious separating professors do imagine.

In some, indeed, I find that human nature is corrupted into a greater likeness to devils than I once thought anyone on earth had been, but, even in the wicked usually there is more for grace to take advantage of, and more to believe in the goodness of God than I once believed there had been.

I less admire gifts of utterance and bare profession of religion than I once did, and have more charity for many who, by the want of gifts, do make an obscurer profession than they.

I once thought that almost all who could pray movingly and fluently, and talked well of religion, had been saints, but experience has opened to me what odious crimes may consist with high profession, but I have met with divers persons, obscured as it were, not noted for any extraordinary profession, but only to live a quiet blameless life, whom I have after found to have long lived, as far as I could discover, a truly godly life.

DYING RICH.

An active business man is a rational being and a great blessing to the community. He keeps in exercise the talents confided to him, making them a blessing to himself, and a source of good to those by whom he is daily surrounded. He furnishes employment for the industrious, which is far better than bestowing alms upon the unemployed. Herein are the legitimate and rational results of the active business pursuits and wealth-getting—the employment or the gratification of the active powers, and the reward of industry.

But the slavish toil of accumulation merely for the sake of possession—the lust of cupidity—the remorseless desire of growing rich solely and principally to die rich, is one of the most foolish and debasing intentions which find lodgment in the heart of man.

What can the praise, if praise it be have to do with the dull cold ear of death? What can it profit one, when he is lower and more insensible than the sod, to have it sounded above him, "How rich he died." Experience has fully and emphatically taught the lesson that much wealth left to heirs is, in eight times out of ten, not a blessing but a curse.

The time will come when men of wealth will be wise enough to make a gradual distribution of their property while living—not prescriptive, but operative—thereby having an eye to the use that is made of it, and a participation in the greatest enjoyment its possession is capable of giving, that of seeing it do good to others. They will dismiss the foolish aspiration—foolish, especially in this country, where there are neither laws of primogeniture or entail, by which a succession of family millionaires may be kept up—of dying rich, with the certain reflection that the heirs will soon or later die poor. To use borrowed but energetic language on this subject: "After hypocrites, the greatest dupes the devil has are those who exhaust an anxious existence in the vexations and disappointments of business, and live meanly and miserably only to die magnificent and rich." For, like the hypocrite, the only disinterested motive these men can accuse themselves of is that of serving the devil without receiving the wages, for the assumed morality of the one is not a more effectual bar to enjoyment than the real avarice of the other. He who stands every day over the ledger till he drops into the grave may negotiate many profitable bargains, but he has made a single bad one, indeed, that more than counterbalances all the rest, for the empty foolery of dying rich he has laid down his health, his happiness, and his integrity.

Enterprise and activity in business, and a passion for honest money getting are good things in the world, and he who uses his talents and capital in this way is a benefactor to his race, but he who slaves to gather wealth for the sake of dying rich is in no sense a wise man, but a very foolish one, indeed.

The troubles of the quartermen and leadingmen in the Naval Gun Factory relative to the pay deducted for overtime work, by order of the Secretary, based on a decision of the Assistant Comptroller, seems in a fair way to be adjusted and their money returned. Captain Pendleton, Superintendent of the Naval Gun Factor,y several days ago wrote the Department and made such explanations as to bring forth a letter of inquiry from the Secretary asking for a report, whether quartermen and leadingmen, in connection with their duties as members of the supervisory force, performed any mechanical labor with their hands, or was their work simply supervision or brain work.

The answer of Captain Pendleton clearly demonstrates the fact that, in addition to supervision, after a piece of work is completed in detail and before the different parts are assembled as a whole, they are compelled to inspect such details by measurement, and in performing said inspection it becomes necessary to use gauges, calipers, and other measuring instruments, which si clearly mechanical, and only learned and perfected by experience, not theoretical, but practical. This evidently places the quarterman and leadingman in the category of mechanical employees, and no doubt will be the means of restoring to them the pay deducted.

No mention, however, is made in the inquiry relative to the master mechanic who is in charge of his department. This seems to me to be unfair, as oftentimes during the absence of the quarterman and leadingman he is compelled to assume their duties in connection with his own and perform the duties as above described which also places him in the category of actually performing mechanical work with his tools.

If the Comptroller's decision stands, in what position is the master mechanic placed? He must be one of two things, either a salaried employee or a per diem employee. If a salaried employee he is entitled under the law to thirty days annual leave; whereas if a per diem employee he is entitled under the law governing Navy Yard and Arsenals to fifteen days annual leave.

This is the unsettled question, and the master mechanic would like to know "where he is at." Under the rules of the Yard, master mechanics, as well as quartermen, leadingmen, and workmen, are required to muster twice daily, morning and noon, and if they neglect to do so they must appear before the superintendent, who, at his pleasure, may allow them to return to work, losing one hour or compel them to lose the half day.

The best proof I can submit to prove that master mechanics, quartermen, and leadingmen are classed as per diem employees is that they, like all other employees, are paid by the hour, and if they work four, five, or eight hours per day their working card is made out accordingly and their pay for that day is computed from that card. It is to be hoped that the matter will be promptly adjusted and the precedent established that all employees, outside of the two civilian assistant superintendents who are salaried men will receive their just recompense. Some day they will all get wise and become good Union Men and their troubles will be the troubles of Columbia Lodge.

TIM TICKLE.

THE MODERN PHILANTHROPIST.

He put peas in the pepper,
And mixed coffee up with beans;
He bleached things out with acid;
Colored things with anilines.
He poisoned scores of babies
With adulterated food,
Then gave millions to the heathen—
And people called him good.

He cornered all the breadstuff
That 'twere possible to seize;
Then got his grip on coal mines
And said, "Pay up or freeze!"
And thousands froze and hungered—
It worried not his mind—
He bought a university
And people called him kind.

He bought some legislatures,
Corrupted bar and bench.
In wrong and greed and privilege
His forces did entrench.
He robbed and squeezed and plundered
Nor heeded human cries.
He built a college building—
And people called him wise.

He paved his way to fortune
With bleaching bones of toil.
The needs of wives and babies
He used to wreak his spoil.
His conscience never hurt him;
'Twas grown too dumb to call.
He gave vast sums to churches
And thought that squared it all.

Thousands to schools and churches—
They're built on dead men's bones.
Thousands to public buildings—
There's blood stains on their stones.
And thoughtless may applaud him
And cheer him on his way;
But blood and tears will mock him
On God's great judgment day.

Blood and tears and heartaches;
Anguish and grief and want.
The faces of starving children,
Haggard and pinched and gaunt.
Wrecks of human endeavor—
All this to achieve a goal.
What profits a man to gain it
And lose his immortal soul?

JUST EVERY-DAY LIFE.

Few residents of Washington realize there has been constructed, from an ash heap, a combined cinder path, board walk, and speedway, extending from Pennsylvania avenue, via Seventeenth street, to the Basin and thence to the Long Bridge. On both sides thereof has been placed the statuary secured from the world's Fair at St. Louis by the Government.

It was comparatively easy to read at the last Union meeting, what was revolving in the mind's eye of the nominators of the prospective delegates. Mr. McCord had in view the fact that when the god of day had leaped the Alleghenies, and poured its rays past the loftier ranges of the Rockies, they fell upon another dome, that of the temple of the Latter-Day Saints. In Salt Lake City he met the gentlemen whose praises he sounded. He was his pal. And you will remember that pet, sweetheart, and their several synonyms sink into a pitiable insignificance when compared with the pathos of pal. The gentleman who named Mr. Knapp led his listeners from mart to the hearthstone, holding up the picture of the ideal man, the builder of the home. Mr. Halsey could see the hamlet of East Portland, way up in the Sound country, where lived a lassie when a Joseph came a wooing. He was his pal. Mr. Lerch's scene was set in the small hours before the dawn, when a courageous little woman, her nocturnal tasks completed, homeward plod her weary way.

Personal Mention.

Lon A. Shimp writes from Seattle, Wash., that he has settled for awhile in that city. He has been living in Shelton, Wash. Lon went from this city to Chicago, and subsequently left there for the Yellowstone Park, where he was official printer to the Park management.

Frank Stewart, lately of the G. P. O., and once again in Chicago, writes that he has been employed steadily since leaving here. He reports a number of G. P. O. men in Chicago and all doing well.

W. C. Watson, now of Chicago, Ill., formerly of Washington and the Far West, is on a visit here. Billy looks well and is satisfied with the Windy City as a place of abode. He reports work as being "good" in Chicago.

What Albert H. Hill Says.

The last number of the Washington TRADES UNIONIST is excellent and reflects credit on the managers of the journal. Our old friend Bloomer is there, as usual, with three or four columns of live paragraphs. Mr. Bloomer is a versatile writer. He can write a sermon that would make a $10,000 preacher envious; he can pen a paragraph that if heeded will make you a better union member; he can give some historical dates that will make the old-timers feel good; he can write prose that will carry you so high in the clouds that you can almost tickle the feet of the angels, and last, but not least, he can take a shot at the chronic knockers in such a way that they usually go away back and sit down.—*Nashville (Tenn.) A Word to the Wise.

The next time you abuse an editor, especially a magazine editor, remember that even he has his troubles. Of the hundreds of magazines now published, and the still more hundreds now defunct, not half a dozen but were a steady financial loss during the first months or years of their existence. Of the exceptions nearly all had back of them some purpose big enough to draw instant support from a large body of people. Perhaps the most striking example of these fortunate few is Tom Watson's Magazine, now making its first appearance with the solid backing of all believers in economic and political betterment.

There is no writer on the Post whose work I enjoy more than that of "Savoyard," not the least of his charm being his delightful disregard for prosaic fact in reference to historical matters. It is true he is "called down" about once a week; but that only shows how generally he is read and serves to advertise him. Anybody can write mere facts; "Savoyard" could, only he finds misstatements more interesting and they attract more attention. There is no opportunity for the exercise of a talent for invention in a dry recital of mere facts. "Real Estate Transfers" deal with indisputable occurrences; "Savoyard" draws on his imagination. Compare the two for absorbing interest and you will see why "Savoyard" is popular and "Real Estate Transfers" are not.

For the consolation of candidates: The man who really wishes to find fault with you is never at a loss for charges to bring.

* * * *

Another evidence of damnable outrage on the part of Joe Johnson came to my ears the other day, and I think the typographical public should revel with me in the exposition of it. During the I. T. U. convention of 1903, in this city a member of the Union who has traveled everywhere and who consequently knew all the delegates was unceremoniously barred from one of the functions by the officious committee which Johnson had appointed. Joe had been called from the city on an errand that was unavoidable, it is true, but he was responsible for what his committee did; and besides, there is no good reason for believing that the outrage would not have occurred if he had been here. These are grave matters, ladies and gentlemen, and should have our profoundest consideration in the selection of delegates. I do not wish to be regarded as inimical to Mr. Johnson or any of the candidates. but I must tell the truth.

You'll go on fooling around the Woman's Auxiliary and trying to run their election for them, Sonny Gunn, until some able-bodied sister takes you across her lap and hammers you where you got hit by the sour apple. It won't be Merg poetry that you'll grind out after that operation, Sonny.

* * * *

A question having been raised in my presence the other day as to what ex-presidents of Columbia Union are still living, I have taken the trouble to look it up and find the following in active membership: George A. R. McNeir, W. W. Maloney, T. W. Howard (two years), N. Watkins, O. F. Mattingly, W. R. Ramsay (three years), W. H. Sweeney, E. C. Grumley, C. M. Robinson (two years), J. B. Dickman, E. A. M. Lawson (two years), and Joe M. Johnson (two years). Besides these there are the following: A. P. Marston, in the office of the foreman of printing; John L. Kennedy (two years), a well known down town stock broker; W. E. Shields (two years), now of Denver, where he is president of the Trades and Labor Assembly; George A. Tracy (two years), now of San Francisco; J. Dexter Kehoe, now a clerk in the Treasury Department, and E. C. Jones (two years), chief clerk of the Bureau of Public Printing, Manila, P. I. From this it will be seen that we have plenty of ex-presidents and can afford to reduce their manufacture to one every two years.

* * * *

Sonny Gunn and my typewriter have both noted the frequent use I make of the cap I—the former is irritated by it; the latter shows that tired feeling. In devoting himself almost exclusively to the Woman's Auxiliary and the glories of foremen Sonny is at least able to avoid the charge of egotism.

I think Goodkey, as evidenced by his card last week, is laboring under a mistaken idea of his rights in the premises. As a candidate for office he belongs to the public, and consequently is a legitimate matter of news. Personally a great admirer of Mr. Goodkey, I claim the right to make known my reasons for my preference. Besides, I have a distinct recollection of the time when he not only solicited publicity at my hands, but furnished me the data with which to celebrate him. I like to respect a man's feelings, but when I feel a part proprietorship in him, as in this case, I have my rights too.

* * * *

I recently received cards of the wedding of Mr. Ira Webster Orcutt and Miss Lillian Grace Belding, April 26, at Everett, Mass. Miss Belding was a printer in the State printing office at Boston, and there are doubtless Bostonians here who knew her. I did not know Mr. Orcutt. I wish them many years of happiness.

* * * *

Ere fourteen summers' fervent heat had left their tan on my fresh young complexion and before I had learned what sin was and how to avoid it, barefooted and owning but one suspender, I stood on a type box and marshaled into lines one of the boss's astounding editorials. The earlier part of it I did not understand at all, and so it made no impress on my mind, but the wind-up of the peroration was so unworthy of an intellect like that possessed by the boss, my ideal of a great editor, that I protested. As well as I now recollect, it ran thus:

Let us to our feast of larks, since the sky has fallen. We will have new cheese from the moon. The dog did not stop; so we will have a ragout of rabbit. We will have at our right hand the man who struck the late William H. Patterson. On with the dance; let joy be unconfined. Have we not the pot of gold which we found at the foot of the rainbow?

The boss was kind and forbearing with me always, for even then I had developed that great devotion to my employer's interests which has been the mainspring of my life's activities. He listened to my protests considerately.

"Sarcasm, my boy," said he; "sarcasm!"

The jolt I then received was paralleled last week when I was asked:

"What the hell are you knocking Joe Johnson that way for?"

But my questioner was more than fourteen years old in everything except intellect.

* * * *

I am deeply touched by the apparent solicitude of Belcher regarding his friend Johnson,whom he fears is doomed to defeat, and if I knew the source from which he draws his solicitude I could guess how deep-seated it is. I should like to say something to cheer him up, but I think this is one of the times when he prefers to be gloomy.

* * * *

Orton T. Pierce, of the Post, downtown candidate for delegate—most of this descriptive matter is supererogation, for everybody knows him, everybody likes him, and nearly everybody is going to vote for him—dropped in to see us one evening last week, but too late in the week for me to make such mention of the event as its importance merited. "Orton's Great American Circus and World's Wonderful Aggregation of Rare Animals" is one of the fondest recollections of my youth, and the name Orton has had a charm for me ever since. Orton Pierce also has a great show, as his namesake had, and his presence at the Toronto convention will be an additional attraction to visitors and he will be a monument to perpetuate its memory. He told me he is going to win, which was no compliment to my intelligence and ability to read the signs of the times. I knew it before he spoke.

* * * *

Belcher is powerful flip in predicting success for some candidates and defeat of others, with that enthusiasm which is so large a portion of the stock in trade of the callow youth. When he gets older and has had more experience he will learn the advantage of predicting success for everybody. But youth is the one fault that is absolutely sure to be cured.

I have often heard of the terrible amount of grafting going on in Philadelphia, but I have always had it associated it in my mind with city politics heretofore.

Even my friend McPike has so far overlooked the great opportunities offered for protesting against Columbia Union's love for a hussy in connection with the vice-presidency. In making use of this suggestion the wits can supply the usual diagrammatic parens, caps, and italics which they find necessary to make a witticism intelligible, under the presumption that they are writing for Scotchmen, who are said to need a surgical operation to let in a word play and to joke wi' deefeeculty.

If nobody is going to tell that fish story about Claude Pendarvis, Merg machinist in the Sixth Division, I'll tell it myself. He was up the river one afternoon and found a 4-pound bass that had become landlocked near the bank, and all he had to do was to lift him out, so shallow was the little pool. Coming through Georgetown with his bass on a string, he was held up by a policeman.

"Where did you get that fish?" asked the cop.

"In the river," said Claude.

"Are you a fisherman?"

"No, sir."

"I thought not, or you would not be carrying a bass through the streets during the close season. I could run you in, but I won't. But you'd better put a piece of paper around that fish if you don't want some other policeman to do so."

And Claude did.

* * * *

Candidate Phil Steele is not letting any grass grow around the voters, but is making a clean, thorough canvass, and he deserves to win.

* * * *

Belcher's faint-praise damnation of Barnum's chances—that he "will make a great deal better run than some folks think"—seems to be based on the authority of the same "knowing ones" who are afraid that their friend Joe Johnson is a goner, but who are making their wishes take the places of their thinks. I expect to go to Toronto in the same caravan with Delegates Barnum and Johnson.

* * * *

Walter Virgil Smith's election was sure before he began business, but he is not trusting to that alone. The solid Smith vote to start with was no small capital.

* * * *

Of course we don't know all the circumstances yet, but from what we do know we are naturally proud to see Home Trustee and Alderman Thomas McCaffrey, of Colorado Springs, take advantage of the first opportunity to throw down a member of his own Union and one of the men who elected him in favor of a rank outsider. I'm gradually getting suspicious of those fellows who are being celebrated for their phenomenal honesty. Like the case of Shelby Smith, it's frequently too good to be true.

Delegate Romanoly, of the Tailor's Union, gave notice that at the first meeting in May he would introduce a resolution that in six months from date all delegates would have to pass an examination to show that they wore union made clothes, shoes, hats, etc.

The above paragraph was handed to me, and I don't know any more than you do from what paper it was clipped or what city Delegate Romanoly makes his habitat, but the idea is right. The man who buys non-union goods is as much an employer of scab labor as the man who runs a "rat office," and the only sure way of knowing that he is not doing so is to insist on the union label. I am "stuck" on the unionism of that Galveston employer who refused to employ any man who bought any character of non-union goods.

Stoetzel, Conrad Smith, jr., H. W. Riley, W. H. Dean, and four others, of Chicago.

I observe that the old cuttlefish Wahneta methods are being revived, under which, if a candidate was desired to be "downed," he was charged with being a Wahneta. Ordinarily you can gamble that the man who is industrious in circulating such reports is or has been a member of that criminal organization.

If you are a Freemason and want a Masonic paper I don't see why you should not take the American Tyler, of Ann Arbor, Mich., the best in the bunch. It is true it is not a local paper, as the late lamented Disciple was, but it covers well the general field of Masonry. The fact that I am a regular contributor may seem a drawback to some, but we must learn to take the fat with the lean and bear a little for the general good.

Owing to the eccentricities of the calendar, next pay day will not be a card day, but when it comes at the following one we will have a price and a half card to pay for. But we love our Union and are only too glad to pay our dues—most of us.

W. B. P(rescott) has a splendid editorial in the May Inland Printer on "The Shorter Work-Day Movement," in which he argues well for the eight-hour day from the standpoint of the union printer, remarking incidentally that present defeat would only mean postponement. I also want to congratulate him on another on "International 'Situation,'" in which, with a full pail on each shoulder, he does not spill a drop. The miscellaneous matter is fully up to their high standard, that of our own Pafflow, "The Export Field," being especialy interesting and enjoyable.

There is no more indefatigable pursuer of the festive votes than Charlie Buchanan, and as he makes a most favorable impression wherever he goes, I expect to enjoy his society on the trip to Toronto.

Candidate Harry Knapp was going through the First Division, trying to make it unanimous, when I went up there Monday to get my pay. But of course there will be some that he won't get, despite Belcher.

* * * *

I have received the May number of M. D. L. Shrope's Easton, (Pa.) Journal, in which he roasts Frank Lindsay, the "———" of my article on Shrope of last week, and whose name I omitted because it has been my practice to avoid giving the name of a man who has once "gone wrong" and repented of it, in order not to make it hard for him in his efforts to do right. But Shrope had provocation anew for making it warm for his erstwhile enemy.

* * * *

I heard a report the other day that an order had been received from I. T. U. President Lynch that "Johnson must be elected by all means" and another from Shelby Smith that "Under no circumstances must Johnson be elected." As both seemed to emanate from the same source, I have not placed much credence in either, the more especially that I don't see my way clear to obey both.

I am told that Charles E. Holmes leaves us on May 15 to accept a situation in the Bureau of Public Printing, Manila, P. I., as proofreader, a class of work in which he has heretofore had considerable experience in the G. P. O.

Mr. Bloomer Corrected.

EDITORS TRADES UNIONIST:

At the risk of seeming presumptuous, I wish to dissent from Mr. Bloomer's description of my friend, John Kiernan, which appeared in a recent issue. That description did not make a true picture. Mr. Bloomer simply caricatured the real man and wrote several very inartistic fictions concerning his religious beliefs. No pagan of the olden times ever threw a Christian to the lions with more delight than Mr. Bloomer does.

He seems to find great pleasure in writing grotesque creeds, pinning them to his neighbors, and then ridiculing said neighbors for believing things that they never even dreamed of.

Mr. Kiernan has his religious beliefs, but Mr. Bloomer's unmitigated nonsense about that religion being all "groanings and self-abasement, everything joyful being devilish, and everything natural being wrong," forms no part of his faith. He opposes the saloon, the race track and gambling den, and the low resort where men sacrifice health and honor or squander the money that should be used for the support of their families. His "Irish name" and "English accent," which Mr. Bloomer so carefully and oracularly noted, did not interfere with the vigorous expression of his opinion on these evils.

Not very long ago he encountered Mr. Bloomer's very self, taking that versatile gentleman to task for one of his so-called "sermons."

The wordy war was fast and furious, and Mr. Kiernan not only ruffled Mr. Bloomer's plumage, but he tore out enough of his feathers to fill a tick. No report of the encounter ever appeared in the Flotsam and Jetsam column, but perhaps the recollection of the episode was present when last week's vitriolic pen picture was written.

Mr. Bloomer should not have bothered about Mr. Kiernan's religious beliefs. It would have been sufficient to refer to him as a good printer, an honest, outspoken, manly man, stoutly holding his own beliefs and respecting the beliefs of others. This description would have read just as well as the other, besides having the additional charm of being entirely true.

Respectfully,

IAN.

Suitor—"I'm poor but honest, sir." Old Rocksy—"I don't doubt it at all, my boy; and unless you change your principles you'll never get rich."—Town Topics.

GOSSIP FROM THE G. P. O.

First Division.

J. W. Miller has returned from his leave.

Dan L. Sansom (champion sneezist) says he has finished whitewashing.

F. Hall Lang, recently of the temporary force, is working in Lynchburg, Va.

Have you seen Col. Bentz's garden? He expects an immense yield of tomatoes.

All bets are off. Did you get your three-year old American Beauty rose bush?

Say, don't you think the subscription papers are being pushed along right lively?

An excellent picture of Chief Clerk Brian, of the G. P. O., appeared in Sunday's Post.

A letter recently received from Geo. H. Ball, of Portland, Me., states that he is enjoying good health.

"Hot saw dust" and "Man in the Hole" are everyday expressions. Can anyone interpret them?

Our Bruce, we notice by the Directory, is a resident of Kensington, Md. Capt. Bruce Bielaski, of course, is understood.

On Tuesday I. D. Williamson, W. F. Johnson, and A. J. McMillan were transferred to this Division from the War Branch.

In the passing of Candidate Goodkey through this Division on Tuesday, accompanied by Chairman Davidson, we believe the circuit is now complete, and it can be truthfully said, "They are off."

We regret to learn of the sudden illness of Mr. A. T. Foxwell while in attendance at church on Sabbath. Hope he will speedily recover and be permitted to return to his desk in the Proof Room.

James H. Brodnax and James B. Knapp are on the sick list. We understand that the first-named gentleman contemplated a trip to Hot Springs, Va. Hope they may both speedily be restored to health.

Charlie Lucas, a recent temporary in this Division, is working in New York City. So says a recent letter to Oscar Bellinger. Lucas has two excellent qualifications—an excellent printer and a genial fellow.

Col. J. E. Bright and "Doc" Radley, candidates for treasurer and auditor, respectively, are not worried one bit over their election. It is the candidates for delegate that will do the worrying, and the battle will not be decided until the last ballot has been counted.

On Monday, Miss Teresa McDonald and Harry C. Knapp, two of the down town contestants for Toronto honors, visited this Division. My, oh, my, the supreme confidence of the ultimate success of the candidates. We guess, however, that's politics, whether its National or Union.

As a number of the candidates are pretty evenly matched it will be quite a proposition to select the winners. Then, too, there is quite an element in the Union that do not make up their minds or select their candidates until the day of election, regardless of all "hot-air" arguments previously advanced.

A number of the employees of this Division were personally acquainted with Clinton M. Stahl, who died from apoplexy on Sunday. During Public Printer Benedict's administration the deceased held a clerical position in the G. P. O. Mr. Stahl came to this city from Seneca Falls, N. Y. He was in the prime of life.

The latest advices from the Isthmus of Panama was received on Monday morning from J. A. Bell, a former employee of this Division. "Give my regards to all the boys," was the concluding sentence of an illustrated laundry postal. A compositor on this side of the room was the recipient—first and last name, Slug 40.

Our candidate for vice-president made a canvass the other day. That he was delighted with the cordial reception accorded him, not only in the several Divisions and branch offices of the G. P. O., but in the down town Chapels, is the manner in which he expressed himself. Wm. R. Love will be re-elected. Only a question of how large a majority.

Philip S. Steele, the First Division's candidate for delegate, is much pleased over his reception in the "down town" offices. It is sincerely hoped that Mr. Steele will be one of the successful contestants in the Toronto race. Let us all agree to give Mr. Steele one vote at the approaching election. If you think you have a grievance, "cut it out" this once.

The lady advance agents for the sale of tickets for the entertainment under the auspices of the Woman's Auxiliary, No. 13, who visited this Chapel during the week were exceedingly well pleased with the success which attended their efforts. In the absence of Chairman Davidson Secretary Lillard performed the clerical part; he informs us that in excess of 110 were disposed of. As ticket-sellers the ladies carried off the honors.

ROUGH WRITER.

Second Division.

Foreman Milo Shanks took a day off Friday of last week.

G. F. Weidman designed an admirable cartoon of the candidates, all on one card.

Messrs. Holland, Schmidt, Stanley, Galvin, and Lee were transferred to the Specification Division last week from this Division.

It means but little to you, but to the time men distributing force it means a great deal—that is, to leave the spaces in the italic lines.

Chairman Jos. E. Goodkey of the Third Division, was in to see us Tuesday. Goodkey apparently has the "good key" to success.

Our Assistant Foreman, J. H. Heslet, sports a new office coat. It looks all right, just now, at least, when the weather is getting warm.

Harry Knapp, of the Times office, is one of the three down town aspirants for delegatorial honors. He presented his card Monday in this Division.

A letter from the son of A. T. Maupin, a former compositor of this Division, who has been ill at his home in Virginia, states that his father has greatly improved in health.

Frank A. Baxter acknowledges, in a sincere letter of thanks, the gift of flowers sent by the members of this Division as an expression of sympathy on account of the death of his wife.

Col. C. C. Semmes, of the correcting force, has entered his little grandchild in the Times competition for the prettiest baby. The Colonel showed a number of photographs which certainly ought to win the prize of $50 offered.

Joe M. Johnson is one of the candidates for delegate who paid the Second a visit Tuesday, There are some knockers against Joe, but taking everything into consideration, there are knockers against everybody, and Candidate Johnson being no exception to the rule, the same must be expected in regard to him.

Messrs. Engel, Voigt, O'Connor, and Beddow, of this Division, are members of the Columbia Base Ball Club. The printer teams will play a game every Tuesday and Friday, beginning five o'clock, on the Mahone lot, between L and M streets, on North Capitol street. L. B. Cooley, of the First Division, is manager of the Columbia.

The attractive banner bearing the inscription, "Our Choice, W. V. Smith," etc., designed and executed by C. L. Nace, of this Division, was not handpainted, as stated last week but was cleverly executed with a common fountain pen filled with black ink, the card having a yellow background, and the red ink color being written in with an ordinary writing pen.

Hank Allen, of this Division, has the highest average in the bowling contests, 180.1. The Second up to Wednesday night of last week stood 11 to 4, having won three straights. This is the last of the series for this season, and should none of the other competing teams be able to, at least, tie this record by Wednesday night of this week the Second will be the victor.

Mrs. C. L. Nace, Vice-President of the Woman's Auxiliary, one of our members, and Mrs. F. C. Roberts, Sergeant-at-Arms of the Auxiliary, visited our Division, Friday, selling tickets for the entertainment to take place on the 15th. Aside from the purpose of sending their delegate to Toronto, the entertainment will be all that is asked for. Professional and amateur talent will be engaged, and a good time generally may be expected.

Ladies' Dining Room. R. A. Driscoll. N. Cap. and G. Crabs and Clams.

Third Division.

Messrs. Knapp and Pierce have each made us another call. Such sociability is truly commendable.

Candidate Goodkey was out distributing cards last Tuesday. It was dreadfully lonesome without you, Joe.

Brother Bloomer should take comfort from the fact that Horatio Seymour once said: "I could not afford to dismiss the tonic of mortification, the refinements of sorrow. I needed them, everyone."

The Marquise de Fontenoy, who writes special articles for the Post, speaks of "Caxton, the inventor of printing." The Marquise may be all right on the Almanarch de Gotha, whatever that is, but she is away off on printing.

Maurice H. Phillips, who was a temporary last winter in this Division, and was subsequently detailed to the Folding Room as a laborer, received a deserved promotion last week in being assigned to the Job Room, where he holds down the position of messenger for Press Reviser Summers. Mr. Phillips is an intelligent workman and merits any consideration which the Public Printer may give him. His new associates will find him a companionable gentleman and worthy of their friendship.

* * * *

It's no use, dear Bloomer. You know what Truthful James said about the Heathen Chinee:

In his sleeves, which were long, we found twenty-four packs,
Which was coming it strong, yet I state but the facts.

* * * *

A significant piece of history is this: That when Jones became president of Columbia Union he found a debt of $21,000, which was reduced to $9,500 during his administration. During the administration of Mr. Lawson, who succeeded Mr. Jones as president, this $9,500 was wiped out and $2,500 additional was spent for furniture and repairs on the Temple, and the presidency was turned over to Mr. Johnson without a cent of indebtedness and with something over a thousand dollars in the treasury. When Mr. Berg became president he found the treasury empty.

Isn't this so, Mr. Bloomer?

* * * *

Several evenings ago Candidate Goodkey ambled into the washroom and pushed the extra electric light button, then plunged into a basin of water with the following statement:

"It don't take a bit more coal to generate 1,500 volts of electricity than—"

"How's that, Joe?" interrupted some one; "how many tons of coal did you calculate it would take to generate 1,500 votes?"

"Aw, cut it out!" said the candidate. "You fellers make me tired."

* * * *

A stockholder in the Union Outfitters to Men Company showed me a letter received from a former employee of the G. P. O., in which information was asked concerning the company's method of organization, etc., in the interest of certain Union people in Roanoke, Va., who have in mind the starting of a similar store in that city.

I was also informed that on a certain Saturday evening several weeks ago a considerable party composed of members of various trade unions in Alexandria, Va., came over to Washington for the purpose of buying Union label goods at the Outfitters' Store. As a direct result of that visit a certain Alexandria merchant advertised a few days ago as follows: "You don't have to go to Washington to get Union label goods, as I have stocked my store with a complete assortment."

* * * *

To those narrow-minded men who are disturbed by the fact that women can and do compete successfully with them at their daily avocations, and who are never tired of saying that the place for a woman is at home taking care of the children, forgetting that the greatest cause for women leaving home to work alongside men is nothing more or less than the improvidence of the men themselves—to those men I earnestly and respectfully commend the following extract from an editorial in the Post of April 23:

The Post has never been alarmed or otherwise disturbed by the entrance of women into the professions or into other fields of labor of which men formerly had a practical monopoly. So long as men are an important factor in the making and selling of women's garments, complaints from men that the women are obtruding into their sphere are rather ridiculous. It seems to us that women are quite as much at home and as immune from just censure, when employed as lawyers, preachers, doctors, bookkeepers, or telegraph operators, as men are in many of the avocations in which they engage.

The Post, with perfect propriety, might have added compositors and proofreaders to the list of occupations at which women are quite as much at home as men.

It is but a step farther to assert without fear of successful contradiction that as a candidate for delegate to Toronto, Miss Teresa McDonald is more than worthy the suffrages of the members of Columbia Union. If we are true to ourselves she will unquestionably be our choice. No intelligent man can gainsay the fact that she is thoroughly competent to fulfil the duties required of a representative to the I. T. U. Let us all show our appreciation of this woman's ability by sending her to Toronto.

* * * *

I am sorry that the cold facts about Mr. Johnson's prospects—or lack of prospects, more properly speaking—of election are disagreeable to you. Or maybe something is the matter with your liver. It has a good deal the appearance of disordered liver. But of that, of course, I can not be sure. It looks as though you had it in for me because I made the remark, "There seems to be a growing sentiment that Johnson will lose." I am sorry to have so disturbed you, but I only speak the facts as they are conveyed to me on what appears to be very good authority.

Regarding the advice you are so kind as to offer about hurting my candidates, I have to thank you. The three gentlemen I named were not my candidates in the sense that I preferred them to any others. They were simply mentioned as three likely candidates.

Since I wrote the offending words, however, the aspect of things has changed; other possibilities have obtruded themselves upon our attention; but there remains, always and insistent, the strong note of disapproval for Mr. Johnson.

For one thing, we are confronted with the possibility that we may be represented by another Joe; in short, no less a personage than Joe Goodkey. Don't laugh, you fellows down there by the door. Mark my words: Joseph Eugene Goodkey will come pretty near landing third. As it looks to me it is a very pretty race between Joseph E. Goodkey, Walter V. Smith, Mark H. Barnum, Charles B. Buchanan, and Joe M. Johnson for third place, with Goodkey leading by a nose. For the leaders, Frank D. Smith and Philip S. Steele loom up formidably.

Just suppose Goodkey should get there after all the fuss! Wouldn't we all have 2-for's? Well, I guess!

Bill Marshall wears a very elaborate smoking jacket to work.

Crawford county McCausland is looking up some knotty questions on labor. Hot stuff, John.

Billy Hyde is in the middle of his planting season. He is hard at work in his own back yard.

Charlie McEneany is arranging plans for his summer tour. The White Mountains for him this season.

Jacob Fay, dog fancier and song and dance artist, is now wearing opera glasses. He can tell the breed of a dog a mile away.

Jack Quinlan has turned into a hot base ball crank and can be seen training at Ruppert's Park Sunday mornings behind the bat.

Bill Holt is hard at work on two new songs. The title of one is, "The Neighbors Have Become Reconciled to Their Fate." He is also teaching Crenshaw "My Old Virginia Home."

Parry, Hope, and Dreis were taking a cross country walk last Sunday morning. They had reached the top of a hill and paused to admire a groop of silver laced and white Wyandottes. A man standing nearby with a cap and old shirt on asked, "Well, what do you think of them?" They then recognized the voice of W. C. Connor, who has taken to the simple life for the strenuous.

Miss Mary B. O'Toole spent Easter with friends near Baltimore, Md.

A. L. Randall was transferred to this Division from the War Branch, Tuesday.

L. H. Burton joined this force several weeks ago, coming from the Specification Room.

Mrs. Winnifred Broderick, of the Folding Room, is absent on account of the illness of her mother.

Edward E. Magruder, laborer, was transferred here from the Second Division about two weeks ago.

Theodore Haynes, laborer here for several years, resigned recently to take up his old trade—carpentering.

W. H. Moss, spent Sunday in Baltimore with his family, who are there on a visit. He reports a fine time.

Col. C. C. Semmes and Judge Wm. M. Holeman, old employees of this force, were welcome visitors recently.

Miss Alice M. Simpson, of the Folding Room, main office, was transferred to our Folding Room Tuesday morning.

The candidates for the different offices have about all visited us with the exception of Chairman Goodkey, of the Third Division.

H. D. Langdon and Harry Hughes are taking the remainder of their leave this week. The former is off for nine days; the latter for three weeks.

Miss Grace E. Gardiner, a popular young lady of the Press Room, returned to work Monday, after an absence of over two weeks on account of sickness.

Horatio Barnum is spending three weeks with relatives and friends at his old home in Utica, N. Y. He will return in time to cast his ballot election day.

Theophilus McClure, who has been a great sufferer this spring from carbuncles, having had two on the back of his neck, has about recovered and is himself again.

George H. Healey, our maker-up, has joined the Record base ball team this season. He pitched the opening game of the season Tuesday and defeated the pressmen, the score being 12 to 6.

Raymond E. Gery, one of our proofreaders, got tangled up with the street cars on New York avenue at lunch hour last Saturday week. Fortunately he escaped with a slight scalp wound and a general shaking up.

GOSSIP FROM THE G. P. O.

Sixth Division.

McPike and I both said it—Mark Barnum on your ballots.

The watchdog of the washbowl has now turned his attention to the bricks.

Even Joe Goodkey is opposed to newspaper notoriety. He has said so in an article to THE TRADES UNIONIST.

W. I. Reed, the Record cartoonist, is off on thirty days leave of absence. Together with his family he will spend his vacation days in Kentucky and Alabama.

W. J. Dow, assistant foreman of the Record, returned Wednesday from Pierce City, Mo., where he was recently called on account of the death of his father.

Wm. E. Geary, of the Linotype Co., well remembered by the boys as the gentleman who installed the linotype plant in this office, is again with us. He brings this time one of the new quadding attachments which is being placed on machine 12, this Division. Since leaving here Mr. Geary has been a busy man, installing new plants in most every part of the United States.

The Second Division correspondent (who is not Hubert Newsom) may look for something that will interest him in the Flotsam and Jetsam columns if he doesn't keep out of the affairs of the Woman's Auxiliary.

Dexter S. Hussey, vice-presidential candidate, canvassed this Division on Wednesday. Mr. Hussey is a good campaigner, and whether he wins or not he is constantly adding new friends to his already large list.

The aggregation of printers known as the Record nine, started off well by winning their first game. Although its early in the season its safe to predict the boys will be among the top-notchers if not actually the leaders in the League.

The National Mutual Finance and Investment Company—the printers company—is doing business. The first purchase since its organization was made on Monday evening when at a mortgage sale a house on E street southeast, between First and Second, was purchased for something over $3,000. The Board of Directors had previously looked the property over and decided that they would bid several hundred dollars higher than they were compelled to secure the property. In this connection it might be well to add that there are yet a few shares in the company not taken, and the fellow who speaks first will get something that looks now like it would prove to be an investment for your small savings of the first class.

The many friends of Miss Carrie L. Whitehead, copy holder on the Gazette, will be surprised to learn of her marriage, on Saturday last, to Mr. Leroy Calfer, of this city, the ceremony taking place in Baltimore. Probably no woman who ever worked in the G. P. O. has done more to endear herself to the hearts of the printers than has Mrs. Calfer. She has ever been a staunch worker for the union cause, and was one of the organizers and first secretary of the Woman's Auxiliary. At election times her influence has always been sought and many successful candidates in the past owe their victory to her untiring efforts. She is possessed of the same gentle disposition in sunshine or in rain, and will be greatly missed by her former associates in the G. P. O. Mr. Calfer is a young man every way worthy of a good wife and is connected with the Department of Commerce and Labor.

The statement by the esteemed Bloomer last week that "there is nothing so quickly resented by the friends of a candidate as inordinate praise of another candidate" is one which will meet the hearty approval of all fair-minded people. The assertion, also, that "there is but one candidate from down town" will hardly be relished, I believe, by the candidate referred to. Miss McDonald is a bright little woman, experienced enough in every respect to make an ideal delegate, but that she is alone in the field is surely a mistake. Mr. Knapp is a gentleman of the old-school type. By no means a "mixer," but an easy winner of friends, and once made seldom lost. O. T. Pierce, is entirely different in his manner of campaign from the other two—but not without his following. This down town race is a pretty one. And while the chances for Miss McDonald now seem brightest, the result will not be known until the ballots are counted.

* * * *

They were holding a little session one morning and discussing some of the good points of the candidates.

"He must be a pretty good fellow," said one.

"He is a member of several orders, chairman of his Division, belongs to the Suburban Citizens' Association; belongs to two Relief Associations, one Symposium, and a credit company. In fact I guess he is into most everything he can get into."

"Yes;" broke in the man with the hammer, "but I know one order he'll never get into, and that's the ex-Delegates Association."

* * * *

Considerable discussion is being indulged in just now relative to the position which the candidates will assume on the Philadelphia question in the event of their election. The matter will evidently be given a through airing at the Toronto convention, and it would seem a hard matter for a candidate to state his position thereon before he has heard the facts in the case. Columbia Union is on record favorable to a vigorous campaign against the non-union shops in the Quaker City, and it is hardly reasonable to believe there are any candidates among those now seeking election who would ignore the wishes of No. 101.

One not personally interested in the matter finds it a hard task to select three from among those seeking election from the G. P. O. quota, and may truthfully exclaim, "How happy I would be were t'other dear charmers away."

Those who believe experience a prerequisite to the making of a delegate will find much in the candidacy of Joe M. Johnson or Philip S. Steele to appeal to them. Each are brilliant orators, honest and conscientious, the latter closing a career of four score years of union activity; the former still climbing the ladder of fame.

Others may prefer the quiet dignity of some of the other candidates. If I were classing them I would say Charles B. Buchanan and Mark H. Barnum are possessed of the same traits of character—quiet and reserved, well informed on Union affairs and capable of making able representatives.

The two Smiths might easily be placed in the same class—good fellows, well posted, always ready to give a square deal, and thoroughly able to uphold the dignity of No. 101.

Then there is Joe Goodkey—but he's opposed to newspaper notoriety.

In all its a good lot of fellows, and as long as you pay your money you might as well take your choice.

CHAS. S. GUNN.

Women and the Club.

Grover Cleveland, in a recent magazine article, took strong ground in opposition to woman's clubs, and expressed the opinion "that the best and safest club for a woman to patronize is her home."

Are we to understand Mr. Cleveland that the home is the best place for a club, and would he surrender to the woman the exclusive control of this most powerful weapon? In the language of the immortal Shakespeare, "Can such things be and not excite our special wonder?"

Scarcely does the boy arrive at the age of youthful understanding before he is subjected to a course of training in which the mother's slipper plays an important part, and as he grows older, more consequential, and incorrigible he is turned over to the tender mercies of a doting father, who spoils the rod to save the child and wallops the young man until he is big enough to start in business for himself; and here at the very beginning of his sturdy young manhood and increasing responsibilities he is confronted with an aggravated condition such as suggested by Mr. Cleveland in his ideal home, where there is a club in the house.

There are plenty of people who do not like to subscribe fully to the Osler theory, and yet these same people are prepared to admit that chloroform has its uses and at times may be employed to great advantage.

In this same magazine article Mr. Cleveland goes on record as favoring the revival of the whipping-post for wife-beaters, an opinion shared by many, but seldom by those who by faulty temperament or belligerent purpose might incur the risk of practical public demonstration. Mr. Cleveland's well-known interest in the affairs of this District and his knowledge of past conditions entitle him to credit as an ex-resident, but it will scarcely be admitted that the necessity for the whipping-post here is now more urgent than during the time he was an occupant of the White House.

The article in question also refers to "a movement which has for a long time been on foot for securing to woman the right to vote and otherwise participate in public affairs." Here the Sage of Princeton blossoms into a full-fledged alarmist, with not so much as a mention of Queen Lil, who came here sorrowing and pleaded not in vain for assistance in reclaiming her coveted pedestal and the power she had exercised over "public affairs" in the far-off Hawaiians; but here opens a subject which may more properly be passed on to "Mother" Susan B. Anthony and her valiant co-workers, who have grown gray in the service and who have accomplished much that has added to woman's prestige and subtracted nothing from the well being of the individual or society as a whole.

One of the proudest of Mr. Cleveland's public acts has been declared to be the part he took in the Chicago labor strike, when he linked the fortunes of Government with those of the Pullman stockholders, a step which, though momentarily successful, contributed more than aught else to hasten his political demise and bury him beyond the hope of successful resurrection.

NAVY YARD ITEMS.

Interesting Items From Uncle Sam's Naval Gun Factory

Chief Gunner Charles A. Venable has reported for duty as a member of the inspection board.

A. H. Dyson has been appointed on probation as a first class structural steel work draftsman in the Equipment Bureau.

J. F. Siebert has been transferred to the office of the Inspector of Ordnance, Carnegie Steel Co., Minhall, Pa., for duty as sub-inspector of ordnance.

C. E. Speiden and S. Rosenthal have been appointed from the Civil Service list as messenger boys in the Yard, the former in the Commandant's Office and the latter in the Ordnance Office.

On May 10 Chief Gunner J. J. Walsh will have reached the age of retirement and will be placed on the retired list, but owing to his value to the Government, and being quite active, he will be asked to resume his duties as an active ordnance officer. John is O. K.

W. H. Lantry, of Columbia Lodge, No. 174, who was appointed sub-inspector of ordnance some months ago, has resigned and resumed his duties as a machinist in the Yard. Homesickness it is said was the cause, which clearly proves that marriage is not a failure in all cases.

Col. Harry Brogden, who has been the chief clerk to the commandant, died at Providence Hospital, Friday last. Colonel Brogden was a brave Confederate soldier, and one whose nature was so genial as to surround him with a host of friends who will miss their comrade. He will be buried near Annapolis, his country residence.

E. Herring, appointed first class draftsman.

E. W. Miller, appointed second class draftsman.

J. H. Bruninger and W. E. Bruder, appointed second class copyist draftsmen.

J. H. Stambach and W. S. Fendall, appointed second class copyist draftsmen.

C. N. Gregory and Raymond Hazel, promoted to first class ordnance draftsmen.

L. A. Brooke and R. E. Mueden, appointed on probation as first class copyist draftsmen at $3.28 per diem.

By the time the readers of THE TRADES UNIONIST peruse this letter the affairs of the Union Outfitters to Men's Store will be amicably settled and the business will resume normal conditions, thanks to those who so gallantly came to the rescue in the hour of peril. With good conditions assured the business should start out with renewed vigor, conditionally.

No store or business can prosper without patronage and it is up to us all, as true Unionists to do our share toward the success of the institution. There are several conditions or propositions which should be brought to the attention of the stockholders: First, a complete reorganization of the officers and board of directors; not, that I believe any man has been derelict in his duty or that his honesty or integrity can be impeached, but for the sake of harmony, which I regret to state does not at present exist among the stockholders.

I am free to express my opinion in that while I favor a reorganization I am very favorable to re-electing some of the present officers.

Another proposition suggests itself to me that we should offer such inducements to Trades Unionists that would secure their custom, by adopting a system similar to the Rochdale, which would secure the Trades Unionist a discount on all goods purchased by presenting his working card stamped to date. This would have a double effect, in that the brother would see the necessity of keeping his book properly stamped, which would be beneficial to his Local and not only insure him a reduction in his dealings with the store, but to the means of increased volume of business.

Think this over brother stockholders and Trades Unionists, and all join hands, forgetting any and all alleged differences, as to whether one Local favored a loan or another did not. The store will be maintained, that should be sufficient for any good Union Man who believes in the Union label, and his patronage should go where his heart desires. Will you do it? Will you be a man among men and show by your zeal and influence (and every man has some) that you are a Trades Unionist in action as well as in thought.

Miss TERESA McDONALD.

The manner in which Miss McDonald is conducting her campaign for downtown Delegate to the Toronto Convention evidences the many excellent qualities of the candidate. Her pleasing womanhood demonstrates her true worth as a printer. The unionizing of the Brooklyn Eagle the other week recalls her experience in the jurisdiction of "Big Six." When the strike on that paper was called, fourteen years ago, thirty of the seventy-five compositors were women. Seven regulars and seven subs (two of which were women) walked out. Miss McDonald was one of them, and she has been faithful ever since. There are a few printers in Washington to day who were in New York at that time and all are loud in praise of the fine conception of union principles displayed by Miss McDonald at that time. Her friends are making a strong fight for her, and are confident that she will be elected.

THE NEGRO AS A STRIKEBREAKER.

The Parryites deserve a medal for discovering the true value and character of the colored brother. By the natural course of evolution he has at last developed as a strikebreaker. I wonder how many of the Parryites went through the hardships incidental to four years service in the late civil war to set the Negro free. It seems to me a case of ingratitude toward the civil war veteran, whose sons are now Trades Unionists.

But whoever heard of gratitude in the Negro. By intuition their savage nature seems only to wait for an opportunity in which to prove their hatred toward the white race. The incidents that have happened in Chicago in the last few days fully corroborate the opinion I have always entertained and never too cowardly to express, that the Negro's anatomy is constituted only of three ingredients, viz.: Deceit, Treachery, and Ingratitude.

The fight in Chicago is the white man's battle, and what excuse the Negro finds to take part in the game I am at a loss to determine unless it be that ungovernable desire for revenge upon the white race. Does he for a moment believe that after the battle has been fought, no matter who may win, he will be rewarded, or that he will be retained in his position. The records of all past strikes prove the contrary.

The Negro by his actions in Chicago during the last week has done more damage to his race than Booker Washington and other leaders (who are earnestly endeavoring to elevate) can undo in the next quarter of a century. By his actions he has alienated himself from the people who would befriend him—the Trades Unionists.

I must confess I never expected much good ever to come forth from the House of Ham, and every incident like the Chicago affair increases and fortifies that opinion. The Western people, like those on the border line and in the South, are fast learning the true character and value of the Negro, and time will prove the assertion I make that, his usefulness in the West as a citizen and a voter will soon be nil. He will be driven from post to pillar. Where will he go? Can he appeal to the North and East? Can he expect support from the Trades Unionist in the East when he has been not only a strikebreaker but a thug as well in the West.

I cannot believe he can obtain succor even in that section in which he has so long been feted and petted—not for the love they bear him, but to secure his vote. Like Samson of old he has, by his actions in Chicago, pulled the pillars of the temple from under him, and he must suffer his own destruction.

If one can judge by the records of the daily press, take the interviews recently had with the leading Republicans in Baltimore and it will be easily seen that even these men are seriously considering the proposition of joining with the Democrats in eliminating the Negro from the voting ranks of the State of Maryland.

The House of Ham seems to be doomed and his destruction has been of his own volition.

Entertainment and Dance.

The entertainment and dance to be given next Monday evening at Masonic Hall will mark another successful venture of Women's Auxiliary, No. 13. Mrs. C. L. Nace, as chairman of the Entertainment Committee, has worked assiduously, in connection with the members of the committee, in making the entertainment a success, and it goes without saying that the members of the Auxiliary and their friends will be present to aid in making the evening an enjoyable one to all who attend.

CENTRAL LABOR UNION.

Grievance Against Frank Hall Settled Without Further Reference.

The regular weekly meeting of the Central Labor Union was called to order on Monday at 8:10 p. m. by President Dickman.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

CREDENTIALS.

Beer Drivers and Stablemen, No. 234: Daniel McCoy, vice Fred Barber, resigned.

Journeymen Horseshoers, No. 17: D. J. Clark, William Schondau, Samuel Leitel, William Hessen, and J. M. Horigan.

The credentials from Beer Drivers and Stablemen Union, No. 234, were received and delegate seated.

The credentials from Journeymen Horseshoers Union, No. 17, were laid over until next meeting.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Local No. 63, Brotherhood of Stationary Firemen, reciting grievance against American Ice Co., and asking that matter be referred to proper committee. Referred to Grievance Committee.

From White Cooks Union, No. 767, inclosing dues from that Union and greeting to the central body. Placed on file.

From Journeymen Tailors Union, No. 188, stating that E. Potbury, Bobys & Bobys, Norris & Johanson, I. Geraci, and J. Waldman have broken agreements with the Local No. 188, and asking that the matter be referred to proper committee of Central Labor Union. Referred to Contract Committee.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

The Grievance Committee reported that they had adjusted the case involving Frank Hall, Seventh and K streets southwest, and Painters Union, and that they would secure a Central Labor Union contract.

The Grievance Committee also reported that they had failed to adjust the grievance of Bakers and Confectioners Union against George J. Schuerger, 216 Ninth street southeast, and recommended that he be placed on the "List We Do Not Patronize." Report concurred in.

On motion, a special committee consisting of Delegates Guiggan, Ehret, Colpoise, Riordan, Eskins, Doyle, Housing, Whyte, Rittenhouse, and Schmidt, were appointed to endeavor to revise the present "List We Do Not Patronize."

The Contract Committee reported favorably on agreement of Hod Carriers and Building Laborers Local No. 21, and the report was accepted.

The following resolution was unanimously adopted:

Whereas in the death of E. W. Patton, a delegate from Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, whose death occurred on May 4, 1905, the Central Labor Union and trades unionists of the District of Columbia generally have sustained the loss of a coworker in the cause of labor, who by his untiring efforts endeared himself to all, conducting a labor journal, and ever espousing the cause of the working class; therefore be it

Resolved, That the Central Labor Union greatly deplores his demise and that his fidelity to the cause of organized labor be held in loving remembrance; and be it further

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the Central Labor Union; that a copy be sent to THE TRADES UNIONIST and the daily newspapers of this city for publication.

JOHN B. DICKMAN,
T. C. PARSONS,
JOSEPH C. WHYTE,
CHAS. E. DIETRICH,
Delegates from Columbia Typo. Union, No 101.

The Union then adjourned as a mark of esteem and respect to the memory of Bro. E. W. Patton.

Woman's Auxiliary No. 13.

The next meeting of Women's Auxiliary, No. 13, of Columbia Tpyographical Union, No. 101, will be held on Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at Typographical Temple. The election of officers will take place and arrangements completed for the entertainment and dance next Monday evening at Masonic Temple. All members and friends are urged to attend.

FUNERAL OF E. W. PATTON.

Impressive Ceremonies Under Masonic Ritual For the Dead.

The funeral of Ebenezer W. Patton, one of the proprietors of THE TRADES UNIONIST and the eldest in point of ownership, whose rather sudden but not unexpected death occurred just as this paper was going to press last Thursday, took place on Sunday from the undertaking establishment of John R. Wright, 1337 Tenth street northwest. Mr. Patton had had one of the severe attacks of heart disease with which he has suffered for a year or more and was taken to Sibley Hospital about a week before he died. As he was always very sensitive as to his disease, no mention was made in this paper of his condition during his long disability, which had continued from about the first of the year.

Though a heavy rain came up about the hour set for the funeral, the small chapel of the undertaking establishment and the sidewalks in the immediate neighborhood were filled with friends, who, though largely printers, numbered many in other occupations, had come to pay their last tribute. The Rev. John M. Gill, of the Methodist Protestant Church, delivered a brief address, after which the Masonic fraternity took charge and the beautiful funeral service of the Knights Templar was performed. Then the sad journey to Glenwood Cemetery was begun, the procession being composed of about fifty carriages. In the chapel at Glenwood the rites of the Masonic order completed the services, after which the casket was placed in the vault, to be interred at a later time.

Large numbers of the members of Benjamin B. French Lodge, No. 15, F.A.A.M.; Columbia Chapter, No. 1, R.A.M.; Orient Commandery, No. 5, K. T., and Almas Temple, A.A.O.N.M.S., of which bodies deceased was a member, were in attendance, the first three as organizations. The pallbearers were Fred C. Gieseking and Thomas P. Moore of B. B. French Lodge; Philip Reiter and Castleman P. Boss, of Columbia Chapter, and Samuel Hinwood and A. F. Bloomer, of Orient Commandery. The officers of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, of whom the President, John R. Berg, had charge of the funeral arrangements; many of its members, friends from Baltimore, and many of the foremen of the Government Printing Office and of down town establishments were present.

The floral offerings, from all the different Divisions of the Government Printing Office, in which deceased had long been employed some years before engaging in the publication of THE TRADES UNIONIST, were beauitful, and Almas Temple, Mystic Shrine, sent a magnificent piece. The flowers were so numerous that a separate vehicle was necessary to convey them to the cemetery. These, with the very large assemblage at the funeral, showed the high esteem in which Mr. Patton was held by those who knew him best—his associates in his life occupation and the brethren of the great Masonic fraternity, of which he had long been a member.

A CARD OF THANKS.

The undersigned, brother and sister of the late E. W. Patton, desire to extend their sincere thanks for the fraternal devotion and care bestowed on their beloved brother during his last sickness and death by the officers and members of Columbia Typographical Union, his immediate associates, whose efforts were given to make his last hours as easy as possbile; by the several Masonic bodies of which he was a member, who testified their interest during his illness and their respect for his memory at his funeral; and by both trade associates and Masonic brethren in the beautiful flower tributes with which they gave evidence of their affection.

Gratefully, yours,
L. DOW PATTON.
MRS. F. R. JOHNSON.

G. P. O. BOWLING LEAGUE.

The Third Division Wins Out By a Very Narrow Margin.

Hooray for the Third.

Richards, of the First, wins the spare prize.

O'Connell, of the Second, wins the high set prize.

The final scores are made up of only those who rolled six games or more.

The First Division has the honor of being the only team that beat the champions.

The Second Division wins the prize for the high set, getting 2,583 pins in three games.

Bielaski, of the First Division, wins the individual prize, the greater number of strikes, and the high individual score.

The Third Division wins the beautiful cup presented by THE TRADES UNIONIST. The Third and Second Division were tie in number of games won, but the Third wins out on account of a greater number of total pins, which is the way all ties are decided.

The following win the high individual prize of their respective teams:

Richards, of the First; O'Connell, of the Second; Sherman, of the Third; McFadden, of the Fourth; Wolfe, of the Sixth, and Fitzwilliams, of the Job Room.

Everybody take off their hats to the champion of the G. P. O. Bowling League, the Third Division. They won fair and square, and we all extend our congratulations and hope we will be able to receive the congratulations from them next year in the same spirit as are here given.

THE EXTRA INNING GAME.

Oh, the pent-up sizzling madness, not extracted from a jug,
Of an extra-inning contest, when you've got the baseball bug!
When the home team's filled the bases and you fear 'twill end in rout,
And the biffer with the swat-stick lines a winning bingle out!
Then the calmest heart-beats quicken, and the citizen sedate
With umpiricide gets frantic or with howling glee elate.

And it levels all conditions. Saint and sinner, rich and poor,
Little Willie, pa, and grandpa join in one delirious roar.
E'en the poor conceited pin-head who would like to steal your girl
Is a red-hot bosom crony in that mad fraternal whirl.
And you're chummy with your neighbor of the fierce, housebreaking mug,
When the home team's full of ginger and you've got the baseball bug.

Oh, your heart grows strangely mellow, and you're glad that you're a fan
In that frenzied demonstration of the brotherhood of man.
For the world's a blissful bedlam, and all other joys grow tame,
When the home team's winning rally ends an extra-inning game.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

The passing of "Eb" Patton released from earth one of the really generous, great-hearted men—one of the few who "did good by stealth," but never had occasion to blush at finding himself famous, for not many of even his most intimate friends knew of all his charities. Though he always had something for the subscription paper when it came around, his favorite method, on learning of a case of distress, was to slip around to the house of trouble alone and relieve the immediate necessities while others were wondering if something could not be done. If he heard of anyone as having pressing need of money because of some sudden and unexpected misfortune his purse was at the command of the needy one, and that before he was solicited—a fact of which I had personal experience. As an employer he gave his employees all the privileges which those of the Government Printing Office enjoyed, including the eight-hour day, which he was under no obligation to do under the laws of Columbia Union. Though having the interests of his business and his regular employees to look after, he often made work for needy men to tide them over temporary difficulties. In all these efforts he was cordially seconded by his several partners in the conduct of the business. He wanted no brass band accompaniment to his deeds of kindness or charity, and he who spoke of them to him was made to understand that he had not opened a welcome subject. The consciousness of the good he did was the only reward he desired, and he wanted no company in enjoying that. The world is better for Ebenezer Patton having lived in it.

* * * *

Charlie Buchanan reveled for three or four days last week in the enjoyment of his semi-annual attack of malaria, which afflicts him in the form of "dumb chills," causing him to neglect for that length of time the business part of a campaign—the chasing down of the voter. But he has so well covered the field and has made such a favorable impression that his prospects are bright.

* * * *

A man who has not the courage and honesty to sign his name to an attack on the statements and good faith of one who does sign his name to his writings is scarcely deserving of notice, but charity and consideration for others have been so long my leading characteristics that I will not now depart from them. Last week "Ian" undertook to correct my description of the character of my friend John Kiernan, but his article shows that he does not know the man or that he is so blinded by his own religious bigotry that he is incapable of appreciating an honest analysis of him. I have had many arguments and disputes with Mr. Kiernan, some of them hot ones, but we always remained friends. As to the one which "Ian" mentions, his estimate of the outcome, as probably of everything else in life, is warped by his sympathies, which fact entirely disqualifies him for honest criticism or truthful statement. On that occasion we both indulged in "flame" language and said more than we could prove, and the next day were as friendly as ever. I utterly deny ascribing "grotesque creeds" to anyone for purposes of ridicule, for every article of faith I have criticised is avowed by the bigots to whom I have ascribed it. But if there is anything that can make one doubt the efficacy of "saving grace," it is the utter disregard for truth, the absence of any semblance of Christian charity, the malice, the unfairness, and the bitterness of those loudest in the assertion of its possession, and who almost invariably attack under a pseudonym. A man who is not honest in his signature is not honest in anything else. But Mr. Kiernan's name is Irish and his accent is Irish.

Nor do I feed my lions on Christians. I love real Christians, and the bogus ones would disagree with the lions' digestion. The real Christian is kind, generous, considerate of others, and distinctly recognizes the right of others to their opinions. The bogus ones run around with chips on their shoulders looking for somebody to attack their faith; are extraordinary free to judge the motives of others, notwithstanding the "Judge-not-lest" admonition; are uncharitable to the degree which inquires how the distressed came to be in that condition; deem the reporting of rule infractors as a part of their religion; condemn all the pleasures devised by the ingenuity of man; think piety consists in being miserable themselves, and especially in making others so; and sign bogus names in their attacks on us real Christians. Brethren, true religion makes its possessor love all mankind; the false emanates from foul stomachs and minds.

George P. Nichols, of the Baltimore Sun, agent of the Union Printers' Home, attended the funeral of his long-time friend, E. W. Patton, last Sunday, making a special trip to this city to do so. A close friendship and intimacy had existed between them for years, now broken by the ruthless hand of Death.

* * * *

"The grand old man," Philip Steele, is as busy chasing the votes as though he had not the result already cinched. The old saying, "Old men for council and young men for war," will have great weight with the voters this year, as ever.

* * * *

Dan Vaughan brought in a hot one the other evening, to the effect that there is an understanding between Belcher and Joe Johnson that Belcher is to say all the mean things he can against Joe for the good that it will do him. If true, this explains what I had feared was the malice of a small man. There are all sorts of tricks in politics.

* * * *

I have seen nothing to change my prognostication as to the result of the election of a down town delegate this year. All of the candidates are very active, but I do not believe the outcome as I have forecasted it can be varied from, and I would not change it if I could.

* * * *

"Smith" is an unfortunate sort of a name for a candidate for office, and when there are two of the same name who are candidates for the same office there are liable to be complications. While I do not see any reason why both should not be voted for, there may be some who wish to vote for only one, and as each desires to stand on his own merits, I will try to differentiate them so that everybody may know what she or he is doing. Frank D. Smith is a rather short, stocky-built, bald-faced man, about 15 hands high, with a seductive smile that is well calculated to win promises of votes. He comes from the great State of Pennsylvania, and manipulated for quite a while on the Night Bill Force until his manifest superiority caused him to be detailed to the Proof Room, where he is a conspicuous success; he will be readily recognized by his great modesty and his deep, intellectual look. Walter Virgil Smith is also bald-faced, rather handsomer than Frank (a fact as to which he is extremely diffident), about 17 hands high, a South Carolinian by birth and early training, a compositor in the Second Division by occupation, and is the same party whom we snatched bodily two years hand running and thrust into the vice-presidential chair; distinguishing marks, a poetical cast of countenance, accentuated by lofty aspirations and sanguine hopes. Careful attention to the details outlined above will enable everyone to determine at a glance which is Walter and which Frank, but, in order to avoid the possibility of mistake, perhaps you had better vote for both.

* * * *

You can't guess what a desperate adversary will do, but I shouldn't be surprised if some misguided and weak-minded brother should charge to Joe Johnson the eccentricities which have attended the renting of the Union hall—in one instance crowding the Union itself out of it. The Secretary always rents the hall on his own responsibility.

* * * *

A new and almost overwhelming argument against the election of ex-President Joe M. Johnson as a delegate to Toronto was presented the other day—a discovery just made, being an exposure of a depth of villainy hard to believe—that it was during his administration that machines were introduced into the G. P. O. Some antiquarian, however, in endeavoring to mitigate the offense, calls attention to the fact that it was in the latter days of the administration of President C. M. Robinson that the battleship Maine was blown up and that it was in that of President Lawson that the beloved McKinley was assassinated, though it is also said, in palliation, that during the latter period the new Government Printing Office was completed. As Johnson is a friend of mine, I offer in extenuation that it was during his administration that Shelby Smith left town. In condemning his mistakes let us give him credit with the good accomplished.

* * * *

Johnson's sins seem to pile up against him. He has been heard within the past week to express the hope that Joe Eggleston will get through the campaign without biting himself. But Eggleston doesn't bite very hard, whomever he may bite.

* * * *

Will Crittenden Thornton, who publishes The People's Banner, on Banner Farm, two miles west of Belleview, Mo.—a weekly paper devoted to the workingman, for twenty-five cents a year, without a line of advertising—has discovered an ancient hidden mine on his farm, of which he gives an extended account in a recent issue. I have not been able to figure out what kind of a mine it is, but he says he has no ground for sale, and if he has faith in it, I have.

* * * *

"Texas" Smith writes to me from Adrian, Mich., where he is at present luxuriating, after a somewhat tempestuous career since he last wrote me from Corning, Ark. There are so many old-timers in the office who have known "Texas" that I decline to give further particulars as to who he is.

* * * *

If Mr. Belcher had had the slightest desire to be fair—which it is manifest he had not—in contrasting the administrations of Presidents Jones, Lawson, and Johnson in their effects on the finances of the Union, he would have stated that during that of Mr. Johnson $85 was added to the funeral benefit and that there were 46 deaths per annum as against 20 in Lawson's administration, making the total expense in one year on account of the death of members $7,700; that $3,300 was spent in entertaining the delegates and visitors to the I. T. U. convention; that 10 cents per capita additional was levied by the I. T. U., 5 for Los Angeles and 5 for the Journal, which came out of the 1 per cent dues; that $1,000 was voted to the striking miners and other sums to other organizations in trouble, the latter being a sort of helpfulness from which the Union begged off on account of poverty during the administrations of both Jones and Lawson. But, more especially, if Mr. Belcher had had a desire to be honest—which he had not—he would not have made the comparison at all, for the president of the Union has no more influence in making or refusing appropriations or raising revenue than the humblest member, as anyone with an atom of sense knows. There are laws controlling appropriations, and the president is compelled to submit all motions made in accordance with these laws and to announce the votes as cast. But all the facts in the world are no protection against the Mephitis mephitica.

* * * *

Editor John W. Bramwood, of the Typographical Journal, now requires all correspondents to sign their productions with their true names instead of noms de plume, which is an eminently proper requirement and one to which no honest writer will object. There is a good article "For the Good of the Printer," by J. E. Jennings, "of No. 6;" "Dandy Dick," by George H. Ackerman, of Brooklyn, formerly of this city—a story so long that it had "To be continued," but which starts off well; "Note and Comment," a series of well-written editorials; "What We Are Doing," showing the progress made in unionism; "President's Page," always interesting and profitable; "Woman's Auxiliary," "Correspondence," and the other features which make the Journal a model of trade journals. All this is about the number for May.

* * * *

Mark Barnum made us a call the other evening, engaged in his usual calling of chasing up the voter. Judging from his smiling countenance and sanguine look, I should say that his present address is 972 Easy street.

* * * *

Prof. George W. Harvell, for several years a compositor in the G. P. O., an accomplished ventriloquist, pulled out with a troupe of colored singers, consisting of fifteen men and women, for one of the smaller Ohio cities one day last week. The professor is an old showman and usually a very successful one.

William J. Dow, assistant foreman of the Sixth Division, returned from the funeral of his father and resumed his duties late last week.

Eugene Andrew is full of stories of Wichita during her boom days in the later eighties and a few evenings since he told this one:

"There were seven or eight of us subs hanging around the Eagle office and a good many of the caseholders were chilly, nice fellows who wanted to work seven or eight days a week; so times were hard. It was our custom to take our lunches to the office in the evening, and if we didn't catch on, which we generally didn't, we would come in about 11, eat them, and collect in the press room to chew the rag. One night some one brought in a story of a haunted house out in the suburbs, and it was proposed and agreed that we experience it. It was a walk of a mile and a half, and of course for nothing. But on the way back it was suggested that we tell the most thrilling stories of the ghosts the next day and see if their curiosity would not induce some of the regulars to take a night off. We fixed up our stories to agree and were in the office bright and early the next day telling them; but they were received coldly, even incredulously. A reporter on a sensational evening paper heard of our experiences, and he wanted them. There was nothing to do but to stand by what we had told in the hope of getting a day's work, and our stories lost nothing by repetition, and even gained a little from the reporter's imagination, being further eked out by the scare head. The regulars read and one or two put on subs, then others, until we were all on. That night, a bitter cold one, our victims renewed our experiences of the evening before, and they put up a job. Everyone of us who was connected with the game was boycotted, and with the exception of myself, who had a friend who yielded up some days' work, every man had to walk out of town."

Bob Sims and Jarvis Moulden, as the Mercantile Printing Company, have opened an office in rooms 1 and 2, at 407 Seventh street northwest, where they are prepared to do all kinds of work. Both are well known as former employes of the G. P. O.

I notice that Charles B. Hanford, the actor, is supported by Miss Marie Drofnah, his wife. Every now and again you will see the signature, "Knarf" or something equally idiotic. More than fifty years ago Charles Dickens, in "American Notes," caricatured the lady who assured him that she was the noted writer "Suturb"—"which, you know, is Brutus spelled backward." These things make me real sick to my stomach. If I had a four-year-old boy who indulged in such slim-brained puppisms I would knaps it out of him.

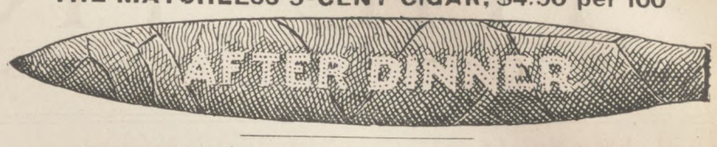
Remember the Veteran.



It is written that what the good men do shall follow them. That is just, and pleasant to contemplate. Still better, though, is it when the good that men have done is remembered to their credit while they are living, and able to enjoy the reward of worthy deeds. It is this reflection that leads me to approach the members of Columbia Union, No. 101, with a request. There are a number of worthy candidates for the honor of representing the Union at the next convention of the law-making body. Among them is one who may properly be termed a veteran. The rest are younger, and many years of usefulness and many opportunities of proper recognition lie before them. The veteran to whom I allude stands, like myself, midst the lengthening shadows, and if his long years of fidelity to principle, his many sacrifices for the cause we hold dear, are to be rewarded, now is the opportunity. I refer to my old friend and fellow-worker, Philip S. Steele. I know his worth as a worker, for I have worked with him. I remember his zeal, because much of his best work was accomplished where I had the best of opportunities to observe it. He is a Union man whose faith took root when it meant much more than now to declare for Union principles. In the storms that tried us he stood firm. In the prosperity that has followed he has been modest. He asks now to be commissioned as a delegate by those whom he has served so long and so well. He deserves the honor, and the Union will honor itself by according to him this well-won recognition. Will not all who honor merit reserve one place on the ballot for this grand old man?

GOSSIP FROM THE G. P. O.

First Division.

James Kane transferred from Slug 68 to 90.

L. W. Baldwin has been transferred to the Job Room.

Keep your eye on Frank D. Smith. He will be a sure winner.

Are you an accurate guesser? Well, how many galleys in this Division?

George W. Wetmore, imposer, and H. M. Touner, compositor, are on their annual leave.

Mark Barnum, of the Job Room, will make a good run. His friends claim that he will carry the credentials.

Philip S. Steele, candidate for delegate, will receive a good "down town" vote. Another winner, we hope.

J. M. Eggleston, of the War Division was a Monday morning visitor. For many years Joe was employed in the main office.

Secretary Seibold and Candidate Philip S. Steele received quite an ovation as they left the Division for the base ball park on Tuesday p. m. Base ball!

"Down town" Candidate Harry Knapp made the rounds of the main office and some of the branches on Monday. Knapp stock is away up this week.

Assistant Foreman Boone received a telegram, apprising him of the death of his father after a brief illness, on Tuesday. The deceased had long survived the allotted three score year and ten, and was in the ninety-third year of his age. The sympathy of the Chapel is extended to our fellow-workman in the passing away of this venerable and beloved parent.

In conducting his campaign in this Division Candidate Buchanan has created a most favorable impression, which should make him a good vote catcher on election day.

Recent advices from Memphis, Tenn., report Dr. James D. Bridger, medical referee of the Mutual Life Insurance Company, is prospering, and that he sports a fine new automobile.

"Heart-to-heart" talks are now indulged in by the candidates for delegate. A few more days and it will assuredly be "Heart-aches," to some. May the very best candidates win.

What's the matter with Candidate Joseph E. Goodkey, of the Third? We don't think he will be the lowest candidate on the list. If elected, you can gamble that he will be present at every roll call.

Base ball!" in no uncertain tone greets the person or persons leaving the Division any afternoon when a ball game is to be played. This, too, regardless of the individual. But, it is an old gag.

Do not forget the entertainment and dance at Masonic Temple, Monday evening, May 15, under the auspices of Woman's Auxiliary, No. 13. Deserving of your patronage and encouragement, most assuredly.

Another new, and handsome cabinet for the "Bill Room" end from Capt. A. A. Bundy's department. There is no denying the fact that Foreman Bowen is determined to keep this Division right up-to-date in every particular.

President Alfred D. Calvert, of Philadelphia Union, No. 2, was a Tuesday afternoon visitor to this Division. Vice-President Love accompanied him in his trip through our mammoth office. President Calvert received a hearty welcome.

The numerous friends and acquaintances of Fred. E. ("Snapper") Garrison, formerly of this Division, will be pleased to learn that he is progressing in his far Western home at Golden, Colo. He is employed in his father's office, the Golden Globe.

What luck we are in. Next Monday is our regular pay day, and Ringling Brothers Circus open for a two days' stand. Two weeks hence our pay day will be the day preceding Decoration Day. Oh, no, printers do not size up their pay days in advance.

Universal sympathy has been expressed in this Division in the passing away of our late highly esteemed friend, E. W. Patton, of THE TRADES UNIONIST. The handsome floral tributes which surrounded his casket, gave unmistakable evidence of the esteem with which he was regarded.

Mr. Robert R. West, the former Auditor of the Treasury for the Government Printing Office, died of yellow fever at Panama on Sabbath. At the time of his death Mr. West held the office of Deputy Auditor for the Isthmian Canal Commission. During his term of office in the G. P. O. the decease made a host of warm friends. A widow, four sons and one daughter survive him.

And now it is Tom M. Lawlor, a prominent citizen of Sunbury, Pa., who desires the Democratic nomination for Prothonotary of the county at the approaching primary election in June. Tom is well known not only in the G. P. O., having been an assistant foreman under the former administration, but down town having held a "sit" on the Post for a number of years. That he may eventually win out is the wish of his many friends.

ROUGH WRITER.

Don't forget the entertainment and dance of Women's Auxiliary at Masonic Hall next Monday evening.

Second Division.

The new head letter directory is the right thing in the right place.

Razee's measuring slips for the doc. cat. force were highly appreciated.

J. A. Massey has returned from a thirty days leave, and looks much improved in health.

Base ball every evening on the Mahone lot at 5 o'clock except Saturday. All rooters welcome.

"Doc" Manning is at Atlantic City. He sent a handsome souvenir card to one of our members.

Compositor Thompson, a former temporary, has established a grocery store, corner Tenth and M streets.

I still maintain that the linotype machine cannot "set" the specification copy economically with the present style in vogue, and I venture to predict that the style will be abolished, or the copy prepared.

Chas. L. Nace will go to Greensboro, N. C., next month as delegate for the Mortuary Branch of the J. A. O. M.

A. R. Nathan, of the Third Division, won the microscope raffled for the benefit of a sick member of this Division.

The Second sent flowers as a testimonial of regret for the late Mr. Patton, one of the editors of THE TRADES UNIONIST.

I am reliably informed that the average has been changed throughout the office. Hereafter the average will be computed from the 1st to the 15th.

The correspondent for this Division is not "in" any controversy existing between the correspondent of the Sixth and the writer of "Flotsam and Jetsam."

The first four alleys, slugs 1 to 24, were detailed Wednesday on doc. cat. (Catalogue of Government Publications). I am informed it will last three months.

L. J. Clements is not only a student of medicine, but also a linguist, and translates Spanish with ease, which is a decided advantage. when setting Spanish.

Our most distinguished correspondent sinks beneath his level when he descends to the vulgarity of using ignominious epithets in controversies between him and other writers. A dignified and entertaining column is what readers want, and not mud-slinging.

In the old Spess days the sonorous voice of Bill Dorsey, now a Proof Room man, used to resound through the room, and this was his theme: "The hard-fisted, horny-handed, down-trodden WORKINGMAN!" the last word coming out with a resounding thwack that made the welkin ring. Bill is a genius.

A notice was posted in this Division on Thursday stating that Chairman Goodkey, of the Third, had secured a promise from Secretary Seibold to the effect that on election day the hall would not be rented out as on the last occasion, when voters were compelled to stand in the rain and not allowed to collect by the police.

The bowling team of the Second did not win the cup presented by THE TRADES UNIONIST. The Third got the most pins, and that beat our team, even though it stood three straight games ahead of its opponent. The cup is a beauty. Bankman Allen passed it through the room. Next season, with such good bowlers as we possess, it may revert to the Second, Let us hope so.

Compositor Schooler, Slug 43, is also an amateur photographer of merit. He has a unique picture of an automobile crossing a shallow brook. Coming from the opposite direction is a typical Southern rig containing an old darkey and his chil'n. They meet in midstream. At this instant the camera caught the view. Mr. Schooler calls it "The old and the new, or the North and South," and will dispose of copies at a moderate price.

One of our candidates thinks his name is too freely used by the various correspondents. He must bear in mind that a candidate for public office is a public character, and as such is public property. The more prominent a man or woman is, the more he or she is talked about. I can mention at least two people in the office whose names are almost constantly in print, and we would be almost lost without them. Carry the merry smile and glad hand. It is the surest way to get elected.

Royal Pilsen Beer on Draught at R. A. Driscoll's, North Capitol and G street. Overholt whisky, 10c.

Third Division.

President Berg has a cinch on re-election.

E. D. Norris is enjoying the balance of his leave.

It will be impossible to defeat Secretary Seibold.

Charlie Gunn tells me that he thinks "Bloomer is harmless." I think so, too.

Mr. Orton T. Pierce is optimistic as to his chances for election as down town delegate.

I am betting 100 to 1 on "Pard" Julian's chances of being elected alternate, with no takers.

The latest advices from trustworthy sources are to the effect that Mr. Johnson will be badly beaten.

The down town race seems to wax warmer as the days pass, the chances of election being strongly with Miss McDonald, however.

Otto William Harke, late a temporary in this Division, is now working in Freeport, Ill., and reports that there is plenty of work there.

Miss Nellie Shipman has been playing truant for several weeks past. She returned Monday morning, "welcome as the flowers in May." We have all missed her.

President Calvert, of Philadelphia Union, was a visitor at the Government Printing Office on Tuesday. He was accompanied by Chas. F. Blett, late a temporary in the Third Division.

Frank Hall, "the Nestor of the Laws Committee," has two weeks leave coming to him, and is spending it on the "Eastern Sho'." He won't even be back for election. "Last year it cost me about $100 to find out I wasn't popular," said Frank.

Did you buy a ticket for the entertainment and dance to be given May 15 by the Woman's Auxiliary in aid of the fund to send delegates to the International Convention at Toronto? When the committee of ladies came down the line there were mighty few who refused.

Let me call Brother Bloomer's attention to something he wrote last week. He was speaking of Goodkey. Said he, "As a candidate for office he belongs to the public, and consequently is a legitimate matter of news."

It didn't strike you that way when I was writing the news about Mr. Johnson, did it, Mr. Bloomer?

Last year Philip S. Steele came within a very few votes of being elected. He was side-tracked at the last minute to give place to another man whom it was "absolutely necessary for Columbia Union to send," we were told. It is time that wrong was righted. No more faithful and conscientious man than Mr. Steele can be chosen. Let us do honor to ourselves by voting for him.

The Third Division Bowling Team, after an exciting wind-up, won the beautiful cup offered by THE TRADES UNIONIST to the team making the highest score. On the closing meeting of the series it was necessary for the Third Division Team to win three straight from their opponents of the Second. They won 'em. It is expected that a picture of the winning team will be published in next week's issue. Send in your orders early.

On Sunday evening last, at Columbia Theater, the Fraternal Order of Eagles held its Annual Memorial Service in remembrance of the brethren who had died during the year. The order is represented in Washington by Washington Aerie, No. 125, comprising between 300 and 400 members. The service was solemn and impressive, and was listened to by an audience almost completely filling the theatre. The Eagles orchestra furnished good music, ably seconded by Mrs. Effie Berry, soprano, Mr. J. Walter Humphrey, bass, and a quartette composed of Messrs. Al. Mosher, Wm. D. McFarland, Frank Rebstock, and J. Walter Humphrey. For a payment of 75 cents a month the Eagles furnish free medical attendance for a brother and his family, and on his death a burial benefit of $150. I am greatly indebted to Brother Will A. Morris, of this Division for a card of admission to the theatre.

Do the members of Columbia Union remember how it rained last I. T. U. election day? Do they remember how they were obliged to stand out in the sidewalk and get wet, ever and anon being forced to keep moving by the vigilant policeman? They were waiting for the election returns to be announced. The reason why no provision for their comfort had been made was because the hall had been rented for that night, and the only room available for members was the small office used by the secretary, which was filled by those having charge of counting the ballots.

We may suppose that nobody wants to assume the responsibility for having rented the hall on that night, of all nights in the year, when the members of Columbia Union desire to assemble and listen to the announcement of the successful candidates at the annual election.

The responsible head of the Union at that time was President Joe M. Johnson. The letting of the hall on election night was a colossal mistake, and there is no excuse for a committee who would do such a thing or for a president who would countenance it.

Thanks, however, to the foresight of the "old fox," Joseph E. Goodkey, such a thing will not happen again. At the next meeting after election Mr. Goodkey offered a resolution which was unanimously passed, providing that the hall should never again be let on election night.

Our hall will be open to us on the night of May 17.

The National Mutual Finance and Investment Company has a long name, which is perhaps undesirable; but the old adage, "What's in a name?" appears to fit in this case, for, notwithstanding the long name, the company is doing nobly. There are some few among us who have eyes only for the dope sheet, and who never look beyond to-day. Some of these fellows may reform. If they ever do, let them pay heed to these words: August Donath may not know the tricks of horse racing (I say "tricks" advisedly, for no one knows when the favorite will be drugged in order that the bookies may gather in our cash); but he knows real estate like a book, and under his guidance the company with a long name is making good money for its stockholders. It is a comforting thought that an investment is sure to bring results favorable to the investor. Would it not be sensible to drop the dope sheet in exchange for a few shares in Donath's Company?

Official Gazette.

F. B. Wilkins has been assigned to the Gazette Proof Room as a copyholder.

T. V. Walters is dangerously ill at Providence Hospital, where he has been for about three weeks.

F. B. Cowden left here for Jamestown, N. Y., Monday evening, to attend the funeral of his wife's mother.

Scott K. Young returned to work Friday. He was confined to his home for about three weeks by an attack of quinzy.

Miss Carrie L. Whitehead and Lee P. Calfée were married in Baltimore, April 29. Mr. and Mrs. Calfée will take up their residence at 813 North Carolina avenue southeast, and will be at home to friends on Tuesdays after May 15. The Specification and Gazette Chapels jointly presented the bride some fine tableware. Mrs. Calfée wishes to be remembered to all her friends and extends a cordial invitation to visit her in her new home.

Bindery Notes.

The many friends of E. W. Patton were surprised to hear of his death. He had made many good friends in the Government Bindery, and the Bookbinders wish to pay their humble tribute of respect to his memory.

Last week a number of the employees crowded around a lady who was suddenly taken ill. One of the medical staff in the Bindery kindly offered his services provided the ladies would leave her in his charge. This they refused to do, so a physician was called in from the outside.

"Dunk" Kilborn relates a very interesting anecdote of his boyhood days, of how he assisted his pal, who was shot with rock salt while he was enjoying himself in a watermelon patch. What a lucky fellow "Dunk" was. The farmer must have thought his pal needed a little seasoning for the melons.

A number of fans from the Bindery attended last Saturday's game of base ball. One of the hottest rooters was "Shorty" Hart, who kept a shouting, "Good eye, Hughes," "Good eye, Hughes." "Shorty" got so excited it took two strong men to hold him down in his seat. "Big Bill" Johnston, who has not attended a game in ten years, caught the fever, jumped up, waved his umbrella in the air, and pushed a man's derby over his ears, yelling at the top of his voice, "Hold him down there, Buddie," "Hold him down there, Buddie." Fitzpatrick had his field glasses with him which he uses at the race track, but remained as if glued to his seat and never moved them from his eyes during the game. Bernard White nearly fainted when the home team lost the game, and left the grounds with tears in his eyes.

AROUND THE PRINTERIES

The Washington Post.

Pard Bloomer's "Sonny Gunn" tickled Kreiter some.

With The Post and The Times located so close together, I probably will be able to pick up enough items for a letter each week—for there'll certainly be something doin' 'most every day.

In line with the rest of the citizens of the District, our boys are base ball crazy. Our chairman came near losing his job last Saturday afternoon because he could not furnish the score by innings during the progress of the game.

Under pressure by Foreman Thompson, Dr. Carleton Vaughan has consented to again print a few lines. In Carleton's case, dentistry pays, but once a man has mastered the printing business it's hard for him to break away from it, and the Doctor is still young at the break-away game.

"Charlie" Bastian, late of the Baltimore Herald, joined our make-up room force last week. Charlie is an old-time employee at the G. P. O., and has many friends here who will join us in making him welcome. I believe John Macksey has already demonstrated a hearty willingness to do his share.

A late addition to our ad-force is young James Darlington, a son of the late John Darlington, for years an employee of the Post, and assistant foreman at the time of his death about three years ago. "Jim" is just out of his apprenticeship and this is his first newspaper work, but he is doing nicely and says "night work is great."

Many a bright little quip "dies a bornin'." Here's one that started on the way to fameville on the morning of April 24, but the blue pencil caught it and this is the first time it has seen the light of day: "What was the use? It was comic enough before." You won't have to hunteround very long to see the point if you'll remember the date.

Mrs. Thompson and Mrs. Thomas, of the Auxiliary, were callers last Thursday night. They distributed smiles and good fellowship indiscriminately around the office, and left a bunch of entertainment tickets with the chairman. If the other ladies on the committee are as energetic and loyal as are these two the success of this latest entertainment is already assured. Let's all go.

Come Broderick, I thought you had started in "for good"—and that we'd hear from The Star every week. Keep 'em a-coming, I'll follow you some old way—let's uphold the dignity of the down town; those G. P. O. fellows are getting chesty, they've been in the limelight so long. Look how hard our old "Pard" works—let's you and I help him out a little bit each week. Are you with me? I am going to please Pard this trip by signing myself.

The Times' new building is still going "down." The contractors have excavated quite a hole-in-the-ground where lately stood the historic old Lawrence Hotel. Work is continuous on the site, night and day shifts being worked. I judge from the appearance of things there that the excavating is about done and the foundation laying for the new building will soon begin in earnest, and it will not be long ere a structure will begin to rise out of that hole that when completed will be a joy to our brothers of The Times Chapel, and I hope it's to be the home of a much larger Times for there is no questioning that establishment's friendship for the Union printer.

If President Berg don't get down town pretty soon with his cards, it will be up to me to post our fellows about the candidate for President. Secretary Seibold, also, has neglected us so far in an electioneering way. Such independence is born of the "surething" game; but any old way you could fix it both those tried and true officials would have a "cinch." Dexter Hussey was around last week with his winning smile and a full hand of cards. He left the cards, and, as he carried the smile away with him, I think Vice-President Love had better be looking after his down town fences. Votes like other wanted things must be solicited or worked for, and as we have quite a crowd of new-comers on The Post now, you aspiring officials will do well to "shop up" once or twice between this and May 17.

Not much doing here in politics, even with two of our fellow-workmen looking for votes enough to land them in Toronto during August. Both are confident of success and each has a goodly number of followers. Both cannot win, but one of them must (and neither will bring discredit on Columbia Union if chosen to represent us in the councils of the International.) By the way, the G. P. O. contingent must be pretty confident, also; they are not doing much electioneering down our way. Not all of them have called on us yet, and the election only one week off. They are all good fellows, just the same, and, like our very own candidates, abundantly equipped mentally and physically to uphold the honor of No. 101 at the Mecca of all Union politicians this summer, and I wish we could send the entire bunch.

Speaking of the printerman entering other trades and the professions, and how hard it is for him to disassociate himself with his first love, we have two other dentists on the Post—Drs. Ramsay and Cullen. In M. E. Mehrten we have a one-time theatrical manager; our great and only W. L. Perkins was for several years a railroad bridge builder, and now carries a carpenter's card in addition to his printing certificate; James Monroe Kreiter had his fling outside the printershop in the capacity of manager of an independent base ball club up in Pennsylvania; and in another employee we have one who for more years than he cares to number cavorted around in the sawdust arena and before the footlights as a gymnast and athlete. No doubt there's more of them—but they're too bashful to boast of past successes or failures. Let us cherish them all while they're with us, bid them godspeed when they go, and extend the glad hand each time they return.

The advent of the Sunday Star was a great boost for the down town printermen. Not only did The Star increase its force materially, but The Post and The Times each "spruced up" and enlarged their Sunday editions—and in the case of The Post, even the daily has been enlarged and improved as well; all of which has called for an increase of force in each office. In The Post composing room there has been a decided increase, and we are assured by "the powers that be" that the end is not yet. The long-talked-of enlarged composing room is now an assured fact. On June 1 the start will be made to raise the building adjoining us on the east, and its place will be taken by a 20-foot addition to the present Post building. The new portion will be run up the full height of the present structure and be ornamented by an imposing tower. When the improvements are completed early in the fall our composing room will have been increased by an additional 600 square feet of floor space which will furnish the room needed for the increased force and the installation of four of the latest style Mergs—giving us 18 in all. Foreman Thompson will then take on aristocratic airs—as he is to have a private office, and not be compelled to keep his papers, memoranda, etc., any old place as has been his necessity in the past. The "readers" will be isolated or quarantined under the new arrangement—and I shall suggest to the builders that windows be omitted from their room and the door or doors be made airtight.

THOUGHTLESS THINKS.

After all it's a question whether Rockefeller is as black as his money is tainted.

King Edward has given up the use of the quill and now uses a typewriter. Perhaps there may be a hint here for some people.

Brother Bloomer is naturally somewhat worked up over the fact that there are yahoos so rusty that they can't get next to his irony.

SOUNDS PARADOXICAL.

Toward a foe alert and bold,
Hopes at last to have a screaming
Hot old time if he keeps coaled.

A HINT TO THE JAPS.

Progressing east to meet the Japs,
The Russians seemed but crawlers;
Their speed would have increased, perhaps,
If lured by decoy trawlers.

"War Talk" is the title of a lecture to be delivered in this city shortly. The lecturer might gather a few ornamental points from the verbal engagement now raging around Port Arthur F. Bloomer.

The Late Charles E. Clark.

At the regular meeting of the Allied Printing Trades Council of Washington, D. C., held at Typographical Temple, April 27, 1905, the following resolution was adopted and ordered spread upon the minutes:

Whereas it has pleased the All-Wise Ruler of the Universe to remove from the midst of us on April 17, 1905, Charles E. Clark, our dearly beloved friend and ex-President of this Council; and

Whereas he possessed in a high degree those sterling qualities of character that challenge the admiration of mankind, that gentle consideration that bespoke his good heart, broad mind and noble manliness; and

Whereas such a life should not be allowed to pass from us without some expression of the appreciation of it's worth from those who, by association, learned to love and admire him; therefore be it

Resolved, That we extend to his immediate family and near relatives our sincere sympathy, and express the hope that they may find solace in the promise that—

"There is no death; the stars go down
To rise upon some fairer shore
And bright in Heaven's jeweled crown
They shine for evermore."

Mill Workers Helpers Union Go Out on a Sympathetic Strike.

WARREN & DYER ARE UNFAIR

Horseshoers Union Credentials Accepted—Bottlers Have Grievance Against F. H. Finley & Son—Amendments to Constitution Submitted—Other Business.

The regular weekly meeting of the Central Labor Union was called to order at 8 o'clock on Monday evening, President Dickman in the chair.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

The Grievance Committee reported that they had been unable to adjust the grievance of the Glaziers against Warren & Dyer, 627 F street northwest, and recommended that said firm be placed on the "List We Do Not Patronize." The recommendation was concurred in.

CREDENTIALS.

Pressmen, No. 1: N. C. Sprague, Wm. E. Rink, and E. H. Sample.

Horseshoers, No. 17: D. J. Clark, Wm. Shondau, Samuel Zeitel, Wm. Hessen, and J. M. Horigan.

The credentials were received and the delegates seated.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Musicians, No. 161, indorsing action of central body in placing Samuel Artz, plumber, on unfair list. Placed on file.

From Musicians, No. 161, indorsing action of central body in placing E. N. Richards, paper hanger, an unfair list. Placed on file.

From Bakers Union, No. 118, indorsing circular sent out by that Union concerning unfair attitude of George J. Schuerger, baker, 216 Ninth street southwest. Placed on file.

From Bottlers Union, No. 251, stating that it has been impossible to get F. H. Finley & Son to live up to his agreement with that Union, and asking that the proper committee be requested to take the case under consideration. Referred to Grievance Committee.

From Samuel Gompers, president American Federation of Labor, calling attention to action of San Francisco convention, and asking for enforcement of its decision relative to certain International Unions. Referred to Executive Committee.

CALL OF UNIONS.

Bakers: Called attention to their grievance against G. J. Schuerger, 216 Ninth street southeast.

Bottlers: Called attention to grievance of that Union against F. H. Finley & Son, and requested prompt action by the Grievance Committee.

Bartenders: Requested Bottlers to have a delegation at their next meeting, as assistance of a material nature might be furnished them in Finley case.

Mill Workers' Helpers: That they had gone out on a sympathetic strike with Local No. 1103, Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners. The president was requested to assist this organization.

NEW BUSINESS.

The chair announced the following changes on special committee to revise "List We Do Not Patronize:" From Tailors Union, Delegate Geraci, vice Ehret; Delegate Plum, vice Riordan, and Delegate Sprague, of Pressmen Union, added to the committee.

The chairman of the Grievance Committee having tendered his resignation, Delegate Sprague, of Pressmen's Union, was appointed chairman of that committee.

On motion, the report of the Auditing Committee on Labor Day Outing was made a special order of business immediately after reading of minutes at next meeting.

The following amendments was offered by Delegate Dickman, which was laid over to next meeting:

Add to obligation of delegates-elect after last word: "and will support the products of organized labor."

OBLIGATION OF OFFICERS-ELECT.

I,——— do solemnly promise to discharge the duties devolving upon me as ——— to the best of my ability and will support the products of organized labor.

BARNUM, STEELE, JOHNSON, AND KNAPP

A Strong and Able Quartet to Represent Columbia Union, No. 101, at Toronto Convention

William R. Love Defeats Dexter S. Hussey for the Vice-Presidency—Joe M. Johnson Lands in Third Place for Delegate by a Close Vote—Harry C. Knapp, the Down-Town Representative—Quiet Campaign, But Warmed Up at the Close.

The contest for the Vice-Presidency and the selection of delegates to Toronto did not serve to enthuse the members of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, with the accustomed zeal of former years. Taken as a whole, it was the quietest campaign in years. Aside from the determined effort of several leaders in Union affairs to mix up Joe Johnson's chances of election, the campaign was devoid of exciting interest.

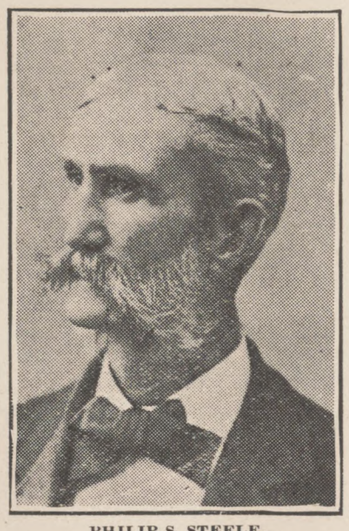
NOTES.

Lucky thirteen.

Barnum made good.

The old war horse came in on the bit.

Joe M. Johnson's friends feel highly elated.



The irrepressible Goodkey took the result with his usual philosophical good nature.

Hussey carried six G. P. O. chapels over Love, while Love carried eight down town chapels over Hussey.

Buchanan made a great run for first time out. His gentlemanly bearing and quiet manner marks him as a winner next time.

Frank D. Smith made a strong run all the way through. He has the proud distinction of being the only G. P. O. candidate who got a vote in every chapel.

Harry C. Knapp lead Miss McDonald 118 votes at the finish. He received a vote in every chapel, his own chapel coming up solid for him. Harry developed unusual strength in the down town chapels, carrying all of them except the Post and the National Publishing Co.

PHILIP S. STEELE.

Miss Teresa McDonald made a strong bid for favor, but did not realize her hopes. There is no doubt that under different conditions she would have won out. She has the satisfaction of knowing that over 600 good and true men were gallant enough to express preference for her as their choice for delegate.

GUNN SHOTS

In the case of Philip S. Steele "merit has received its reward." It also shows that men who do the work are not forgotten.

Joe M. Johnson received a shut-out in the chapels of the Law Reporter and the Agricultural branch. The same thing happened to Mark Barnum at Wilkens. Somebody has been using the spit-ball

The Pennsylvania troop fought nobly, but—

The gentlemen may now resume the marking of commas.

Another thing it shows—the Third Division correspondent was badly coached.

While the total vote was over 1600, about 300 failed to vote for offices without opposition.

Frank Smith was the only candidate who was not shut out in any chapel. The newspaper offices down town proved to be his Waterloo.

HARRY C. KNAPP.

NAVY YARD ITEMS.

I hear good reports from Bro. Sam Elder, ex-President of Columbia Lodge, No. 174, who resigned his position in the Yard to accept a more lucrative one in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. Sam is one of those boys who believes in progression whether as a Trades Unionist or at his particular branch of trade. The Navy Department lost a valuable mechanic when he resigned, while the Treasury improved its mechanical force by the transfer.

* * * *

"It has come at last," was the exclamation of Bro. Wm. Essenger to his shopmates the other day.

"What is it, Billie," asked Lieutenant Kennedy, "the circus?"

"Circus be hanged. I mean the baby."

Investigation developed the fact that a girl baby has been presented to the happle couple. As Billie is quite a favorite with the boys, he was heartily congratulated.

* * * *

The Secretary of the Navy has ordered an examination to be held in the Yard at an early date for the position of subinspector of ordnance, caused by the resignation of Wm. H. Lantz. In connection with this examination, an eligible list will be created if sufficient candidates successfully pass the examination to create one, thereby avoiding the expense and time necessary attending an examination called for at each resignation of subinspectors.

In a country paper, of which I am a regular contributor, I find an impassionate appeal from the editor. I give it verbatim:

READ THIS, OH YE DELINQUENTS.

Oh, for the pen of a Sterne that we might try the pathetic to stir you up to a feeling sense of our wants and dues. But we can make none but a plain matter-of-fact speech, and appeal to you in behalf of our lightened purse, and beseech you to give unto us that which is our due. Small streams swell the river so that the proud ship rides onward prosperously and in beauty, and it is the small sums you owe that are wanted to enable us to go on our way rejoicing in prosperity, and gathering rich treasures to bring to our patrons. Much more should we do toward embellishing our work were it not for the want of means you withhold from us, and by your love of beauty and truth—by that honor which is the loveliness of the human character, and by the holy name of justice, we plead of you to consider our case and act the man of principle and give us the laborer's due.

One of the most interesting meetings ever held by Columbia Lodge, No. 174, I. A. of M., occurred at their regular meeting Wednesday night last. It was the occasion in which the International officers were nominated.

Under the new order governing International officers they are now selected by referendum. The first surprise of evening came when D. W. Rhoderick, of Chicago, defeated the present incumbent, James O'Connell. It had generally been surmised that President O'Connell would be almost the unanimous choice, but a strong undercurrent prevailed and swept him out to sea—carrying with him the venerable George Preston, the present general secretary and treasurer, who fell before the lance of President E. L. Adams.

Bro. Preston, in acknowledging his defeat paid a complimentary tribute to President Adams, acknowledging the fact that in his judgment, based on actual facts coming directly to him by careful observation of men and methods, there was no one who he would sooner see selected as his successor (if such were to happen) than the president of Columbia Lodge.

Thinking that President O'Connell and Secretary Preston might feel lonesome without other company, and to prevent such an occurrence the next victim relegated to the back bench was the jolly, good-natured, First Vice-President, P. J. Conlon, whose scalp dangled from the belt of Maurice Landers, of Massachusetts.

Everyone connected with I. A. of M. well knows the Damon and Pythias bond of friendship existing between the editor of the Machinists Journal, Bro. Douglas Wilson, and his assistant, Bro. Arthur E. Holder, and when it was proposed to nominate the latter to succeed the former that friendship was the more clearly seen, when Bro. Holder, in words that could bear no misunderstanding, positively and emphatically declined to allow his name to be presented. No nomination for editor was made.

With the President, First Vice-President and Secretary and Treasurer down and out, the spirit of a general change along the line seemed to take possession of the members, and the remaining Vice-Presidents went down to defeat and Joseph Maltby, of Utah; A. E. Holder, of Washington, D. C.; George Owens, of Harrisburg, Pa.; W. Foster, of Oil City, Pa., and A. McGillivary, of Bridgeport, Conn., were declared the nominees for the different vice-presidents.

The next on the program was the selection of a new Executive Board of five members which resulted in the renomination of Bro. E. L. Tucker, of Columbia Lodge, and H. F. Garrett, of Atlanta, Ga., followed by three new candidates—Messrs. Thomas Carroll, of Columbia Lodge, No. 174, A. Shepherd, of Des Moines, Iowa, and John McConnell, of Pittsburg, Pa. The conclusion of the evening's entertainment was the selection of the following to represent the I. A. of M. to the A. F. of L. Convention, viz: Hab Morgan, Washington, D. C.; James Wilson, New York City; John Collins, Chicago, Ill.; Charles R. Sterling, Boston, Mass.

As there are some 700 Locals, each to nominate the same as Columbia Lodge has done, it may be possible that not one of the gentlemen who have been the recipients of the honors bestowed upon them by 174 may be successful. It is to be earnestly hoped and expected that local pride will cause each and every member to spread their influence throughout the entire jurisdiction in behalf and in the interest of the nominee for general secretary and treasurer, the honored President of Columbia Lodge, Bro. Emmett L. Adams.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

If the cranks of the United States could have full swing in the government of the District of Columbia, I wonder what it would be like. By working on weak-kneed Congressmen they have already accomplished considerable evil in having all the divorce laws repealed, resulting in deserted wives instead of having them decently divorced and free to marry again, perhaps more happily a second or third time. The wherefore of the opposition of the church people to divorce passes my understanding. Nobody can show that there is any more immorality in States and communities where divorces are permitted than in the few hidebound anti-divorce States. Thousands of petitions have been received praying for the entire abolition of the sale of liquor in this District, and I have no doubt but what it would have been accomplished were it not that they want the revenue that comes from saloon licenses. Other thousands have been for a stronger Sunday-observance law in what is already the most orderly Sunday city in the world. I even remember a petition from Detroit for the extension of a street in this city.

The cranks never did a worse job for the good of the country in general than in persuading Congress to abolish the "canteen" in the army, resulting in much more drunkenness and ten times as many desertions. Having no desire for alcoholic stimulants themselves, they seem incapable of understanding that there are others who do want them and will have them, at whatever risk and whatever may be the penalty. This class are never willing to mitigate an evil, but must persist in an attempt to make everybody else conform to their tastes; and the experience and advice of those most interested and best informed—the army officers—are worth less than nothing to them.

Another thing that gets to me is the violent interest the churches and the woman's organizations—more especially the latter—take in the polygamy question. I am no apologist for polygamy, for I believe that even one wife is more than the average man has any business with, but whom does polygamy injure except the polygamists themselves? Not the churches especially, for the polygamists keep to themselves and have their own church. Not the members of the women's organizations, surely, for it is not possible that they would grudge the poor Mormon woman her tenth part of a husband; on the contrary, its abolition would to a certain extent tend to further glut the matrimonial market by throwing that many more women into it. If ten women want to marry one man, and that man is willing to sacrifice himself, why should the ladies' happiness be interfered with? I'm afraid it's chronic attending to other people's business that makes the trouble.

My friend Belcher has written many things which I did not agree with, but I can think of nothing which merited the awful shot which the nameless correspondent from the Second Division took at him in saying that he "sinks beneath his level when he descends to the vulgarity of using ignominious epithets." For a man to sink beneath his level would seem to be sufficiently horrible, but when he uses ignominious epithets he becomes unendurable. However, one can but admire the wonderful command of language which the nameless one has, for it is only such who can so forcefully and yet simply express themselves.

The Star of last Saturday announced that Walter W. Ludlow, private secretary of Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Keep, has been designated as acting chief clerk of the Treasury, there being but little doubt of his retention permanently, to succeed the late Chief Clerk Wallace H. Hills, who recently died in New Mexico. Mr. Ludlow is a printer and was for a number of years employed in different branches of the Government Printing Office, his last work being four or five years ago as proofreader in the State Department Division. He is an expert stenographer and it was due to this accomplishment that he was detailed and then permanently appointed as private secretary. It was a case of being "Johnny on the spot," as was that of John S. Mills, who was transferred from the Treasury Department Printing Office to a clerkship in the office of the Secretary of the Treasury some years ago. Mr. Ludlow is a well-known Mason, being secretary of Lebanon Lodge, No. 7, and Past High Priest of Lafayette Chapter, No. 5. I have never known a case of a printer becoming a Department clerk where he did not make a conspicuous success of it.

Sam F. Elwood, of the Second Division, I am told, is lying in Providence Hospital, suffering with a cancer from which recovery is impossible, death being so imminent that it may be announced any moment.

"Trades unionists make me tired," said a tobacco dealer one day last week. "Men come in here every day whom I know to be the loudest kind of union men and call for non-union brands of tobacco and cigars when they could get as good and generally better goods of the same style with union labels on them, for I have enough calls for the union-label articles to make it necessary for me to keep them in stock. More particularly is that the case with chewing tobacco, and it is not at all infrequent that a man will come in and say, 'Give me a union-label cigar,' and after getting it will add, 'Have you any Such-and-such tobacco?' naming a non-union brand. Sometimes I say, 'Yes, but I've got So-and-so too, and that has the union label and is exactly the same tobacco,' but it's generally no use. They insist on the non-union article. There is not a style of chewing tobacco in the market that cannot be had with the union label. You fellows have it in your power to drive the non-union brands out of business if you had the good sense to be as good union men in spending your money as you are in earning it."

Government Printing Office Council, National Union, will give its annual excursion to River View on June 7, and as its excursions are the most enjoyable of anything going down the river, it will be well if you take out on it. There will be plenty of opportunity to buy tickets before that date.

Gus Bruehl, of the Star, lately received a letter from "Shad" Campbell, in which he says: "Jack Robinson is complaining a good deal and he looks much broke up. Doughty is in good health, as I am myself. I saw Mrs. Lewis yesterday; she told me that she has gained five pounds since being here; enjoys herself and wants some more of the girls to come out; likes the country and may eventually live in Denver, if her husband can get work there. The Elks have a week's fiesta this week; they had their band at the Home practicing on Sunday morning; used our baseball ground for drilling, presenting a handsome appearance in their new uniforms."

Chicago Union is proceeding in the work of organizing the non-union printers of that city in a manner peculiarly her own which promises to be effective Members are furnished with blanks reading as follows:

Members of the Union who are acquainted with non-union printers are requested to secure their names and addresses and send them to the organizer.
Name:——. Age:——.
Address:——. Employed at:——.
Has had——years experience at the trade in the following places:——
General information:——.
Date:——.
Name sent in by——.

President James M. Lynch, says:

I understand that this method has met with success, and that as a result of the use of the blank No. 16 is securing the names of nearly all of the non-union printers in Chicago. When the names are secured, members of the union are asked to visit the non-members, and if they are competent printers, ask them to affiliate. The blank (with changes to meet local requirements) is capable of use in many directions—for instance, both in securing the names of non-members in the jurisdictions of subordinate unions and also the names of non-members in the surrounding country.

Mr. Lynch extends the following invitation:

If you have a plan in effect that is successful, send it in. It may prove of immense value in the general organizing movement. In fact it may be the one additional thing that is needful to success in the eight-hour campaign.

No stone is being left unturned by the Executive Council to bring to a successful issue the movement for a universal eight-hour day, and that this end will be realized in January next is beyond a doubt. There may be a few minor failures, but those will only be postponements, complete success to come a little later.

"The latest advices from trustworthy sources are to the effect that Mr. Johnson will be badly beaten."—Belcher. Now what do you think of such sources of information, Mr. B.?

* * * *

When Jimmy McGill presented his card and offered to vote yesterday the election officers rejected it because it was not the right color.

"Read it!" said Jimmy.

"Dues paid May-Sept., 1905," read off the judge.

"Look at the back," said Jimmy.

All the I. T. U. stamps were there.

"That is the best card that has been presented here to-day," said the judge, as he accepted the vote.

The Unionist, of New York, is one of the papers which oppose the present administration of the I. T. U., and it is especially bitter in its attacks on President Lynch. I am persuaded that the membership at large fully indorses the administration and is satisfied with the way affairs are conducted. If it is not, its dissatisfaction will be manifested at Toronto and such legislation enacted as will carry its views into effect. There is no merit in the aspersions upon the integrity and good faith of officials indulged in by the class of newspapers which have been warring on the Executive Council, nor do such attacks convince anybody of the truth of the charges—on the contrary, they lose force in almost the exact ratio that they are violent and that their animus is manifest. Scurrility never helped any cause, nor injured any except the one it was intended to help. Plain, fair statements of fact are what count, and it is they who have none to make who usually resort to personal abuse and malicious insinuations. If Philadelphia has been wronged, she will be righted at Toronto, and if the abuse of the Executive Council by the Hawkes organs has been merited its enemies will be given a chance to make it so appear.

Jimmie Hogsette floated in from the Philippines last week and looked in at the office to see his old friends. From his appearance a tropical climate has no terrors for him. His leave permits him to stay in this country until August. That accumulation-of-leave scheme strikes me as a thing which the Government should adopt in all its branches.

* * * *

Two or three years ago I advocated the collection of Union dues at every pay day, and I now renew the motion. It would not be such a heavy drain on the membership at one time and would have the effect of keeping the Union always in funds. It would make the work of the respective chairmen heavier, but it is not the customary practice, when you want anything done, to consider whether it will entail hardship on the man whose business it is to do it. Besides, the chairmen get their money pretty easy for the service they perform for the Union. The dues for an entire month come to a rather neat sum, and when, by the failure of coincidence of the pay days and the Union meetings, the period covered is six weeks, the amount involved is enough to buy a pair of union label shoes, if you wear that kind. I wish some recognized leader (Joe Goodkey and "Funny" Roberts barred) would make the motion and use his well-known ability to push it to adoption.

* * * *

The last issue of the New York Unionist devotes two columns to obituaries. I'll bet the editor would be willing to devote the whole paper to that sort of literature if he could make the nominations.

* * * *

I notice that the ladies of the Woman's Auxiliary succeeded admirably in the selection of a delegate, Mrs. A. W. Bowen, and an alternate, Mrs. Bert Wolfe, at their meeting last Friday night, without the intervention of the male members. After the convention Mr. and Mrs. Bowen will both be ex-delegates, the former having been one of the representatives of Columbia Union at the 1900 I. T. U. convention at Milwaukee. By the way, I wonder if the ex-delegates of the Auxiliary will not soon be forming an ex-delegates' association?

* * * *

When the Post's article on the election was read yesterday, many insisted that it was no criterion, while others were equally positive that it was eminently Kreiterian.

* * * *

Quoting my remark about Joe Goodkey being a matter of news, Mr. Belcher suggests that it did not strike me that way when he was writing the news about Mr. Johnson. I never objected to any news he wrote about Johnson, but when he prostituted his splendid, God-given talents to voicing the spleen of others, never making a charge against him that was worthy of a moment's thought or that was not manifest for malice, and without a thought of anything but to defeat him, I simply got in in the interest of fair play. But I like Belcher. After I had conquered my aversion to the smell of limburger cheese I found it not only a wholesome but a delightful article of diet. Belcher grows on one, too.

Chauncey Hickox, a brother-in-law of Miss E. Louise Bryant, of the Official Gazette Chapel, and who was a printer at one time, and for many years a Government official, died last Friday and was buried on Sunday. Formerly living on North Capitol street, he was well-known to the printers of a generation ago.

Some people are gradually learning that Columbia Union resents a personal fight against a candidate.

* * * *

The Los Angeles Anti-Times Committee have sent their report of the "Progress of the Contest with the Los Angeles Times," which shows that they have done great work in their battle, and while they have not succeeded in unionizing the Times, they have brought a prosperity to the members of Los Angeles Union that has warranted all the time and money spent.

* * * *

On a number of occasions there have been agitations to compel the street railways to give transfers at all intersections, regardless of ownership of lines, and the recent order of the court taking away many which we already had is quite a counter move. I have often thought that our people do not walk enough, and I hope that they will now feel encouraged to indulge in more of that form of exercise. As I do not know how soon it may be made an act of lese majeste to speak disrespectfully of a corporation, I am not going to get into the habit of doing anything of that sort. But I will suggest that it has not yet been made illegal to walk, either by statute or injunction of court, though there is no saying how soon it may be.

* * * *

A lie told to influence a voter against a candidate is as much a lie as, and a little more contemptible lie than, any other.

* * * *

The authorities are so prompt in preventing any representation of female charms on the billboards that I am almost disposed to ask their protection from the suggestiveness of hoisery advertisements in the daily papers. Such pictures may not operate disastrously on younger minds, but when a man has reached the front-row-at-the-ballet age, his interests should be guarded. It was President Lincoln who, surveying the inaugural ball of his day and being asked if he had ever seen such a beautiful sight before, replied, "Not since I was weaned." In looking at these hosiery ads. I am not carried further back than Lydia Thompson days, however; but that was not last week.

GOSSIP FROM THE G. P. O.

First Division.

Everything has been unusually quiet during the past week.

Postmaster Pratt has returned from his leave just in time to get busy.

Corporal Gray, custodian of the vault, enjoyed a two days' outing during the week.

On the sick list during the week were George A. Plummer and John W. Sherman, of the "Y."

E. F. Latham has been assigned to "hold down" Imposer Wetmore's job during his leave taking.

Messrs. John F. Lane, Charles Wilhelm, and Frank W. Kern, have been transferred to the Job Room.

The annual excursion of G. P. O. Council, No. 211, National Union, will be held at River View, Wednesday, June 7. So says President J. E. Colton.

The late Joseph E. Casey, bookbinder, who died on Sunday last, had a host of friends in the G. P. O. He had been secretary of Columbia Council, National Union, for several years.

Judge Holeman, of the Supply Division, struck another milestone, and of course celebrated it by taking a day off. How old? We are not giving out state secrets; but he is not the oldest compositor in this Chapel.

Mrs. A. L. Bowen was unanimously elected last Friday evening as a delegate to the Annual Convention of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Typographical Union, which convenes in August, at Toronto, Canada. This Division is highly pleased with the selection of this excellent lady, the wife of the popular foreman of our Division.

Doubtless there are some members of this Division who remember Walter W. Ludlow when he was a compositor in the old Document Room. Later on he was transferred to the State Branch, and subsequently obtained a clerkship in the Treasury Department. Since the death of Chief Clerk Hills, Mr. Ludlow has been designated as acting chief clerk of the Treasury Department.

ROUGH WRITER.

Royal Pilsen Beer on Draught at R. A. Driscoll's, North Capitol and G street. Overholt whisky, 10c.

Second Division.

Tellers elected in the Second for the ensuing delegate election were J. B. Trudgian and H. M. Allen.

A monogram pin was recently picked up. The loser will get it at the desk of the foreman of the Proof Room.

The doc. cat. force is not exempt from rush takes. We take out on Spanish, etc., with those who set regular copy.

W. F. O'Brien, of the Proof Room, won the $60 diamond pin recently offered as a prize. The winning number was 57F.

The Woman's Auxiliary entertainment was a pronounced success, say those who attended, and that is the best evidence that can be afforded. All former efforts were eclipsed.

The correspondent for this Division is under obligations to those who have kindly assisted him. Without such assistance it would be difficult to represent the Division in an adequate manner.

N. H. Lytle and P. S. Wallace, of this Division, were transferred on Monday to a branch division, Percy Wallace is a brother of Paul M. Wallace, who recently resigned to take charge of a newspaper.

In the printed Specification Chapel rules the word "ringed" was used. Since being assigned to the Second I frequently hear the term "rung" as applied to errors in proofs within a ring. Which is correct?

Beginning Tuesday, May 16, dupes (duplicates) will be taken of all takes set and measured in the average room. This is an innovation, but a necessary one, as discrepancies in measurement will arise, and a comparison is the only true method of offsetting errors.

* * * *

One of the strange coincidences of life recently occurred in this Division illustrating the fact that truth is sometimes stranger than fiction.

One of our compositors, Joseph Gibson, came walking up to Mr. Mitchell, on frame 39, and inquired:

"Didn't you teach Sunday School at one time?"

"Yes," replied Mr. Mitchell.

"Well," replied his interrogator, "I have a Sunday School book you gave me when I was a little boy."

The incident occurred seventeen years previously, in the Church of the First Ascension in this city, and this was the first time the two had met.

Ladies' Dining Room. R. A. Driscoll, N. Cap. and G. Crabs and Clams.

Third Division.

Joe Lenhart is having great fun these days cutting "dupes."

Our bowling team is too modest to have its picture taken. Now that the match is concluded, the season is over, and the excitement has all died out, all the boys are tired of being in the limelight of publicity and seek restful seclusion.

The little fly upon the wall,
He has no little clothes at all;
He has no little shoes, or hose,
Or little hankies for his nose;
He has not any little skirt,
Nor any little chemise shirt.
Boo! Ain't he cold!

Brother Luitich, of the Fourth Division, lately became the father of twins—a boy and a girl, or perhaps, in deference to the fair sex, I should speak of them as a girl and a boy. "All doing well." Surely, Mr. Luitich need ask for no other earthy blessing.

On Monday evening last, Past Chancellor E. N. Bunker, of Century Lodge, No. 30, K. of P., was made the recipient of a beautiful past chancellor's jewel, the unanimous gift of the Lodge on the completion of his term of service, January 2, 1905. The jewel is finely inlaid and enameled in colors, and displays the coat of arms of the Knights of Pythias. On the reverse side is inscribed the name and title of the owner and date of presentation. The Third Division is honored in having on its roll men who deserve the best their friends and brethren can give them. Mr. Bunker deserves our hearty congratulations.

The favorite tune of Franklin O. Sanders is the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin; while the bit of melody most affected by H. J. McClurg, is Mendelssohn's Wedding March. Sanders and McClurg are both young men. Their humming and whistling those particular tunes may be only a coincidence; but from the fact that the former may be seen reading a letter from a lady every morning, and from the further fact that we never see McClurg reading anything but his copy, we are led to conjecture that there will be something doing before long in the rural districts of Pennsylvania, that State being the home of both gentlemen. It is sweet to watch the opening bud. Don't forget us, dear boys, when you send out the cake and cards.

Bloomer never displayed so much venom at one time as he published over his signature last week. Don't the readers of THE TRADES UNIONIST think that he would show better taste if he used a nom de plume? Not content with "knocking" on Joe M. Johnson, he went for his "friend John Kiernan" as well as for "Ian," who wrote in defence of Mr. Kiernan the week before; next he jumped on Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Hanford because they mind their own business in their own way. All this in addition to an ungenerous and unmanly attack upon the writer, the culmination of a series of attacks made because of my opposition to the candidacy for delegate to the I. T. U. of a former president of Columbia Union. Such tactics will react some day upon the one who uses them.

* * * *

During his calls as a candidate, Mr. Goodkey came across his old-time sparring partner, Simpson, whose references to our chairman in the columns of THE TRADES UNIONIST two years ago were so distasteful as to cause a falling out between the two.

In telling us how he met Mr. Simpson, the candidate said: "Well, after a while I got around where "Bug" Simpson was, and when I offered him my hand he wouldn't take it, so I took his hand away from him."

That ended it, apparently. We could never get any statement from Goodkey as to whether or not Simpson had a detachable hand, or if Simpson objected when forcible possession was taken of such an important part of his anatomy. The conclusion we have come to is that Simpson is so scared at the sight of Goodkey that he wouldn't say "boo" if O. K. G. should jump down his throat.

At last accounts Simpson's hand had not been returned to him.

* * * *

Mr. Bloomer accuses me of being unfair. If, instead of giving detailed figures for Mr. Johnson's administration only, he had given similar details for the administrations of Messrs. Jones and Lawson, I think he would have demonstrated the great extravagance of the Johnson regimé. He might also have stated that Columbia Union had a considerably larger membership under Johnson than under either Jones or Lawson. His obvious intention would not thus have been served, however. He was simply "electioneering" for the great and only, and a little dust thrown into the eyes of the voters by the simple expedient of juggling with the facts so as to make black appear white and vice versa, was perhaps the only recourse left for a man of his caliber.

Again, it is manifestly idle for Mr. Bloomer or anyone else to assume that the president of the Union has no influence on legislation or on the conduct of officers under him. He is ex-officio a member of all committees, and if he is a capable man he will see that nothing inimical to the welfare of the Union is done by any officer or reported from any committee. The president of an organization is respected according to the ability and intelligence he displays in the performance of his duties. Though he is "compelled to submit all motions," his advice should and does have much weight when motions are put to a vote. If we are to believe Mr. Bloomer's argument, all a president has to do is to sit on the stage with the gavel in his hand, put motions as they are offered, and for the rest, pose as a figurehead. I will do Mr. Johnson the justice to say that he is not the man in this respect that Bloomer has pictured him. We may be assured that everything done while he was president had either the stamp of his approval or was allowed to transpire in passive acquiescence.

But Mr. Bloomer didn't care what he said in his last deliverance before election. He had the last word, and despite his manifest injustice, the last word will always influence some one.

His personal illusions simply show the channel in which his mind runs. The only cause for surprise is that a person of ordinary intelligence would stoop to such forms of expression.

Modest Goodkey.

The parting handshakes were touching ones.

The sting of defeat is bad enough, but just think of being cartooned by Weidman.

"Sonny" Gunn may tickle Kreiter some, but the job of reading clerk would make of him "Sunny Jim."

Machinist Frank A. Vinton returned to work on Monday after a ten days' absence on account of illness.

Never mind, boys, the ex-would-be delegates association is larger than the ex-Delegates Association, anyhow.

Having abundant confidence in one's self is a nice thing, but it doesn't follow that the membership at large think the same way.

B. L. Stidham, of machine No. 1, this Division, is on leave. Aside from his regular leave he has secured enough days without pay so that his vacation will cover something like ninety days.

C. J. Sheriff, Merg 34, contemplates a trip to the Pacific coast during the summer. Mr. Sheriff will take his leave during the months of June and July and utilize that time for the purpose.

A good-sized attendance greeted the ladies of theWoman's Auxiliary at their entertainment on Monday evening. The men folks were not as numerous as should have been—possibly due to Pard Bloomer's statement that the ladies desired to be let alone in their affairs.

The Second Division correspondent (who is not Hubert Newsom) says he is still of the opinion that Specification matter cannot be set cheaply on a Mergenthaler machine unless the present Specification style is changed. Probably another case of where the wish is father to the thought.

On almost every frame and machine in this Division on Tuesday morning could be found unused tickets for the entertainment given by the Woman's Auxiliary on Monday evening. These tickets had been purchased by the men simply to assist the ladies in their laudable work. Men are not such bad things after all, are they Pard?

Bert V. Wolfe, of this Division, at present on the night force, was the winner of a prize in the recent bowling tournament. Mr. Wolfe made the highest individual score on the Sixth Division team, E. M. Nevils being a close second. In twelve games, Mr. Wolfe averaged 166.10, while in fifteen games Mr. Nevils made an average of 156.11.

Among those who entertained the audience at the Woman's Auxiliary entertainment on Monday evening was Leo L. Rullman, bank man in the Fourth Division. Mr. Rullman confined himself entirely to sleight-of-hand work, at which he is an exceptionally clever artist, and furnished one of the most interesting numbers on the program.

One year ago the use of Columbia Typographical Union's name was requested by some individuals who wished to publish a campaign blue book. Notwithstanding the fact of the Union's refusal to allow its name to be so used, the publication appeared bearing Columbia's name. The same performance has been repeated again this year. This is a matter that should be given some attention at the next meeting of the Union.

W. J. Dow, assistant on the Record, who recently returned from Pierce City, Mo., where he had been to attend the funeral of his father, has again returned to that place. Mr. Dow will be compelled to remain away until at least October looking after his late father's business affairs, with a possibility of his not returning. His many friends in the G. P. O., and especially this Division, trust that by the time the Autumn leaves fall he will be able to return.

By legislative enactment organ-grinders in Nebraska, under penalty of a heavy fine, are prohibited from working their monkeys more than eight hours a day. We are not advised as to whether the law applies to other industries of the State, but anyhow we of Washington are glad for the monkeys of Nebraska.

D. M. Parry, the acknowledged I Am of the "divinely appointed," is out in a fervid proclamation against Government ownership or the curtailment in any way of the right of ownership of the individual. The socialist propaganda would profit by keeping Mr. Parry on the road with assurances of continuous engagement.

Those of us who are in the enjoyment of the eight-hour day are interested in the reports received by the official organ from various sections of the country which indicate that the movement for shorter hours is meeting with less opposition by employers than many had feared. The fund being raised to carry forward the work is probably regarded as convincing proof of a determination to win.

The propriety of accepting the Rockefeller donation to the foreign Missions fund is still a theme for pulpit discussion. The charge of "taint" still remains, in the opinion of those who are in no particular danger of receiving a like favor, while on the other hand the fund has been sanctified by such as make their sermons to fit parishioners who hold that the end justifies the means and that nothing is so mean that it may not be justified.

***

There was a lively battle of the ballots with four candidates for tellers in the Specification Chapel. A strange coincidence or the hyphenating of names by Huntsberry contributed to the election of Webster-Davis, or "Web. Davis," for short, with Davis in the lead. It is strange indeed how trifling a thing will sometimes turn the tide of battle or how victory may be snatched from defeat by a circumstance which in itself would seem so trivial. There is something in a name, after all.

Ex-Delegates Association.

President Jenkins, of the Ex-Delegates Association of Columbia Typographical Union, appointed a committee to report suitable resolutions on the death of E. W. Patton. The committee reported the following:

Whereas it has pleased an All Wise Providence to take from our midst Ebenezer W. Patton, a member of this Association, and one whose activity in the organization has been evidenced in the past by duties well performed; and

Whereas recognizing his loyalty to this organization from its inception and his desire to see it accomplish its mission among members of the International Typographical Union; therefore be it

Resolved, That in the death of Ebenezer W. Patton this Association has lost a faithful and efficient worker in the cause of Unionism and the spreading of good fellowship among members of the Association; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the relatives of the deceased and a copy furnished THE TRADES UNIONIST and The Typographical Journal for publication.

THE MILLWORKERS STRIKE.

Some months ago Mill Workers, No. 1103, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, drew up a new contract to be presented to their employers, presenting this first to the Joint District Council of Carpenters for their approval.

After the Council had carefully gone over the contract and eliminated portions that they thought would be objectionable to the employers, it was returned to the Mill Workers for them to present. This they did, but were informed by their employers that they would have none of it, and that they would run their business on the "Open Shop" principle.

The Mill Workers then submitted the reply to the Joint District Council of Carpenters, whereupon the Council appointed a committee to confer with the Lumbermen's League.

After some delay they secured an interview, and after much persistency, finally learned that that portion of the contract that called for the label on some parts of their finished product was the "bone of contention."

As the League stated that the slight increase in wages asked for was of no consequence the committee decided to withdraw that portion referring to the label. This they did, without consultation with the Mill Workers, feeling sure that the Mill Workers, for the sake of harmony, would agree to it, which they did. After eliminating the objectionable part the Lumber League again refused ,declaring for "Open Shop." Having no other alternative, the strike was declared.

The following employers employing mill workers agreed to the new scale, and continued their men to work: Bergman Mfg. Co., W. B. Moses & Son, Wuerdeman & Co., C. E. Finch, Fred Degges, Richard Bankmann, and Clark & Davenport.

The following firms would not pay the scale and the men are on strike: W. H. Dyer, Thos. W. Smith, Martin Wiegand, Joseph L. Crupper, Barber & Ross, Thos R. Riley, Lee Herrell & Bro., and Eisinger Bros.

The following firms agreed to pay and started, but "pressure" being brought to bear by the Lumber League (stop or no lumber), they closed: Washington Woodworking Co., George M. Barker, and R. A. Thomasson & Bro.

PAPERHANGERS STRIKE(?)

Inasmuch as there are but four firms yet resisting the new wage scale of this craft, and practically all of the members are working, it is likely that in a few days this strike(?) will be declared off, and other means employed to persuade these four firms to be just with their workmen.

The paperhangers have had the full support of the painters in their struggle, of which organization they are a part.

The Council held their regular meeting in Costello's Hall, Tuesday evening. No difficulties existing with any of its affiliated trades the business was routine

A committee representing Horseshoers Local No. 17, which Union has been on strike since May 1, appeared before them and after explaining the requests they had made to the Master Horseshoers, and the treatment they had received, asked for the moral support of the Council. By unanimous vote of the Council it was decided to give the Horsehshoers their moral support and the delegates instructed to place the matter before their respective Locals, asking for their financial support should it be so desired.

An Enjoyable Occasion

The smoker given by the G. P. O. Bowling League took place last Saturday evening at the residence of Mr. Garner.

The menu consisted of Little Neck clams, chicken and crab salads, clam chowder, all kinds of sandwiches, cigars, Roman punch and other liquids.

After the menu had been digested and cigars had been lighted Toastmaster Whitehead called the assembly together, and in a very appropriate speech congratulated the League on its successful ending and then presented the Third Division, the champions of the League with the beautiful cup donated by THE TRADES UNIONIST.

Mr. Garner, manager of the champions, accepted the cup on behalf of the champions, and in a very witty speech told about the "boy wonder" and the other freaks of his Division.

The other prizes were also presented.

Chairman Davidson, of the First Division, sang "Love's Sweet Song" and responded to an encore with "Casey at the Bat."

Miss Garner, accompanied by Mr. McCarthy, played a violin and piano solo.

Mr. Crump recited an original poem very appropriate to the occasion.

The smoker came to an end at a very seasonable hour, and everybody went away with the determination of making bowling a red letter in the history of the G. P. O.

Among those present were: Messrs. Childress, Sherman, Saltzman, McAloon and McCarthy, winners of the cup, Auracher, McMilian, Ring, Lawson, Crump, Richards, Schinnerer, Nachman, Holt, O'Connell, McFadden, Garner, Whitehead, Julian, Nevils, Davidson, Burchfield, Bradley, Soult, Frye, T. L. McEneany, W. McEneany, Knoble, and Foreman Lanahan, of Engine Co. No. 13.

The Horseshoers Strike.

Local No. 17 desires to notify its friends that they have not—as has been stated by the Master Horseshoers—asked for "unreasonable conditions," but for $3.50 a day and 50 cents an hour for overtime—not $4.00 a day, 75 cents an hour for overtime and one-half day on Saturday, which the Master Horseshoers placed as their unreasonable demands before Local No. 9 of Baltimore in their efforts to have Baltimore men come over and act as "strike-breakers."

AROUND THE PRINTERIES

The Washington Post.

Are you happy, now it's over?

Did you take the children to the circus?

"Bill" Knowles is still looking for "Pete."

How many of you have said "I told you so?"

John Ackerly, well known in the middle West, is a late arrival on The Times.

Herbert Meehan came in last week from Pittsburg and is subbing on The Post.

Joe King Marks, at one time of The Post ad force, lately of Brooklyn, is back in town and, I am told, is to go on The Star.

M. E. Towers took the rest cure at Roanoke, Va., last week. If he can enjoy a vacation as well as he can print, I know he had the time of his life.

J. W. McFarland (Shorty) returned last Saturday from a visit to "his wife's people" down in Virginia. He was on the farm one week and came back looking the part.

M. E. Mehrten left last week for a visit to his home in Pennsylvania. While away he will have a look at Steubenville, Ohio, to see if the natives are still yearning for that vaudeville house he promised them about a year ago.

E. B. Downing, for the past three years head adman on the Virginian-Pilot, Norfolk, Va., broke in on The Post last week. He says Ben Thorpe is in his glory down on Hampton Roads where fishing is always good. When "Dope" is not fishing he prints on Kiser's labor paper.

Warner Denham has about completed arrangements for a summer trip to the Adirondack mountains. The "Duke" has been feeling poorly for the past year and the trip is to be made for rest and recuperation. His headquarters will be at Saranac Lake from June 1 until the latter part of August.

Don Murray was a caller last week. He still wears that "smile that won't come off." J. Herbert Broderick also was in to see us. I tried my persuasion powers on Brod., but could not convince him that he should help me supply the news from "down town". He threatens to "lick" me every time I broach the subject, consequently I shall have to drop the subject—or drop J. Herbert.

Even prosperous times have their drawbacks. These days on The Post are so strenuous most of us do not have time to enjoy the fruits of our labors. Plutocrats like Towers, McFarland, Denham, and Mehrten can skip out when they feel the need of recreation, but us ordinary mortals must keep up the merry grind; and then it would not do to give the festive sub. too much of a show—he might prove himself the better man and separate some of us from the pay roll.

Labor Day Committee Makes a Final Report Showing a Balance.

CHICAGO STRIKERS VOTED $100

Committee on Revision of "We Do Not Patronize List" Make Partial Report—Home Ice Co. and Chevy Chase Railway Taken From the List—Unions Indorse Action in Artz and Richards Cases.

The regular meeting of the Central Labor Union was called to order at 8:10 o'clock Monday evening by President Dickman.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

The special order of business being the report of the auditors on the account of the Labor Day Committee, that matter was taken up. The committee made an extended report, showing in detail the receipts and expenditures from all sources, and the report was adopted.

On motion, the matter of final settlement with one of the members of the Labor Day Committee was laid over until such time as a final report was made by the party in question.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Chicago Federation of Labor, protesting against effort to send United States troops to Chicago during Teamsters strike. Referred to Legislative Committee.

From Battle Creek Breakfast Food Co., makers of Egg-O-See, calling attention to it being a fair product. Referred to Allied Label League.

From Chicago Federation of Labor, asking for aid in behalf of the Teamsters strike in that city. Appropriation of $100 was made.

From Hod Carriers Union, No. 21, inclosing letters from Samuel J. Prescott & Co. and Ambrose B. Stannard, relative to paying the scale for hod carriers and building laborers.

Communications were received from the following Unions, indorsing action of the central body in declaring Samuel Artz, plumber, and E. N. Richards, paper hanger, unfair:

Cigar Makers, No. 110: Carpet Mechanics, No. 1; Engineers, No. 99; Hoisting Engineers, No. 77; Painters, No. 368; Sheet Metal Workers, No. 102; Electrical Workers, No. 148; Bakers Union, No. 118.

CALL OF UNIONS.

Hod Carriers: Reported that they had submitted the new agreement to employers and asked that two communications received be spread upon the minutes.

Musicians: Asked that Chevy Chase Circle Railroad be taken from the unfair list. Granted.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Special Committee on Revision of "We Do Not Patronize List" made a report, with the following recommendations: That Corbin Thompson, Home Ice Co., Chevy Chase Railway, and E. Gundesheimer be taken from the list. Objection be made to the taking of Corbin Thompson and E. Gundesheimer from list, the two firms remained, and the recommendation in thecase of Home Ice Co. and Chevy Chase Railway were concurred in.

NAVY YARD ITEMS.

Columbia Lodge, No. 174, I. A. of M., held no meeting Wednesday evening, the Lodge graciously offering its Lodge Room to Naval Lodge to be used as a banquet hall during its festivities.

Bro. Ike Curran, who for several years has been one of the heavy weights in Columbia Lodge, No. 174, has tendered his resignation. Bro. Curran has accepted a position with a manufacturing firm in Illinois, whose specialty is the production of mining machinery. The best wishes of the Lodge goes along with Ike.

Twining City was out in full dress on Friday night last to celebrate the silver wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Robinson. Every one in East Washington knows the genial civil superintendent of the Gun Shops and his worthy spouse.

Fully two hundred people gathered to pay their respects to the happy couple, among which were several Naval officers and all the supervising force of the Yard.

Everything had been provided for the occasion to make it a memorable one. The presents were both numerous and valuable, among which I noticed a large punch bowl of sterling silver presented by the supervising force in the Yard.

Everybody was happy; everybody enjoyed themselves. The only misfortune of the evening was that of Bro. Patsy Brown, who had an attack of heat prostration; otherwise the affair was a grand success and everyone left, unanimously agreeing that Charley and his worthy wife were the best two people in the city beyond the bridge.

Bro. James Buckley, special mechanic in charge of 5-inch gun carriage work, while inspecting the testing of a large cylinder by hydraulic pressure, was seriously injured one day this week. He was conveyed to Providence Hospital, where he was treated for a fracture of the skull. How he escaped immediate death is a mystery, as by the breaking of a large bolt with 1,500 pounds pressure striking him in the forehead is something unexplainable. And yet it is so, He will survive, although he will be minus of a part of his skull. Everyone in the Yard expresses their sympathy for him, which is proof that Jim is not only a good fellow but a good Union man also. How about that liability act, Legislative Committee.

A Plea for Justice.

"The Negro's anatomy is constituted only of three ingredients, viz: Deceit, Treachery, and Ingratitude."—Tim Tickle in TRADES UNIONIST, May 11.

Tim (by no manner of means timorous) bravely and boldly declares that he "has never been too cowardly to express the above opinion." Bravo!

While it is, alas, but too true that more than a few of the race are deceitful, treacherous, and ungrateful, is it fair, honest, or truthful to say that they are all so constituted? Many white men have been known to "rat," lie, cheat, steal, beat and murder. According to "Tickle's" mode of reasoning all white men (including himself, who is presumed to be white) are "rats," liars, theives, beats, and murderers. That none of the colored members of Typographical Union, No. 101, are constituted "only of the three ingredients named by "Tim" is a fact so patent to those with whom they are professionally associated that the statement needs no refutation.

"Tim" ought really to feel "tickled" that the Negro meets his expectation in the lack of gratitude to the race that for 200 years or more robbed him of the result of his labor and is now robbing him of his rights as a citizen.

Give the Negro an equal chance in the industrial life by opening the doors of all unions to him, and then we may in the future be the better able to judge as to whether, on the whole, there is anything more in his make-up than "deceit, treachery, and ingratitude."

Ladies' Dining Room. R. A. Driscoll. N. Cap. and G. Crabs and Clams.

A Line from Lawson.

BOSTON, May 11, 1905.

MR. EDITOR: Twelve months ago I made to the American people in the "Foreword" of my story, "Frenzied Finance," a promise to expose the operations of the most nefarious and destructive band of brigands this or any other country has been oppressed with.

The "System" met my promises with ridicule, and their hirelings from one end of the land to the other chorused, "He will never dare tell!"

In the June number of Everbody's Magazine, published on the 20th of May, I tell the first great Crime of Amalgamated in a double chapter of 24,000 words. I give in a brick-and-mortar style the details of this act by which the American people were robbed of $36,000,000 through the agency of the biggest national bank in America, the National City ("Standard Oil") Bank of New York.

I feel—and I think you will agree with me when you have read what I tell—that it is of vital importance to the whole American people that they—every man, woman, and child—know the facts I expose.

So far I have given a year of my time and some $600,000 of my money to get my message to the American people, and I would ask if, because of this fact and the further one that I seek nothing in return for my work (for I have nothing to sell and no office or other thing to ask of the American people), you cannot see it in the light of a public duty to do all in your power to get the June chapter of my story to the people of your community. If so, I leave to your good judgment the way and the means to do so.

On application of F. A. Allison to be placed on superanuated list, recommend favorable action. Agreed to.

Further time was asked in case of Mrs. Carrie Jacobs, which was granted.

Bills amounting to $27.75 were read and ordered paid.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From I. T. U. Secretary Bramwood, stating condition on which No. 101 could maintain a room at the Union Printers' Home. Placed on file.

From Central Labor Union, announcing that Samuel Artz, plumber, and E. N. Richards, paper hanger, had been placed on the unfair list. Referred to Grievance Committee.

From Central Labor Union, Indianapolis, Ind., asking support in fight against Kahn Tailoring Co. of that city. Referred to Grievance Committee.

The Business Committee submitted a report on an appeal from Judd & Detweiler Chapel on a question of measurement of blank. The committee report was concurred in.

The Relief Committee reported a sufficient amount on hand for future work.

Special Committee on Government Publications reported progress.

The Down Town Scale Committee reported that they had failed to secure a conference with the Newspaper Publisher's Association. The committee was continued.

Mr. Dickman, from Central Labor Union delegates, made an extended report, and recommended that delegates to the Central Labor Union from this Union be required to turn in their attendance cards at completion of each quarter to the Secretary of the Union. Agreed to.

The Board of Trustees reported that the proposal for a loan of $1,000 to the Union Outfitters to Men Co. was withdrawn before action could be had on it on the instance of President H. W. Sherman, of the Union Outfitters to Men Co.

The Board also reported the adoption of a rule setting aside $1,500 for a reserve fund to be taken from the receipts of the Temple, and that when an accumulation of $1,500 more be received from rentals that $500 be added to such fund.

The Board also presented a letter from a member of the Union relative to purchasing property in the rear of the Temple on Washington street. On motion, the officers of the Union were directed to submit the matter to a referendum vote to be taken on Wednesday preceding the next meeting.

The President reported six deaths since last meeting also; that T. M. Ring had been appointed delegate to the Central Labor Union, vice E. W. Patton, deceased.

The President then announced the official vote for officers and delegates in the recent election.

The Secretary reported the total amount collected for aid of Western Federation of Miners at $89.75.

The President read a notice of contest of Joseph E. Goodkey, charging fraud in the recent election, and asking for a recount under Section 18, Article II, By-Laws.

The President also read a communication from Frank D. Smith deprecating the attempt for a recount, stating that he had entire confidence in the election boards during the recent election.

On the petition of Mr. Goodkey, general discussion ensued, a motion to lay on the table intervening, followed by points of order, whereupon the President put the question to the Union, "Shall the chair appoint the committee?" the vote resulting—ayes, 110; nays, 31.

Mr. Goodkey gave notice of appeal to I. T. U.

Mr. Everett gave notice of proposed amendment defining the intent of Section 18 of the By-Laws.

Mr. Hussey also gave notice of an amendment requiring contestants to give a bond to cover the cost of contest.

Mr. Steele offered the following resolution, which was adopted:

Resolved, That the Board of Trustees, from this date, be instructed and empowered to tender the use of the main hall of the Temple to the friends of deceased members for the conduct of the burial services, when so desired, and the hall is available.

The Union then adjourned.

Death of Albert K. Mundheim.

On Friday night last the news was received at the Government Printing Office that Albert K. Munheim, assistant foreman of the Sixth (Record) Division, had dropped dead in New York, where he had gone to see off some friends who were sailing for Europe. He was alone at the moment of his death, which occurred at the New York end of the Brooklyn bridge. Sufficient was found on his person to identify him, and his friends here were communicated with, and the body was sent here, arriving Sunday afternoon.

The funeral was at 10 o'clock on Monday, at his late residence, corner of Seventh and M streets northwest, the interment being at the cemetery of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, south of Anacostia. The burial office was performed by Rabbis Stern and Simon, in the presence of a large number of family friends and the late associates of deceased. The pallbearers were John R. Berg, William N. Brockwell, Harry B. Hickman, and A. F. Bloomer, representing Columbia Union, and two members of the Hebrew Society of the Sons of Judah.

Mr. Mundheim served his apprenticeship in the office of the National Republican, of this city, in the late seventies, and was about 45 years old. The greater portion of his life was spent in the employ of the Government, but at one time he worked in a West Virginia city and later in the office of the Baltimore Sun. He was employed for a number of years in various capacities in the Treasury Branch of the Government Printing Office and at the death of Capt. Aven Pearson, some months ago, he was transferred to the main office and the position which he filled at his death. He was a member of the National Union, G. P. O. Council, and of various other societies.

He leaves a devoted wife, for some months an invalid, having recently undergone a severe surgical operation, and five children—four sons and a daughter, three of the sons being well grown. In his personal relations with his associates Mr. Mundheim was very popular, having many loyal friends made by a lifetime of geniality and good-heartedness.

JUST EVERY DAY LIFE.

Frank Smith will follow the lead of a number of distinguished unionists, who, falling outside the breastworks in one contest, were elected the following year. Among others in this list are, Messrs. Oyster, Ross, O'Donnell, Ring, Steele, and Knapp.

H. O. Carr, in attendance at the annual convention of chiefs of police, now in session in this city, is an old-time member of the International Union, and followed printing many moons before he began the maintenance of law and order in Grand Rapids, Mich.

Thomas L. Jones, late in charge of the music at the Luther Memorial Church, now directs the song service of the Metropolitan Presbyterian Church, and Sunday School, at a remunerative compensation.

The governor, secretary of State and another State officer constitute the State Printing Board of Indiana. This body selects a clerk, whose duties conform to that of State Printer. Harry Slough, of the Indianapolis Morning Star, has just been selected to fill that position. This is the same position for many years held by Charles Bookwalter, late mayor of Indianapolis.

Louis P. Head, of Paducah (Ky.) Union, No. 134, who has been nominated for representative in his district, anticipates being placed at the head of the printing committee of the legislature.

The Progressive Printer, St. Louis, for May, contains the following:

Every now and then some idle country editor takes a long range shot at Uncle Sam's print shop, setting up a howl at the waste of money there. Most of these fellows have short-carrying guns and when they get within the range of seeing and knowing, they won't want that game.

Why, what is the matter with the Government Printing Office? Of course it isn't a heavenly institution, but is of the earth earthy, through its day labor on Congressional speeches and all such illustrious documents which nobody but the deliverers and their little home circles read, and in other forced usages.

The complaint is that there are too many employes kept on the pay-roll; too much white paper bought, and no economy practiced any where in Uncle Sam's printery as there is in individual plants.

Well, now, let's see. This is a great nation of the first-class, with a large population that is growing all the time. Everything in the make-up which puts it in the first class is or should be of the modern kind and in proportion to our maximum tests, and not only sufficient for possible makeshifts. Our national printing office has very often to meet an immense tax on its very highest capacity in a great volume of necessary product of a meritorious character and that is the standard to which the printing office of such a Government as ours must be kept and run. Why be niggardly or little in this rich land to save a shave on hundreds of millions in store. If employes were laid off to the point of minimum need they would be thrown on the streets, perhaps out of work, and when the rush came could not be had and then the howlers would say: "Well, can't this Government afford to hire men enough to get out work on time?" Especially if the need of the maximum force delayed some public enterprise. Why, even in individual printing plants forces of good men are kept up to a maximum of the business they do, why not Uncle Sam? Gentlemen, the men there know best and are doing it.

Card of Thanks.

To the members of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101: I desire to express my sincere thanks for the support tendered me in the late election for delegate to the I. T. U.

PHILIP S. STEELE.

Through THE TRADES UNIONIST, I wish to thank the members of Columbia Union who so loyally supported me in the recent campaign, and to say that far from being discouraged I intend to make another attempt with renewed hope of success.

TERESA MCDONALD.

I hereby tender my sincere thanks to the members of Columbia Union for the vote given me for delegate at the recent election. For the gallant support of my friends, whose zeal and steadfastness were strengthened by the bitter personal fight against me, I am deeply grateful.

JOE M. JOHNSON.

The Negro as a Unionist.

An article on the Negro as a strike-breaker appeared in the columns of this paper recently from our Navy Yard correspondent that does not meet with the views of the editor.

It is a well-known fact that the policy of this paper has been to allow full and free discussion, as far as the space in the paper will admit, of any question of interest to the wage-earner. But the article in question goes too far in general condemnation of the Negro.

In the writer's experience of over twenty years in the ranks of organized labor he is forced to admit that wherever the Negro was organized and given proper support he made the best of Union men, the whole trouble in his case being his practical isolation on account of color.

The doctrine of hate should find no followers in the ranks of organized labor. When we look at the condition of the Negro of to-day and compare it with the condition he was forced to meet less than a half century ago we must admit that he has made progress.

The curse of the whole Negro question has been the political life of the country, where party strife in the endeavor to secure control in State and National politics made the Negro a factor to be reckoned with.

There are bad and vicious black men just as there are bad and vicious white men, but it is wrong to cast discredit on the whole race for the acts of a few.

Coming down to the question of strike breaking, we have many white men following that nefarious occupation, but we do not visit condemnation on the whole race for their acts. From the same standpoint of reasoning neither should we visit condemnation on the Negro for his seeming desire to oust the white man, when we know many lines of employment that he is not given a chance to prove his worth because the race question is paramount above fair dealing and justice.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

Analyzing the down town vote at the recent election develops some interesting figures, if I have not made any mathematical errors. I find that Joe Johnson got the largest vote of any of the candidates—more even than any one of the candidates for down town delegate—namely, 263, being 1 more than Mark Barnum received, 262. Of the G. P. O. candidates, Walter Smith came next with 215; Frank Smith had 197, closely followed by Philip Steele with 195. Charlie Buchanan copped out 146, while Joe Goodkey trailed away behind with 30. The vote was divided among the down town candidates as follows: Harry Knapp, 245; Miss McDonald, 146; Orton Pierce, 71—the total down town vote being 481, showing that 19 did not vote for any of the down town candidates. These figures are exclusive of the Weather Bureau, which occupies a rather anomalous position, being neither a branch of the Government Printing Office nor a "down town" office; but it had but 12 votes anyway. For vice-president Dexter Hussey had only 21 more votes than Billy Love among the down towners, while Love had but 74 votes more than Dexter in the G. P. O. The strength of each in the bailiwick of the other reminds T. Frank Hall of the campaign between Jim Kreiter and Bob Youngblood for the same office about ten years ago. "Those who knew Kreiter voted for Youngblood," said Hall, "and those who knew Youngblood voted for Kreiter; and as Kreiter was the later comer and was known by fewer people than Bob, he was elected." I think this deduction was founded on pure malice.

My poor friend Belcher was dissatisfied in last week's paper with everything I had said the week before. It's funny, but when you have a grouch against a man there is nothing he can do that will please you. Belcher's favorite song—and he is really musical too—is "There'll Come a Time Some Day."

* * * *

I am never the sort to rush in and claim the credit, but I think it was Mr. Donath and I who fixed the business for Phil Steele.

* * * *

When Frank Stretton ran for delegate, a couple of years ago, Mark Barnum had a longing to get into the game. "You run for delegate and you'll be at the tail when the votes are counted," said Stretton. This or something else so frightened Mark that he did not run, and Stretton ran and attained to that exalted position himself. But now, when Mark did run, he comes out at the head of the ticket, which shows that Stretton was a poor guesser both ways. By the way, I hear that Stretton is reading proof on the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, but I do not vouch for the truth of the report.

* * * *

I hear that Billy ("Bugs") Watson and Spike Leonard went to Chicago the other day.

* * * *

Harvey O. Carr, Chief of Police of Grand Rapids, Mich., Secretary-Treasurer of the Association of Chiefs of Police, and in attendance on the convention held in this city this week, is a printer and was a delegate to the I. T. U convention held in New York in 1885 and a visitor at that in Pittsburg in 1886. He has occupied his present position about fifteen years and has been Secretary-Treasurer of the Association ever since its organization, with a prospect of remaining as such as long as he lives. He is a capable officer, as he was a good printer, and is as staunch a union man as ever. Time has made little change in his appearance, and he enjoys a backcapping session with printers as well as of old.

"It is a dirty bird that fouls its own nest." Belcher and Bodenhamer, two of the election board of the Third Division, signed Joe Goodkey's demand for a recount on the ground that there had been fraud.

* * * *

From the San Francisco Call of May 16 I learn of the death of Adrian M. Jones, at Waldeck Hospital, San Francisco, on May 14, probably from Bright's disease, with which he has long been a sufferer. Mr. Jones originally belonged in this city, but had been for over twenty years away from it. He was Corresponding Secretary of Columbia Union in 1880-'82. In 1887 he represented Kansas City Union at the I. T. U. convention at Buffalo. He leaves two sons, both of whom live in California.

* * * *

The farcical demand of Joseph E. Goodkey for vindication by a recount of the votes for delegate furnished the topic for a lengthy discussion at the Union last Sunday. Of course it is well understood that Goodkey was by no means the consideration, the only object being to endeavor to show by the recount that Frank D. Smith had received more votes than Joe M. Johnson instead of 13 fewer, as shown by the count of the various tellers, there having been considerable money wagered that Johnson would be defeated. That Mr. Smith was no party to the scheme is shown by the following, which he caused to be generally circulated among the membership on Saturday:

To the Members of the Various Chapels:

I take this method of informing the members of this Union that I in no way sanction the proposed recount of the ballots cast at the recent election, as I have the utmost confidence in the judges and tellers of election in the several chapels in the Union. I believe they were, without exception, careful and painstaking in their duties, and that the returns made by them were correct. Holding these views, I deprecate any movement that would tend to question the result as announced.

Fraternally,
FRANK D. SMITH.

Notwithstanding the refusal of Mr. Smith to countenance the demand for a recount, of the result of which it was proposed to make him the beneficiary, if possible to do so (in continuance of the desperate efforts to prevent Mr. Johnson from being a delegate that had been made from the time when he announced himself, with which the membership is familiar), those most interested in that effort fought tooth and nail to carry out the contest provision of the by-laws, which, of course, was only intended to apply to a contestant who could hope to be seated. But the Union voted, by an overwhelming majority, not to entertain the demand for a recount, whereupon Mr. Goodkey gave notice of an appeal to the I. T. U. and that he would apply to the United States court for a writ of mandamus to compel a recount to show that he received more than 159 votes, one-fifth of the vote cast for the delegate-elect who received the smallest plurality. He did not claim to be elected, but did claim that he had received more votes than the tellers credited him with. There is not a justice of the peace who would not laugh him out of court. But there are undoubtedly lawyers who will encourage him to proceed.

The position which Frank D. Smith has taken, while it is what was expected of a man of his probity, integrity, and sense of fairness, has earned for him the admiration of all except those interested in the success of the scheme to defeat a man honestly elected and to seat one who recognizes that he was not.

Mr. Johnson was fairly elected a delegate to Toronto, after one of the hardest fought campaigns ever known, and when every honest and dishonest thing possible was done in the effort to prevent that result, and he will serve in that capacity despite all the machinations that his enemies may devise. And it is possible that some may yet be sorry for the part which they have taken in the endeavor to deprive him of his well-earned victory.

The Star the other day had an article on District of Columbia manufactures, showing a capital of $20,000,000, of which nearly $17,000,000 is invested in bakeries, breweries, and printing. With bread, beer, and a newspaper, who cannot be happy?

Have you ever taken the trouble to watch the maneuvers of the "smooth" union orator? He rarely takes the floor until the temper of the union has manifested itself, unless he is under some special obligation to do so. In the former case, with well-rounded sentences he voices the popular feeling and is rewarded with rounds of applause as he sits down and enjoys the general admiration. In the second case he is eminently conciliatory, speaks largely of justice and right, is loaded to the guards with respect for those whom he fears he may be antagonizing, watches anxiously for signs that his audience is with him, dwells on his certainty that neither side meditates any ill, backs and fills a little, still keeps an alert lookout for signs of approval, and finally sits down without having injured his cause or helped that of the opposition. But he is really strong and shines only when he is sure that he has his audience with him, if he is at liberty to speak on the popular side. I greatly enjoy the "smooth" orator.

There will be a meeting of G. P. O. Council, National Union, next Saturday evening, at Pythian Temple, 1012 Ninth street northwest (third floor back), with elevator attached, at which there will be an informal entertainment, refreshments, and cigars. Now, don't say you didn't know anything about it. The annual excursion of this Council to River View will be on June 7. Keep that in your mind also.

On Thursday evening of last week, at 7:30 o'clock, Mrs. Margaret J. Spencer, wife of Charles Spencer, of the Navy Department Division of the Government Printing Office, was stricken with paralysis and died instantly. She had had a stroke several years before, from which she had almost recovered. The funeral was at 7:30 p. m. on Friday evening, and at its conclusion the sad journey to Pottsville, Pa., her former home, was begun, the interment being there. Mr. and Mrs. Spencer came to this city about thirty years ago and have lived here almost ever since, Mr. Spencer being nearly all the time in Government employ, a part of the time as a clerk in the War Department. He was at one time in business at Mahanoy, but Pottsville was the family home. Mrs. Spencer was greatly loved by her many friends. She was much interested in church work and was always ready to give her help to those in need of the assistance which a womanly woman only can render.

The Post Chapel has a happy faculty of doing the right thing at the right time in connection with elections, and the splendid vote it gave to Joe Johnson last week was but one instance. I am glad to see "Little Willey" again doing the literary work of that Chapel for THE TRADES UNIONIST, for he does it well and is always interesting. I should like to see J. Herbert Broderick again take his pen in hand for the Star folks, as well as some one from the Times.

* * * *

Within ten years the proportion of non-union men to union men will be about the proportion of ex-convicts to honest men, and the non-unionists will have about the same standing in the public estimation that ex-convicts have.

* * * *

Last week I associated the names of Joe Goodkey and "Funny" Roberts in a request for the services of a statesman—as not being the kind wanted—and Mr. Roberts assured me at the Union meeting last Sunday that he was offended. I believe that he is entitled to an apology for the association of names and I hope that he will consider this as one. But I am entitled to make a statement in my own behalf. Mr. Roberts occupies such a position in the affections of the union that when he arises to speak it is the signal for all the usual devices of assemblages to indicate their lack of desire to hear a speaker—hoots, yells, cat-calls, and general hubbub prevail. Occasionally he offers a proposition as unassailable as the Ten Commandments, makes his spread-eagle, turns the union into a bedlam, and his measure, which the union could only turn down by stultifying itself, goes through, whereat he is vastly encouraged. I thought he understood his position so well as to stand a little raillery from me, after all that he has stood from the union; as he did not, I apologize to him. But I feel under equal obligations to apologize to Mr. Goodkey, and I do so with equal relish.

* * * *

Miss McDonald took her defeat gracefully, as such a staunch unionist should, and has paved the way to success another year if she wishes to run. By the way, a retrospective glance shows that there is no better capital for a candidate than a previous defeat after a good run. Offhand I can think of Knapp, Graff, Oyster, Steele, Ring, Holmes, and—well, those are enough.

After a while we will vote in referendum whether we will extend the Temple, but I expect the proposition will be voted down by members who are not quite sure where it is located.

* * * *

The sudden death of my friend Albert K. Mundheim last week was a severe shock to me, coming as it did without the slightest warning. I had always thought of him as the picture of health, though since his death I am told that for several years he has suffered with an incurable disease. In 1877-79 he was an apprentice in an office of which I was assistant foreman and later foreman, and the strongest friendship has always existed between us. I found him peculiarly loyal in his friendships, and no task was too great nor any pains too onerous for him in the service of a friend. He was always good-natured, genial, and had an unusually happy disposition, and he bore with an astonishing cheerfulness more than the usual troubles that are the lot of mankind.

The following are the officers-elect of Boston Union for the ensuing year; President, David X. Coughlan; vice-president, George L. Young; Treasurer, Frank M. Flanagan; Secretary, Henry Sterling; Delegates to I. T. U., W. L. Crosman, and James F. Rhoades for the book and job branch, James P. Croft and Thomas A. Kane for the newspaper branch. There were a lot of other officers elected, but there are the most important ones.

The election of Shelby Smith as a delegate from Philadelphia looks good to me, for it will go a long way toward securing justice for Philadelphia Union at Toronto if he is given full swing and not bottled up by his colleagues.

GOSSIP FROM THE G. P. O.

First Division.

Did you read that piece of poetry on the bulletin board the other morning?

You will make no mistake if you read nothing but your copy during working hours.

Capt. George C. Harris, doorkeeper, is on leave. Thomas Peters, the assistant, is in charge.

Imposer Wetmore returned from his leave on Tuesday. Reports having had a good time.

W. D. Skeen has been detailed the past few weeks as a maker-up in Foreman Leavitt's busy corner.

Messrs. Sherman and Plummer are still on the sick list. Trust they may be speedily returned to office.

The late A. K. Mundheim, assistant foreman of the Sixth Division (day) was well known in this Division.

James H. Brodnax reported for work on Monday, and was heartily welcomed. Hope his recovery may prove permanent.

J. C. Lesher, maker-up, will enjoy his annual and well-earned leave during the next nineteen days. Jake is a popular young man.

Have you any unexpired leave? Would it not be advisable to apply for it, as we are up to the last "physical" month in this fiscal year.

L. P. Kenney, maker-up on the "Y" for some years past, has been transferred to the Sixth Division. Mr. Kenney is an excellent workman, and being thoroughly conversant with the work in the Sixth, we are glad to record this deserved recognition. Sorry to see you go.

Delegate-elect Steele has been warmly congratulated by "outside" friends during the week. We are all glad that he was vindicated in no uncertain manner.

A very liberal collection was taken up by Chairman Davidson for flowers for Decoration Day. This Chapel is mighty near unanimous on this question.

W. A. Brooks, helper in the office of Assistant Foreman of Printing, has been granted thirty days additional leave without pay. As a leave-taker W. A. is a success.

Since the new order has been established with regard to "pasting dupes" the postmaster is the busiest man in the Division. Of course, everybody is busy now and then; but to quote our distinguished friend Waller, Custodian of the Subway, the P. M. has no "skinch" any more.

Messrs. M. Barringer and C. W. Radley were selected by President Colton, of G. P. O. Council, No. 211, as members of the committee to attend the funeral of the late A. K. Mundheim. T. A. Bynum, of the Proof Room, and Charles E. Slentz, of the Sixth, constituted the full committee.

The wife of Charles Spencer, of the Navy Division, died very suddenly during the week. Mr. Spencer had been employed for many years in the main office. His friends were shocked to hear of the sudden passing away of this most excellent Christian woman. The bereaved husband has the sympathy of his hosts of friends. The interment took place at Pottsville, Pa.

The late Henry L. Davison was well known to many of the old employees. For a number of years he worked on the Surgeon-General's Catalogue, and subsequently assisted in setting "folio lines" for Maker-up Kemon, in the old Document Room. During the past ten or twelve years he had been employed in the Weather Bureau, and was on his way to office on Saturday morning when he was stricken. Mr. D. was a quiet, unobstrusive workman, and universally esteemed.

ROUGH WRITER.

Second Division.

Arthur Brown, who has been on leave of absence sixty days, has returned to the fold.

Silas Phelps has officiated as assistant foreman in the absence of Assistant Foreman Heslet.

The members of the G. P. O. Council of the National Union will, on June 7, have a good time at River View, and want all their friend to be with them.

Carrie M. Jacobs, an applicant for membership in the Union, is, I am told, the widow of Arthur Jacobs, of this Division, who died recently at Sibley Hospital.

Delegates-elect Steele, of the First, and Knapp, of the Times, have returned thanks in a note circulated through the room for the support given them by the Second in the recent election.

James H. Heslet, assistant foreman, has been away for a few days on a visit to Pennsylvania. Mr. Heslet is of Quaker origin, and his object was to attend a reunion of that distinguished body.

When I mentioned Mr. Schooler's exquisite photo. last week I omitted to say that he will enlarge it, thus greatly enhancing its attractiveness. In its present size the details are obscure, but the enlargement will make it look lifelike.

The genial Bill Brockwell came in with a couple of friends a few days ago. Bill was a Spess "comp." in the days when type was set by the piece, and later achieved distinction as chairman of that unique department. He is also famous as a story teller.

Why should the losers not be reimbursed for their expenses—that is, a fair and reasonable amount allowed. They get nothing but that kicked feeling for their effort, and it seems as though the Union might recompense them for time and money used in their vain-spent endeavors to get their fellow mortals to place them on the pedestal—but, then, reforms come slowly.

Our most distinguished writer adroitly shifted the criticism, minus the compliment, I paid him, to the shoulders of Mr. Belcher, where it gracefully rests. "The nameless one." has a name, and can prove it to you, but this is neither the time nor place. Nevertheless, he is not without appreciation of a sweet morsel, and "his wonderful command of language," etc., has not passed unnoticed.

The writer for this column will discontinue the correspondence at present, as his time is limited, and is otherwise encroached on. Before saying farewell he will take occasion to compliment the coterie of writers who constitute the staff of THE TRADES UNIONIST, and who, from pure love of the writer's art, devote their time and services to brightening a page with accounts of their fellow-workers' doings, wit, repartee—and, sometimes, mud-slinging.

The philosophic gentleman who manipulates a pen (and possibly a linotype) in Division No. 6, by the cleverly substituting "cheap" for "economical" makes it seem that I want to produce cheap work in the G. P. O. Far from it. But I do reassert, from practical knowledge of both the linotype and the Spess style that patent specifications as now edited cannot be composed on a machine that sets a solid bar of type. It is not impractical to make the style nearly follow lit. The specification copy has so been set, and there is nothing in common sense to obviate its so being set again. Still, practice supplants theory, and the argument should close with that statement.

Sixth Division.

Hereafter, barring previous arrangements for the use of the hall, a dead printer may be buried from Typographical Temple. A resolution to that effect was introduced on Sunday by Delegate-elect Philip S. Steele, and adopted by the Union. And thus another gem has been added to a crown made up of good deeds and resolutions in the interest of the printer man. The Temple was built for the use of the Union and its members, and nothing could be more appropriate than that the last obsequies to the dead member should be conducted under the roof which he had helped to build.

A notice appeared in the Washington Post last week, under an Alexandria date, stating that George Hayden (referring to our own George of this Division) and another gentleman while on a fishing trip had captured a live turtle weighing fifty-six pounds, and that on its being dissected was found to contain fifty-six large eggs. The item further said that later in the week the gentleman entertained a large party at a restaurant on the strand at which turtle soup and turtle eggs composed the evening's menu. Personally I don't think there is anybody in this Division who doubts that story.

The membership of Columbia Union will have an opportunity some time during the next month to vote upon the proposition of empowering the Board of Trustees to negotiate for the purchase of additional property in the rear of the present Temple. Aside from having it own office rooms and meeting hall it was stated that the present Temple is paying a two per cent. dividend on the money invested. But aside from that, even, the possession of such a building gives to the organization a standing with the business community which could not be had though it had double the amount invested lying idle in the banks. As an example to unions of a lesser magnitude it stands out as an iridescent star guiding them in the march of progress. Its one thing that has made us great. By all means let us not only build the old Temple on back, but extend the roof as high heavenward as the building laws of the District will permit.

Shortly after the close of the Union meeting last Sunday where the constitutional rights of defeated candidates had been so warmly discussed, Bill Brockwell (here's where I get in on Brocky's stories) told a story to a small coterie of friends. It was during the time when Grover Cleveland was Governor of New York that a very prominent gentleman and noted politician of Irish persuasion called upon the then Governor for the purposes of getting through some financial transaction that looked a little shady. The Honorable Grover could not see things that way, and the Irish gentleman tried hard to convert him to his way of thinking. At last the Governor became tired of the argument and declared that he would not only not sanction such a proposition, but that it was also against the constitution. The Irish gentleman looked at Grover and said: "Sure, Mr. Grover, but phwat the divil does the con-ste-tu-tion amount to among frinds?"

I was a little bit surprised last week on reading THE TRADES UNIONIST to find that not one of the numerous correspondents had put in a word of defense for the colored man whom "Tim Tickle" so ruthlessly attacked a week previous. Personally I do not wish the job, for I have never been introduced to the gentlemanly "Tim." But I do think his attack on the black man unjust. Because a few colored men have been found now and then to take the place of strikers is no sign that the House of Ham is falling. Long before the colored man was freed from bondage strikers found plenty of white men ready to take their places, and even to this day the colored men who take strikers places are led by white men of the Farley stripe. To heap abuse upon these poor, misguided creatures is a poor way to bring them to a realization of their folly. Organization is what the colored man needs, and whenever he learns that through organization his condition will be bettered, and whenever he is allowed by unions which now bar him from membership to work and receive the same protection given to the white unionist, then and not until then will the colored question assume some shape by which it can be the better handled.

* * * *

Almost beyond belief was the news received on Saturday morning last of the sudden death of Albert K. Mundheim, day foreman of the Record, the immediate cause being heart failure. If Mr. Mundheim himself had been aware that he was afflicted with heart trouble he had carefully guarded the secret from his friends.

At the time of his death he was on leave of absence for a few days visiting in New York City.

Early last fall he came to this Division from the Treasury Branch, where for a number of years he had been assistant foreman.

Mr. Mundheim was a hard, conscientious worker for the office, but by no means a driver, and a generous giver for the relief of others. During the past year his immediate family suffered much from illness and his expenses became very heavy, but his name could always be found on every paper soliciting charity.

Like every other man who ever occupied a position of authority, Mr. Munheim had his traducers, but with all he was a kind, generous fellow, bighearted and sympathetic, and his death will be deeply felt by those who knew him best.

A meeting of the Day Record Chapel was held on Saturday. It was decided that the Chapel should send a suitable floral offering, and a committee was appointed which drafted the following resolution:

Whereas it has pleased Almighty God to take suddenly from our midst Assistant Foreman Albert K. Mundheim, who by his kindly manner had endeared himself to all members of the Sixth Division; and

Whereas recognizing that by his death we have lost an efficient workman, a sympathetic leader, and generous friend; therefore be it

Resolved, That his passing away be appropriately marked by a floral offering from this chapel, an expression of esteem for his many years of labor. Be it further

Resolved, That his widow and children be given the sincere sympathy of the chapel in their loss; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of the deceased and a copy furnished THE TRADES UNIONIST and The Typographical Journal for publication.

Specification Notes.

Billy Howlin is collator of "dupes" under the new order of things.

Maker-up French, who was home sick for two weeks, is again at his post.

Noticeably bad proofs and uncorrected errors now receive special mention.

Reading of newspapers or other printed matter during working hours is now the rule, and strictly enforced.

Frank D. Smith's expression of confidence in the fairness and accuracy of the count sent Smith stock to a premium.

While some of the candidates voted for by members of this Chapel were not elected, the result as a whole was quite satisfactory.

"Judge" Davis, greatly encouraged as a successful candidate for teller, is now canvassing his chances in the Oxen Hill district.

Our good friend Sutton, since shorn of his mustache, is no longer the familiar figure he once was. Put it back on, please, "Maud."

P. J. Talbot returned to work yesterday, somewhat enfeebled from a protracted illness, during a portion of which time he acquired a hospital experience.

The record clerks' division now have the accounting of all dupes from this and other Divisions, and nothing more is done according to clockwork, except by the timekeeper.

Beginning with the issue of June 20 there will be forty trade marks. The issue following will be upward of 100, increasing from that on, The issue for the fifth week, under the new law, will be 220.

Miss Jennie Grace Johnson, of this Division, with her friend, Miss S. E. Stimpson, of the Official Gazette, left the city yesterday for a week's stay in "Old Virginny." Miss Stimpson had but recently received treatment at Sibley Hospital, from which she is now convalescent.

Charley Duffy doesn't mind a good joke on himself, and he tells this one: "On leaving home one evening he seized and put his wife's purse in the inside pocket of his coat. (A wrong and dangerous thing to do, of course.) Business called him to several points about the city, till finally he took a car, which was crowded with passengers. While standing and being supported by a strap he felt something drop at his feet. Discovering that it was a purse and supposing it might belong to the lady seated directly in front of him he courteously handed it over, when the lady gave him the glassy stare and contemptously turned the offer down. A little reflection on Duffy's part recalled the fact that the purse belonged to his wife, and then he carefully stuffed it back into his own pocket and took it home, but not till some time afterward did he relate his experience.

Death of Henry L. Davison.

While on his way to work in the Weather Bureau, in which he was employed, last Saturday morning, Henry L. Davison was stricken with a fatal illness, from which he died about 5 o'clock the same evening, without regaining consciousness, at Emergency Hospital. He was born in this city and was about 68 years old. After serving his apprenticeship in the office of Columbus Alexander, he worked in many private printing establishments and for many years in the Government Printing Office, back even as far as the time when Cornelius Wendell did the work by contract. His death was from uraemic poisoning.

Mr. Davison was always a staunch Union man and was a member of the old Columbia Typographical Society prior to its mergence into the Typographical Union. He was also a member of Columbia Lodge, No. 10, and Mount Nebo Encampment of Odd Fellows. He had been employed at the Weather Bureau for about ten years prior to his death. A wife and four sons survive him.

The funeral was from his late residence, No. 30 K street northeast, at 2 o'clock on Tuesday.

Among The Building Trades

EDITED BY W. E. KENNEDY.

This column is reserved especially for the building trades of this city.

* * * *

We think that one of the most important measures necessary for the success of the building trades is a Building Trades Council, and we earnestly ask that all members of affiliated trades interested will give us their views on the subject.

Lock up your little "hammer," brothers, and write, always remembering that out of the opinions of many may come a solution of the question.

We want opinions from all the trades, whether affiliated with the C. L. U. or not.

MILL WORKERS STRIKE SETTLED.

As is generally the case, it only needed one of those "heart-to-heart" talks between the employer and employees to come to an amicable settlement, and when the Lumbermen's Association consented to go over the difficulties existing between them and the Mill Workers, with the Joint Executive Committee of Carpenters, the matter was arranged.

The mill owners being convinced that what the Mill Workers desired—a uniform scale, in all the mills—was not to their inconvenience, but to their interests, and the Mill Workers, willing to make some concessions to secure these results, and a committee of level-headed Union men to so explain it, and the thing was done. Both parties to the controversy are to be congratulated, for, had not this business sense been shown, much suffering to the employees and some inconvenience to the employers would have been the inevitable result.

BRIDGE AND STRUCTURAL IRON WORKERS.

We do not think that any class of mechanics can better show the benefits of organization than the Bridge and Structural Iron Workers.

Three or four years ago these men—whose business require them to take their lives in their hands every moment in the day—were working for $2.50 and $2.75. To-day, through organization, they are now receiving $4 a day. They seem to thoroughly appreciate it, too, for outside of a few who are working in the new depot tunnel for that notoriously unfair firm, Brandt & Stuart, they are all in the Union.

* * * *

One of our old C. L. U. delegates—W. A. Morrison—is now a large employer of this craft, as also—Barber & Ross and Richardson & Burgess, all home contractors.

* * * *

F. M. Biggs is the Business Agent for Local No. 5. When he is not busy looking 'em over here he is riding freights up in Maryland and West Virginia looking after their large number of members that are working for the Pennsylvania Steel Co., building the Wabash bridges up in the mountains.

* * * *

The following communication has been received from International headquarters by Local No. 5:

This is to notify you that the vote for and against the continuance of our affiliation with the Structural Building Trades Alliance is as follows:

Against continued affiliation.. 4953
For continued affiliation..... 4481

From the above it can readily be seen that the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers severs its connection with the Structural Building Trades Alliance.

Fraternally,
J. J. McNAMARA,
Secretary-Treas.

STEAM FITTERS.

Business Agent Charles Allison, with Messrs. Rogers and Schmidt, of Local Branch No. 10, and Flannigan, Burt and Harris, of Steam Fitters Helpers, Local Branch No. 28, attended a meeting of the Joint Conference Board of Washington, Baltimore and Philadelphia, in Philadelphia, Saturday, May 20. Matters of general interest to these three cities were discussed.

* * * *

Locals No. 10 and 28 of this city are in a very prosperous condition, and are looking forward to the time in the near future when "how to furnish sufficient men" will be the problem for them to solve. Practically all the steam fitting employers, are under contract with these Locals.

THE PAPER HANGERS.

This craft did not, as was was expected, declare their strike off, but with a large percentage of their membership at work, and the loyal support of their parent body—the Brotherhood of Painters—have concluded to continue the warfare on those few firms that are yet "over the traces," feeling sure that public opinion, when it knows the justice of their requests, will see to it that it shall be given to them, and the loyalty of their members will do the rest. So the strike (?) goes merrily on.

HOISTING ENGINEERS, NO. 77.

This Local—a very important one of the building trades—has made wonderful progress in the past three years; and though they have a constantly growing membership there is yet quite a number of engineers in this particular branch whom they are anxious to have in the fold. Their Business Agent, George A. Moore, 421 Sixth street northwest, always keeps a little bunch of applications handy, as also a line of argument to show the non-unionist what the hoisting engineers have already done by organizing and what they yet can do.

Non-union engineers, particularly out on the Mullen & McDermott job, "get busy."

AROUND THE PRINTERIES.

The Washington Post.

Did you read the Parryites squeal in The Post recently. His Battlecreeklets "paid the freight;" and it was a big bill—four columns in all the leading newspapers in the country. Even though it was the printers that riled him in the first place, he spoke a couple of good words for us. I hope, however, his little "con" did not whet your appetite for his "substitutes."

My first effusion created a sensation "down town" and I have been showered with congratulations ever since—particularly by members of my own Chapel. Here's a few of the bouquets thrown at me: "You're rotten;" "the worst I ever read;" "who told you you could write?" "It's a wonder they printed it;" "Why did you do it;" "hope you did not make your wife read it;" "how much did you pay 'em to print it;" and a lot more I am too modest to repeat.

Our gay young friend, Major Herbert, now sports a horse and buggy. The Major is working on the dayside now, and as the horse arrived from down the river a week or so ago he appointed C. E. Sayles a committee of one to meet and conduct the animal up to the office. "Eddie" never served an apprentice as valet to a horse so he prevailed on a husky hanger on at the wharf to connect the animal and the buggy. Then the fun commenced. Those who witnessed both performances declare that the Ringling show was a tame affair compared with that parade through the southwest section. You'll enjoy Shober's version of the proceedings. Let him tell you about it. The Major says he hopes to teach the animal city ways in a year or two—but just at present the horse is teaching him things he never had heard of before—and the lady is waiting for a buggy ride.

Why Not Strike?

[From Chicago New Voice—Prohibitionist.]

This editorial is about strikes and politics and spelling and religion and education and union labels and manners and one thing and another.

The text is a letter from Jamestown, N. Y., in words and figures, to wit:

PUBLISHER NEW VOICE: I wrote you some time ago not to send me any more The New Voice with the union label on; but it is still coming. Do you think that I don't mean what I say, when I tell you to stop sending the same, or are you like the rest union men, you try to force me to take it whether I want it or not? I am no lunatic that don't know what I want and not want. When I get so I can't attend to my own business I will let some men help me out; but no butchers are wanted like those you have in Chicago that go under name of Sympathizers with union (or strikers). Send them out where the governor of Colorado did when the butchers appeared in the mining district, they dont need to work with nonunion men, they can have their own way then. I work with union men every day, it is all right, but if they get in there head that no others have a right to live, they are wrong, and will find it out to. It is my own sweet will that no union label shall come in my house.

GUST. A. JOHNSON.
Jamestown, N. Y., May 1.

It is our view that Mr. Johnson did the proper thing in ordering his paper discontinued. He felt that the wee union label defiled his house and he cast it into outer darkness. He lived up to what light he had.

We believe, however, that if Mr. Johnson had united with a union of his craft and joined loyally with his brethren in efforts for their mutual uplift, the experience would have made him a more tolerant individual, besides improving his grammar, spelling, and manners. But, irrespective of all that, it is a healthy sign that when he felt that he "had a kick coming," he used it good and strong. In other words, he struck. It will do him good, and it won't hurt us.

The union label and the brief comment on it in The New Voice appear to have created some excitement. Several labor papers commented thereon warmly and various letters of appreciation reached this office. Among others was one from the private secretary of Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, who wrote:

President Gompers directs me to say that he is very much pleased to know that your paper is now being issued as a union publication, and he read with interest your article on "The Union Label."

About the same time Rev. Charles Stelzle, the "machinist evangelist," preaching in the First Presbyterian Church at Seattle (April 14), declared:

I want to tell you that the labor unions themselves are doing more for the cause of temperance than the ministry. I know it. Others may not, but I know that sobriety is encouraged by the labor organizations.

Whatever the labor union movement may be or may not be, it represents a struggle for better things against overwhelming odds. It is a struggle against the sweat shop, against child labor, against unsanitary tenements, against starvation wages, against squalor, against the Simon Legrees of industry who had labor stretched on the rack, wrenching from its sinews dividends for the fat and lazy.

Born of want and sired by necessity, but inspired by hope and love of offspring and kin, the labor movement began, single handed, its struggle for the higher life.

True, the union movement did not always do the right thing in the right place. But let Capital, whose stupendous blunders plunged this nation into civil war and drenched this land in blood—chiefly the blood of the laborer—cast the first stone at it.

True, some unions hold their meetings in hovels or barns or barracks or even over saloons, where rent is nominal or even free to tempt patronage for the bar established by the stingy rich to make money for the school fund. Let the cowled, grimacing clergy members of the Union League of Philadelphia, organized to suck champagne bottles without a license, heave the first brick at this.

Who comes to the surface to speak for this surging, struggling, toiling, sweating mass of blood and bone and brawn? It is the Powderlys, the Gomperses, the Mitchells, the Arthurs, the Travellicks, all hurling curses at the drink that destroys their kind, that balks their hopes, that defeats their strikes, that impoverishes their homes, that fills their union halls with wrangling and gloom.

The man in whose breast was placed, by mistake, a gizzard instead of a heart sees nothing in all this but the "strike."

Vol. IX. No. 51. WASHINGTON, D. C., THURSDAY, JUNE 1, 1905. Price, 3 Cents.

CENTRAL LABOR UNION.

Painters and Stone Laborers Report Lockout in Their Shops.

The Central Labor Union held its regular weekly meeting on Monday evening at Typographical Temple.

In the absence of President Dickman and Vice-President Crown, ex-President H. W. Sherman called the meeting to order at 8:10 p. m.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

The Grievance Committee reported progress and asked for an appropriation of $2.00 for current expenses, which was granted.

CREDENTIALS.

Brewery Workmen, No. 118: Carl Kreutzer, vice Frank Rom, resigned.

Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101: T. M. Ring, vice E. W. Patton, deceased.

Bookbinders Union, No. 4: James L. Feeney, vice Chas. W. Nelson, removed.

Steam Engineers, No. 99: M. B. Godfrey, vice John C. Wheeler resigned.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Mrs. George Gallanar, of Keswick, Cal., asking for aid in appealing the case of her husband to a higher court, charged with causing the death of a "scab" during an argument on Unionism, and that an attempt to convict him by perjured testimony was productive of a verdict of manslaughter at a second trial. An appropriation of $5 was made to Mrs. Gallanar.

The following Unions have indorsed action of Central Labor Union in placing E. N. Richards, paper hanger, and Samuel Artz, plumber, on "List We Do Not Patronize."

Bartenders League, No. 75. Fine $5.
Plumbers Union, No. 5.
Bakery Wagon Drivers, No. 33.
Upholsterers Union, No. 58.
Butcher Workmen, No. 148. Fine, $2.00.
Retail Clerks Union, No. 262.
Paper Hangers Union, No. 420.

CALL OF UNIONS.

Horseshoers: Called attention to present trouble with their employers, and that they would probably call on Central Labor Union for moral assistance in near future.

Painters: That a lockout of their trade had been declared, but did not think it would last very long.

Stone Laborers: That the members of No. 46 had been locked out and a reduction in pay declared by the bosses.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Special Committee on Revision of "We Do Not Patronize List" reported progress, and asked for an appropriation of $3 for current expenses. Request granted.

Delegate from Bookbinders Union called attention to continued violation of eight-hour law at Carnegie Library, and request further action on part of Central Labor Union.

The Secretary reported that his office needed a new typewriter, and his request for same was referred to the Executive Committee.

Adjourned.

Facts for Mr. Bloomer.

EDITOR TRADES UNIONIST:

If Mr. Bloomer would cultivate the habit of keeping his temper, his replies to friendly correction would be couched in better language than that which characterized his remarks a week or so ago, and he might be able to make his meaning clear without having recourse to the italic case. There is more force in the calm reply of an intelligent opponent than there is in the incoherent outburst of a common scold. The writer of this article has no unfriendly feeling for Mr. Bloomer nor for any man. He admires the author of "Flotsam and Jetsam" when he is right, pities him when he errs, and cheerfully acknowledges his right to believe whatever he pleases upon any subject under the sun. He has even laughed at Mr. Bloomer's stories and never failed to applaud their subtle wit. But he cannot regard Mr. Bloomer as infallable. He claims the right to differ with that gentleman without being fairly open to the charge of "warped judgment" or "religious prejudice" or any of the other dreadful offences mentioned in his last letter. For instance, he denies Mr. Bloomer's "right" to summon, by the magic of his pen, a mutual friend from his peaceful avocations in Boston, lay him upon the dissecting table, separate his component parts, placing his nationality in one pile, his religion in another, his patronymic in a third, his accent in a fourth—then label the whole of this work "an honest analysis" and exhibit it for the edification of the passer-by. Now, who gave Mr. Bloomer the right to dissect his friend; and even if he had the right, is not this style of literary surgery a display of very bad taste? Sensible men will say it is.

It is utter nonsense to claim that every signed communication indicates honesty, or that a pseudonym proves want of courage. Some atrociously dishonest things are every day written over real names, and if this be true Mr. Bloomer's argument falls to pieces. Sometimes a real signature, instead of being a "red badge of courage," becomes a lethal chamber for the painless extinction of just criticism or a mask to hide real sentiments—as, for instance, where one honest writer gives his "undivided support" to six candidates for office while he can vote for only three, or another courageous scribe devotes his talents to singing the praises of some friend who for the time being has charge of the loaves and fishes. If Mr. Bloomer has never met this kind of writer, he has lived in vain.

It seems impossible for the author of "Flotsam and Jetsam" to close an argument without introducing his "bogus Christian." That mythical gentleman is being overworked. So, also, are some of Mr. Bloomer's descriptions. They are the merest claptrap, the threadbare romances which compose the regular stock in trade of every shallow critic of revealed truth. In repeating them so often the author of "Flotsam and Jetsam" displays neither wisdom nor skill, for the few poor arguments which they are supposed to contain were "reduced to dust and ashes" generations before Mr. Bloomer saw the light.

Respectfully,

IAN.

Resolutions.

At a meeting of the First Division Chapel, G. P. O., held Monday, May 29, the following resolutions on the death of G. A. Plummer were unanimously adopted:

Whereas a Divine Providence has taken from our midst George A. Plummer, for several years a member of the First Division Chapel, and who, by his quiet but always cheerful disposition, had endeared himself to all with whom he came in contact;

Resolved, That the members of this Chapel extend their heartfelt sympathy to the family of their deceased fellow-workman, but more especially to the deeply stricken widow and fatherless little daughter, and bespeak for them an abundance of Divine comfort in their hour of sore trial.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of the deceased and published in THE TRADES UNIONIST.

NAVY YARD ITEMS.

Items of Interest Concerning the Big Shops on the Branch.

An examination of applicants will be held on or about June 15 for filling the position of leadingman at Indian Head Proving Ground.

F. E. Houghton, of the Miscellaneous Shop, is in the Providence Hospital with a case of appendicitis. He is being looked after by Columbia Lodge. He is now in the convalescence stage.

Robert Dalkin, a crane attendant in E. G. C. Shop, while attending to his duties had three of the fingers of his left hand cut off last Monday. He was sent to the hospital for attention.

Wm. Roberts, of Columbia Lodge, was seriously injured on Thursday last by a flying chip of steel striking him in the eye. It is not known as yet if he will lose the optic as his physician is doing everything to save it.

A party of Japanese officials, including Commander D. Iwamura, and six officers of the Japanese Navy, will visit the Yard by permission this week and will be under the guidance of the naval officers of the Yard during their inspection of gun manufacture.

Bro. James Buckley, of whose accident I reported last week, is rapidly recovering and will leave the hospital this week. I trust he will never again try the feat of attempting to prove which is the harder—his head or a chunk of steel.

W. S. Macdonald, of E. G. C. Shop, last week attempted a feat in bicycle maneuvers out of the ordinary. In his hurry to reach the Yard he attempted to telescope a moving car—with the result that Bro. Mac. spent several days in dreamland. He has resumed work, but is still very lame.

After being roasted by the editor and toasted by my brother scribes for being brave enough to tell the truth, the only remedy left to me is to try and be good hereafter and use a shorter word for "Truth." My, how some people squirm when you strike one of their pet hobbies or tread on their favorite corn. I will try and be very, very, good hereafter.

John Stewart Crossy, better known as "Fatty" Stewart, one of the original Two Johns, died at St. Louis last week at an advanced age. It is not generally known to the public that the other John is now employed in the Yard in the person of Bro. Stanley, the former leader of the Machinists' Band. Bro. Stanley concluded that as he was getting too stout he would resume his trade and thereby reduce his flesh—the result is an increase from 308 to 320 pounds.

Fair Visitor (to colored guide): What is the size of those guns?

Guide: Those are 8-inch 40-caliber guns, Miss.

Fair Visitor: How far will they shoot?

Guide: One gun will shoot 8 miles, and two will shoot 16 miles.

Fair Visitor: What do you mean by 40 caliber?

Guide: Why that is dead easy. You just take the size of the bore and multiply that by the circumference of the breech, and then divide the result by the velocity and that is the caliber.

Fair Visitor: Great head.

DECORATION DAY.

Among the many holidays there is none that appeals to the man who builds the gun as well as the man behind the gun more than this day.

The mere mention of the name brings back to many of us the memory of our comrades who have answered the last muster and have passed into eternity. Many are buried in the deep blue sea, where no stone marks their grave and where no foot can tread. Many repose in foreign lands, but the vast majority slumber in the bosom of our native country. To all these, heroes every one, we turn with reverent head, and while we may not be able to strew their graves with flowers we think of the millions of our countrymen who are paying them their honor and homage.

SCRIBES AND COOKS.

I must profess that I like to write. I also love cooks. Well, what is writing an article but making a pie. You roll out your crust, or general subject, which is a nutritious compound of flour, milk, and useful knowledge. You prepare your fruit, or meat, or poultry, or special and novel information. You throw in a few bits of preserved quince, anecdotes, or happy illustration. You sweeten to your taste with sugar or amiable philanthropy, or you season with pepper, salt, and smart remarks, dusting the interior of the "paté" with fine chopped lemon peel, aromatic herbs, and all the small bits of wit you can muster. When you have roughly got the whole together into shape you polish up, you cut off round the edges superfluous bits of paste and redundant phrases. You divide into portions to help. You smooth and scrape out and decorate with flowers of eloquence and moulded buttons of crust. You varnish with the white of an egg, or glibness of style, and when the whole is finished to your mind, in the shape of a fair copy, and the dish of a neatly trimmed tart, you send your handiwork or your mind work to the oven or the printing office.

Then comes the rub and the test, the proof of the pudding and the page is in the eating and the reading. If your composition be badly put together the oven and the press will only make it worse; little cracks will gape open wide, and small weak places will become yawning holes. But if your task has been artistically completed with a spontaneous touch of impulsive genius it will often turn out better than you expected.

You will be agreeably surprised at the results of your efforts and will chuckle to find it read (or eat) so well. No man can judge of his own performances in their crude manuscript or uncooked state.

Sometimes, however, bakers, or editors and even printers, will spoil all when you don't deserve it. They will stick your pie or paper in a corner that is too fierce or too slow for it; they will keep it too long till it gets heavy and loses its flavor. What you expected would be light puff paste proves a leathery, indigestible substance. Sometimes they will cut out the plums and tit-bits for mere mischief's sake, to show they are somebody with a right to have a finger in, but against that we ought to set their frequent abstraction of tasteless morsels that are as much out of place as chips in porridge. Occasionally they will make fractures which let out all your spirit, juice, veracity and gravy. The dropping of a letter, or a burning pan, will make a mess of what was perfect when it came into their hands; indeed, the technical term for a confusion of types is the very thing; printers call it "pie." For such misfortunes the only remedy is patience, seeing that bakers and printers, cooks and scribes are but imperfect creatures at the very best.

TIM TICKLE.

SUPREME COURT DECISION.

The Findings in New York Bakers Case Ably Discussed.

The recent decision of the Supreme Court of the United States invalidating the law of the State of New York making it illegal for the proprietor of a bakery to permit his employees to work over ten hours in any one day, and providing a penalty for any violation of it, has elicited many expressions of opinion from those who oppose as well as from those who approve of organized labor. It is also evident that many of these opinions have been arrived at hastily, and without sufficient consideration of the subject.

It has not been made clear upon what ground the Supreme Court exercised jurisdiction in the case. The suit was between citizens of the State of New York, and the New York courts unquestionably had jurisdiction. The New York Legislature enacted the law, and the highest court in that State held that it was violative of neither the constitution of the State nor of the United States. The decision of the State court was appealed from, and the Supreme Court of the United States assumed jurisdiction of the case, and overruled the decision of the State court, thus making the law invalid.

The Constitution of the United States, Article 3, Section 2, fixes the limits of the judicial power of the Government, saying it "shall extend to all cases in law or equity arising under this Constitution, the laws of the United States, and treaties made, or which shall be made, under their authority; in all cases affecting ambassadors, and other public ministers, and consuls; to all cases of admirality and maritime jurisdiction; to controversies to which the United States is a party; to controversies between two or more States; between a State and citizen of another State; between citizens of different States; between citizens of the same State, claiming lands under grants of different States; and between a State, or the citizens thereof, and foreign States, citizens, or subjects."

This clause is affected by Article XI of the amendments, which reads: "The judicial power of the United States shall not be construed to extend to any suit in law or equity commenced or prosecuted against one of the United States by citizens of another State, or by citizens or subjects of any foreign State."

When the powers of the judicial branch of the Government of the United States are examined carefully it will be seen that the Supreme Court could only take jurisdiction of this case under the first clause of the powers delegated, i. e., that the New York law was violative of the Constitution of the United States. A diligent search of the Constitution reveals but one clause under which the law could be held as violative of that instrument, and that is part of the 5th clause of Article I, Section 10, of the Constitution, which reads: "No State shall * * * * pass any * * * * law impairing the obligation of contracts."

This does not mean that the legislature of a State may not pass laws declaring that contracts which had been held to be legal, should be held, after the passage of the law, to be illegal and void. It simply means that no State shall declare a contract, recognized as legal at the time it was entered into, to be void, or pass any law affecting either party to such contract injuriously. Any State has the undoubted right to declare what contracts are legal or illegal, but a contract recognized as legal at the time it was entered into cannot be impaired in any way during the life of the contract. The contract under which this action arose was entered into after the passage of the law prohibiting such contracts.

Article X of the amendments to the Constitution of the United States lays down a rule for construeing that instrument, as follows: "The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people." It would seem under such a rule of construction that the New York law here referred to should have been permitted to stand.

The rule for testing the validity of a State law under the State Constitution has been laid down as follows: A State law is valid unless there is some provision of the State Constitution antagonistic to it. It would seem that the decision of the highest court of New York State is correct and should be the law, and that the law in controversy is not invalidated either by the Constitution of the State of New York or by the Constitution of the United States. If the law were violative of the Constitution of the State of New York that would not give any United States court jurisdiction; and it seems clear to one who can read and understand the Constitution of the United States that the New York law is violative of no clause of that Constitution.

The tendency of the time is to shorten the hours of labor and to limit the right of parties to contract for long or excessive hours of labor. Both in America and Europe the hours of labor have been greatly shortened in the last fifty years, and this decision of the Supreme Court thus far is contrary to the spirit of the age.

The assumption of jurisdiction by the Supreme Court in this case is also evidence of the increasing tendency of the times to the further concentration of power, especially in this country. At least it makes a bad precedent for further narrowing the limits of self-government and concentrating power more and more in one central authority.

The highest court of New York State had affirmed the validity of this law; four justices of the Supreme Court were of the same opinion. Under these circumstances would it have been well for the five justices who rendered this decision to have given some weight to such opinions? It would not be a bad rule to require a greater number than a mere majority of the United States Supreme Court to overrule the decision of a State Supreme Court.

This decision should arouse the attention of the workingmen of the country to the fact that their ideas are seldom enacted into laws and less seldom influence the decision of the courts. If the ideas of organized labor are to prevail, those who hold to them must be elected or appointed to legislative, executive and judicial office to a far greater extent than they are now.

LAYMAN.

Personal Mention.

Paul J. Maas, labor editor of the Chicago Record-Herald, was in the city visiting friends this week. Paul is of that type of vigorous young manhood that never betrays age. He is taking a vacation and is enjoying it.

Robert J. Smythe, once a G. P. O. employee, now an employing printer of Harrisonburg, Va., where he conducts a daily paper, was in the city on Monday. Time has dealt gently with "Bob," and his old friends here will be pleased to know he is doing well.

Frank Morrison, Secretary of the American Federation of Labor, was in Philadelphia last Saturday on matters pertaining to the Brewers trouble.

AMERICA'S COVER.

JOSIAH BASSETT TRUDGIAN.

Friends, I have seen the grandest cover that is possible for one to behold;
In value it's priceless, it is worth mountains and mountains of gold.
It begins where the restless Atlantic is forever moaning,
Reaching the quiet Pacific with the sunbeams in the gloaming;
Its upper edge is with the wheat, that makes flour as white as snow,
The lower is on the gulf, where the cane and cotton grow.
Two beautiful colors are in it, the first a crimson red,
That symbolizes the fight for freedom, and patriot blood that was shed;
The other was taken from the firmament,
Oh, the glorious blue,
And shows that amid all trials, the weavers
were firm and true.
These entwined in a base of white, speaks for our country's purity,
But with loyal hearts in loyal men, means far more—security!
The five-pointed stars which shine on its face,
Tell that sovereign States each have a place.
It shelters golden Alaska, Porto Rico, beautiful and fair, Spreads over the Philippines, and Hawaii, a land lovely and rare.

This cover is our own starry banner,
It is woven in the strongest manner;
And so long as oppression is in the world,
It will always be flying, it will never be furled.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

On a couple of hundred occasions I have descanted in these columns on the innate dishonesty of politics—not alone in the politics pertaining to governments of varying degree, but any old politics. We have had another instance of it in the election just passed and the subsequent proceedings—not that men mean to be dishonest, but that they just can't help it when it comes to politics. I do not believe anybody seriously doubted that Joe Johnson had the 13 majority over Frank Smith which the returns of thirty-five election boards gave him, for fraud was not alleged as to one of them. But there lingered in the minds of a considerable number a hope that another count might result in overturning Johnson's plurality, actuated by two motives—the hope of the enemies of Johnson that he might be defeated, and that of a number of Frank Smith's friends, in which Mr. Smith did not join them, that he might be shown to be elected. For these two reasons a much larger number than would have been expected supported the ridiculous demand of Goodkey for a new count—not that they cared whether Goodkey had received a few more or less than the returns showed for him, but that it might change the result as between Johnson and Smith, and this notwithstanding that a new count could not have affected that result, as it was not in dispute, and none but the votes cast for Goodkey would have been counted in any event. All this is very discouraging to me, as I have stood so many years for pure politics, both by precept and example. But the noble and honest action of Frank Smith is a rift in the clouds which shows that not all is black, though some of his alleged friends pay him the very poor compliment of saying that he was induced by the friends of Johnson to take the stand he did. I personally heard Mr. Smith say, before the count was completed, in reply to a suggestion of a contest, "If Johnson has one vote more than I have by the returns I will not contest it," and I also heard Johnson say, in reply to Smith's congratulations, "Frank, I would rather have beaten my own brother." It is a great comfort to me in moralizing over election unfairness to realize that it is only those to whom I am opposed who attempt chicanery.

* * * *

There have at times been complaint of the interference of foremen with the freedom of elections, but no one will make that complaint against Foreman Richard A. McLean, of the Star. "Before election," said he, "I chanced to mention before six of my men that I intended voting for a certain man, and the entire half dozen voted against him."

* * * *

A proprietor was foaming at the mouth regarding the proposed eight-hour day.

"Do you regard it as practically an increase of wages?" asked a friend.

"Why, certainly it is an increase of wages," answered the employer.

"Will it increase the cost of printing?'

"Of course it will."

"What are you going to do about it?"

"Fight it to the bitter end."

"When the dealers increase the price of paper and other materials, does that increase the cost of printing?"

"Certainly."

"What do you do about it—fight it to the bitter end?"

He hasn't said yet.

* * * *

Ex-I. T.U. President William B. Prescott has a well-written article on "The Eight-Hour Movement" in the June Inland Printer, taking an optimistic view, from the trades unionist's standpoint, of the probable outcome, but deploring the struggle which must inevitably take place. He argues for a committee to meet the Typothetae with the object of coming to an agreement.

* * * *

Robert B. Smythe, of Harrisonburg, Va., spent several days in the city recently as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Thomas, one of the objects of his visit being to make extensive additions to his newspaper plant. His success as a newspaper man was pronounced from the start.

* * * *

George C. Christy, an old G. P. O. man, but who has been for a number of years a proofreader in the State office at Albany, dropped in on a visit Wednesday. He has been on a tour of the West as far as Denver, and among the points at which he stopped was St. Louis. He has all the appearance of a man who gets along with the world without quarreling with it.

* * * *

There has been considerable discussion of the proposition to sell to the Union the property in the rear of its Temple. That an enlargement is desirable, in fact necessary, is admitted, but for all that the membership should have the fullest possible information concerning the matter on which it is to vote on a week from next Wednesday. Would it not be a good idea for Mr. Donath to state in the next issue of THE TRADES UNIONIST the details of his proposition, and whatever, in his opinion, are its merits? I hope he will do so.

* * *

Now is the proper time to make big cracks about going to Toronto. From the 1st to the 12th of August will be the season for discovering that we can't go. I have been watching that play and making some of it for a number of years. But don't keep tab on the fellows; no good can come from it.

* * * *

I am under compliment to Dr. Alfred C. Norcross for an invitation to attend the commencement exercises of the George Washington University, May 28–31, 1905, at Memorial Continental Hall, during which my friend Norcross, of the Fifth Division, became a full-fledged M. D. This is the only city in the United States in which a man whose necessities require him to work for a living has an opportunity to acquire a learned profession while pursuing his bread-winning calling, and as a result the acquisition of these professions is usually confined to the sons of the wealthy or well-to-do in other cities. I regret to say there have been some expressions of dissatisfaction in some of the professions that these opportunities are given here, with the result that in some of the institutions the evening classes have been dispensed with. However, this is perhaps but a manifestation of the purely human desire to protect themselves against competition as much as possible that is entirely laudable in all classes except trades unionists. (Just imagine the ax diagram here.) I remember an instance of the prejudice against the workingman-professiunal that occurred some years ago. A printer-doctor applied to a high Government medical officer for an appointment at a time when medical men were wanted, and exhibited his diploma.

"I see you have just graduated," said the medical officer. "How old are you?"

"Thirty-two," answered the applicant.

"Why did you wait until so late in life to take up the study of medicine?"

"Because I had my living to earn."

"Oh!"

And the great man exhibited enlarged disgust and decreased interest.

If the doctor had answered, "Because it was late in life that I saw the necessity of a profession," he would probably have been welcomed; but he got the appointment any way, by the aid of friends, later resigned, and is now in successful private practice.

But all this has nothing to do with Norcross, whom I congratulate on having pursued his studies to graduation, strong in the belief that his learning, combined with his native ability, will make him an ornament to the profession and an occasion for our further pride in our printer professionals.

* * * *

At the promenade concert given at Langdon on Tuesday of last week, for the benefit of a fire-engine fund, Mrs. David J. Roberts read James Whitcomb Riley's "Down at the Capitol," and for an encore gave "Agnes;" Leo Ruhlman did an excellent sleight-of-hand turn; Furbeshaw and Lowd played a banjo and guitar duet; Mrs. Howell Smith, Finley S. Hayes, and Herbert Featherstone gave "A Lesson in Acting," and there were other delightful features. Our Langdon correspondent had not recovered from the late election or we would have had this item last week. (P. S.—The last sentence is a bluff at an editorial apology. I stole the facts from the Post.)

* * * *

It struck me that Tim Tickle was laying up trouble for himself when he got off that spiel about Negro strike breakers, but I never like to criticise what other people write.

* * * *

It is with deep regret and some considerable disgust that I learn that one or two have taken to heart the discussions in THE TRADES UNIONIST during the late campaign, in which I took a minor part, and are real angry (the "That's what makes me so d—d mad" kind of mad) at what was said and what happened. I thought my friends with whom I have been debating were all grown men—ripe in years if of youthful membership in the union—and that we could quarrel without making hard feelings; but "Alas, my heart, it was not thus to be!" (If I can't win back the smiles to my friend Belcher's face with this allusion to a "Trumpeter of Sakkingen" song his musical make-up is not what I have thought it to be.)

* * * *

Mr. Thomas L. Jones, of the Second Division, has resigned the position of tenor soloist of the Lutheran Memorial Church to become precentor and soloist of the Metropolitan Presbyterian Church on Capitol Hill, in which church at the memorial service last Sunday he sang De Koven's recessional at the offertory. Mr. Wiley H. Davis, of the First Division, is the tenor of the quartette of the Church of the New Jerusalem, at Sixteenth and Corcoran streets, and at the choir recital last Thursday he gave new evidence of the thoroughness of his musical education and the excellence of his voice. Columbia Union numbers many fine vocalists among her members, but none who have made greater successes than Messrs. Davis and Jones.

* * * *

Hereafter, when I feel that I am dangerously deep, instead of inserting my ax diagram I will simply refer to it.

* * * *

From a copy of the San Francisco Labor Clarion which I received late last week I get further particulars of the funeral of the late Adrian M. Jones, which was held at Masonic Temple (he being a member of Lafayette Lodge, F. A. A. M., of this city) and under Masonic auspices. There was a large attendance of printers and members of the Woman's Auxiliary, and George A. Tracy, an ex-president of Columbia Union, eloquently bade a last farewell to his old comrade on behalf of the union printers of the country. At the grave a printer quartette sang a sacred selection. He had held a number of offices in various unions.

At the election of San Francisco Union Will J. French was chosen president; C. F. Wolters and J. W. Kelly, first and second vice-presidents; H. L. White, secretary-treasurer and delegate to I. T. U., to Allied Printing Trades Council, and to Labor Council; George A. Tracy, member of executive committee and of auditing committee, and the usual minor officials. There was no competition for any of the offices except alternate to the I. T. U., for which D. S. White had 146 and W. J. White 129. San Francisco is evidently a White man's town. (Ax.)

Oscar La Shelle, a member of San Francisco Union, is a brother of the late Kirke La Shelle, the well-known author and theatrical manager, whose recent death was announced in all the newspapers, and who was as staunch a union printer as Oscar. The stronger bond of bosom friendship existed between the brothers, and naturally the death of Kirke was a great blow to Oscar.

Indications are that the referendum vote of this Chapel will be divided on the proposition to enlarge and improve the Temple.

We congratulate THE TRADES UNIONIST on its generous program for a Saturday half holiday during June, July and August.

By the payment of twenty-five cents to the G. P. O. base ball team a number of the sporting fraternity here represented have secured a grandstand seat and the certainty of the greatest show on—the Mahone lot.

WANTED—Some one to share the honors, complaints, and emoluments as correspondent from this Chapel. The job need entail no loss of time, as the work may be done after office hours and at home. No bond required.

Several of the printers of this Division own their homes, others hope to eventually, while others enjoy the freedom of the city by "knocking around." The past few years have witnessed a perceptible increase in percentage of those who choose to live under their own vine and fig tree.

The office Manual of Style suggests that workmen in every department are expected to "help each other," in order to prevent errors or the delay of work; and the same authority says that it is inexcusable in any to refuse such aid on the plea that it is "none of my business." It is also the part of good unionism to lend a helping hand whenever possible.

We of the stick and rule acknowledge a growing interest in what is going on "Among the Building Trades," as reported with care each week for THE TRADES UNIONIST by W. E. Kennedy. The spirit of true Unionism is the source and power of that perfect assimilation of interests which is sure to come, and when in truth the injury of one will be the concern of all.

Mr. O. A. Calkins resigned as proofreader yesterday (Wednesday) evening and will join his wife at Gregory, Mich., the late home of the mother of Mrs. Calkins, who died but recently, leaving to the daughter a valuable landed estate. Mr. Calkins had been with us for a considerable time and enjoyed in an universal degree the respect and friendship of his associates, which was evinced by the cordial good wishes expressed at the hour of leave taking.

From an entirely trustworthy source I am informed that Messrs. Hay, Lawson, and Penix, foremen of their respective Divisions, to-day enter upon a leave of thirty days. While disclaiming any intention of meddling with legitimate news which by courtesy belongs to brother scribes of other Divisions, there are occasions when an inordinate desire to make a "scoop" or to be first is not easily overcome, and this is just one of those occasions.

Occasionally the opinion is advanced that this old building (so many times condemned) is unsafe, and that some day it will topple over or go down with a crash, burying its occupants beneath a mass of bricks, timber, mortar and machinery. Invariably some bystander who has been here since the first brick was laid will butt in and vouch for the safety of the old structure by chestily offering to jeopardize his life in this way indefinitely, and then nothing more is heard till someone has another dream.

GOSSIP FROM THE G. P. O.

First Division.

W. C. Jordan has been transferred to the Treasury Division.

Have you used up all your annual leave? If not, better had.

L. D. Brandon Slug 44 has been changed to Slug 101, alley 17.

E. Heidingsfeld was in New York City several days during the week.

John W. Sherman is still on the sick list, but at last reports was improving.

Of course, you heard the excellent music rendered by the Job Room Glee Club on Monday.

Capt. Barringer's left-handed side pard has returned from his leave, greatly improved.

The most popular member of this Chapel, made a visit to his old home in the Keystone State during the week.

By all odds the finest strawberries we have seen this season were from the farm of Col. J. C. Hass (Slug 125), Takoma Park.

"Honest John" intends taking a trip across the ocean this summer, i. e., return to the scenes of his childhood. We all wish him bon voyage.

A. J. Lillard (Slug 142), the popular and efficient Secretary of this Chapel, has been assigned temporary maker-up while J. C. Lesher is on leave. "Lil." is a past master and does not move every month.

President Colton, of G. P. O. Council, No. 211, National Union, tells us that the annual excursion of G. P. O. Council, No. 211, will take place at River View, on Wednesday next, June 7. Tickets, 25 cents.

"Paymaster" was the welcome sound that greeted all hands on Friday afternoon. Talk about popular officials. Why Disbursing Officer Bennett, Paying Teller Wilver, and Col. Mike Kane are the best friends we have on pay days.

Among the members of this Division going on leave this week, beginning June 1, are the following: F. M. Penn, L. Woodward, Frank N. Everts, George S. Fitzgerald, W. Marden King, C. G. Perry, J. N. Gibbs, James Kane, I. D. Williamson, and J. S. Graves.

It may not be generally known, but it is nevertheless a fact that of the six or more bright young men from Minnesota who landed in this city in the fall of 1901, two have passed beyond—Frank Sweet, and our late esteemed fellow-workman, George A. Plummer.

* * * *

On Friday night last George A. Plummer, a well known member of this Chapel, died after a comparatively brief illness, of heart disease.

Mr. Plummer came to this city in October, 1901, from Minneapolis, Minn., and was assigned cases in this Division, and with but a short interval was employed in the detail under J. C. Lesher.

The deceased was extremely popular, and the news of his death was received with universal regret. He was a member of King David Lodge, No. 28, F. A. A. M., of Brookland, and also a member of G. P. O. Council, No. 211, National Union, being insured for $2,000. He is survived by a widow and a three-year old daughter.

The remains were taken to his home city. Minneapolis, where they were interred with Masonic rites.

The tender sympathy of his many friends are extended to the bereaved widow in her deep sorrow.

You're quite right, Bloomer. "There'll come a time some day," sure enough. What was it Bobbie Burns said in Tam O'Shanter? "In hell they'll roast ye like a herrin'."

There was a brand-new boy born to Mr. and Mrs. Cliff D. Scott on Thursday, May 26. Cliff said he had a hard job getting acquainted with the boy, who didn't seem to know him.

The bowling season has closed and Jack Childress has been transferred to the correcting alley to take Branham's old frame. Jack is attending strictly to business, same as when rolling the big balls.

Now that the weather is warm enough for the windows to be open, the jingling of the telephone bell in the Sixth Division sounds over the rattle of the Monotype casters like a circular saw in a planing mill.

I wonder if that illustrious exponent of the "40-jackass mud-throwing power" yclept Bloomer thinks he can frighten any decent man with his threat, "And it is possible that some may yet be sorry," etc.

Buddha taught, long ago, "The mind is everything; what you think, you become." Those who have read Bloomer's attacks on people who have minds of their own and are not afraid to express their honest convictions, will find in the above-quoted proverb the secret of his filthy talk.

Kinsolving, of the correcting alley, known to almost everybody as King Solomon, has shown that he deserves the name of the wisest man by acquiring a building lot, on which he started to erect a house on the 25th instant. I suppose there will be a house-warming when the house is finished. Of course I am not throwing out any hint. Just "A word to the wise."

Young men in China who have some smattering of English are opening what they call Anglo-Chinese schools in Shanghai and the neighboring towns. One of these schools frankly advertises its limitations: "English taught as far as the letter G."—East and West.

The following dialogue, overheard last Saturday at luncheon time, would seem to sustain the view that Mr. Bloomer's knowledge of English also ends with the letter G:

Enter Bloomer.

A Bystander.—That was hot shot you dealt out yesterday in THE TRADES UNIONIST, Mr. Bloomer.

Bloomer, with a self-satisfied air.—Yes; but whoever gets in front of the bullseye is sure to get hit.

Bystander.—Bullseye! You make a mistake there; you mean Garbage cart.

The day after election, with serious business on his mind, Joseph E. Goodkey resigned the chairmanship of this Division. This action on Mr. Goodkey's part was against the requests of friends. When the Chapel met to consider the resignation a vote of thanks for Mr. Goodkey's many services to the Chapel was passed.

Elmer Dement was elected Secretary without opposition.

At the election for chairman to succeed Mr. Goodkey, Messrs. Cliff D.Scott and J. W. Belcher having been nominated, Scott had 16 more votes than his opponent.

W. Russell Branham, long known as the handsomest man in the Third Division—in fact, yielding the palm in point of striking personal appearance to only one man in the G. P. O., and that man the greatest poet and most pronounced Adonis of the whole force, H. S. Sutton, affectionately called "Maud S." by his friends—has shaken the dust of Washington from his feet and our correcting alley will know him no more.

It is reported that he has gone back to his native Georgian wilds to engage in some sort of business. What that business is concerns us not. That we have lost him is enough for our minds to contend with at present. How appropriate it is that he should be a native of Georgia.

We have often read of Georgian beauties, but never saw one until Branny" burst upon the scene. That he deserves the appellation will scarcely admit of doubt. But let us not be envious. Let us rather wish for our friend the greatest measure of success in his new situation. The world is a small place and we may see him again. Until then, Vive, vale, Branny!

* * * *

The wide diversity of opinion, to call it by no harsher name, that seems to exist among members of Columbia Union regarding the question of a recount of the votes cast on the 17th instant, calls for more than passing notice.

It is a fact that while assisting in counting the ballots in the Third Division I had occasion to pass upon the legality of three ballots that were incorrectly marked. As the law says in plain words that there must be "no other mark or erasure" except the cross in the box opposite the name of the man intended to be voted for, and as the three ballots noted above did not comply with the law in this respect the Board of Tellers decided the ballots were illegal and did not include them in the returns.

It is also a fact that ballots marked in precisely the same way as those declared illegal by the Third Division tellers were counted as legal ballots in the Secretary's Chapel so far as they were correctly marked. I am informed that President Berg stated in explanation of this action in so counting the ballots he was following a precedent set by President Jones, who held that where the intent of the voter was clear his wishes should be followed in counting the vote.

This in face of the fact that the Union has recently enacted a new code of laws which must necessarily supersede the laws of the Jones régime. In the new laws occurs the distinct stipulation that the voter shall indicate his choice by placing a cross in the box at the left of the candidate's name, and "there shall be no other mark or erasure." Not a word is said about the intent of the voter. The tellers have no choice in the matter. If there be any "other mark or erasure," it would naturally follow that the ballot would be illegal according to the law governing the marking of ballots.

It is submitted, in view of the very small majority received by Mr. Johnson, and the doubt in every mind as to what the result of a recount would be, that in justice to the voters, to say nothing of compliance with the law, a recount should be made.

Furthermore, we have no means at present of determining the number of mistakes in counting made by tellers of other Chapels. A law can not have a flexible meaning. If it means what it says, no teller or other officer has the right to interpret it differently. As the election law has been interpreted in two ways to our certain knowledge, manifestly to the detriment of candidates on the ballots thrown out, as the Third Division tellers think, in accordance with the law, justice to both voters and candidates requires that the ballots be recounted at least under uniform rules.

Sixth Division.

"Cæsar had his Brutus," so also has the Record base ball team had it's Williams.

Joe Goodkey's desire for less newspaper notoriety seems to be on the point of realization.

Gene Smith, once of the Record, has signed with the Defrees Street Terriers for the balance of the season.

L. P. Kenny has been transferred from the First Division and is acting as assistant foreman during the absence of W. J. Dow.

Joseph A. Dries, of this Division, is ill with typhoid fever. He has been removed from his home in Langdon to the hospital.

A. K. Williamson has been transferred to this Division from the Fifth. Mr. Williamson was in this Division during the last session.

Frank A. Vinton, linotype machinist, has resigned. Mr. Vinton had not yet completed his probationary period, but during his stay here made many warm friends.

Ansley C. Martin, of this Division, leaves to-day for New York City, where he will take steamer passage for Galveston, Texas. Mr. Martin will be absent for three months.

Since the disbandment of the Record base ball team John N. Cotter is in negotiation with the Boston Americans for a place with the tail enders. Johnnie is no has "bean" by any means.

Everybody seems happy over the breaking up of the night force. Those who composed it happy that they are again on day work, and those who were on day work are glad to have the night boys back again.

The annual excursion of G. P. O. Council, National Union, occurs next Wednesday. The pleasure of last year's excursion was marred by heavy rains, and it is to be hoped that next Wednesday will prove to be a bright day.

The Illinois Republican Association has selected Monday, July 3, as the date for its annual excursion to Marshal Hall. Anybody who ever took in the Illinois Association excursion before will not fail to be present on the coming occasion

I was warmly congratulated last week on securing for publication a perfectly up-to-date Brockwell joke, the one published having just reached its majority. The trouble with Brocky's jokes heretofore is that they have been off the ice too long.

"Lanston is quiet," said the Washington Post's financial paragrapher last Sunday. This information is given for the benefit of members of the Fifth and Sixth Division Chapels who have just about reached the conclusion that even the stock couldn't keep quiet.

W. H. Anglin, Merg 27, will not attend the army maneuvers at Harper's Ferry this year. Last year he occupied a prominent position with the District Militia horse guard, but feels that his experience in that line was completed in one encampment.

The nameless one from the Second Division quits the arena of G. P. O. pen pushers with the statement that what he thinks about the linotype in connection with Specification work "goes." He will probably devote his future time to the study of "economic" questions as applicable to G. P. O. work.

The many friends of Thomas L. Jones, the noted G. P. O. tenor singer, will be pleased to learn that he has recently become tenor soloist for the Metropolitan Presbyterian Church on Capitol Hill, having resigned a similar position with the Lutheran Memorial Church. Each year finds Mr. Jones occupying a more exalted position in the musical world. The ever-readiness of both he and his talented wife to assist Columbia Union in its various entertainments have won for each a big place in the hearts of all printerdom.

Charles Gardner, Merg 32, has a friend in the country who supplies his household with fresh country eggs. Out of the goodness of his heart he posted a notice recently saying anyone desiring the same could get them by seeing him. Now Joseph A. Dries lives out near Langdon, and has quite a large chicken farm, but for some reason the number of eggs gathered have been on the decline lately. When Dries read Gardner's notice about the eggs he paused for a moment, then remarked: "That's funny; I have lots of hens and no eggs. Gardner has lots of eggs and no hens. I'm not saying anything, but thinking a whole lot." Everybody gets one guess as to where Gardner gets the eggs.

Out of the G. P. O. Base Ball League has passed the Record nine. Like Samson of old pushing down the pillars to the temple, Manager Johnnie Williams has kicked the very foundation from under it. The franchise which allowed this noble aggregation of would-be base ballists to get beaten twice a week has passed into other hands, and from down town come the boys in padded pants to battle for supremacy on the Mahone lot. When asked if he had sold any of the players, Manager Johnnie Williams turned a sort of drab color and exclaimed: "What! Me sell any players? Not on your life. I had no players to start with. There wasn't one in the bunch who could play tiddle-de-winks at a parlor social. Me sell 'em! I don't think!" And thus only memory remains of the once famous Record base ball team.

The death of George A. Plummer, of the First Division, of heart failure, following closely that of Albert K. Mundheim, each of whom were connected with the Sixth Division during the past session, necessarily brings up the question as to what relation a large Mergenthaler machine room has to an employee's physical condition. While I do not think that either the gas fumes or the rattle of machinery could possibly affect the heart, it is barely possible that had either remained away from such conditions he might have been alive to-day. At the St. Louis convention Delegate Frank Kidd introduced a resolution calling for an International medical commission to gather statistics showing the effects of machine work upon the human system, but which was not adopted. And while it may be that such statistics would prove no material benefit, they would, nevertheless, have been interesting, and it is not at all impossible that some day the Government may require a physical examination of an employee before allowing him to become a Mergenthaler operator, just as it now requires a man to take a physical examination before placing him on the rolls as a laborer, or in the railroad car as a mail clerk. In the light of past events it looks like it would be a good thing to do.

MEMENTO MORI.

The unseen archer, with his fatal shaft,
Has laid another victim, without warning, low;
Who'll be the next, like Mundheim, from our midst
Into the mystery and the darkness of the grave to go?

Ah, could we, with unclouded vision look
And mark the time when we that foe should meet,
How sad would be the journey now we make
Until we, too, fall victims at the archer's feet.

But through the darkness and the gloom there comes,
To those with ear attent, a voice from out the sky:
"Fear not, discouraged, weary one, but trust in Me,"
And thou the foe shall conquer, though thou die.

Among The Building Trades

EDITED BY W. E. KENNEDY.

TILE LAYERS.

Ceramic and Encaustic Tile Layers hold their next convention in Boston, in June. The Local here have elected D. J. Dowd, W. E. Thompson, and J. McVey to represent them. All three of these gentlemen need no introduction to the members of organized labor here, being well known in the local movement for several years. That they will ably represent their Local on the floor of the convention their many friends here feel assured of.

The Amalgamated Sheet Metal Workers are now taking a referendum vote on the proposition of holding a special convention in this city in August.

* * * *

THE PAINTERS LOCKOUT.

At the time of going to press there is no change in the situation of the "lockout." The master painters say: "You either work with paperhanger scabs or don't work at all." The painters say: "The paperhangers have the sanction of our general officers. They are a part of our organization, and we can't work with the men (?) who scab on them."

So it remains; and the painters, rather than prove disloyal to their brothers, prefer to "walk the street."

* * * *

THE PAPERHANGERS STRIKE.

After a number of conferences between this trade and their employers, there seems to be no change in the situation. While all these meetings have been conducted with the best of feeling on the part of each, yet the employers insist upon conditions that would not be acceded to by any self-respecting body of Trades Unionists. They have even promised to take back their members who forgot or ignored their obligation at a price that would be trifling even to those members, and to the non-unionist, who filled their places. They have offered to reduce their initiation fee to a very small sum, but the employers say: "Clean of the slate, or no work." This they cannot do, so it is a continuance of the warfare.

* * * *

The press reports of the unusual amount of activity in the building lines in this city is responsible for the floating of many more mechanics than there will be any use for. Mr. Joseph Reilly, business agent for the Carpenters, tells me that even now, when the demand for men in that trade is larger than ever before that there are at least more than 200 carpenters here than the work demands or will demand. I hope our different exchange papers will call attention to this fact, for if it is continued much suffering will be entailed on "stranded" mechanics.

* * * *

Postmaster-General Cortelyou's remarks discouraging trades unionism among the Government employes is surely not based upon any experience of good that mutual admiration societies in the different Departments have done. Such associations are to be found in each of the Departments, and were, I presume, in the G. P. O., but were they responsible for the scale of wages paid to the mechanics in that Office?

There are a number of electrical mechanics, employed in the Department over which that gentleman presides—Post Office. Do they receive, not more, but even as much as similar mechanics in that trade receive from every electrical contractor in this city who employ men of that craft? If they do not let them form (if they have not already done so) one of those societies and see how long it will be before they can get Mr. Cortelyou to agree to pay them not any more, but just as much as men in that trade are paid, outside of Government service? The writer does not think that the Government should be asked to pay more than private firms, but he does think they should be liberal enough to pay as much, and is of the opinion that if this matter be called to the attention of the "Square Deal" man, that there would be no need of either Trade Unions or "Mutual Admiration Societies" in the different Departments.

* * * *

Isn't it too bad, that just because the Employers Association ran a little "shy" on Caucasian strike-breakers out in Chicago recently that their "filling in" with Negroes caused Tim Tickle such a spasm. I tremble to think what would happen to Tim if the Santa Fe should do any "filling in."

* * * *

Have you noticed how refreshingly, and in this particular instance, brutally, frank our friend the Socialists are? "Prof. Oomty Boompty will lecture on the Labor Problem and Party Politics. Every workingman and every man who is working the workingman, etc." I felt somewhat hurt when they mailed me one, 'till I learned they had not neglected the Central Labor Union delegates.

* * * *

There is considerable consolation in the knowledge that on all those bills drawn and passed for the benefit of the working classes that have to be tested for their constitutionality before the Supreme Court, that while we didn't win we was "mos' powful" close to it.

* * * *

More power to ye's, Mr. Lawson. The people knew they were being done, but didn't know just how until you told 'em; gladly will we change the old adage, and make it read: "When Franzied Financiers Fall Out, Just men Get Their Dues.

* * * *

BAKERS UNION, NO. 118.

What the Garment Workers Union has been to the employes of that class of work in the sweat shops of the large cities will about explain the good that has resulted to the bakers by their organization. When Local No. 118 was formed in this city the bakers were receiving in wages from $3 to $9 a week, and for these large salaries were working on an average of eighteen hours a day. Results of organizing: Wages, $16.50 to $35.00 a week; hours, ten per day.

This Local, to make such headway, has received much assistance from the other organized trades, and thoroughly appreciate it, too. Nearly all the bakeries employing any help are employing their members. A few however, are to the bad. At present they are concentrating their efforts on the firm of George J. Schuerger, 216 Ninth street southeast, and should organized labor, particularly in the Navy Yard, render their usual assistance, Mr. Schuerger will soon "come to." Trades Unionists in Navy Yard, "get busy".

The Colored Man as a Unionist.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

The recent unjust wholesale condemnation of the colored race, by a correspondent who was evidently carried away by the contemplation of the means resorted to in the effort to crush labor with labor, has borne good results. It did the colored people no harm, and it brought into the broad daylight the sense of fairness, the eminent justice that is characteristic of the membership of Columbia Union. More than thirty-five years ago, when to do so was an innovation, it opened wide its doors to Union printers of color who desired to become members of the organization. It is pleasant to state that in all that time not one of the race has proved untrue to the obligation that sealed his entrance. And if other trades organizations would be equally broad, would welcome men who would gladly stand shoulder to shoulder with organized workingmen, we should gradually hear less of the colored strike breakers. So long as the contrary policy is pursued, so long as men will work in hardship and even in peril rather than have their dependent families suffer, the cause of fair wages and living conditions will be weak because of the necessities of those whom Union men see fit to bar out from their organizations.

Speaking of colored men as a whole, it is but to state the truth that there are among them those whom to blow up with a charge of dynamite would be a waste of good material, while there are also among them those who are worthy of respect in every relation. The same, you will say, can be observed of the white race. My personal experience with men of color has been very satisfactory. I have found them to be faithful to their obligations, appreciative of any kindness or consideration I might have found occasion to show them, and I have some friends among them whose good will for me is sincere and by no means based on "hope of favors to come." I am glad and proud of our membership to note the fairness that characterized the comments anent this matter, published in your last issue.

CONTENT.

I have no speedy private yacht,
No racing auto mine,
I have no diamonds rich or rare,
Nor brown stone mansion fine.
I have no power to corner food,
No railroads I control;
I can not force great tribute from
The poor who must have coal.

But I have what no gold can buy—
For loved ones watch and wait
Each evening as the daylight dies
Beside my cottage gate.
No gold have I, but better far,
I've health and conscience clear;
And what I have is e'er unsoiled
By blood or bitter tear.

I have no racing stable grand,
No mansion by the sea;
I have no cellars stocked with wines,
No servants wait on me,
No liveried footman stands on guard
To wait my beck and call;
No polished floor nor Persian rugs
Adorn each room and hall.

But I have something better far
Than all these signs of wealth;
I've two strong arms with which to work
And love and home and health.
A cheerful welcome waits for me
Each evening at my door;
And baby's playthings speak to me
When scattered o'er the floor.

I envy not their vaunted wealth,
I envy not their power,
For them the birds no sweeter sing,
No sweeter smells the flower,
No brighter shines the sun for them,
No softer blows the breeze—
And I am happy as a king
With loved ones on my knees.

—WILL M. MAUPIN.

PIKELETS.

THE THREE DROMIOS.

Three jolly old cronies each morning do meet
In famed Jackson alley, 'mid its odors so sweet;
Persistent they stand, being then upright at least,
Communing together in a daily love feast.
But why are they there?—well, p'raps nobody cares—
Though certain we are they're not saying their prayers;
Their prayers, did we say?—well, just here we should smile—
'Cause prayers from those three would be scarcely worth while;
Yet there you can find 'em, in a sort of a jam
Until each goes his own way to "work" Uncle Sam.
Thus jog along the three cronies—their fidelity's touchin'—
And not one finger's raised to Wheeler, Carr, o'er McCutcheon.

MANY STIRRING EVENTS.

The cowslips down in the pasture, so green,
The cornstalks whither it listeth at will;
The barnswallows in new nests mighty keen,
And the butterflies all around the dunghill.
The catfishes for food in the stream at high noon,
And pell-mell the wild bullrushes down by the marsh.
While through the night the dogwood bark at the moon,
And the woodsheds bring tears o'er treatment so harsh.
Meanwhile the crocuses a cuss not to the good.
Leaving the salmon the tongue, unchanted unsung,
While the gay woodpecker pecks a peck of dead wood,
And the grasshopper hops the green grass blades among.

A VERY INTERESTING DEBATE

The "Open Shop" Policy Furnishes a Theme For Discussion.

GEORGE WASHINGTON WINS OUT

An Enthusiastic Audience Cheered on Its Favorites—The Trio Representing George Washington University Receive an Ovation at Conclusion of Debate.

Gaston Hall, Georgetown College, on the evening of May 27, held nearly a thousand enthusiastic supporters for the success of their favorites in the debate held between Georgetown University and George Washington University.

The subject for debate was the "open shop." Georgetown took the affirmative in advocacy of its beneficent features, while George Washington took the negative.

The debate was by far the most exciting and interesting one ever held between the two colleges, the conclusion, on the findings of the judges being announced, marking an outburst that could be called boisterous under any other conditions.

The verdict of the judges was practically that the affirmative had failed to sustain their position, which in effect was a decision in favor of the negative.

Lack of space prevents our giving any more than a few of the telling points made by the gentlemen maintaining the negative for George Washington University, but we give the concluding defence in full, that part being ably handled by Mr. Edelstein.

Resolved, That the open shop subserves the better interests of the laboring classes.

Interpretation: The term "open shop" shall be interpreted to mean any shop in a trade where union and non-union men work together.

R. BAXTER PHARR,
First speaker for negative.

Mr. President, Honorable Judges, Ladies and Gentlemen:

Before examining the arguments just advanced in support of the affirmative case, as the preceding speaker has interpreted it, the negative feels justified in stating what we understand this question to involve.

The term "better interests" means precisely what it says—interests, not rights. I may have a right to walk on one leg, but it would not be to my interests to do so. Likewise, a man may have an abstract right to accept work for 20 cents a day and starve, but it would not be to his interests to do so if higher wages are possible. Therefore the affirmative are begging the question when they say the non-union man has a right to stay out of the union unless they show that it is to his interest to stay out. And the interests of the laboring classes, all economists agree, consist in higher wages, fewer hours, better conditions of employment, and a higher standard of life.

* * * * *

The country is full of employers' organizations whose express purpose is the advocacy of the open shop. They even publish periodicals in its behalf. One of them bears the name, The Open Shop, issued, they frankly tell, without regard to expense. Some employers, moreover, like Messrs. Parry and Nunemacher, have become itinerant lecturers on the blessings of the open shop.

On the other hand, laborers and labor organizations are known to favor either the closed or the union shop, and the great majority of them are actively opposed to the open shop. In fact, we challenge the affirmative to show us a single important group of laborers which is actively working for the open shop and against the union shop. Is it necessary to explain these familiar facts? Does it require much keenness to perceive that behind such phrases as "individual liberty" and "the spirit of '76" lies the employers' desire for lower wages, longer hours, and untrammeled quest of profits? Shall we not infer that the employers' interests, and not those of the laboring classses, are subserved by the open shop? For if that inference be false the employers' advocacy of the open shop, combined with the laborers' opposition to it, can be explained only on the preposterous assumption that the employers—bless their dear souls—know the interests of the laborers better, are more concerned to have them prevail, and are more willing to spend time, money, and energy in their behalf than the laborers themselves—poor, benighted brutes.

* * * * *

"It is because he wants cheap labor that the employer promotes immigration," says Robert Hunter, in his recent book on "Poverty." While our products are protected from the products of cheap foreign labor, yet our labor must suffer the unrestricted influx of hordes of cheap foreign laborers, with their lower standards of living and their depressing influence on wages. And Prof. Adams, of Wisconsin University, tells us that the chief force, in fact, the sole means of raising the foreign laborer to the American standard of living, is the labor organization.

LEONIE BONE,
Second speaker for negative.

My first colleague pointed out some of the benefits of unionism, and urged that the unions are entitled to speak on behalf of the whole laboring classes. Now if the unions are the principal custodians of the interests of the laboring classes—a fact very generally admitted among economists—it follows that whatever strengthens the unions helps the laboring classes. There can be no doubt that the great aim and weapon of the union is the union shop, for without it the union can accomplish its purpose precariously, and only in a few exceptional cases; while with it the union can attain all its just and proper objects. We of the negative have elected, therefore, to advocate the union shop as opposed to the open shop. We are not, bear in mind, advocating the closed shop, and all discussion which assumes that we defend the closed shop is devoid of foundation. The distinction between the closed shop and the union shop is familiar and current.

Henry White, in the North American Review for January, states that "the term union shop is made to apply to places where only union members are employed without the employers agreeing to follow this course; but in the closed shop the employer expressly agrees to exclude non-unionists."

Prof. John R. Commons, of the University of Wisconsin, a leading authority on these matters, says:

"The closed shop is one which is closed against the non-unionist by a former agreement with the union. The union shop, one where irrespective of the agreement, the employer as a matter of fact has only union men."

* * * * *

Open any text-book on Economics—say that of Mill, or Marshall,or Hadley,or Gide, or Bullock, or Fetter—and you will find at least half a dozen reasons why the isolated workman cannot expect to cope with the employer.

As Prof. Bullock, of Harvard, puts it:

"Although in theory the labor contract is a voluntary agreement freely entered into by employer and laborer, the economist finds that this freedom is often more nominal than real."

Dr. Washington Gladden says still more forcibly:

"It is ridiculous to talk of freedom of contract when the employe is a single individual. The freedom of the man outside the gates is simply the freedom of taking what is offered him or starving. The only kind of bargaining by which the laborer can preserve for himself a vestige of freedom is collective bargaining."

* * * * *

In his text-book on Labor Problems, Prof. T. S. Adams, of the University of Wisconsin, says, on page 227:

"The present function par excellence of the labor organizations is collective bargaining, and collective bargaining is the inevitable precursor of industrial peace."

Now why is the union shop better able to secure collective bargaining than the open shop?

The testimony of several eminent economists and of the Industrial Commission's experts should be valuable evidence on this score. We quote from the final report of the Commission, as follows:

"The union can exercise little control over the conditions of labor if there is a large body of unorganized men who do not join in collective bargaining."

Dr. George Hodges, in his essay on Unions, declares that the "whole reason for being of the union is that by collective bargaining it may maintain for the working classes a proper standard of living."

* * * * *

The objection that the union shop arbitrarily fixes the level of wages scarcely needs answering, for it is well known that the standard wage fixed by the union is merely a minimum wage, and there is nothing to prevent the employer from declining to hire men whose services are not worth so much to him, nor from paying higher wages to men whose work is worth more. Whatever leveling the union shop accomplishes is a leveling up, not a leveling down. As a matter of fact, the best workmen get much more than this minimum wage. The Labor Commissioner of Iowa, for instance, reports that the wages of the most proficient workmen in the organized trades of that State exceed the minimum wage rate on an average of 33 per cent.

SAM EDELSTEIN,
Third speaker for negative.

My colleagues have discussed some of the benefits resulting from organized effort and have shown you that the union shop is essential to the maintenance of these benefits. It now devolves upon me to point out the evil effects of the open-shop policy.

Nearly all students of the labor question agree that the trade union movement is sound in principle and that the union is the bulwark of the interests of labor. Clearly, then, any policy that will retard this movement or injure the union must be detrimental to the laboring classes. Our first indictment then against the open shop is that it will ruin the unions by exposing them to attack from two points: First, by secession of their members, and, second, by placing a dangerous weapon in the hands of the employer.

First. A shop cannot remain half union and half non-union. It must eventually become one or the other. The reason is plain. The principal objects of organization are to raise wages, shorten hours, and better the conditions of employment. Unless the union accomplishes these things the men will not long remain in the unions. If there is a large number of non-union men in the shop and the union is unable to enforce its demands the employer will not recognize or deal with the union; therefore the organization is fruitless and the members withdraw. If the union does succeed in obtaining concessions from the employer and the non-union men share the benefits there naturally arises great discontent in the ranks of the union, for, as Prof. Commons says:

"If union men see non-unionists enjoying the same privileges without the expense of union dues, and especially if the foreman shows a preference to non-union men, they too will demand exemption from union burdens. Thus the union disintegrates and a cut in wages or a stretch in hours cannot be warded off."

But assuming for the sake of argument that the men do not abandon the union for this reason, what happens during depressions in trade? The non-union men, in order to retain their positions, are first to cut the union wage scale. The union men, seeing they are about to be undone by their non-union brethren, secretly meet the cut in wages, desert the ranks of the union because it can no longer maintain union conditions, and the dissolution of the union naturally follows.

Second. That the employment of non-union men is a dangerous weapon in the hands of the employer is a self-evident proposition. As the union always asserts the interests of its members by demanding a shorter workday and a just share of the proceeds as wages, the employer naturally desires to rid himself of its influence, and therefore give preference to non-union men when he has any vacancies to fill or discharges union men when he reduces his force. As stated by Mr. Ray Stannard Baker, in the December number of McClure's Magazine:

"If the right of the employer to hire union and non-union men indiscriminately is exercised without restraint, it means that the employers will fill up their shops with non-union men, because non-union men, unprotected by organization, will work cheaper, and that ultimately means the end of unionism and all that it stands for."

The same conclusions were voiced before the American Economic Association at its convention in Chicago, December last, by Mr. T. K. Webster, a prominent manufacturer of that city; Prof. John R. Commons, of Wisconsin University; Prof. John Graham Brooks, of Harvard, and others.

But, Honorable Judges, the best evidence that the open shop means the destruction of the unions is the testimony of the employers themselves, who, under the guise of advocating the freedom of the laboring man, have adopted this means of ridding themselves of the unions.

Mr. Charles L. Eidlitz, president of the Building Trades Association, made the astounding remark that "the good labor union is one that does not exist."

Mr. Ready, in an official circular of the Citizens' Alliance, says: "The open shop at all hazards. By fair means if possible; by foul means if necessary."

In a recent speech Mr. David M. Parry, the head and front of the whole open-shop agitation, stated that "the task of the Employers' Association is to pull up root and branch the un-American institution of organized labor as constituted to-day."

When these confessions are supplemented with the information that Messrs. Parry, Post, Kirby, and Eidlitz, the "Big Four" of the open-shop movement, boast that they have destroyed nearly 1,500 local unions during the past year by establishing the open shop, and that some of them refuse to allow a member of any union to work in their establishments, I believe I am justified in saying that this open-shop agitation was conceived in iniquity, born in hypocrisy, and is now being nurtured at the hands of unnatural parents. Just picture to yourselves the amazing spectacle of the Hon. D. M. Parry, who recently reduced wages 25 per cent in his so-called open shop, pleading from public platforms for the welfare of the poor downtrodden non-unionist. Why the case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde sinks into utter insignificance when compared with this stupendous example of ridiculous inconsistency!

Another serious objection to the open shop is that it means constant discord between the union and non-union men. It requires but a moment's reflection to perceive that the presence of two such antagonistic elements in the same shop must result in open rupture. Bitter experience has taught the unions to look upon every non-unionist as a menace to union regulations and wages. Naturally the more persistent the non-unionists are in refusing to join the union the more bitter become the relations between the parties, and a strike often follows. The gentlemen of the affirmative are therefore placed in this predicament. They must either convince you that the open shop, with industrial strife, subserves the better interests of the laboring classes or they must admit that it is preferable to have peace even though it be in a union or non-union shop, in which event they lose their case.

The affirmative have entertained you with such platitudes as "the right to work," "freedom of contract," "infringement of liberty," and what nots. It is true they have pointed out some abuses of unions, but they have treated the "open shop" purely from the academic or theoretical standpoint, and have endeavored to cloud the issues of debate by arousing your prejudices against the unions. We of the negative, however, feel that we are dealing with a condition, not a theory, and have therefore gone directly to the workshop to ascertain the merits of this question. We have shown you the beneficial results of the union shop. Our opponents have utterly failed to show you that the establishment of the open shop has resulted or will result even in a slight degree in higher wages, shorter hours, or better conditions of employment, and these, economists tell us, are the interests of the working classes. They have not done so because it cannot be done. On the contrary, I shall now proceed to show you that where the open shop has superseded the union shop wages have decreased and a longer workday followed. These reductions in wages and increase in hours not only affect the particular shops where they are introduced, but often cause disastrous changes throughout the industry, because other employers, in order to meet the competitive prices of unscrupulous ones, must also reduce their wages and lengthen their hours or be driven out of business.

The following are but a few of thousands of instances of wage reductions and increase in hours in open shops:

The Washburn-Crosby Milling Company, of Minneapolis, established the open shop last year, and reduced wages of packers from $2.75 to $2 per day; sewers and nailers, from $2.25 for eight hours to $1.50 for ten hours; bran packers, from $2.08 for eight hours to $2.20 for twelve hours. In 1903 the Illinois Steel Co. and the H. C. Frick Coke Co. both declared for the open shop and a reduction of 20 per cent. In the summer of 1904 the beef trust established the open shop and reduced wages from 15 to 40 per cent, added one to three hours to each workday, and made each man do 33 per cent more work than was required under the union shop. The Carnegie Steel Works reduced wages of heaters, under the open shop, from $3,000 to $1,500 per annum and those of helpers from $6 per day of seven hours to $3.70 per day of twelve hours. The Jersey Dry Dock Company opened their shops and reduced wages 25 per cent. The machine textile printers in the American Print Works, of Fall River, Massachusetts, were reduced from $22 to $16 per week. In 1902 the works of the United States Steel Corporation in South Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul, Joliet, and Pittsburg simultaneously declared for the open shop and a reduction in wages of nearly 30 per cent. On September 10, 1904, 12,000 men in the International Harvester Company and 7,000 in the Pullman Car Company were given the alternative of working in an open shop at a reduction of from 10 to 20 per cent or receive their discharge.

These wholesale wage reductions are the blessings of industrial liberty for which our friends on the affirmative so eloquently plead on behalf of the laboring classes! Now I ask you in all candor, Honorable Judges, whether you would rather be so-called free and independent workmen and work in an open shop at $2 per day of twelve hours, with no voice whatever in regulating your conditions of employment, than join a union and by collective action secure $3 per day of only eight hours? If you would not work in an open shop under such conditions, then you should decide that the open shop does not subserve the better interests of the laboring classes.

Just one further observation before I conclude. A short time ago the Supreme Court of the United States decided that it was a violation of the Constitution for any State to pass laws regulating the hours of employment. This leaves the laboring classes without any redress through legislative enactment for the enforcement of a decent workday so as to enable them to enjoy at least some of the blessings of life. Where shall they now look for help? Shall it be to the employer or the open shop? Go to the sweat shops of this country where the open shop prevails in all its glory and ask some of those unfortunate victims of filth, misery, and disease how long they work each day, and the answers that come from these so-called free and independent workmen are such as to put the blush of shame even upon the feelingless cheeks of Mammon. Day and night they work with no intermission, save a few moments now and then to gulp down a bite of food and steal a little sleep. The sunken eyes, blanched cheeks, shriveled bodies, and stunted minds of these unfortunate beings are the living exhibits which we offer as evidence of the ravages of the open shop. Therefore, since neither legislation nor the open shop can remedy these evils, labor's only salvation lies in the union shop, where the union enforces sanitary conditions of employment, institute a decent workday, and secures for every workman a fair day's pay for a fair day's work. If you deny the laboring classes the benefits of the union shop they will in their despair as a last resort rush into the eager arms of socialism or anarchy and thus plunge this country into the throes of a political and industrial revolution.

To recapitulate the argument of the negative: We contend that the union shop subserves the better interests of the laboring classes, and in support of our contention we have shown you that, as the individual laboring man is at a disadvantage in bargaining with his employer, organization is absolutely necessary for the promotion of the interests of the laboring classes; that higher wages, shorter hours, and more favorable conditions of employment are due to the efforts of labor unions through the union shop; that the collective bargain, recognized as a necessary means of adjusting wages, and conditions of employment can be successfully conducted only in a union shop where all of the employes are under the discipline of the union and are bound by the terms of the agreement; that the older and stronger the union the more conservative and responsible it becomes, thus fostering collective bargaining, arbitration, and industrial peace; that the alleged abuses of labor unions are only incident to and not inherent in the principles of unionism, and that the labor movement should not be condemned because of the shortsighted conduct of some of the members; that the union shop does not restrict freedom of contract, but enlarges this right by placing labor upon an equal footing with capital, and thus insures an equitable adjustment of wages and hours; that the unrestricted exercise of the so-called right to work is untenable when such exercise jeopardizes the best interests of all the men engaged in the trade, and the interests of the individual must therefore in such cases give way to that larger and broader interest of the whole; and, finally, that the union shop deprives no man of any valuable privilege, but rather opens up a larger avenue of employment by welcoming the non-unionist into the membership of the union, and thus permits him to share immediately in the benefits of the union shop.

In addition to establishing these contentions in favor of the union shop, we have shown you that the maintenance of the open shop is objectionable, because it means constant strife and discord among the laboring classes; because it will result in the destruction of the unions and thus remove the only weapons labor has to safeguard its interests; because this open-shop agitation is not an honest fight instituted by and for the benefit of the laboring classes, but is conducted and financed solely in the interests of the employers who desire to destroy the unions; and, lastly, because in nearly every instance where the open shop has superseded the union shop wages have been lowered and a longer workday instituted. For these reasons we hold that the union shop, and not the open shop, subserves the better interests of the laboring classes, and we ask your verdict accordingly.

NAVY YARD ITEMS.

The resignation of H. P. Oram, Sub-Inspector of Buildings, has been accepted.

Hugh Rankin, of Columbia Lodge, has resigned his position in the Yard to accept a more lucrative one in Baltimore.

J. T. Byrne, Department of Yards and Docks, has been transferred to the Bureau of Yards and Docks as clerk at $1,000 per annum.

F. H. Miller, telegraph operator, has been promoted to the position of second clerk Commandant's Office, vice H. H. Brogden, deceased.

The position of telegraph operator in the Commandant's Office has been filled by the transfer of H. F. Dolan from the General Storekeeper's Department.

W. R. Wayland, special laborer, General Storekeeper's Department, has resigned. The vacancy has been filled by the appointment of H. C. Yingst.

W. S. Heath has been transferred from the Bureau of Equipment to the Equipment Department of this Yard as first class structural steel work draftsman.

The Navy Department has approved the plans for the construction of the new wireless telegraph station in the west part of the Yard and work will be started at once.

E. O. Damon has been transferred from the Construction and Repair Department, and appointed shop draftsman at the Office of the Superintendent Construction Fore River Shipbuilding Co., Quincy, Mass.

The following members of Columbia Lodge, No. 174, are on the sick list: D. D. Wilson, Horace Beall, Harry Hackman, J. F. Beall, Charles Appleby, J. J. Buckley, A. L. Shahan, Thomas C. Shipley, Barney Fitzpatrick, W. E. Roberts, and Fred Houghton.

William Bryant, a former employee of the Foundry, had a call for work one day this week. So rejoiced was he in being reinstated that he went to his home in Laurel, Md., and imbibing too much, lost his head to such an extent that he is now charged with the murder of a colored man named Cooper.

Since the installation of a more powerful instrument at the wireless telegraph station, the operators have been able to intercept messages at a distance of five and six hundred miles. One day last week the operator reported hearing wireless communications pass between the Torpedo Station at Newport, R. I., and Point Judith.

I was the recipient of a free pass to the national game Decoration Day, kindly furnished by one of the directors, Judge Connor. The afternoon game was not only strenuous, but exhilerating

I noticed among the thousands of rooters who were making things lively from the bleachers standpoint four of the "Old Timers" from the Yard, who were associated with a well known Senator in base ball games in its infancy. I refer to the venerable Colonel Bradbury, Major Peabody, Parson Emmons, and Private Jimmy Mathinson. From start to finish these old veterans made the welkin ring. So infatuated with the game were they that in the excitement they even threw up their bonnets for the Bean Eaters.

It was a scene that made old men boys again. I regretted very much the absence of one of the quintet, Captain Patsy Brown, who had not recovered from his illness, as noted in a previous article. I felt the influence myself, and would have joined the band, but, I well knew their was no room for kids. So I concluded I would remain with the venerable Judge.

"Do you know the new Secretary of the Navy?" asked Sam Lescalletts of Quarterman Crowther the other day.

"Well, I guess I do."

"Tell us about it," said Jim Mills, as he borrowed a chew of navy plug from the colored messenger.

"It was just this way," remarked Crowther. "In my boyhood days I lived close by the strenuous judge. He had a fine orchard, and we boys had a hankering for the colic; and many times we paid him a visit, generally getting what we went for and often more besides. One day, and it was the last one, and the one I will never forget, we were enjoying ourselves at the Judge's expense, when he suddenly appeared. We all scooted for the fence. All the boys got over but me. Just as I rode the fence something struck me in that part of my anatomy just under my coat tails, and it is the Gospel truth it played as fast as a Maxim gun. The result was I had to sit in school for several days on the corner of the chair. Do I know him? Well, I rather guess I do, and some of you will get acquainted with him in time."

"On the line," yelled the messenger, as the boys scooted to their work as the Captain turned the corner.

CRITICISM.

There are some who seem anxious to undertake the task of criticism. It is very comfortable to their pride to sit in judgment upon the works of others, as they feel as if they had, for the moment at least, assumed a superiority over the person upon whose merits they pass sentence. But this feeling would not exist if they were honest ones. It is only when we feel that a person's fame is in our hands, and that we can decide upon it at will, that the task of criticism seems pleasant. One thing I have observed, that the less qualified a person is to perform the office of critic the more eagerly he takes it upon himself to pronounce upon the merits of others. But it is a truth that there are very few persons who are qualified to perform that office. Such a one must bring to his task an immense quantity of learning, great knowledge of human nature, and a most candid and unprejudiced mind—together with good taste. To conclude, we have a great many critics, but very few who are in any degree fit for the criticism are generally ignorant of the duty of a critic—incompetent to perform it. Not honest to themselves in their opinions, and wholly deficient either in good judgment or good taste.

TIM TICKLE.

Death of Beriah Wilkins.

Beriah Wilkins, publisher of the Washington Post, died rather suddenly at his home in this city on Wednesday. He had been in ill health for some time, but his death was unexpected.

In his relations with his employes Mr. Wilkins was held in high esteem, particularly in the printing trades. During his connection with the Post, in the past fifteen years, no cloud has risen to disturb the relations of the crafts employed on the Post, due to the liberality of his management.

The newspaper world of Washington has lost a valued associate and a progressive and active business man in the death of Mr. Wilkins.

CENTRAL LABOR UNION.

The regular weekly meeting of the Central Labor Union was called to order at 8.05 p. m. on Monday, President Dickman in the chair.

The minutes of the last regular meeting were read and approved.

The Grievance Committee reported progress.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Local No. 13, Metal Polishers, Buffers, Platers, Brass Molders, Brass and Silver Workers, of St. Louis, Mo., calling attention to unfair attitude of Wrought Iron Range Co., of that city, and asking co-operation in bringing that unfair firm to terms. Placed on file.

CALL OF UNIONS.

Bakers and Confectioners, No. 118: Calling attention to George J. Schuerger, 216 Ninth street southeast, being unfair.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

President Dickman appointed Jere F. McCarthy a member of the Grievance Committee, vice Chas. W. Nelson.

Special Committee on "We Do Not Patronize List" reported progress, and that no doubt a report from the committee would be made at next meeting.

Adjourned.

QUIPS AND QUIRTS.

Here is to Sutton, the versatile wight,
Reminiscent, intense, philanthropic!
Long, long may he linger to ponder and write,
With mysterious love as his topic!

Mr. Gompers Returns.

Mr. Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, has just returned from an extended trip to the West.

During his absence he has been very active in advancing the labor movement, his first visit being to Chicago, where he brought about a better feeling between the contending forces in the Teamsters strike and made it possible for the subsequent meetings which it is hoped will bring that titanic struggle to a close.

An address at Dayton, Ohio, was given, and Minneapolis, St. Paul, Denver, Omaha, and Kansas City were visited, in each city the presence of Mr. Gompers being the signal for demonstrations on the part of the organized wage-workers, who have unbounded confidence in his judgment in the settlement of labor questions.

The trip was a success from a labor standpoint, several questions at issue being settled in the various places visited, and Mr. Gompers returned greatly pleased over results accomplished.

Mr. Gompers will leave the city on Saturday to attend a meeting of the Executive Council, which convenes at Scranton, Pa., next Monday.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

It would probably be as impossible for me to make it clear to my anonymous critic, "Ian," that I never lose my temper when writing as it would be for him to write without carping. In my proper person I sometimes "cuss out" what displeases me, but not for the eye of the general public. The carping, fault-finding habit is probably so strong in "Ian" that he feels called upon to administer "friendly correction" to as much of the world as he comes in contact with—from behind the hedge, of course. It is vain for him to pretend that an anonymous attack on a more or less known personage is not unfair and even cowardly; for it is so recognized everywhere. He exhibits the usual trait of the chronic fault-finder in beginning his criticism of my writing by flying to the defense of my friend John Kiernan, my "analysis" of whom has been almost unanimously accepted as a true one; by pursuing it in referring to my "support" of six candidates for delegate when I could vote for but three and by a pitiful allusion to the three italic words (eight letters) that I used. I will not put it beyond the range of his intellect to understand that I never pretend to support any candidate in these columns except in the manner I have done—speaking well of all—for I have so stated. But on a number of occasions I have defended candidates from the attacks of their enemies. It is true that I have expressed my impatience at the "whited sepulchres" of religion—those who by lip service only testify their faith—and it is also true that others have done so as long as sham and its defenders have existed. So I can lay no more claim to originality in so doing than "Ian" can in scolding about my doing so. I am aware that "revealed truth" must be treated with the utmost tenderness, because, though progressing with the age, it always keeps just a sufficient distance in the rear to make any suggestions regarding it highly offensive to the literalists in their efforts to make allegories fit facts. I have no criticism to make of the literary style of "Ian." He is an "intelligent opponent" who is fully aware of the fact. But he is intolerant, like all of his intelligent class. I shouldn't wonder if he derives his pseudonym from the class he so strenuously defends—Christ-Ian with Christ eliminated.

John Harrison, Jr., aged 46, died on May 29, of tuberculosis, at the village of Inlet, Hamilton County, N. Y., where he had gone, as a last resort, in search of health. He worked in the G. P. O. about seven years ago, but resigned to take a position on the New York World, where he remained until recently.

I have received from President Lynch the June Bulletin of the Eight-Hour Committee of the I. T. U. It shows that 71 English-speaking unions and 17 German-American unions already have the eight-hour day and that 54 unions have arrangements by which eight hours will become the legal day's work. Among the unions which already have the eight-hour day are those of San Francisco, Denver, Portland (Ore.), Colorado Springs, Scranton, Seattle, and Sioux City, all of respectable size, while among those which have arranged for it are Columbus, (Ohio), Dubuque, Troy, Raleigh, Wheeling, Terre Haute, Salt Lake, and other important unions. While there will undoubtedly be strenuous opposition to meet in certain cities, and while we may lose in some places, few doubt that on and after January 1, 1906, eight hours will be recognized almost universally as the legal day's work, and as we regain the offices which we shall have lost it will be on the eight-hour basis. There is much work to do and we can not afford to have discord in our membership. Steadfastness of purpose and loyalty to our organization and its officers will as certainly make us winners as that the time shall come.

Among the tenor singers of the G. P. O. who are in the enjoyment of lucrative church engagements is Griffith Evans, of the Fifth Division the last time I had him located, who is the tenor of Dr. Kelly's Fourth Presbyterian Church. Mrs. Evans, I am informed, is also a vocalist, having an artistic contralto voice by which she has gained much praise. Both, I believe, are of that great musical nationality, the Welsh, to which none other, as a whole, can compare.

My friend M. D. L. Shrope, of the Easton, (Pa.) Journal, paid me the compliment of copying a story of mine, "The New Union at Caruthers," which President Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor, deemed worthy of a place in the American Federationist, but to which magazine Shope did not give credit. But he paralyzed me with his introduction, as thus:

The following article, from the pen of A. F. Bloomer, of Washington, D. C., is about as clear cut on the subject of unionism as any article we have ever read. It is, however, a question with us as to whether the article was original with Bloomer or copied, but we give him credit to help cover postage, etc.

I can only figure that he thought the story so much better than he had believed I could write that he hesitated to accept it as my production. While this solution makes him more complimentary to the story than to me, I am under compulsion to accept it, knowing a good deal about Shrope and his processes of reasoning, even if I have not been luxuriating in the pleasure of his personal acquaintance.

By the death of Beriah Wilkins, of the Washington Post, this city has lost the ablest of all the newspaper men she has ever had. He realized that it was impossible to make a great paper except by the employment of the best talent available, and from the highest to the lowest he always employed the best, not haggling over salaries and wages. As a consequence, his newspaper is celebrated throughout the country as being without a superior, and since the death of the late George W. Childs there has not been a proprietor better beloved by his employees. Finding the Post a mediocre four-page paper, he built it up to its present splendid proportions, adding largely to his possessions and at the same time winning the hearts of the citizens of Washington and the admiration of the newspaper world.

Dirty Bird Belcher takes it so hard that a tender-hearted man can hardly find it in himself to add to his misery. My "threat" to which he refers, "And it is possible that some may yet be sorry," etc., only meant that he might yet become sufficiently decent to realize what a contemptible part he has played, of which he has already given some evidence by his attempted explanations of his motives; so he may calm his foundationless fears. Belcher's "mind of his own" is a particularly good joke in referring to the late election, for neither his alleged facts nor his "honest convictions" were his own.

George P. Nichols, of the Baltimore Sun, ran over and visited his friends in the G. P. O. last Monday. George is a half-sister to Washington unionists, and he has never failed to do good service for Columbia Union when she needed him.

* * * *

Last Sunday, while I was sitting in a physician's carriage, awaiting him while he was at the bedside of a patient, a neat-appearing and apparently sane gentleman stepped up to me and said:

"My brother, have you been converted?"

"No, my brother," I replied. "Having been born right and having endeavored to stay right, I have never felt the need of conversion."

"Everybody has need of conversion," said he. "'Except ye be born again ye cannot enter the kingdom of heaven.' Read and search the Scriptures," and from that he went on in the usual fashion, principally Scriptural quotations, to which I replied with as much force as I could, and for twenty minutes we had as lively a hammer-and-tongs theological discussion as one would want to get away from. Probably neither of us advanced anything highly original, but our earnestness made amends, and we separated without either of us having weakened the faith of the other; so that at least no harm was done. I really believe that he accomplished more than I did, for he made me think, and I doubt if anything I said operated to change his habits in that regard a hair.

What he said caused me to think, and I did not think of so selfish a thing as my own soul's salvation either. I thought as to the effect the possession of religion has on a man, and I ran over in my mind those whom I know who are deeply religious. I could bring to mind those who had mended their ways after becoming converted, so far as their personal habits were concerned, to their advantage in health, in worldly possessions, and in security of employment. To that extent they had benefited themselves. But I could not recall a case where it had made him more companionable, more helpful to others, more charitable of their faults, more generous, or in any way had benefited any but himself. He had better health, he worked steadier, he had more money—and he wanted more.

Does the possession of religion operate to make us more selfish, more grasping, less regardless of others, less charitable of sin, now that we sin no more?

I cannot bring to mind a skinflint in business, one of those whose every act you must watch, who was not deeply religious. The defaulting bank officer is proverbially "deeply interested in Sunday school work." The greater number of the religious publishing houses are notoriously unfair to their workmen—what we term "rat shops." Even our religious teachers too frequently go wrong with a willing woman; and theft of sermons is so common as to go unchided. It develops at times that the hated saloon—yes, even the bawdy house—pays rent to a shining light in a church.

What is the answer?

Not that church tendency is toward wrong; not that hypocrites go into the church the better to enable them to operate; not that the moral precepts of the church are not gloriously true and good. The answer is that nothing but death can change human nature; that the honest, true, generous man will be honest, true, and generous in or out of the church; that the dishonest, grasping, selfish man will be no less so in the church than he was out; that every man is willing to give himself a clean bill of health morally. This is my belief, based on my observation, and the "Readirags" and the "Chewdarags" and the "Ians" confirm me in it.

In replying to this, kindly discuss my personality and everything I have ever written on any other subject, and if you can find where I have made a grammatical slip it will be an especially strong answer. Suggest that I lose my temper; that I am blasphemous; that I had better stick to union matters; and, finally, inquire by what right I hold and express an opinion any way. You can think of the other mean ways of replying to an "attack on religion" yourself.

I am told that Mr. Goodkey received a decision from President James M. Lynch dismissing his appeal for a recount of the votes cast at the recent election, for the reason that he did not claim to have been deprived of the office for which he was a candidate because of fraud, but merely that he was not given credit for all the votes cast for him—that giving him no standing. As I did not see the decision, I have nothing but hearsay for it.

A. F. BLOOMER.

FOR SALE—Four hundred shares of Nonpareil Mining Co. stock at 25 cents a share. Address Box 10, this office.

Mr. Donath's Proposition.

EDITORS OF THE TRADES UNIONIST:

I gladly comply with Mr. Bloomer's suggestion that I explain my proposition to sell certain property to the Union, and state why, in my judgment, the purchase would be wise. To begin with, there seems no dispute as to the necessity of enlarging as soon as feasible the present building. The hall is too small to be profitably rented, the office accommodations are not sufficient for the good tenant now occupying all the available room, and the only difference of opinion for years has been how the enlargement can best be made. To buy adjoining property on G street means not only a heavy initial outlay, but a very costly reconstruction of the Temple. To build another story would add more office rooms, but prove no aid in augmenting floor space in the hall. Having studied the matter for some time, my conclusion is that the most feasible way, the most economical way, is to go back, clear to Washington street. Property there is cheap, the addition in that direction can be plain brick and mortar, and the vital point in view, to obtain a larger hall and to find more room for the Union's tenant, is easily reached.

The property offered for sale is, first, the frontage corresponding to the Union's frontage on G street. But as this would be of no use unless the private alley, running between it and the Union's building, can be closed, the 22 feet on the west, immediately adjoining, must be acquired. The first piece goes back 80 feet, and back of it is the ten-foot alley. The second piece, the one having 22 feet front, goes back 100 feet. The alley spoken of abuts upon its side, hence this last piece must be bought. By the purchase of the whole the alley in the rear of the Temple can be closed. The Union will then have a frontage on Washington street of 66.03, 44.01 feet of which run back to our lot. The other 22.02 feet run back toward G street 100 feet. The present hall is 44.01 by not more than 70 feet. The purchase of this property will permit a hall of 66.03 feet in width by 100 deep. You can add 20 or 30 feet at the entrance by the present width. This will give us a hall that will be far more than twice as large as the present one, and available for many purposes where our 44 by 70 hall will not answer. The rooms fronting on G street could be made much deeper, and a spacious lobby between them and the hall be lighted from the top. Much less changing of the present structure would have to be done, only a rearranging of the rooms in front and the lighting of the lobby being required.

These are the essential points of the proposition I have submitted. If the Union buys, it will receive at least seven per cent. net from the improvements until such time as the addition is undertaken. Not a penny of additional dues would be necessary to carry the purchase or to improve it later on, and should this purchase induce hereafter a closer scrutiny of appropriations, no member will find fault with that. Again, should, at a day perhaps not so far in the future, it be deemed a good business proposition to sell the property for commercial purposes (for in less than ten years G street will be a business thoroughfare from Seventh street to the Union depot), this Washington street purchase will bring G street prices. The foregoing, told as briefly as the subject permits, are the main points of my proposition. I am financially interested in the property offered, and see no reason why I should disguise that fact. But I would not ask the Union to buy it did I not honestly believe that it would be a wise purchase for the Union to make. Thanking you for your courtesy in giving me so large a part of your space, I am,

Very truly yours,
AUGUST DONATH.

GOSSIP FROM THE G. P. O.

First Division.

A. M. Butler (Slug 18) has resigned.

T. C. McCardell (Slug 35) has been on the sick list.

Though considerably improved in health, Makerup Sherman has not yet reported for work.

Would you believe it? We have heard the names of candidates for delegate in next year's race.

At the close of work on Monday, John Adams and Charles F. Mullin were transferred to the War Branch.

Our good-natured friend, Lillard, we presume, will be a candidate for re-election to the office of secretary.

A. L. Huss was the popular Pennsylvanian referred to, and none of that "bunch of Indians" from Carlisle, Pa.

George R. Boone is in charge of this Division during the absence of Foreman Bowen, who is enjoying a much-needed rest.

On Tuesday Delegate-elect Barnum accompanied Paul J. Maas, labor editor of the Chicago Record-Herald through this Division.

On Monday morning S. H. Battles, of the Library Division, and Harry C. Hayne, of the Proof Room, were transferred to this Division.

James Kane has returned from his seven days' leave. Reports having a good time. By the way June is mighty near an ideal month to go on leave.

Among those on leave not heretofore mentioned are Foreman A. W. Bowen, W. F. P. White, Stephen Th. Westdal, Daniel Miller, George W. Shaffer, James E. Bright, and S. W. Langford.

A mighty nice piece of furniture for the use and convenience of the postmaster has just been delivered by Foreman A. A. Bundy of the carpenter shop.

Fred. H. Berger, of the "cage" staff, did not go fishing on Wednesday. He went to River View with the G. P. O. Council, National Union, annual excursion.

We are pleased to learn that John H. Carr, one of the best known members of the office, has recovered from the serious injuries sustained a few evenings since.

One of the most popular members of this Division has announced his candidacy for chairman of this Chapel—H. W. Templar (Slug 24), on our side of the room. Election will be held on Friday, June 30.

A friend at our elbow says a good picture of John T. Callaghan, of the Post Office Department, and thirty years ago an employee of the Document Room. appeared in the Times of Monday.

On Friday last, H. Clay Evans and C. W. Henshaw were transferred to this Division from the Library Division. Both were cordially greeted by their old friends. For many years they were employed in the old Document Room.

A letter of recent date received by a member of this Chapel from D. W. Bushnell, Chicago, Ill., says, "It looks very much as if we would have trouble the first of next month when our agreements expire. It is rumored that the Typothetae is going to lock us out." The writer, Mr. Bushnell, is well known in this office and worked three or four years in the old Document Room. Mr. B. is employed in a book and job office in Chicago.

With regret we are again called upon to note the serious illness of one of the best known members of this Chapel, James H. Brodnax. Last week we recorded his return to office after a protracted sickness of several weeks, his friends presuming he was on a fair way to recovery. During the past week, however, he has again become very seriously ill, and threatened with pneumonia. The subject of this notice has been employed in the office for a number of years, and being of a cheerful, sunny disposition, and charitable to a friend was exceedingly popular. That he may be speedily restored to his usual good health is the sincere wish of his hosts of friends not only in this Division, but wherever known.

ROUGH WRITER.

Royal Pilsen Beer on Draught. Ladies' Dining room. R. A. Driscoll, North Capitol and G street.

Fifth Division.

I don't know the reason why this Division has never been represented among the correspondence in the TRADE UNIONIST, but I have a notion it was because nobody had the nerve to enter the arena with such experienced writers as Bloomer, Belcher, et al. At any rate, I am going to send in a few paragraphs, and if the editor thinks they are worth printing, perhaps there will be more in the future.

Assistant Foreman Jesse F. Grant returned last week from leave.

The Lanstons have just turned out a job for the Department of Commerce and Labor which required over 20,000 pieces of 16-em rule. Ruleman Chisholm breathed a sigh of relief when the "all" hove in sight.

C. D. Johnson perpetrated a cruel joke on his alley mates recently. He invited them to join him in price-and-a-half refreshments after the whistle blew, and then begged off at 3 o'clock. Griffin and Ward are laying for him.

H. D. Best (Slug 8), on the Lanston, will leave us June 10 to accept a position as head operator of Lanston machines in a large job office in Nashville, Tenn. Mr. Best has served long and faithful under Mr. Cottle, and it is with regret that his many friends bid him adieu. His machine will probably go to Harry Outcalt, who with Ragland and Davis are doing all the subbing in the absence of any of the regular operators.

I attended an entertainment given by the Rebekahs at Northeast Temple last Friday evening, and among the numbers on the program was a bass solo by Mr. C. E. Cook, of Mr. Bowen's Division, and a soprano solo by Mrs. C. E. Morse, wife of Mr. Morse, of this Division. Both selections received hearty and deserved applause. A portion of Henry Weber's orchestra rendered some very pleasing numbers.

Dr. Alfred C. Norcross, our bankman, who recently received his diploma, was the recipient, one evening last week, of a handsome leather satchel, such as used by physicians, together with a pocket emergency case and some other instruments, whose use are beyond our ken, although Colonel Cady said he knew what they were for. The donors were the men in this Division, who have watched Mr. Norcross's progress with interest, and who were glad to have the opportunity to thus show their appreciation of his efforts. The presentation was made by Allan G. Flowers in a short and pleasing manner, to which the doctor responded in kind. This makes two doctors who have graduated from this Division, and we have another in the road—"Dr." B. H. Swain, who will graduate later on—perhaps.

MIKEANI.

Ladies' Dining Room. R. A. Driscoll, N. Cap. and G. Crabs and Clams.

Sixth Division.

Foreman John R. Berg returned to his desk on Monday, having spent the past week on leave of absence.

Dave McConnell, of this Division, has gone to his old home in Beaver, Pa., for the remainder of the June days.

W. H. Francis returned to his Merg. (23) on Monday, having completed a vacation covering a period of sixteen days.

W. I. Reid, the Record cartoonist, returned to his labors in this Division last week, after having passed thirty days visiting in the Southland.

Jack Desmond (Merg. 3) is on leave. A trip to Boston by the sea and a little sight seeing in the New England States is occupying his attention.

With "Ian" and Belcher after his scalp, Brother Bloomer seems to be between the devil and the deep sea. Guess which one is the devil.

It is said the number of deaths and resignations combined in the G. P. O. will average one per day. Who said that few die and none resign?

The fact that Johnnie Williams (Merg. 2) has been absent for the past few days is pretty good evidence in the minds of some people that he didn't give away the Record base ball franchise.

A little boy, weighing ten big pounds, arrived at the home of Charles W. Ellis, copy collator for this Division, at his home in Georgetown, on Sunday morning. Here's to the mother and the boy.

"Work for the eight-hour day. Agitate for the eight-hour day. Organize for the eight-hour day," says an International circular on the subject. Also wear the eight-hour day button—if you can get one.

Word has been received from Joseph A. Dries, who was removed from his home in Langdon to Sibley Hospital suffering with typhoid fever, that he is getting along nicely and that hopes are entertained for a speedy recovery.

"Bill" Mattox, the Sixth Division's Rough Rider, has a new uniform for working purposes. It's a cross between that worn by a plasterer or a paper hanger. However, it seems to answer the purpose for which it was purchased—comfort.

With all due respects to Brother Belcher and Bobbie Burns, I would like to state that it isn't necessary to go to h—l to be roasted like a herrin'. Come over in this Division most any warm day when a strong breeze is blowing and the windows are compelled to be kept closed.

The North Carolinian, published at Elizabeth City, N. C., with Harry T. Young, formerly of this Division, as editor, has made its appearance here. The paper is as neat typographically as it is bright locally and editorially. Harry Young is a bright young fellow with a whole lot of energy in his makeup, and if he doesn't make of his new venture a success no one else need try.

* * * *

Chairman George Hayden was a very "much" surprised man last Saturday when he was presented with a handsome umbrella as a token of esteem by the members of the Sixth Division Chapel. The regular quarterly chairmanship election occurred on Thursday and was a spirited affair from start to finish, four candidates being out for the honors. When the ballots were counted it was found that Chairman Hayden had been re-elected. Upon the announcement of the result the candidate who had received the lowest vote immediately filed a protest alleging fraud on the part of the chairman, and a petition was at once circulated asking for signers for a special Chapel meeting, the petition in reality being a subscription paper for the purpose of purchasing a present for the chairman. A special meeting was held on Friday, at which Mr. Hayden failed to attend. Charges were preferred, however, and a committee appointed to investigate and report. Mr. Hayden being present on the following day another special meeting was held, and the chairman put on the defense. After a "hot time" had been had at his expense, the committee report finding him not guilty was read and adopted, and the presentation speech made.

George Hayden is an F. F. V., and hails from the finished city of Alexandria, where the alfalfa grows. He was accused of using Virginia tactics at the election, thereby continuing himself in office. During the progress of the impeachment proceedings much amusement was had at the chairman's expense, but his conduct during the trying ordeal proved that he is equal to any emergency which may arise.

PIKELETS.

THE ROWLAND-WADE WEDDING.

Now that Irene, the fair, has ceased for all time
To Wade life's purling stream as maid, all alone,
May she ne'er find a land so charming, sublime,
As the happy Rowland she now calls her own.

ANOTHER NUPTIAL KNOT ABOUT TO BE TIED.

Here's to a bright maid of sound reason,
The fond bride soon to be,
In this famous match-making season,
Of a worthy M. D.

May her wedded life e'er be serene—
Ever free from all ills—
And may her hubby ne'er be so mean
As to feed her on pills.

THE COMING CABINET CHANGE.

If at any Cabinet conference hereafter
A bone of contention should bitter bickering start,
'Tisn't likely there'd be real, rollicking laughter,
Should any member attempt to break that Bonaparte.

Roval Pilsen Beer on Draught. Ladies' Dining Room. R. A. Driscoll, North Capitol and G street.

THE OASIS.

Weary and hungry a stranger I came
To the Oasis. Ah! "What's in a name?"
Buried Will Shakespeare in the long ago,
Then "Settled the question" by test, con or pro.

Little by little the Ages have wrought,
Men have debated and "Science" has taught
Until to-day "Some one" edits "New Thought"
With much that is bright and intelligently fraught.

Now here's a question for "Some one" to solve,
What is it makes me this morning resolve
To laud the Oasis as surely the best?
Is it simply because that herein I found rest?

And could say "Now I lay me" and afterward sleep,
Assured that good Angels a vigil would keep,
That 'neath the Sea Crystal God's Mysteries deep
Are reflected in each Golden Harvest we reap?

Or is it because when I first heard the name
And presently read it, there over me came
A sense of the vastness of the Desert waste,
The dry dust of which to my lips has been placed?

The vinegar, wormwood, the sand and the gall,
"The cross of our Christ"—yet sustained through it all.
If need be the scale or "go through a brick wall"
Or soldier-like face e'en the dread cannon ball.

When the voice from within and without met and spoke,
When my soul to conditions inspiring awoke
Ere "the last straw was laid which the camel's back broke,"
Ere I was allowed while thirsty to choke—

An Oasis in Desert I happily found,
The which with pure water did amply abound
Like the chiming of bells came the gurgling sound,
Christ's "water and blood" did my pathway surround.

And I felt that the lives of full many 'twould save,
In fact that 'twould snatch e'en the aged from the grave
That over the soul there might surge sunlit wave
While the Water of Life, consecrating, did lave.

That a word might be said which would last for all time,
That the voice be as clear as when heard in its prime,
That the victory gained might be counted sublime
And retold to the world both in story and rhyme.

A frivolous fancy, an argument lame,
A hackneyed review or a thought that is tame,
Whatever ye will—I shall still stoutly claim
That to one in the world there is much in a NAME.

A FEW MORE PIKELETS.

THE PESSIMIST'S DREAM — PARALYZING A PHANTOM.

The noisiest noise that annoys is the click and the clatter
Of the linotype fiend, which our poor, weary nerves shatter,
And which keeps pegging away ev'ry second and minute,
Chewing up copy as if forty devils were in it;
And not only that, but in its ceaseless song of success
It seems to mock at and deride the poor typo's distress—
Distress that he feels because prospects are many, not few,
That ere long we'll all be on our uppers, with nothing to do
But go on the road, which too frequently leads, helter-skelter,
From a fairly prosperous home to the almshouse's shelter,
Where our nimble fingers can rest, though regrets may be keen,
And where we'll munch our hard tack and double damn the machine.

SCHOOLER VERSUS SCHOLAR.

Between Schooler and scholar there's only one letter,
To say nothing whatever of an "a" for an "e,"
But if Schooler was scholar he'd surely know better
Then abide near a Glenn 'round which a Lyon roams free.

ODE.

To a Knight of the Quill—Gen. H. V. Boynton.

Beauty of the Master's art,
Instilled within thy heart,
Great depth of love is thine
Imparting beauty divine.
For decreed by a wiser power
Souls purity made thee all thou art;
O! beloved knight of the quill
We see beyond the immortality,
Thou art the Master's will.
Art can never portray
Thy divine tenderness—
Or poet's word proclaim
The divinity of your soul,
For all this masterly heighth:
Simplecity was thy might.

THE PAINTERS LOCKOUT.

Just another instance of those "heart-to-heart" talks between them and the Master Painters. Result: Men all gone back to work, and under terms perfectly satisfactory to both. The Master Painters are, I feel sure, glad it is settled, and that they can resume business. And the men—well, with their going back to work and the prospects of what the near future will bring them without a strike, they ought to feel "tickled to death."

* * * *

PAPER HANGERS WIN OUT.

The men return to work, under an agreement that $3.50 a day shall be the rate of pay, beginning September 1.

They have agreed to take in the non-union "strike breakers" at a reduction of their usual initiation fee, and will also take back those of their members who forgot their obligation, on their payment of a small fine.

It is to be hoped that long before there is need for another strike that these forgetful brothers will have learned that it is their Union and not their bosses that takes the first steps to better their conditions. Sometimes these lessons learned make men good Union men. May this be case now.

BRICKLAYERS UNION, NO. 1.

The age of this organization (organized in 1867) seems to make its number (1) quite appropriate. Fighting at all times for trade union rights, seeing their "ups and downs," like all others, it is to-day one of the most successful of trade unions. When the report went out a few months ago, "The Bricklayers strike against the Government" many of us thought "what presumption". This, however, was not the first time No. 1 had tried conclusions with Uncle Sam. Way back in 1869 they did the same. Went out on the Treasury Building to try and enforce the 8-hour day on Saturday. These strikes, of course, are not always successful, but they do emphasize the wants of labor even to Uncle Sam. This Union's dues are but fifty cents a month, but with this they manage to have a treasury that is always open to the needs of their brother unionists. At the time of the Homestead strike they sent $3,000 to aid these workers. To the miners they send $3,300, and but few appeal to this organization—none who are worthy—are refused.

Their membership now is about 900, and when one of them dies, each of their members are assessed $1. This foots up quite a snug insurance for fifty cents a month.

The member who in 1867 was called "that black-headed kid" (John G. Wolfe) is now called "that gray-headed old man," but he is just as active for the best interests of his Union now as he was then, and has been continuously one of its officers since 1869.

BRIDGE AND STRUCTURAL IRON WORKERS.

The Bridgemen, when the Pennsylvania Steel Co. refused to pay the Hoisting Engineers the scale on the highway bridge, immediately ceased work. Splendid lesson for some of the other trades.

THE STEAM FITTERS.

The Steam Fitters are holding their convention in Pittsburg during this week. The Local here sent Charles Schmidt to represent them. This will, no doubt, be a very interesting "powwow," as the Plumbers and Steam Fitters have not yet settled on jurisdiction claims. The Local here has requested the Plumbers to meet their committee, in the hope of their being able to work along in the same harmonious manner as existed previous to this unfortunate affair, and trust that, until such time as their Nationals settle their difficulties, the Plumbers will agree to "bury the hatchet." So say we all.

The Miscellaneous Trades.

Say Tim (not Tickle, but Ring), even among that variegated bunch of P. H. McCarthy's out in Frisco (and I wish we had such a herd corralled here), I fail to find any Bakers "Among the Building Trades." [Sure; don't the Bakers build up our constitutions.—Editor.]

* * * *

A SUGGESTION.

If the low-waged trades would insert in their first Local by-laws this clause: "The dues of this Local shall be as much per month as our Union has been responsible for the increase per day over the scale paid when organized," this would soon make a fat treasury in addition to teaching grouchy Union men how much their Union had done for them.

TO THE LADIES OF ANACOSTIA.

When it comes to remedying any discomfort caused by "ukase" from the Czars Office, Ladies, you are just as effective as the male citizens (?) committees (maybe more so) of this "model form of government," for they can't do anything but "jaw," either.

Trade Unionists, particularly in the southeast section of the city. Don't forget that George J. Schuerger, 216 Ninth street southeast, is trying to run his bakery along the same lines that "sweat-shops" are run. Ask your grocer about him.

THE HORSESHOERS STRIKE.

They have not yet completely won, but it may be that they have learned—that the Master Horseshoers could much easier, and quickly, see the justness of their demands if they were presented some real nice sleety day rather than at a time when shoes are being pulled off to send horses to pasture.

JOURNEYMEN TAILORS UNION.

Hold a special meeting Monday night to vote for the various candidates for National Secretary and Treasurer. In the near future this Local will hold open meetings and have prominent speakers to address them on subjects of interest to members of organized labor. When these arrangements are complete they will notify their fellow unionists through this paper.

GOMPERS VINDICATED.

Membership in Civic Federation No Bar to Doing Good Work.

The Central Federated Union of New York City, at its meeting last Sunday unanimously indorsed a resolution passed by Cigar Makers Union, No. 144, of New York City, which is a vindication of the charge made by several Socialists recently that Mr. Gompers efforts in behalf of the organization he represents is impaired through his connection with the Civic Federation.

The resolution is as follows:

Resolved, That Cigar Makers Union, No. 144, places implicit confidence in the honesty and integrity of Samuel Gompers in all his dealings in the labor movement, and wherever his assistance has been requested to adjust difficulties between employers and employes he has always acted faithfully in the interests of organized labor.

Mr. Gompers was a member of Cigar Makers Union, No. 144, before becoming president of the American Federation of Labor, and still carries a card in that organization.

The adoption of the resolution disposes of another of the many charges made against Mr. Gompers by alleged trades unionists, who really use the organizations they are connected with to advance the cause of Socialism, and fight any measure or any men who stand in defense of pure trades unionism against Socialism.

Personal Mention.

George W. Jones, president of Mobile Central Labor Union, Mobile, Ala., and wife, were in Washington during the week. Mr. Jones is an enthusiastic trades unionist and is a deep student of the labor movement. During his trip, which will embrace all the principal Northern cities, he will investigate labor conditions as they exist in the North, and will report back to his central body the result of his investigations.
